—The preachers are in much demand these days from men who wish to reach and influence the public. In the war their aid was much sought by those in authority. And now in these days of peace, there are many calls for the help of the man of God in reaching the ears and hearts of the people. It is a compliment to the influence of the ministry that it is so. It indicates the belief, too, that people have confiidence in what they hear from the pulpit. It is a good state of affairs when ministers of the gospel enjoy public confidence and exert a potent influence. In order that it may continue to be so, ministers must have a care as to what causes they espouse and how they advocate them. The early apostles felt that it was not meet that they be called from prayer and the ministry of the word to serve tables, which might be served as well by others. No doubt many ministers feel that it would be a desecration of their office to give themselves to advocacy of some of the schemes put forth in these days. It is a nice question in some instances for the minister to decide what he ought to do. The thing he is asked to promote may be a good thing, and he is in sympathy with the effort called for, and yet it is not quite clear that he should advocate it from the pulpit. The minister must not be blamed if he is perplexed about it sometimes, and if he fails to say what he might have been justified in saying—there are so many calls these days.

—Our State Insurance Commissioner wants the help of the ministers in impressing on the people the importance of fire-prevention. He says over 300 lives are lost each year by fire in North Carolina. He suggests that on the first Sunday in October attention be called to the matter, and proposes as a suitable text for a sermon Deut. 22:8: "When thou buildest a new home, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thy home, if any man fall from thence." Loss of life or property may be due to criminal neglect. The subject has its moral side.

—Through the good offices of Governor Bickett the High Point lockout is ended. The right of employes to join unions is recognized, but not the right to demand collective bargaining. Each man is to be contracted with for himself alone. Differences between employers and employes are to be arbitrated. We hope this settlement will be accepted by both parties in good spirit and that our neighboring city will return to its wonted state of prosperity.

—Albemarle is the seat of the latest strike trouble. Soldiers have been sent to keep order. Textile workers are out on a strike there. It is hoped there will soon be an adjustment of differences and that work will be resumed.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett began a meeting at St. Paul last Sunday morning with a special sermon to parents and children, which was very earnestly delivered. Bro. A. L. Hunter was the engaged help, to come for the Sunday night service. There were four conversions Sunday night and two Monday night.

—A hurricane on the Gulf of Mexico last Sunday morning did much damage in Texas. One hundred people or more were swept to sudden death.

—Bro. Edwards: The work on the new church at Knob Creek is progressing nicely.

—The colleges are opening with a good attendance of students.

—It is not an edifying spectacle for our president and senators to be calling one another ugly names. If they do not show respect for one another, how can they expect to retain the respect of the people?

MISLED BY ANOTHER'S IMAGINATION.

The imagination has been called a "delusive faculty." It is the creative power of the mind, and its unreal creations are imposed upon one as if they were actual facts. We learn that our minds have such a power and we learn also to be on our guard against deception from this source. We can distinguish generally—not always—between an act of imagination and an act of perception in our minds. We say "not always" because sometimes the imagination does its work so quickly that we are unable to determine from any accompanying feeling that it was not an act of real perception. We catch a glimpse of some object—it may be a post. Quick as a flash imagination constructs the figure of a man, and we have to look again to ascertain whether there is a real man there. If we could not take a second and better look, we would persist in the belief that what we saw was a man. Many ghost stories originate in this way. Our own imaginations play us a trick and we have no chance to discover it because we can't take the second look.

But ordinarily our imaginations operate more or less under the control of our own wills, and we are conscious that we are simply imagining—we know that we are not seeing.

But in the case of other people's imaginations, the case is far different. They present to us in literature or art the products of their imaginations. We look upon them and see nothing to distinguish them from the representations of actual fact. We accept them as acual fact. So we are imposed upon. The highly figurative in literature we take for the literal. Highly colored poetry we take for plain science. The result is that we have a very different conception from that of the author because we have grossly misinterpreted his production.

What we are here saying is, we believe, true of parts of the Bible in the hands of many readers. Not being endowed with the facile fancy of the writers they read after, they accept symbolism for solid fact. They expect when they get to Heaven to see a real river gushing out from beneath the throne of God because John in his Patmos vision saw such a sight.

We must be on our guard against the delusive power of imagination—our own to some degree, and in a much higher degree the other man's.

—Miss Mabel Evans, of Lexington, enters the North Carolina College for Women this week. She is the oldest daughter of Bro. A. H. Evans and wife. She has been the organist in Shiloh church for two years, has special musical talent, and will specialize in music. We hope to see her at Grace church on Sundays.

—Mrs. T. B. Vassar, of Pleasant Hill, N. C., is in Greensboro this week. This good woman has always been a friend of the preacher and his family, and she came here to see Mrs. T. F. McCulloch and family, who were formerly her neighbors.

—When the league-of-nations matter is settled, when the labor troubles are all over, when the women have won their political rights, when the race conflicts shall have ended in universal harmony, there will still remain to you and me the same serious matters that confront us today: the moral life, death, divine judgment, eternal destiny. Let us not be diverted from our most serious business.

"You will at least admit," said Tennyson J. Daft, "that I have won something of a reputation as a poet."

"Yes," returned J. Fuller Gloom. "It is generally acknowledged that you have no inferior."—Kansas City Star.

OPEN THOU OUR EYES.

Luke 24: 15.

And He drew near and talked with them,
But they perceived Him not,
And mourned, unconscious of that light,
The gloom, the darkness, and the night
That wrapt His burial spot.

Wearied with doubt, perplexed and sad,
They knew nor help nor guide;
While He who bore the secret key
To open every mystery,
Unknown was by their side.

Thus often when we feel alone,
Nor help nor comfort near,
'Tis only that our eyes are dim,
Doubting and sad we see not Him,
Who waiteth still to hear.

In all our daily joys and griefs,
In daily work and rest,
To those who seek Him Christ is near,
Our bliss to calm, to soothe our care,
In leaning on His breast.

Open our eyes, O Lord, we pray,
To see our way, our Guide;
That by the path that here we tread,
We, following on, may still be led
In Thy light to abide.

KINDNESS.

The Master taught that he is truly great who serves others unselfishly. The field for such service is unlimited. The poor, the suffering, the disappointed, the weak, the ignorant, and the unhappy are with us always. These burdened ones are longing for a word of sympathy and a touch of helpfulness. The opportunity fo the well-to-do to share with the unfortunate was never greater than it is today. To be kind in a practical way is the chief aim in life, and the way to true and lasting greatness. The poet has expressed this truth most aptly:

"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.

"Order," said the law court;
"Knowledge," said the school;
"Truth," said the wise man;
"Pleasure," said the fool;
"Love," said the maiden;
"Beauty," said the page;
"Freedom," said the dreamer;
"Home," said the sage;
"Fame," said the soldier;
"Equity," said the seer.

Spoke my heart full sadly,
"The answer is not here."
Then within my bosom
Softly this I heard:
"Each heart holds the secret, Kindness is the word."
—From The Word of Life.

What if joy or sorrow shall betide thee,
If smooth or rugged paths thy feet have trod;
What matter by what way His hand shall guide thee,
So it be said of thee, "He walked with God?"
—Kate Tucker Goode.

FATHER'S GOOD BOY.

For a day or two Gerald had noticed that father was not in his usual good spirits.

He came in to breakfast one morning. Mother had a headache and was not down. Bess, the only daughter of the family, was away on a visit.

"Well, father," he began, "you and I will not have many more breakfasts together. It will soon be time for college. Never saw a summer slip by quite so fast as this one. I only wish I could have helped you more."

For Gerald had been in father's office all summer.

Father looked up, and Gerald noticed the clear light of the sun that poured in through the windows on the pleasant breakfast table, how pale he was.

Somehow a pang struck him. Was father growing old?

He went up to him and laid a hand on his shoulder.

"Is there anything I can do for you, father?" he asked gently.

For a moment father did not reply.

The canary in the window burst into a carol of golden notes. Then was still.

"Gerald," said father at last, "there is something you can do for me."

He paused.

"You were always a plucky little fellow and no hand to mourn over childish disappointments. You were a real little soldier in those days. I wonder if you can be a soldier now."

Gerald paled a little.

"Try me," he replied steadily.

"Well," added father, "war conditions have hurt my business materially. I find I must cut expenses in half to get through a coming crisis. I was thinking," his voice broke a little, "I was thinking, if you would be willing to give up college for a year and stay and help me, it might stem the tide. What about it? It will be only for a year, Gerald."

Gerald was silent for a moment.

A year out of college would graduate him after his class had gone and they were such fine fellows. He could hardly wait to get back to Alva and Ralph and Dick and his best friends. There was the football team and kind old Prexy and—

He pulled himself together.

Fellows dying in France, distress and destitution on every side and yet he was not willing to give up one year of college to help father.

The shame of it.

Poor father, who had made such a brave struggle of it! Who had been more than kind and good and generous!

"Father," he said, "I want you to eat a good breakfast and then I'll go with you to the office. College? Why of course I'll give it up. A year is nothing. Cheer up, father, we'll see this thing through together."

Father lifted his head.

But all he said was three words, and he spoke them with a break in his voice, "Father's good boy."—Kind Words.

—He is a fool who only hears himself speak.

DON'T BROOD.

Dr. Samuel McComb, of the Emanuel Movement, has written an article in a recent number of "Harper's Bazaar" which contains this:

"There is a genuine repentance; there is also its morbid counterfeit. It is against this latter that we must be on our guard; for unhealthy brooding weakens and never strengthens the soul. We will do well to keep in mind the wise words of R. L. Stevenson: 'If a thing is wrong we should not dwell upon it with inverted pleasure. A man may have a flaw, a weakness that unfits him for the duties of life, that spoils his temper, that threatens his integrity, or that betrays him into cruelty; it has to be conquered; but it must never be suffered to engross his thoughts.' Or, again, take that uneasy questioning of one's physical sensations which goes by the name of hypochondria. The victim of this type of wretchedness is always concerned about his health, magnifies slight ailments, believes that he is threatened with all kinds of bodily diseases, and by the sheer power of an undisciplined imagination creates many of the symptoms of these diseases. Once this habit becomes deeply rooted, deliverance from it may be a long and difficult process, but a word of warning to those who may possibly feel its beginnings may prevent lifelong suffering."—Selected.

CHARLES DICKENS' ADVICE TO HIS BOY.

Charles Dickens' youngest boy, Edward Bulwer Lytton Dickens, was born in 1852. When he was 16 years old he left home and went to Australia, says Thomas C. Richards in "Young Men and Prayer" (The Pilgrim Press). His father wrote him a letter of comradeship and advice, part of which is worth pasing on to every boy leaving home.

"I put a New Testament among your books for the very same reasons and with the very same hopes, that made me write an easy account of it for you, when you were a little child. Because it is the best book that ever was or ever will be known in the world; and because it teaches you the best lessons by which any human creature who tries to be truthful and faithful to duty can possibly be guided. As your brothers have gone away, one by one, I have written to each such words as I am now writing to you and have entreated them all to guide themselves by this book, putting aside the interpretations and inventions of man. You will remember that you have never at home been harassed about religious observances or mere formalities. I have always been anxious not to weary my children with such things, before they were old enough to form opinions respecting them. You will therefore understand the better that I now most solemnly impress upon you the truth and beauty of the Christian religion, as it came from Christ himself, and the impossibility of your going far wrong if you humbly but heartily respect it. Only one thing more on this head. The more we are in earnest as to feeling it, the less we are disposed to hold forth about it. Never abandon the the arclights of promise. This hope that remakes humanity is not an artificial sentiment, or a cherished illusion, but a deep, satisfying sense of being made right with God through the grace of a suffering Redeemer, with its moral consequence—the gaining of a new hold on morality, and the recovery of that most estimable, fairly indispensable quality, self-respect. The only way for those who either in their pride or their despondency, either as Pharisees or as publicans, feel unrest and foreboding in life, to win a faith, and so to gain themselves, is to do as did Nicodemus, come to Jesus as to the only Teacher who can rightly interpret the mysteries both of this world and of that which is to come. To close with the gracious offers of such a Christ is to render life roseate with eternal promise—is to march through night to day.—Zion's Herald.

FOURTEEN MISTAKES OF LIFE.

1. To set up our own standard of right and wrong and judge people accordingly.
2. To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.
3. To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.
4. To look for judgment and experience in youth.
5. To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.
6. To look for perfection in our own actions.
7. To worry ourselves and others with what connot be remedied.
8. To refuse to yield in immaterial matters.
9. To refuse to alleviate, so far as lies in our power, all that which needs alleviation.
10. To refuse to make allowance for the infirmities of others.
11. To consider everything impossible that we cannot perform.
12. To believe only what our own finite minds can grasp.
13. To expect to be able to understand everything.
14. To live for time alone, when any moment may launch us into eternity.—Selected.

WHY GOD DELAYS.

In tht 18th chapter of the Gospel of Luke, it is said that the Master told his disciples a parable which was to teach them that "they ought always to pray and not to faint." This was the story of he unrighteous judge, of whom it was said, when a widow in his city came beseeching him to intervene in her behalf that "he would not for awhile." That phrase would seem to stand in the mind of the Master for a significant truth about God the Father. Jesus is talking about God's delays. He is not attempting to explain the reason for the delays. He is simply trying to teach the disciples what their attitude should be in the face of the recognized truth that God does often put off his children when they come making requests.

Of course in this parable God stands in contrast to the unrighteous judge, not in harmony with him. The argument is, if it was worth while for the woman to persist in her requests in the face of the apparent refusals of an unrighteous judge to give heed to her, how much more worth while must it be for the child of God to persist in his petition when God apparently turns a deaf ear.

Of course there are many reasons that might be advanced for God's delays in answering prayer. Very often we come to him with altogether distorted notions of what real prayer is and God will not heed for a while because he wants us to abandon that notion of prayer and get our thought elevated to a loftier plane. There is a familiar story of a little boy who refused one night to say his prayers and when asked by his mother why he did not wish to pray, said, to her great consternation, "Well, I didn't pray last night and nothing happened; and I didn't pray night before last and nothing happened, and I ain't going to pray tonight, and then if nothing happens, I ain't never going to pray any more." Too many of the older folks, alas, too frequently regard prayer as a sort of mystic charm or fetish which is going to ward off some evil. It is no wonder when we come to our heavenly Father with such notion of what prayer is that he should refuse for a while to meet our requests even though what we ask for be perfectly legitimate and wholesome for our life, when He desires us to think of prayer as a means of communion and the shining way that leads to friendship with himself.

Again, too, God's delays are wholesome for us because they give us time for reflection upon the sincerity of our motives and the purity of our purposes. We are thrown back upon ourselves and are led to question the genuineness of our faith. If our faith is vital, we shall be able to persist in prayer, and in our faith in the value of intercession, even though our requests are not immediately granted. Even among praying people there is quite frequently to be found a secret scepticism to the power of prayer really to bring things to pass. We pray perhaps because we do not want to run the risk of ignoring a possible opportunity to touch some secret spring, but if our prayers are not answered it causes us no real surprise. One of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, used to tell the story about the small boy who had a rich uncle who owned a pony that the boy very much coveted. One day the boy said to his relative: "Uncle, I wish you would give me that pony." "O," replied his uncle, "I could not give you that pony; I need him myself. I'll tell you what to do," added his pious relative, "you pray for a pony. I have always found that whenever I wanted anything, and prayed for it, I always got it." This silenced the boy for a moment or two, but after a little reflection he brightened up and said, "I'll tell you what, uncle; you give me your pony and then you pray for another for yourself." That story makes us smile, but it only suggests the too prevalent hypocrisy of our own uncertain convictions. No doubt God often delays in order that we may examine the ground of our faith and the genuineness of our convictions.

Doubtless many other causes might be mentioned to explain these delays which are so common to the experience of all of us. But Christ is not suggesting the reason for the delays, he is simply affirming that whatever the reasons may be, whether we can fathom them or not, it is the part of wisdom and of filial trust to persist in our intercession. We should not faint, He says; we should not be discouraged.—Missionary News.

"At the beginning of the 19th century the British East India Company said: "The sending of missionaries into our Eastern possessions is the maddest, most expensive, most unwarranted project that was ever proposed by a lunatic enthusiast.' At the close of the 19th century the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal said: 'In my judgment Christian missionaries have done more lasting good to the people of India than all other agencies combined.' "—The Zenana.

"I have a great admiration for the lower grades of Indian personnel in the army. Perhaps it is all due to sheer insensibility, but they certainly do 'carry on' in a wonderful way—these humble sweepers, cooks, stretcher bearers and drivers. They can talk of war, the aims and causes of which are utterly beyond their comprehension. That is all. Yet they 'carry on' with a pride in their humble job, a pathetic confidence in the Sahib to whom they have trusted their lives and fortunes, and a heroic endurance in the face of danger and discomfort which must surely be more than fatalism, more than insensibility.

"Some day some one will write an epic of the sweeper, the mehtar, kahar, the dhobi and all the rest of these inarticulate, humble, long-enduring heroes."—A British Officer in The Etah Morning Post.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Concord Church.—Our pastor preached a splendid sermon Sunday morning, using as his subject "Our Relationship." He first spoke of earthly relationship, and then on our relationship to God or to the devil. We are either related to God or the devil, Mr. Lowdermilk said, and those who can claim God as their Father may expect to inherit great things, just as children of wealthy parents expect to inherit something here. Rev. and Mrs. Lowdermilk left Sunday afternoon, Mr. Lowdermilk going to help Rev. J. H. Bowman in a meeting, and Mrs. Lowdermilk to visit her mother near Liberty.

The young people's Christian Endeavor society had charge of the night service and a very good program was carried out. One interesting feature of the service was a male quartette rendered by Messrs. W. H. Scarboro, R. P. Benson, B. G. Nash and J. M. Blackwelder. A very good congregation was present and much interest manifested.

Our society will do its part in the October campaign, as we have in view already a place to organize one new society. Bro. Gerringer may expect to hear from Concord in a few days. Mrs. D. A. McLaurin, Reporter.

Pleasant Gap, Ivy Circuit.—They are still alive at this place and trying to do the work of the Master.

The pastor, with Bro. Bingham as help, started a revival here a few weeks ago; but in a few days were called away. The meeting was carried on, afterward, in prayer meetings with ten conversions.

We believe there would have been some additions to the church if there had been some one to receive them. We hope some of them will come in yet.

We are glad Bro. Lindley has had success with his meetings at the other churches. The members asked me to report the meeting and I am very glad to do so as it is my old home church. May God bless the work everywhere.

Lelia C. McPeters.

Winston.—Our special meeting was begun Sunday, August 31, and closed September 10. Rev. Geo. L. Curry of Charlotte was the pulpit help and faithfully proclaimed God's truth. Prof. Pender of Mebane conducted the singing, which was greatly appreciated. Several professed faith in Christ and quite a number testified at the close of the meeting that they were greatly strengthened and built up in the faith. Reporter.

Union Grove, North Davidson Circuit.—We have not reported anything for some time, but we are still alive and moving on with our church work. Sunday school is picking up some: hope to see it increase more each Sunday, for a good Sunday school is the life of the church. Let us strive to do more for the Master than we have before. Our faithful pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, was with us Sunday and preached a strong sermon to a very attentive congregation. We were glad to have Mr. Murphy and daughters from Canaan worship with us Sunday and Mrs. David Fisher and little daughter of Friedburg. Come again. Collection for the Children's Home, $2.88. We give every second Sunday's collection to the Children's Home. Lillie Nifong, Reporter.

Clarks Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.—Our Sunday school is still improving in attendance. And much interest is being shown in our weekly prayer meeting. Also it is good to see so much interest being taken by the young people in our singings on Sunday night. On last Sunday night, especially, we had an unusually good-sized crowd.

We were delighted to have ith us Sunday our former pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman. He gave us an interesting talk at Sunday school. His talks have always ben an inspiration to us. And we wish he could be with us more often.

We are not idle at our church, even if we don't have reports more often, but will have a fuller report later. On Sunday evening, August 31, at Mars Hill, our reporter, Miss Margaret Kennedy, was united in marriage to Mr. Clyde P. Blankenship, Rev. Mr. Owens officiating. Miss Kennedy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Kennedy of Weaverville, and a member of our church. Mr. Blankenship is also of Weaverville, and served with the 30th Division in France.

Miss Margaret Weaver has been elected secretary at our church in the absence of our former secretary, Mr. Harry Webster. We are glad to see so much interest in the Baraca and Philathea classes at our church.

Friendship, North Davidson Circuit.—The first Sunday at 10 o'clock we held our children's day exercises; the children did right well. The collection, $15.19. In the afternoon Mr. Cecil preached a very interesting sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was administered. A good congregation was present. We appreciated having several visitors worship with us. $21.78 on budget, $3.00 for the Children's Home. Reporter.

West Lexington.—The outlook for our church at Lexington is growing brighter. I am here looking after a lot for our church. The service here last night was very good. The interest at Lexington, Mt. Carmel and Yadkin College is encouraging. Yadkin College church will soon go over the top in her part of the million dollar assessment.

D. A. Braswell.

Giles Chapel, Richland Circuit.—We have not had a report from our church for some time, so I am writing a short report to let you know we are still alive and at work.

Our Sunday school is doing fairly well, but there are some in the community whom we are not able to get interested.

We had our annual Sunday school picnic Saturday, the 13th. Drove down near Cedar Falls to a spring in a grove of large oaks where we stopped and began preparations for a picnic dinner. The men and most of the younger folks went down the creek to fish. Bros. Daniel Uunderwood, Hobart Ferree and Flavius Trogdon went seining while the rest of us followed along on the bank to watch them and to carry the fish. Quite a number of the finny tribe were caught and carried back to the camping place, where in the meantime the ladies had built a fire and produced frying pans and soon were busy preparing the fish for the table. The savory odor of the frying fish whetted our appetites and by the time the plates of fish were placed upon the table along with the other nice things to eat prepared by the good ladies, we were all in a mood to enjoy the dinner. And after an earnest prayer by our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, we all did full justice to the dinner. There were 55 present and all seemed to enjoy themselves to the utmost.

Our special meeting will begin next Sunday, the 20th, with Bro. W. F. Ashburn as pulpit help.

Pray for the success of the meeting.

Eugene Williams.

Guilford Circuit.—Our meeting is going on at Mitchell's Grove this week. Rev. J. W. Quick is doing the preaching. We had eight professions and six to join the church Monday.

Our meeting at Hickory Grove will begin on the fourth Sunday. Rev. C. A. Cecil will do the preaching for us. Yours in His name,

A. M. Hamilton.

Lebanon Charge.—Our special meeting for Lebanon church commenced last Wednesday night, Sept. 10. The pastor did all of the preaching up till Sunday. Bro. Burgess came to us on Saturday and will do the preaching through the remainder of the meeting. The people are well pleased with his preaching, and we are expecting a good meeting. Considerable interest has already been manifested. Several unsaved people have asked for prayer, and two backsliders have been reclaimed. Pray for us that we may have a great revival.

Since our last report the following have remembered us in a substantial way. Mrs. and Mrs. Lee Hilton, corn, beans, and a good load of wood. Mr. and Mrs. Hilton, of Sprin Hill, apples and peaches, and three pounds of nice honey. Mr and Mrs. W. W. Guyer, apples, pears, and grapes. Mr. and Mrs. John Cook, beans, a nice piece of side meat an 50 pounds of flour. Mrs. Mary Burton, pears. Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Payne, beans. Mr. Jeff Hilton, melons, corn, cabbage and potatoes. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burton, melons and a nice chicken. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burton beans, and a nice chicken. Mr. Z. S. Weavil, $1. Mr. S. W. Cecil, pears. Mrs. B. E. Kennedy, peas. Mrs. J. W. Montgomery, pears and four glasses of jelly. We appreciate these tokens of kindness very much.

Edward Suits.

Concord, Saxapahaw Circuit.—It has been quite a while since we have had a report in the Herald. Nevertheless, we are still on the map, not entirely idle but moving on toward the goal. We had our children's day exercise first Sunday in August. All did their part well. Collection was $30.

Our meeting began in the afternoon. Rev. J. H. Bowman was pulpit help; he did all the preaching. I think great good was accomplished, and we hope to have the pleasure of having him with us many times in the future. We did not have the attendance we could have had. Some people are more interested in the world, and its interests than in serving our heavenly Father, but we had a good meeting. The church was greatly revived; there were twelve conversions, and five united with the church.

We were very glad to have Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Moore unite with our church.

Our Christian Endeavor society is doing well. The young people seem very interested in the work. We hope we will have a great success with our work in the future. Our leader for next meeting is Mr. Dwight McBane, topic, ''Truthfulness.'' We have better attendance at Christian Endeavor than we have at Sunday school. We hope to have better attendance.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Reporter.

Reidsville Christian, Endeavor.

Since my last report we have held two meetings, with Norman Dixon and Mrs. J. R. McCollum. Several interesting things for the good of the society were discussed at these meetings and refreshments were served.

Last Sunday evening a goodly number of our members drove over to Mizpah church and held our regular weekly prayer meeting. with Mrs. M. A. Jones as leader.

After the meeting we succeeded in organizing a society there. The Mizpah church has a number of young people who I feel will take much interest in this great work.

We hope to organize more societies soon. then a Christian Endeavor Union, which I am sure would be helpful to us all.

Sat. In humility. Luke 9: 51-56.

It seems to be the case that too many young people are looking for the easy job. A position with a good salary and little work. Somehow our young people are not taking life seriously. They are not realizing that life, a life that is worth while, is a life of work, of service. But it is true, young people. No life that does not perform some worthy service can be said to be truly successful.

Therefore, if the successful life means one of service, we must train for that service. And I care not what other worthy vocation you may choose to follow you can find time and place for Christian service. Men sometimes tell me they are too busy to come to church or to look after the business affairs of the kingdom. My reply is that a man has time to serve God and make a living too. So, young people, you must find time to serve God, else you will find your life a failure when the final reckonings are made.

We need to train body, mind and spirit. I think we can not well train the one without that training affecting the others. There is, however, the danger of laying too much stress upon the one to the neglect of the other. The body may be trained and developed to the neglect of the mind; and the body and mind may be developed to the neglect of the spirit or soul. While the one is being overtrained the other will suffer. We need to train all three in the right proportion. Physical culture is all right, but the mind needs to be educated too. Education is very desirable, but we must not leave out the education and culture of the soul.

That we may train ourselves for the highest service it will be necessary for us to exercise self-denial. Jesus said so. ''If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me.'' The athlete denies himself the pleasure of smoking and drinking that he may be physically fit for the game. The Christian athlete who seeks moral and spiritual fitness must deny himself those things that weaken and hinder. He must deny himself all fleshly desires such as lust, worldly ambitions, pride, and selfishness. These undermine moral health and sap spiritual strength. We must fight the flesh if the spirit is to dominate our lives.

Watch Our Thoughts.

Perhaps right here is where we ought to begin with this training of the Christian athlete. Begin with our thoughts. If our thoughts are right, our words and acts are likely to be right. Amos R. Wells says, ''The conquest of temptation is not the conquest of things, but of thought.'' Speaking of the mind Wells also says, ''Conquer here, and you shall conquer everywhere else.'' When we have mastered our thoughts we have mastered our feelings and emotions. Our thoughts are largely influenced by what we see and read. I need not then warn you to be careful where you go, what you look upon, and what you read. Think on the things that are honorable, just, pure, lovely, and of good report. We are sometimes asked, ''Is it wrong to go to the movies?'' I answer by asking a question. Do the pictures inspire pure thoughts? If so, most certainly it is all right to see them. But we know that many of the pictures are calculated, by the devil, to inspire the opposite of pure thoughts. Be careful what kind of pictures you see as you must be careful what kind of books you read.

Look out for Your Tongue.

Many people have more trouble with the tongue than any other member of the body. In most of our schools and colleges there are instructors to teach us how to use our tongues, that is, how to speak well. What many need is to be taught how to not use the tongue, how to keep silence. But while the tongue is a terrible source of weakness to many, it has the possibility of being a source of great power of usefulness. We need to bring it under control. James gives us a very vivid description of the tongue that is not under control. ''And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell.''

If we would attain unto the highest we must subject the lower ambitions, impulses and desires. To keep ourselves under control is a big undertaking, but it is the evidence of strength. Prov. 16: 32. ''He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.''

Burgess.

Cleo B. Burgess was born Nov. 29th, 1886, and died July 26th, 1919. He was the son of E. C. and Martha J. Burgess. He was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude Sharp, April 4, 1917.

He leaves a wife, father, and two brothers,—his mother having preceded him several years ago. He was a faithful member of Moriah Methodist Protestant church about eight years.

Since it has pleased our heavenly Father to remove Bro. Burgess from our midst, be it Resolved, First, That we have lost a good man from our church and community.

Second, That the loss is greater because he was young in years.

Third, That we extend to his companion, his father and brothers, our heartfelt sympathy in their great sorrow.

Fouth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his wife, father and brothers.

C. G. Dorsett,
J. A. Glass.

Our Heavenly Father in his all-wise providence saw fit to take from among us our dear and beloved friend, Miss Martha Smith, whom every one loved that knew her, and the principal reason for this extraordinary love and esteem with which she was regarded by every one was that she was always so sincere and genuine in her religious life. Her religion successfully stood every test. Whatever might be the shortcomings and weaknesses of others she always walked worthy of the high calling of a Christian. She always took an active part in the church and Sunday school. She was always present at the prayer meetings except when providentially hindered. She loved the members of her Sunday school class and they all loved her. The memory of a life so gloriously Christian that all recognized it as such when here, but even more lovingly now that it is but a memory. Lives such as hers are indeed the salt of the earth. So near did she live to her Savior that it can be truly said that her life was hid with Christ in God. Let us follow the example which she left with us and we will all be worthy of the high calling.

Resolved, That a copy of this be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of our class and also a copy be sent to the church paper.

IN-SO-MO.

I had been looking up the baptism date of an Italian mother's son who had given his life in the 138th Division in France. The dear mother in her soft Italian tongue was telling me of her losses, for while the oldest son's life had been snapped out on the battle line her husband had perished in a munition plant by an accident, and now the little sunlight of the home had gone out—her dear little In-so-mo had died of the “flu.” I had tried as best I could to have the mother understand that the dear child was in our Father's keeping, but words are poor at such times.

Then I began to tell her about another family—father, mother and five young children all seriously sick with the “flu”; of the dear children as I found them, four in one bed, two with heads at the headboard and two with their heads at the footboard, and a little five-months-old babe, and all of them without even a gown to keep their little bodies in comfort.

The sorrowing mother's tears began to dry as she took from a drawer some baby clothes, spread out a little baby's gown on her lap and began to softly caress a name she had stitched into it, saying “In-so-mo, my In-so-mo!”

“What a queer name,” I said, “How beautiful it sounds in your soft mother tongue; where did you find it?”

The tears had ceased to fall, her eyes were shining as she took up her little Testament and turned to a well-worn place, handed it to me saying, “There it is in Matthew 25-40. See it's the King gave it to me, he gave me the name, he called him Insomuch. That's my baby, see I get his name from the King, my dear little In-so-mo.”

“You said, pastor, the baby need some things! Must I give it In-so-mo's?”

I tenderly took the little slip and looked in the eyes of that dear mother as I answered, “No, dear woman, not must, but you may.”

It was a sacred moment when that mother carefully wrapped up the last she had and gave it to another.

As I went on my rounds that day there followed a soft refrain all the day long—“Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least, ye have done it unto me.”—Frederic J. Hart, in The Congregationalist and Advance.

WHY?

We use this little word a great deal and often very foolishly, but there are times when it seems to us that we have a right to ask, “Why?” During these last two years many persons in this country, and many more in other countries, have been asking that question. Perhaps there are many who have not found the answer and have come to think that there is no reasonable answer for them.

A mother dies suddenly, leaving a father with little children. It is God's plan. Who can answer, “Why?”

A little child, strong and well and the joy of the home and the promise of honor to God and great good to the world, suddenly dies. It is God's plan. Who can answer the question, “Why?”

A young man, strong and talented and prepared for a life of active service among his fellow men, enters the army. Word comes from across the sea, “Killed in action!” Or perhaps he has died of disease in camp before striking a blow for the cause. It is God's plan. Who can answer the question, “Why?”

There is One who can answer that question, and in a way that would satisfy every reasonable person. But however well He might be able to satisfy the questioning hearts, He gives no answer in way of explanation to the thousands and millions who question. It is best that He does not, for although He could give a perfect reason and show how, being a part of his plan, it must be well in the end, even that would not satisfy as well as faith in Him satisfies. If we demand a reason and get it, then we do away with faith. “Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.” It is not really an explanation that the sore heart wants; it is the loved one back.

He has done something better than to answer our question. He has taken the hardest case of the kind that has ever come up in history and has given a perfectly satisfactory explanation of it, so that everyone now knows that it was right. He has taken the case of his own Son who came into the world to be a King and who, in the prime of his life, after thirty years of preparation and only three years of service, ended his life on the cross, scourged as a common felon, crucified between two thieves. He has explained that case so that we can all see that it would have been a calamity to the world if the great tragedy had not happened. But those who watched Him die on the cross and who lost their Friend—to those his life seemed to be a failure and the cross a great mistake. None ever asked more earnestly than the disciples, “Why? Why?” God gave the answer so plainly that they knew there had been no mistake.

If God can give the answer to the question in that case, the hardest in all history to explain, can we not trust Him to keep the answer in the cases of our loved ones even if it does touch us in the very life? Can we not take from Him the answer of faith and say, “Thy will be done?” Faith tells us that the Father who could explain the death of his own dear Son will sometime make our questions so clear that we shall know even as we are known.—The Youth's Companion.

LOVE DRAWS THE DISCIPLES TOGETHER.

The influences making today for a better understanding among the churches are many, the points of attachment are multiplying every year; but the process of the unification of Christendom will not progress faster than does the increase of love. Denominations, like metals, fuse only when at white heat. There is a story of certain bridge-builders who were engaged in constructing the two halves of the single arch that was to span a river. From either side of the river they labored simultaneously, building out from the great piers on opposite banks the two arms of the bridge that were to meet in the middle. The day came when, at nightfall, the last truss and girder were put into place, but to their dismay the plates of the bridge were several inches apart and would not meet. But the next morning the sun rose above the horizon and, as it neared the zenith, poured its warm rays upon all below; and the foreman, walking out upon the bridge, found that the two great arms of the arch had expanded until they touched each other and were easily riveted together. While coldness of heart drives us apart, the warmth of Christian love thus draws us together. The greatest hindrance to unity is lack of the Christ spirit. Selfishness is always divisive. “I didn't get that family to come to us,” a good woman was heard to say, “but one thing is certain,—they will never go to the other church!” Such a spirit would delay the unity of the church until the day of judgment! But when the churches are possessed of the spirit of John the Baptist, when he said of his Master, “He must increase, but I must decrease,” essential church unity is already achieved.—Robert A. Ashworth, in The Union of Christian Forces.

"BEHOLD I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW."

When the Creator of all things made these utterances to John on the Isle of Patmos He was speaking of the things that should come to pass in the years that were to come, and to a great extent these things have come to pass.

This great war which has just been closed was fought on a new scale, one of which the world has never known and with implements which the world has never known to have been used before, poisonous gases, liquid fire, cannon which threw their deadly projectiles seventy to eighty miles with astounding accuracy, and the conflict was carried on with millions of the best men of our civilized world. Never before has such a conflict been carried on, or such machines of war used.

When man forgets God and tries to set himself up in the place of his Creator, God will cause his abasement, and when the Kaiser of Germany thought to make himself the ruler of the whole world, God set plans in motion to bring him down. "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." And from now forth the countries of Europe will be made new.

They fought new ways, they thought new ways and some prayed new prayers, and saw new visions, they made new vows, and a great many became new creatures and had new ways and plans.

We ourselves prayed with a new zeal and exercised a new faith in God that He would send our dear boys back to us, we did many new things, we never heard or dreamed of and are still doing them, and will continue to do them, for this is a new age and we are a new people to a great degree.

Our boys who went to France saw new things, from the very mouth of hell to the glory of God when they smashed the Hindenburg line. Now that this great and terrible war has passed there are other new things that are to come to pass, as was prophesied by Isaiah 55:13.

Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign, that shall not be cut off.

God has made this promise to his people, that the lands that once were barren and brought forth only briers and thorns will now bring forth plenty.

The Government has offered to as many of the soldiers as will accept land any assistance necessary in order that they may make these barren plains bring forth rich and abundant crops which will be the fulfilling of Isaiah's prophecies, and will also bring more clearly to our minds the Master's blessed words, "Behold I make all things new."

New processes will be put into pactice, a new friendship and brotherly love will blossom like the first rose of spring, and nation will no more hunt nation in war, or men be drunk and shed their brothers' blood or take that which they can not give. "Behold I make all things new."

The children of God will become more spiritual and see fallen men and women as they have never seen them before and will go after them and induce them to forsake the error of their way and come to Christ and be saved from all their sins. Oh, my dear people, let us make these new days in which we are now living, let us be about our Master's business that we may be able to go after these men and women we once shunned, for they are our lost brothers and sisters. God made us all in his own image and is willing that none should be lost. Now let us work to this end, that the men who used to cast widows and orphans into the streets on a cold and cruel world will be found ministering to wants of the poor and needy, then will have come to pass that scripture found in Isaiah 11:6-7, The wolf and the lamb shall dwell together, and the cow and the bear shall feed their young and lie down together.

This was the disposition of all creation when God created them and placed them in the world, but through disobedience man became estranged from God and caused all creation to become estranged from each other, all through the sin of man in the garden of Eden. So also must through man come the restoration of all, and to be able to make complete restoration we must submit ourselves to the will of the Master of all things. Christ has paid the debt and now stands waiting and ready to receive you and give you a pardon for past sins; are you willing to receive it and start a new life?

He will make a new life for you and start a new page in the book of life, for his saying is faithful and true, "Behold I make all things new."

You must be a new creature in Christ Jesus, if you want life and to be able to enjoy to the fullest extent the good things of this world of today.

Are you willing and desirous to become a new creature in Christ? If so today is the day of salvation. Hear the words of Jesus, come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest unto your soul.

THE TRUE DEMOCRACY.

"Are they my cousins, mother, or only my very dear friends?" asked the little daughter of one of our most prominent social workers, as she came in, hot and panting, from a joyous frolic with the neighborhood children in the settlement playground. How many of us, I wonder, keep in our grown-up lives the spirit of this little girl? How many of us think of this "other" as our "cousin" or our "very best friend"? Are we awake, with seeing eyes, and ears alert, to the pathos and tragedy and beauty of the life about us? The girl sitting by us in the trolley; the tired woman across the way; the riotous boys on the back platform, brimful of life and energy—are they our cousins or even our very dear friends?

Over nineteen hundred years ago there lived a poor man, the son of a carpenter, who was the friend of all the world. The rich man's son, the ruler, the publican, the priest, the sinner — all were his friends. Through the veneer of outward circumstances he beheld the soul—the reality behind the flesh. No one has lived so democratic a life as he. And because he was democratic, because he embodied more completely than any man, before or since, that spirit of true brotherhood, so it followed that they all came, and are still coming, to him.

It is only as we approximate this ideal that we can hope to attract to us that rare gift of confidence and affection from others, that we can have men coming to us also, and giving us, as they gave to Christ, that most precious gift—themselves.—The Association Monthly.

SOME JAPANESE CUSTOMS.

In the grammar of the Japanese language the verb comes last in the sentence. Prefixes, called "honorifics," the common ones being "Mi," "O," and "Go," are used to show honor and respect to others, to indicate honorable station, or to beautify the language. Even inanimate objects, such as household furniture, articles of food, dishes, etc., may be dignified by the addition of these prefixes, as "the honorable tea or sugar," "the honorable tray," etc.

Numerals are freely used and in infinite variety. People are counted by one numeral, animals by another, birds by another, chairs by another, flat articles by still another, long articles by another, and so on ad infinitum. It is dangerous to translarte English idiom into Japanese, for you get some strange sentences that they will not understand. You would not say in Japanese that you have taken cold, but that you have "pulled the wind." Neither would you say that you were tall, but that you have a "high back." You are not told to "take a seat," but to "hang up your honorable loins"; and when you first meet a person, you do not remark that it is the first time you have had that pleasure, but say: "It is the first time to hang on your honorable eyes." The Japanese have many proverbs that are like our own. "Pearls to swine" becomes "Neko in kobon," which means "Pearls to cats."

Superstition.

There are many superstitions among the Japanese. Those who pay attention to them will not marry, go on a journey, start to make an article of clothing, nor begin any work of importance on what is considered an unlucky day. When two deaths occur consecutively in a family, in the coffin of the second one is placed a doll, as there is a superstition that when there have been two there will be another, so that the doll is expected to take the place of the third.

"Shi" is the word for death. Therefore on New Year's everybody is supposed carefully to avoid the use of the syllable, although it means "four" and several other things, lest the simple use of the word would make an unlucky year. Salt is thrown after an unwelcome visitor to kill all bad influences that might result from his visit. "Luck" and "ill luck" are words in common use, indicating the lack of belief in guidance.

After a bride has gone to her new home, a fire is sometimes kindled outside the parental gate to indicate that henceforth she is dead to her own parents and home. Widows frequently crop their hair short—that is, to the neck—to indicate a vow of perpetual widowhood. Some wives, especially country women, shave their eyebrows and blacken their teeth to indicate loyalty to their husbands, presumably that they may be unattractive to other men.

Home.

The Japanese home is a desirable or undesirable place, according to whether love be there or not. Many heathen parents live moral lives and love and care for their children. In general, however, there is lacking that strong bond between parents and children which permits of affectionate fellowship.

Men and boys have the preference in the good things, though an older sister may be preferred to a very young brother. It is the proper thing in a Japanese home for all members of the family to prostrate themselves before the parents in the morning in a salutation, and young members of the family to do so to the elderly members — that is, older brothers and sisters. The father has right of way in all things and must constantly be referred to. Up over him, however, are his father and mother, who are often found in the son's home. The mother-in-law especially wields a mighty scepter and is a person much to be regarded. She is frequently a deadly foe to growth in grace of a Christian daughter-in-law or one who desires to be a Christian.

The whole family sleep on comforts spread on the padded floor mats. These comforts are folded up and put in closets during the daytime. In the middle-class homes all go out to the public bath, A bath costs all the way from one-half a cent to two cents, depending upon the place. Meals are eaten on small low tables, generally without any table cover. The principal article of diet is rice; but it is supplemented by vegetables, soup, pickles, and at times fish or beef. The use of bread and milk is much more common than formerly, but it is generally prescribed as a light diet by physicians and not chosen because it is liked.

The cleaning in a Japanese home is simpler and easier than in American homes, since there is no furniture to dust. It is amusing to see how they carry out the truth of the name of "topsy-turvy" land, as they dust the doors, walls, etc., before they sweep. Washing and ironing are not carried on as we do them. Winter clothing must all be ripped up before it can be washed, so that it isn't washed more than once a year. The pieces are stretched on long boards and starch applied with a brush, and the board is set in the sun to dry. This irons it at the same time. Underclothing and stockings are washed as often as necessary. The shoes are wooden clogs and are removed at the door, while the wearer goes in in his stocking feet. On board floors sandals are worn. A careful housewife always arranges the clogs of her guests, so that they may be put on easily at departure. Cake and tea are always served to guests. This expense in the homes of our native pastors amounts to quite a large figure, as the Jepanese Christian pastor is guide, philosopher, and friend to his whole congregation, who go to his home to consult him on all sorts of matters.—The Missionary Voice.

THROUGH NIGHT TO DAY.

Nicodemus came to Jesus by night—but he went away in the day—at least the sunshine was in his heart as he stole back home through the silent streets of Jerusalem, even if the new day had not yet begun to dawn over Olivet. When any man gets rid of the load of sin that weighs down his heart he is given a new lease of life, and all the world takes on for him an aspect of fresh beauty, while even the gloom of valleys is relieved by .

MERIT BOARD FOR MEDICAL MISSIONARY.

Recently Mrs. F. C. Gale of Nanchang, China, received from the Public Health Department of Nanchang a large merit board. It was carried by four bearers through the main streets of the city in a procession headed by the police band. At the Nanchang Hospital a presentation speech was made by the head of the department. On the board, which was about 5x3 feet, was inscribed across the middle, four large characters meaning "Doctor Tung's Almond Forest." The reading matter on the Board said: "in ancient times there was a famous physician named Tung, who did not charge any fee for his services. He asked that each patient he successfully cured should plant an almond tree in his yard. The number of trees increased to such an extent that about the doctor's home was a great forest of almond trees.

"Such is the work of our Dr. Gale toward her patients and the poor. Dr. Gale is an eminent American physician. Since she has taken charge of the Nanchang Hospital all her surgical operations have been successful. A year ago I opened a department for vaccination. With Dr. Gale's valuable help, no small-pox has ever occurred. In order to show a part of my personal appreciation for Doctor Gale's difficult and assiduous work by helping me to combat small-pox, I personally reported the case to our Central Government through the Civil Governor. Today I have just received a command from our Ministry of Home Affairs at Peking which says, 'We are informed of Dr. Gale's zeal for the public good, and her work is indeed very praiseworthy. Let it be known to all by a word of appreciation.' For this reason I have prepared this merit board with the inscription, "Doctor Tung's Almond Forest."

THE THIRD WORLD'S CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP CONFERENCE.

The National Reform Association has called the Third World's Christian Citizenship Conference to convene in Pittsburgh November 9-16, 1919, armistice week. The first conference of the kind was held in 1910, seven countries represented on the program, with an attendance of 1500. The second was held in 1913, seventeen countries represented, with an attendance of 15.000. Representatives from forty-six nations and many states have been appointed for the third Conference.

Ten world commissions of nine members each have been selected to prepare reports to present to the Conference on the following subjects: Capital and Labor, The Lord's Day, Intemperance, Social Purity, The Family, Immigration, Mormonism, Peace, Public Education.

The most noted speakers in this and other countries have been chosen to handle the subjects for discussion, which will embrace all the interests of mankind in this period of civic world reconstruction.

"To collect and present authentic data as to the actual character of all existing governments, how far this character in Christian lands has been determined by the influence of Christianity; how far it is expressed in and secured by law; and the exact attitude and policy of the native governments in missionary lands.

"To consider devoutly the present-day political, social and industrial condition of the world, with the distinct and definite purpose of righting human society with God in all these relations in life.

"To deal with moral problems with which governments necessarily deal—

APPARELING MARY.

Did you ever hear of a sewing machine giving a little girl an education? Then you will be especially interested in the case of Mary, a Serbian girl who lives in Belgrade, for she was sent to school by a sewing machine. Sounds incredible, does it not?

Mary was an orphan and had been running about the streets for months with many other children who had no homes. The war had deprived them of fathers, mothers, homes and friends. But one day the worker of the A. R. C. saw Mary crying, alone, and quite forlorn in her tattered old dress and uncombed hair. A bit of friendly sympathy and Mary told the worker all about her hard lot in life. They then traveled hand in hand to the sewing school which the A. R. C. had established in Belgrade and there Mary was measured for a dress—a real dress with blue flowers splashed all over it! From the minute that Mary set eyes on the cloth, she was a changed girl. No more tears, no more woes. And when the dress was finally finished, she was the very happiest girl in the country of Serbia, she felt quite certain of that. She was then taken to the orphanage and left there to study all her forgotten lessons once more, and met anew her old-time chum, a girl who had lived next door to her when they both had homes and people all their own. If the sewing machine had not sewed the dress, Mary could not have been sent to school. Therefore, we claim that it was the sewing machine that really gave Mary her education.

TRANSFORMING POWER.

In a Chinese city of fifty thousand there lives a Chinese Methodist merchant, chairman of the Board of Stewards in his church, who helps more people, his pastor says, than any person in that town. There was a time when he was sunk low from being an opium victim, when he squatted at the street-sides and cried to passersby for just a little cash, this being his means of livelihood. He came under the influence of the Mission, and quickly prosperity followed him.

Sometime ago in a religious meeting, a frenzied opium-taker cried out in hopeless agony: "Can your Jesus save a man so far gone as I? Kung Papa heard the cry. Leaving his task he ran quickly to that one and said: "Save you? Of course He can save you. Look at me; I was worse off than you; I had more sores on me than you have from the hypodermic injections; I was more ragged than you; I had been a victim longer than you." He then grabbed the sorrowful man in his arms and turned him to the audience saying: "Here is the proof that Christ is able to save one so badly off as the man here. See, his rags; look on my silk. Jesus Christ is able to transform his rags into silk also. Look on my face; it was worse than this man's, and his can be changed also. I had no money; now I have a good business. Once I was continually hungry all the time; now I have plenty. Jesus did it for me: He can do it for this poor man."—J. D. Gillilan in Missionary News.

Most of us would never have caught the vision of the risen Master had we not seen it in tender beauty in the life of some friend. Most people who see Him will see Him in that same way—in the life of some friend. 'Tis a great privilege to be such a friend.—Indian Witness.

SERMON TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

Your Life.

Text: "What is your life?" James 4:14. "We live unto the Lord." Rom. 14:8.

A right view of life, a worthy aim in life, and a wise use of life are indispensable to the highest well-being. Young people are so prone to look upon life as something to be enjoyed. Old people often regard it is something to be endured. Of course there is much in life to be enjoyed, and there is much that must be endured. But neither one is the main object of life. Life is sacred. It comes from God. There are sacred opportunities to be embraced. There are sacred duties to be performed. And there are sacred ends to be attained.

The text presents a searching question: "What is your life?" It is more than "a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." It is more than "a hand breadth," more than "a weaver's shuttle," more than "a tale that is told." These Bible statements simply inform us that life is short, uncertain, and quickly passes away. But the answer in the text gives us the best solution of the enigma of life: "We live unto the Lord." Life is a gift from God, a plan of God, and an investment for God. Let us first consider life as

A Gift from God.

Life is a gift of God's grace. All life was forfeited by the fall. Since then none has deserved to live. All get their deserts in death, not in life. God doesn't do any one the least injustice in taking away his life. He is getting his just dues. Let us then look upon life as one of God's greatest mercies. Let us appreciate fully this wonderful gift. Let us hold it sacred in deference to its sacred Author.

There is a wide variety of life. The life of the body varies from that of the babe or weakling to that of the full-grown and mighty. The life of the mind varies from the densest ignorance to the wisdom of the sage. The life of the soul varies from that of the babe in Christ to the fervor and power of an apostle. There is no unfairness in giving some more life, or longer life, or happier life than others. God does that which pleases Him. He assigns to each his portion of life, its blessings, its opportunities, and its tasks. Let not the weak envy the strong. Let not the strong despise the weak. Let each make the best of his lot in life.

In fact many are to blame for lack of health, knowledge, or righteousness. They have violated laws of nature, neglected opportunities, and rejected offers of divine grace. Many make the hard bed upon which they lie. Many pull down the house of good fortune upon their own heads. Many choose their own weakness, their own folly, their own undoing.

Life is not a surrendered gift. It is an intrusted gift. In the highest sense your life still belongs to God. "Ye are not your own; ye are borghtwith a price." All that we are and have are entrusted gifts. We are the trustees of this bounty of the Most High. We have been honored in this trusteeship. We are dealing with things that God has made and bestowed. Let us be faithful in keeping and administering the entrusted estate of life. Let us note next that life is

A Plan of God.

Each life is a fourfold plan of God. The Creator has designed that each life should be normally and largely developed; that it should receive much happiness; that it should contribute to the welfare of the race to the extent of ability and opportunity; and that it should bring lasting glory to His holy name.

Large possibilities are placed in the infant body, mind, and soul, possibilities of vigorous manhood or womanhood, of mental enrichment and power, and of exalted holiness in heart and life. It is the priceless privilege of the home, the school, the state, and the church to work harmoniously for the full development of this young and promising life. The world is full of undeveloped life, wrecked life, and corrupting life. Some lives do not get a chance for development. Some reject golden opportunities for development. And some, for various causes, get only a partial development. Let every lover of God and mankind strive for the highest development of mind, body, and soul, both in himself and in others.

The many Bible beatitudes point to the desire of God that mankind might be happy, and to the certain fact that all who do His will are happy. Selfishness and sin are age-long foes to happiness. They have filled the world with misery. Circumstances do very little in promoting either happiness or misery. These usually come from within, not from without. If the heart is right and pure, it is a well-spring of happiness. If the heart is corrupt and selfish, it becomes the cesspool of wretchedness. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

"None of us liveth unto himself." We live for others. God has commanded that the strong should help the weak, that the learned should teach the ignorant, that the saved should rescue the lost, and that those who have should part with those who have not. We are our brother's keeper, helper, and deliverer.

And out of each life yielded to Him God demands "the glory due unto his name." "For thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory." All well doing, unselfishly performed, brings glory to God. Says the Master, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." The glory of God is in proportion to the service rendered. He calls for large service and great glory. "Herein is your Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." Let us consider lastly that life is An Investment for God.

A good investment pays a dividend. God is expecting dividends from His investments in human life. He expects dividends of enlightened people, rescued souls, uplifted lives, everlasting life, and immortal glory. He has invested in human life the knowledge of His will, the power of conscience, the message of the gospel, the work of the Spirit, the instrumentality of the redeemed, the ministry of angels, the provisions of nature, the care of providence, and the forces of civilization. All these combine to inform, to inspire, to lead, and to stimulate the forces of life to attempt the greatest possible betterment of the world.

God is "a present help" in all worthy efforts to make one's life a blessing to others. The faithful toiler in the vineyard does not toil alone, and cannot toil in vain. "We are laborers together with God." And success is promised. "Paul may plant; Apollos may water; but God giveth the increase."

Young friend, are you making your life a blessing to others? How much of the good seed have you cast into other minds, and hearts, and lives? Are you letting the light of your Christian conduct and zeal shine before others? Are you making God's investments pay? "What shall the harvest be?"

MRS. BED'S PARTY.

Dotty pouted just a little, but Bobby put his soldiers away at once; their mother always made Mrs. Bed's parties seem very attractive.

"Who will be at the party, mother?" they asked. It was always the same people at every party, but the children were never tired of hearing their mother name the guests.

"Well, Mrs. Mattress will be there. She always helps Mrs. Bed make her guests happy and contented. As she is of a retiring nature, very little will be seen of her, but her presence will be felt. Then Mr. and Mrs. Sheet will help receive; the Misses Pillow will come with their cousin, Mr. Bolster; the Misses Blanket will be there tonight—one of them has been away during the summer. As they are twins you will not know one from the other, but you will not care, both are agreeable.

"Mr. Spread will be there early in the evening, but before the party begins he usually goes away with Mr. Footboard. It is the same with Miss Counterpane. She helps during the day, but she never stays to the party."

Dotty took her little candle, and Bobby held her trailing, white gown, and joyously they followed their mother up the broad stairs to Mrs. Bed's party,—Youth's Companion.

At a factory not far from Manchester, says London Answers, some workmen were bragging about the skill of some of the men at their various jobs. After several had related their experiences, one man said that what he had heard was nothing to the skill of a stonemason he knew. The curious part of it was that the mason was a negro who had only one arm. "How does he manage it if he has only one arm?" questioned one of the men.

"Why," said the other, "he holds his chisel between his teeth and hits himself behind the head with the hammer."

"Mamma," complained a little girl recently, "teacher won't let me sing any more, and I'm the fastest singer in the school, too!" —London Blighty.

THE OPEN DOOR IN THE ORIENT.

Much has been said and written concerning the opportunities in Latin America, and the need of training American youth to take advantage of the new conditions developing there as a result of the war. But it remained for our commercial attache at Peking to draw attention to similar conditions in the Far East. He has placed before the Government a plan for the teaching of young men and women in Chinese, Japanese, and Russian, in order that we may take advantage of the commercial and cultural opportunities of that part of the world. "We need first to train," he says, "in an intensive way a small army of American college men and, if possible, women also, in the languages and literatures of the principal peoples of the Far East. For the present we might well confine our attention to the study of Chinese, Japanese, and Russian." He outlines a plan for the establishment of schools at Peking, Tokyo, and Petrograd, at which would be provided facilities for one hundred persons at a time, on a two-year schedule of courses, with a post-graduate course of one year for twenty-five selected students. He would have the United States Government offer scholarships of $1,200 a year, exclusive of traveling expenses, for promising young men and women. We have already provision for the training of ten students at Peking and six at Tokyo every two years for the consular service so the plan proposed by the attache at Peking is more or less of an extension of that idea. The important thing to note, however, is that the commercial interests of the country are awakening to the opportunities of these far-away lands. The church, through its missionary enterprise, has long seen these opportunities and in no small degree helped to develop them. It behooves the Christian church, in view of these propositions for training young men and women in the main for purely commercial purposes, to redouble its efforts to place Christian leaders in the largest numbers possible in these countries. America must carry to the Far East and to South America and to other parts of the world, not simply interest in purely material things but the higher interest in the ideal and in the spiritual.—Zion's Herald.

INTERNAL REVENUE

A Girl's Application of It.

The Farther Lights Circle of M—— had been organized for several years, and had done very good work. It was composed largely of girls who worked for themselves, and so had considerable control of their own money and expenses, although none of them were at all wealthy. The real working nucleus of the circle was made up of seven members who could be depended upon for regular attendance, faithful work and constant interest.

These seven were the only ones present at a meeting in which Gertrude, the dignified young president, had called for the reading of a letter from the Junior Associational Secretary, stating the amount apportioned to the M———— Farther Lights as their share of the necessary expenses for the year. When the sum was mentioned the girls exchanged dismayed glances, but their president said briskly: "Now, girls, you need not look at each other in that way; it can be done, and must be done; the only question is how. I propose a half hour's informal discussion of that one point, 'How?' Remarks on any other question are not in order."

Forthwith the girls' tongues were loosed and one plan after another was suggested and rejected, from a combination fair and turkey supper to a stereopticon lecture, expenses and profits to be shared with the lecturer.

Finally, Anna, the one who usually said the least and meant the most, spoke thoughtfully: "Girls, I think I see how we can do it if we are in real earnest."

"Good for you, Anna," said Bertha the one school girl among them and the youngest of the seven. "I knew I had suggested sixteen good-for-nothing schemes while you kept still, but probably you have had sixteen thoughts that have produced one good-for something scheme. What is it?"

Anna looked from one curious face to another then said: "Why, let's take a lesson from the general government."

"How?" asked a chorus of voices.

"Well, I heard father talking with Arthur last night on political economy, and he told how the expenses of government are met by a small 'internal revenue' tax on luxuries and articles that are not really necessities. That is, if a man buys a barrel of flour he pays just enough to cover simply the cost of raising and handling, but if he indulges in whiskey or tobacco he has to add a trifle for government, and the many mickles make so large a muckle that in ordinary times there is an abundance for all reasonable expenses. Now, why can't we girls tax our own luxuries for the benefit of this apportionment?"

"Just how do you mean?" asked Laura.

"What is your pet extravagance?" asked Anna.

"Peanuts," promptly replied Laura; "peanuts red hot, fresh from the roaster. I wish I had a pint this minute."

The rest laughed, but Anna said: "Peanuts are certainly not a necessity; suppose you put an internal revenue tax on them which will send the price up to six cents a pint, and let the extra cent go into your mite box. Wouldn't that help our apportionment?"

"If you realized how many peanuts my system requires you would think so," said Laura. "All right," she added, "my peanuts are taxed for the next year."

"Chocolate creams are my favorite indulgence," laughed Ada, "and at twenty cents a pound, to make my tax in proportion, they will have to cost twenty-four cents hereforth. Well, that will help fill my box."

"Grace, where will your tax fall?"

"On soda water," said Grace thirstily. "I just can't get by a good soda fountain. Gertrude, it will be safe to give me two boxes, please."

Doris spoke next. "I can't pass a ribbon counter any more easily than Grace can a soda fountain. I do just love fresh dainty ribbons, and lots of them. The others have put on a tax of—how much per cent.? I never could reckon percentages."

"Twenty per cent.," said Anna, after a little time.

"Very well," went on Doris, "for the next year for every dollar I spend on them twenty cents shall go into my box, and I'm afraid my ribbons will be [illegible]," she added ruefully.

"That is just it," said Anna. "Father said that often the tax meant fewer luxuries for one's self in order to give money to the government." She continued bravely, "And we ought to be willing to do for our King what men do cheerfully for their country."

"Now my pet extravagance is flowers, especially violets," and she lovingly touched the bunch pinned to her dress, "but hereafter for every dollar I pay the florist twenty cents shall go into my box. And if you miss the violets once in a while, girls, don't say anything."

Gertrude glanced at the dainty gloves lying beside her Bible on the table and said: "Gloves, fine in quality, immaculate in freshness, and delicate in color, are my foible, but they shall rise twenty per cent. in price from this day forth for a year to come."

Bertha, the irrepressible, had listened in unusual silence, but now she burst forth: "My, luxuries have riz fast, haven't they; but what can poor little me do? I don't indulge in any of the things you have mentioned unless I am treated. I have no pet luxury that I know of. How am I to keep up my end of the business?"

Anna spoke once more, a little mischievously. "I know, Bertha. Father said wholesome practice of saying your own private prayers, night and morning. I have never abandoned it myself, and I know the comfort of it."

THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL.

The law says, this do and thou shalt live.

The law says, pay me that thou owest.

The law says, make you a new heart, and a new spirit.

The law says, Thou shalt love the Lord Thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

The law says, cursed is every one who continueth not in all things written in the book of the law, to do them.

The law says, the wages of sin is death.

The Gospel says, live, and thou shalt do.

The Gospel says, I frankly forgive thee all.

The Gospel says, a new heart will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you.

The Gospel says, herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

The Gospel says, blessed is the man whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sin is covered.

The Gospel says, the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

THE REMEDY FOR WORLD UNREST.

Our world is in a state of unrest. Nations are burdened with debt. Capital and labor are at odds. The high cost of living causes much anxiety. Governments are at sea. The future is uncertain. Society is distrustful. Sin stalks abroad unashamed. And the prophet's voice is not reassuring.

What is the remedy? Reduction of cost of living, says the consumer. Higher wages, says the laborer. A larger output, says the manufacturer. A new order, says the socialist. World peace, says the patriot. Revolution, says the reformer.

All these touch only the surface of the world's ills. None of them goes to the heart of the world's agony. They are all salves for the world's external sores. The world needs a change of heart, a cure for the inward disorder, of which all other troubles are manifestations.

The only sufficient and lasting cure is the gospel of Jesus Christ. Here is the gospel prescription for the world's ailment: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The gospel will produce three indispensable things that will put the world completely at ease.

The first is salvation from sin. Sin is the source of nine-tenths of the world's dissatisfaction. The wrong-doer is looking for trouble. His main business is to make trouble. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." But the saved man is a maker of happiness, a promoter of human welfare. Give the world a larger gospel. For it is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

The gospel will also promote contentment. Salvation takes greed out of the human heart. It makes men less grasping in their desires. "Godliness with contentment is great gain." Contentment is always associated with godliness. The godly man is easily satisfied with external things. He studies not how much can I get, but how much good can I do.

And the gospel will promote brotherly love. The dominant note of genuine religion is love. "We know that we have passed from death to life because we love the brethren." "Love casteth out all fear," all distrust, all jealousies and envyings. The greatest need is not a league of nations, but a brotherhood of nations.

The Church is God's chosen instrumentality to bring peace to the nations through the gospel of His Son. It is entrusted with a mission to the nation as well as to the individual. "None of us liveth unto himself." The voice of the Church ought to be heard in the counsels of the nations. "The still small voice" of the Sovereign of all nations is speaking to the heart of the world. Let the Church see to it that the world hears and heeds this voice. –The Word of Life.

THE SEVEN RULES OF GIVING.

What a gracious charter of privilege, what an inexhaustible food-chest for the soul, what a wonderful compendium of duty, and what an all-sufficient guarantee for eternity, is the Bible! "The wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err", need not want, need not perish, in face of such full provision! The Bible is one great rule of giving and receiving. In it we find the conditions under which, the motives by which, and the purposes for which God gives His Son, His salvation, His will, His material blessings, His care and His reward. In it we find the rules under which man, in turn, also becomes a giver. Let us take note of these rules.

1. Give to God Jesus came to reveal the distressing sympathy of God, Who hungers with those who hunger, thirsts with those who thirst, and weeps with those who weep. To feed the poor is to feed the hungry heart of God. To dry the widow's and orphan's tears is to dry the sympathetic tears of God. We give for the benefit of needy creatures; we give to the relief and joy of the Creator. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25: 40.

2. Give of God's own. The Pharisee in the temple said, "I give tithes of all that I possess." He gave a small part of what he claimed belonged to himself. Many tithers still make that mistake. They say, "One tenth belongs to God, the nine-tenths belong to us." Whereas it all belongs to God, and should be held in trust for God. For says the word of God: "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price." "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." Only the entirely consecrated man can make proper and acceptable gifts to God. David in his prayer declared this truth about giving: "For all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee." 1 Chron. 29:14.

3. Give without hope of earthly recompense It is true that liberal givers are usually recompensed in this world. But it is unusual to expect it. God does not intend it as a recompense. He simply entrusts to generous givers larger portions of His bounty. It is wise and to the interests of His kingdom so to do. It is wrong to give, like the Pharisee, to secure the praise of men, or, like the selfish Christian, to secure God's prosperity. Such giving becomes a barter, or a trading, with God and men. We cannot put God under obligation to us. We are undeserving creatures. "Do likewise ye, when ye shall have done all these things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants." Luke 17: 10.

4. Give gladly. Giving is not a penalty, but a privilege; not a task, but a pleasure. Giving under pressure is yielding to extortion. All gifts should be thank-offerings. They should express gratitude for benefits received, gratitude to the great Giver, gratitude for opportunities to help others. Unselfish giving is the thing, and unselfishness is always robed with smiles. "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9: 7.

5. Give till it hurts. The inhabitant of the Nile valley is often compelled to give up a portion of his bread-supply as seed for another crop. When the river overflows he takes a part of the grain that he needs for food and sows it upon the overflowing waters, knowing that it will yield a rich harvest "after many days." He and family are willing to go hungry part of the time, in order to have a bountiful harvest. Jesus commended the poor widow who gave, not a part, but all of her means of subsistence. Jesus gave till it hurt, till he gave up life for mankind. If need be, "Go and do thou likewise." Give in the spirit of sacrifice. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1.

6. Give as an investment. Self-sacrificing giving is the best-paying investment for the life that now is, to say nothing of the life that is to come. Genuine happiness, Christian character, personal salvation, and equipment for service, are some of the dividends that such investments yield in this world. Giving has unlimited possibilities. The care and training of an orphan might create a power of influence that would uplift a continent. A contribution to missions, surcharged with holy sacrifice and believing prayer, might become the means of turning an entire nation toward God. It is in this way that nations shall be born in a day. For with God one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

But let us not be over anxious for large results at once. The largest and best harvests are a long time coming. Leave the results entirely with God, Who will bring them to pass in His good time. "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days." Eccl. 11:1.

7. Give to the glory of God. This is the highest aim of giving. God is glorified in that which pleases Him. The Father was infinitely glorified by His Son, in Whom He was well pleased. The apostle says of disinterested service in the name of Christ that "with such sacrifices God is well pleased." God is glorified in that which helps His cause. Giving of self, of energy, and of substance, under the direction and power of the Spirit, contributes largely to the extension of the kingdom of God throughout the world. God is glorified in that which honors Him. Mary greatly honored Jesus in pouring the contents of the alabaster box upon His head. And she so glorified her Lord by that act that her own name shines brightly in the light of the reflected glory. God is entitled to the glory of every sacrifice, effort, and achievement. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. 10:31.—The Word of Life.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

SEVEN GOALS FOR 1919.

A revival in every church.

A family altar in every home.

A Sunday school in every church.

Every school contributing to the Home.

A Church paper in every M. P. family.

One superannuate bond to every charge.

PASTORS' REPORTS ANALYZED, THIRD INSTALMENT—

Gibsonville has paid 62 per cent. pastor's salary, the Sunday school contributes to the Home, about 50 visits reported by the pastor as having been made.

Pageland Charge, 61 per cent. pastor's salary paid, 41 visits made by the pastor; 41 professions, 17 accessions during the quarter.

Fairview Charge, 30 per cent. of pastor's salary paid, none of the claims reported paid during the quarter, 50 visits made by the pastor, 19 professions and 19 accessions to the church.

Bess Chapel Charge not quite 30 per cent. of pastor's salary, nothing reported as raised on the claims, 90 visits made, 12 professions and three accessions.

First Church, Henderson, has paid 75 per cent. of pastor's salary; $100 reported paid on claims, 109 visits made, one accession to the church.

Halifax Charge, about 52 per cent. of pastor's salary reported paid, all claims met to date, 197 visits made, 29 professions, 26 accessions, about $400 have been pledged over and above the allotment in the million dollar campaign, and $1,000 have been paid to Treasurer Beck for this cause.

A perusal of the reports sent in up to date indicate that many of the charges are yet considerably behind in their finances. Some of them are surprisingly in arrears. There is yet need of system being used by most of our churches in raising their claims, and greater promptness in paying their obligations. The church, although the best institution in the country in many respects, is the poorest pay and the most irregular of all the institutions that employ men to work. If the church should be judged only by the way she pays those who work for her, she would have the most unsavory reputation of any institution in our land. For she is often a poor paymaster and dislikes to be told of her shortcomings.

THOSE SUPERANNUATE BONDS—

Many of our churches and people subscribed for one of these bonds early in the year before the million dollar campaign was put on; since then, little or nothing has been said about it; but we would sincerely like to see that one hundred bonds sold before conference meets November the 19th. I am not sure, but think almost half that number was taken; these should all be paid for at once and get the certificate and then we want other churches or charges and individuals to take one of these bonds in memory of a deceased pastor or loved one. It is a beautiful way of keeping the memory of a loved one green and while doing that you are also helping our superannuate ministers to live more comfortably than they could possibly live without the aid given them by this society of our Conference.

MAKE YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL EVERGREEN—

Last fall so many of the Sunday schools throughout the country were forced to suspend; the people felt a distinct loss, and some of these schools have not yet fully recovered from the loss sustained by this suspension. We are hoping that we shall not have occasion to close up this year as last, and we want to urge those schools that had the habit of going into winter quarters about September, to keep the school going throughout the year. It will take a little extra effort on the part of somebody, but it will certainly be worth a great deal more than it costs to keep the schools going.

LOOK AFTER THE YOUNG CONVERTS—

I fear that there is a general failing on the part of church officers and oftentimes of pastors, to look as closely after the young converts as they ought. The new member is received into the church and too often left without any definite idea as to what more is required of him or her now that the church vows are upon him or her than before these vows were taken. If no more is required, then, why should they join the church? If more is required, they should be informed of what it is and how this new obligation is to be discharged. Who is there in our church can blaze a new way for service in this particular? Whoever can do it would put the entire church under lasting obligations to him. Find something for the young convert to do that is really worth while, something that causes him to grow in grace and in knowledge of the Lord and you will be remembered through many generations for your great service to the church.

But there are many things all of us know to do which are not done so often as they should be. The young convert is not urged or encouraged in the formation of religious habits, is let go without feeling any new obligation to the church, etc. Any of us could improve along this line, if only we would give serious thought to the tasks.

UWHARRIE CHARGE, Rev. W. H. Neese, Pastor.

I visited all the churches of this charge, going to Mt. Pleasant and Mt. Zion on Saturday, and visiting Jerusalem, Cid and Piney Grove on Sunday. At the appointments on Saturday we had seven and nine, respectively, if I mistake not. Just why a people will want any one to go to their church when they have no idea of attending the service themselves is hard to explain, except it be as a punishment. But Uwharrie Charge is one of our charges in need of much assistance. The people are undeveloped along some very essential lines. Only a few church papers are taken on the charge. The present delegate-elect to conference does not even take the church paper. Their fathers before them did not take the church paper nor take any very great interest in the church out ide the locality in which they lived. As a result of this, the majority of the members are yet to be interested in the general activities of our church.

The million dollar campaign has been put on at three churches, Mt. Pleasant went over the top, Piney Grove has subscribed about half its allotment, Jerusalem has raised about one-third and a few dollars were pledged at Cid. The work is yet unfinished and I believe that Uwharrie will surprise herself in raising the money for this cause.

Brothers Garrett, Idol and Shaw had visited Mt. Pleasant and Piney Grove before my visit and to them belongs the full credit for all that was raised at Mt. Pleasant and for about all that has been raised at Piney Grove. These brethren did good work in their visits to these churches.

Bro. Neese has just closed a successful revival at Piney Grove church; this makes several weeks of revival services, so he is now enjoying a well earned rest. The pastor's salary on this charge is very small indeed, not quite six hundred dollars; this does not include the house, which is furnished the pastor free of rent. There is no parsonage on the work. But Uwharrie is able to give their pastor an adequate support; many of the people are amply able to do a good part by him and should do it. We sincerely hope that the salary for next year will be $800 for this charge; the pastor needs this much to support him living here where living is cheaper than in the villages, and too, the people will get a greater blessing when they give more to the carse of the Lord. R. M. Andrews.

BRO. BETHEA'S QUESTION ANSWERED.

Will say in answer to the question asked by Bro. Bethea in last week's Herald that 111 of the 197 members received here joined on profession of faith, while 86 joined by letter. Counting both those who joined on profession of faith and those who joined by letter, there has been a net gain in membership of 43 per cent. Counting only those who have united on profession of faith there has been a net gain of 36 per cent. J. E. Pritchard.

IMPORTANT NOTICE MILLION DOLLAR CAMPAIGN TREASURERS.

Please make collections of the second quarterly payment on Campaign Pledges as rapidly as possible and report them to the office of the Treasurer at least by October 1st. The Campaign Central Committee has ordered the distribution to be made following October 1st. This will be done before I begin a tour of the southwestern conferences. Several of the Boards benefiting will need to use the fund for distribution at an early date that another large source of income was penalties, a tax on indulgence in misdemeanors, you see. You were bemoaning your habit of using slang the other day, and wishing you could stop it. Can't that be your luxury, and your tax a cent for each slang expression?''

''Do you want to ruin me?'' asked Bertha in mock indignation. ''Don't you know that slang is my native language, and that I should be dead broke in six weeks if I taxed it?''

Bertha flushed, but she said bravely: ''You are right, Doris, and it is time I began somewhere. Every slang term for the next year shall cost me a cent, but father will have to increase my allowance, and then I shall not have anything to spend. No, thank you, Gertrude, I won't take a box. I'll begin collecting in the clothes-basket.''

''Well, girls, said Gertrude, ''this has been sufficiently informal, but I think profitable. Let us come to order and close our meeting properly and one year from now we will bring our internal revenue taxes and count them, and tell our experiences if we have them.''

''You had better have that meeting at my house,'' said Bertha, ''for I shall never be able to carry my collection any distance unless I borrow a wheelbarrow!''

The year went by, as all years do; the girls held their meetings regularly, and occasionally compared notes on their taxes, and looked forward to the meeting when results were to be made known with eager interest.

When the day came, the seven, the complete number, as Anna always said gathered promptly. Bertha ostentatiously staggering under the weight of an apparently very heavy, and certainly very large bag.

After the opening exercises Gertrude said: ''This is an experience meeting. Anna, you suggested our system of internal revenue: can you tell us how much your tax on violets came to?''

Anna laid a box heavy with coin on the table, saying: ''I have not counted it, but my experience has been two-fold. First, I never realized before how costly my aesthetic luxury was; and secondly, the florist has found me a less profitable customer this year.''

''Ada,'' said the president, and Ada brought her box and said: ''My experience is that when one reckons the amount paid for chocolate creams by the twenty per cent. test the amount is rather appalling. Also, that one's complexion is just as good when one eats fewer of those dainties.''

Every eye was turned expectantly on Bertha as she deposited her bag on the table and drew forth an assortment of boxes and arranged them in order. When she had accomplished this she said gravely, but with dancing eyes: ''You see, girls, it is as I told you. Slang, when one has indulged in it freely for a while is a very constant luxury, and my honesty is pained at the thought that I may have overlooked some payments that ought to have been made. Likewise, taxed slang is expensive. Also, I found the stock so promiscuous that I sorted it out. This largest box is for expletives, extending from Jerusalem to Jericho, and embracing the defunct Julius Caesar and Jehoshaphat. The next one is for such graceful terms as 'rubberneck,' 'dead broke,' etc., and these others are for all varieties best known to and classified by myself.

''This tax represents a year's hard work, but it has more than paid for itself, for it has left me very little to tax. My boxes have not gained much for the past three months.

''Honestly, girls,'' she added, her tone changing, ''I don't like to call this a tax, but a thank offering for what it has done for me.''

Then she held up a gold dollar, saying: ''And this is my mother's thank offering for her daughter's reformed speech.''

The girls looked very lovingly at their bright member, whose slang had been the outgrowth of pure girlish fun, and never really coarse or low.

''Doris,' said Gertrude, and Doris responded. ''Here is my box, and I really think I have enjoyed my ribbons more since I have felt that I was sharing them with the women and girls who don't have such things, and if they have been a little cheaper than they used to be, the box has grown heavier, and my heart lighter for it.''

Gertrude called for Laura next, and she passed her box and said with a most becomingly flushed face: ''I couldn't do it, girls: it seemed so mean to give only one fifth as much for missions as I did for my own indulgence, so I just had to turn it around and put the peanut money into my box and ate up the tax, and the box has prospered.''

Grace said eagerly without waiting to be called on: ''That was exactly what I thought about soda, and I have done the same, and am almost ashamed yet to think how much soda I have had.''

There was a surprised hush for a minute, then Gertrude said: ''I found that I really could not afford to add to the price of my gloves, but a reduction of twenty per cent. settled that.'' Then her color wavered prettily as she added: ''But girls, I studied the whole subject of taxation, and found that in time of war necessities are taxed as well as luxuries, and as this is for the war of the Kingdom, and the victory of our King, I have laid a war tax on every article I have bought.''

Silently the treasurer opened the boxes of internal revenue and war taxes and counted the contents, and each girl drew a breath of satisfaction when she announced that the apportionment had been met more than twice over.

They passed a vote to continue their system of taxation for another year, and after a prayer of thanksgiving and consecration separated to their respective homes once more.—Emma J. Cummings Park, tract of Woman's Baptist Mission Society.

DAYTON AIRLESS TIRES

During the past six years thousands of owners of light passenger and delivery cars in all parts of the civilized world have been using the Dayton Airless Tire. These owners, many of them right here in Greensboro, and hundreds of them scattered through North Carolina, have conclusively demonstrated:—

1st. THEY CAN'T PUNCTURE OR BLOW OUT. 2nd. THEY RIDE AS SMOOTHLY AS PNEUMATICS. 3rd. THEY GIVE MUCH LONGER WEAR THAN PNEUMATICS. 4th. THEY ABSOLUTEIY WILL NOT INJURE CAR.

Dayton Airless Tires have been endorsed by 50,000 or more satisfied users, including the late George Westinghouse and Edward Gray, formerly chief engineer of the Ford Motor Co. Local endorsements have been made by Judge T. J. Shaw, Judge S. B. Adams, Dr. J. T. J. Battle, Rev. J. Frank Lee, Morrison-Neese Furniture Co., Z. M. Rhea, C. A. Allred, John W. Wharton and scores of others.

We have standardized on 30x3 and 30x3½ and the price is right. Where we have no dealers I sell direct.

I want an exclusive Dayton dealer in every town and county of North Carolina—tire experience not necessary.

ITEMS FROM CHINA.

As previously announced, by agreement on the part of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. C. S. Heininger and the work in China so successfully conducted by the society, except all pertaining to that for women and girls, were transferred to the Board on June 15th, 1919. The society has already arranged to send out in November lady missionaries to develop their important part of the church's enterprise, and, when the details connected with the adjustment of properties, etc., are completed, a more vigorous and extended policy will be possible by the application of the energies and resources of both organizations in that great field.

Our Board is thus operating in three non-Christian lands—Japan, China, and India—and it is hoped that ere long the society will also share in the work in India, for it is one of the most needy fields in the world, and the most responsive, as a great turning to Christianity has been in progress, whole communities renouncing their idols; and thousands await baptism, with not enough teachers to prepare them in the rudiments of the faith.

Word has reached me from Rev. C. S. Heininger, from which the following is taken:

"I trust that now the Board has control of the work in China some action will be taken for the formal recognition of the mission conference here. We need very much an ordained Chinese pastor to help in the work and we have a man who is a college and seminary graduate whom the conference voted in their last session to ordain. I think in case the Board will authorize the formation of a conference, and recognize the annual meeting here as the conference, we could go ahead with the ordination of Mr. Kao. On account of the size of the church here with almost 500 members, some such action should be taken.

"The most serious problem of all is the problem of exchange. For 20 years previous to the war an American dollar changed for $2.10, on the average in Chinese currency. But since the war the rate of exchange has steadily fallen. Every day and every month sees such changes that we can not predict what the next month's rate will be. From the papers I know that it must now be only about $1.06 or $1.07 Mexican for an American dollar. I fear the Board will tremble at the amount needed to make up the difference in exchange.

"I will say that we are very happy to work under the Board and to continue our work for the Methodist Protestant Church in Kalgan. I am living in the hopes of better things here, and trust you will find the new work a source of joy and inspiration to the church.

"In regard to the work the outlook is very encouraging. Our new chapel which we have in the heart of the city is the greatest thing that has ever happened for the work. This fall we want to have an official opening of the chapel at which we expect to invite the leading business men and officials, and probably import some good Chinese speaker from Pekin or Tientsin.

"During July we baptized six at Ch'aikoupu and received them into the church, and one here at Kalgan was baptized and two received into the church.

These last two were students in government schools, the one, however, a son of an old preacher, and had been baptized in infancy. The other is a student in the Army Medical College in Pekin."

"THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT WORK IN TOWN AND COUNTRY."

This is a practical hand-book for Sunday school workers, written by William Monzen Brabham and published by George H. Doran Company.

This book frankly deals with Sunday school work in the small church as it is found in the open country and the small town or village. The school of less than two hundred members is in mind throughout. Every page contains statements of actual facts and suggestions which have grown out of experience. The book is first of all a working manual, containing enough of the very simple to meet the needs of the most poorly organized school and at the same time enough of the harder things to keep the best organized school busy as it seeks to achieve.

Some of the chapter titles which arrest the attention and invite a careful reading are: A Survey of the Field, Organization of the School, Training a Leadership, The Building and Its Equipment, What and How We Teach, The One Whom We Teach, The Sunday School Hour, Getting and Holding Members, The Workers' Conference, The Organized Class at Work.

With each chapter there is given a list of books for further reading and some outline topics for thought and discussion. The book lends itself to class or individual study and will be particularly valuable for superintendents and pastors.

About the Author.—The author of this volume is a layman who served, while in the banking business, as a teacher and then as a superintendent. For the past eleven years he has been a full-time employed Sunday school worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. For several years he was in charge of the rural Sunday school work of the General Sunday School Board, is now head of the Department of Sunday School Administration for the same organization. The book comes out of a wide experience and observation at first hand with the small Sunday school. Price, Net, $1.50.

REV. J. F. MINNIS AND WIFE, MISSIONARIES TO INDIA.

AS TO PASTORAL WORK.

A pastor in our office recently said he doubted whether a pastoral visit is worth while or worthy of the name if hurriedly made and so brief that you have time only for some ingratiating remark such as—"You certainly have a pretty baby." He further said that he had about decided to tell his people that he would make pastoral visits only on their invitation and would expect to stay long enough to accomplish some real pastoral work.

DID YOU EVER SEE A MAN LIKE THIS?

Brother Bethea told Brother Millaway about him and Brother Millaway told us. This man was appealed to for money for foreign missions. He replied that he did not believe in spending money on foreign missions when so much was needed in our own country. Home missions, he said, demanded all our means.

A little later he was appealed to for money for home missions. He replied: "We can't afford to be sending money away when our own church needs a new roof so badly."

A little later a collection was proposed to raise money to cover the church. He objected to that, saying, "The grave yard is unprotected. I think we would better spend our money in enclosing it and paying proper respect to the dead."

A little later an effort was made to collect money to put a fence about the church cemetery. This man was appealed to, but he refused to contribute, saying, "There's no need of a fence around a graveyard. Those on the inside can't get out and those outside don't want to get in."

—Brother Pierce and his St. Paul people had a good day last Sunday, marking the beginning of a new year in the church. The door of the church was opened for new members and eight were received, making quite an addition to the number and working force of the church. Then an appeal was made for subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and nine names were enrolled. But this is not all. An appeal was made for Haw River church (rebuilding fund) and a total of $43.50 was pledged and part of it paid immediately, and it is proposed to continue the appeal until the total reaches at least $50. We think this a good beginning for the year and believe that it presages a good year for St. Paul.

—Rev. J. A. Ledbetter is now serving as pastor of the First Christian Church in Reidsville, and writes that he has a fine field. His family will live in Gibsonville. He retains a lively interest in the Herald reports and renews his subscription. We thank him.

DAVID'S NOBLE PURPOSES.

Rev. W. A. Ledford.

The often repeated saying, "Hell is paved with good resolutions," is based on the numerous broken vows, promises and resolutions. However, a more serious thought, a better understanding of the Scriptures, and a deeper insight into the ways of God might have justified the opposite conclusion, "Heaven is paved with good intentions." Who can say that the unbuilt temples of earth may not yet be a house of God, "not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Browning wrote very pleasingly,

" 'Tis not what a man does that exalts him,
But what a man would do."

He had learned that heart deeds are more important than hand deeds in the sight of God. God judges a man by the "thoughts and intents of his heart" rather than by the achievements of his hands. As in the case of the widow's two mites, the condition of the heart is far more importaint than the size of the gift. God said to David, "Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name: thou didst well that it was in thine heart; notwithstanding thou shalt not build the house." 2 Chron. 6:8, 9.

Many projects dear to many hearts will fail, without any explanation on God's part. He favored David with sufficient reasons. "Thou hast shed blood abundantly. . . . Thou shalt not build an house unto my name, because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight." 1 Chron. 22:8. There is a difference of opinion as to what kept David from building the house of God that he had in his heart to build, regardless of the plain statements of Scripture. Some say that he could not fight battles and build houses both. The job of ridding his country of its enemies was enough for David. Others say that it was the blood of Uriah which stood between David and the accomplishment of his heart's desire. Like Moses at the waters of Meribah, one sinful act decided his future. The view we take is unimportant, the thing to notice is that God had one work for David, and David had his heart set on another. David's plans must fail so that those of his Lord might succeed. Happy is the man who can say sincerely at all times, "Not my will, but thine be done."

David's experiences present both disagreeable and agreeable features. He had to do so many things contrary to his liking. He dreamed and planned in marble and ivory, and worked amidst bloody scenes almost all his life. The great majority are governed by circumstances, over which they have no control, leading them among unfriendly environments and compelling them to spend most of their time on disagreeable tasks, in which they have no pleasure. His desires for the house of God were not defeated, but deferred to the next generation, when Solomon would be king. The motto of Methodism is, "The workmen are called home, but the work goes on." If David couldn't build the house himself, he could make it possible for it to be built. "Sowing is as essential as reaping." He who notices when the sparrows fall, will not lose sight of a single good thought, intention, purpose, deed in the final day of rewards. God may over-rule our plans for His glory, but will never forget a golden deed of the humblest servant.

THE NEW YEAR TREE.

It had long been the custom in the Elliott family to strip the Christmas tree on New Year's morning and to put away all the Christmas decorations for the next year. For three years Robert, who was now eleven, had been the one to climb up on the stepladder and hand down the high-up trimmings, while nine-year-old Elizabeth and seven-year-old Tom wrapped the things up and put them into boxes. Then, when the branches were bare, the tree was thrown from the nearest window, and carried round to the trash pile in the back yard.

This particular New Year's Day the plan was changed, because Elizabeth had been ill for a long time and was not able to do her share. However, she was well enough to watch the others from a big chair and help out just a little with a word now and then. As for work, she could only sort the gay beads and wrap a few of the things, but she was happy to do even that.

When the tree was finally stripped, Robert and Tom dragged it to the window and threw it out into the snow.

"It doesn't look like the tree we had a week ago, does it?" said Robert. Indeed, it did not. Then it had been fresh and green and had smelled of the woods; now the branches were bare and the whole tree looked dingy.

"Let's ask mother if we can't make a bonfire of it," suggested Tom.

"Oh, no, boys!" Elizabeth exclaimed, with a shiver. "That would seem like burning up Christmas! If you don't want to put it on the trash pile, why don't you play with it? I should think that would be fun."

"Fun to play with that bare thing?" Robert rejoined scornfully. "What could we do with it?"

"With the Christmas tree?" asked Mrs. Elliott, who came into the room just then. "I have a plan, but I don't intend to tell it till the last minute. Come, boys, put on your sweaters and mittens and set the tree up in the back yard."

Robert hesitated. "Elizabeth can't go outdoors," he said, "I wish she could play with us sometimes!"

"She's going to play with you this time," said Mrs. Elliott. "She's an important part of this plan. You run along and do your share, and Elizabeth and I will do ours."

The boys lost no time after that; they knew something jolly was on hand. When they had dragged the tree to the yard they set it up right and began to brace it with planks.

As soon as they left the room, Mrs. Elliott brought four boxes to Elizabeth's chair, and four trays filled with the most curious-looking things the little girl had ever seen.

"Why, mother!" she exclaimed. "What in the world is this?"

"Sh-h!" said Mrs. Elliott. "We'll have to work very fast, because the boys will be back in a jiffy. Put everything into boxes as quickly as you can. Fill each box with the contents of one tray. Then I'll cover the boxes and tie them up."

Elizabeth went to work without another word, and just as the cover was tied on the last box the boys came rushing into the room.

"The tree's up!" exclaimed Robert. "What next?"

"Next, you each choose two boxes," Mrs. Elliott replied. "First you take one, then Tom; then you again, and Tom takes the last."

"But what's in the boxes?" asked Tom.

"Wait and see!"

"You'll like it," added Elizabeth, although she was almost as much in the dark as he. "Hurry and choose."

"I'll take the little round one," said Robert. "The best goods come in the smallest packages, I've always heard."

"I'll take the long, slim one," Tom declared.

"Then I'll take the square one," Robert reached for his second choice.

"That leaves me the flat one, and I wanted it, anyway," said his brother. "Now, may we open them?"

Elizabeth nodded, and they pulled off the covers in a hurry. The boys' faces looked blank, and Elizabeth's somewhat puzzled.

"What's all this?" Robert asked in a disappointed voice.

"Why, mother!" cried Tom. "What can we do with these things?"

"Trim a tree for somebody," replied Mrs. Elliott. "Can't you guess who it will be?"

The children thought a minute. "Oh, I know!" Elizabeth broke in, her eyes shining. "The birds! It will be fun! See, Robert, you have suet in your round box. Bits of that will do for the small ornaments."

"And Tom has pieces of apple, strings of pop corn," Robert added; "and here are bread crumbs to take the place of beads."

They took up their boxes and started out.

"I wish Elizabeth could see us trim the tree," said Tom, pausing at the door.

"She's going to," replied Mrs. Elliott. "Robert, you take one arm of her chair and I'll take the other and we'll carry her to the window of the back room. Then you boys get to work, and your sister will watch you."

It was not long before that back-yard, left-over Christmas tree was so trimmed up that it would hardly have known itself. Bits of white suet ornamented the twigs, and ropes of white pop corn and festoons of bread crumbs hung from branch to branch.

Scarcely had the boys finished and joined Elizabeth at the upstairs window before a little bird—one of a flock that had quickly gathered—ventured down for a taste. Evidently he was satisfied, since he stayed for more. Presently his friends, seeing him feasting so happily, came flying down for their part.

"I think that's as much fun as a tree indoors," said Elizabeth happily. "But won't they eat every single thing before night?"

"Never mind about that," laughed Robert. "Tom and I will retrim it every day if you and mother will furnish the trimmings."

"That's a bargain," said Elizabeth. "I love to string things. And there'll be no more hungry birds in our back yard! We'll call it our New Year's tree and keep it trimmed as long as the snow covers the ground."

After that year the Elliott Christmas tree never failed to do double duty.—Clara Ingram Judson, in The Youth's Companion.

PATTY'S COURAGE.

(By Anne Harris Crawford.)

"And everybodyw ill go to hear Dr. Carmichael," continued Dorothy as the two paused on the schoolhouse steps. "Father says it is the biggest thing this town has had in many a long day, and that we are lucky to persuade so famous a man to come. Mother wanted to give a reception for him, but he said he never goes out to things of that kind. He wouldn't even come to our house, but insisted on going to a hotel."

As she spoke, a quiet, slender, gray-eyed girl came up the steps, hesitated, as if she wanted to join them, and then passed on. The two girls followed her with their eyes as she entered the building.

"I like her," announced Patty; "and her mother is so sweet."

"Patty Manning, I don't see why you have to bother with a nobody like Eve Lathrop," exclaimed Dorothy pettishly. "Nobody knows anything about the Lathrops; and father says they are as poor as poverty. I don't believe Eve Lathrop has two dresses to her name, and I am sure they won't be in things at all. We just can't afford to chum with her."

Dorothy's father was the richest man in town, but in Patty's home things did not come so easily. Though in her heart of hearts Patty did not like some of Dorothy's ideas, yet she was glad to be counted among the chosen few whom spoiled Dorothy admitted to her circle of friends and invited to her luxurious home.

"Of course," Dorothy continued, "I would not be rude to her or hurt her feelings for the world, but we don't have to bother with her. Let her make friends in her own circumstances."

Patty felt the subtle flattery. According to Dorothy's words, she and Patty were in one class, and Eve in another far less desirable. "No," agreed Patty, "of course we don't."

"It is too bad you called on her," continueed Dorothy; "but you need not go again. Just let her alone and there is no great harm done."

"Nobody knows a thing against them except that apparently they haven't any money and they live in a poor section of town," protested Patty, feeling just a little ashamed of herself.

"Oh, well," shrugged Dorothy, "if your taste runs to people of that class—but there, it is time to go in."

Eve Lathrop had found that being a new girl in a school, where everybody knew everybody else, was a rather lonesome existence. Beyond the first few moments of curiosity concerning the new girl, who with her mother had recently moved to town, she was of no concern to them.

With Patty it had been different. From the first there had been a mutual attraction between them. Sweet, gentle, dignified Eve and impulsive, scatter-brained Patty had liked each other from the start.

"And now," thought Patty as she sat at her desk. "Dorothy is being horrid." She hated to admit it even to herself, but it did please her to realize that in spite of the fact that funds were frequently low in the Manning household, she was Dorothy's best friend and always welcome in her delightful home. The fact that Dorothy did not approve of her new friend carried weight, and it made Patty cross to realize that this was true.

"Just for that I will walk home with Eve this afternoon, just to show I am not afraid to have her for a friend in spite of other people," Patty decided defiantly. But in spite of her determination, she was glad to see the Evart automobile at the school door with Mrs. Evart waiting to take Dorothy off with her. That meant that Dorothy would not know with whom she walked home. If she knew, it was not unthinkable that Dorothy might say something even more cutting than her last remark at noon; and Patty did want Dorothy's approval. Still, she would not allow Dorothy to choose or to veto her friends.

When Patty joined Eve after school with a cheery, "You are going my way, aren't you?" the pleased look in Eve's serious gray eyes made her glad she had shown this little act of friendliness. As the two girls strolled up the street, they discussed the coming of the famous lecturer.

"Yes," said Eve quietly, "mother and I are going. Mother does not get out often, but she is very fond of Dr. Carmichael's lectures and we would not miss this one for anything."

"Oh, you have heard him before?"

"Yes; lots of times. Have you planned to go with anybody?"

"No," answered Patty. "If mother can get back in time I can go with them. They are going over to Laurel Run for the day. Or maybe I can go with some of the girls. I have not made any definite plans."

"Why not go with mother and me?" invited Eve eagerly. "We would be so glad to have you, and we have to come directly by your house on our way. Will you?"

"Thank you," replied Patty, and hesitated. She thought of Dorothy and the big car in which Dorothy would go to the lecture. She realized that she had at least a fair chance of being invited to go in it. This lecture was the foremost event of the season. The whole town would be there. How much more pleasant it would be to roll up to the door with the Evarts and feel oneself amid the town's elect rather than walk with the Lathrops and before the whole town show that her tastes ran to "people of that class."

Then honest little Patty's heart gave a throb and she squared her chin. She would not allow herself to become a snob and a coward. No, this was her chance to show herself and Dorothy and the town at large, if it was interested, that she, Patty Manning, had the courage to choose her own friends for their worth regardless of lesser things; and to prove that she was not ashamed to be seen with a girl whom she liked, regardless of Dorothy's sneers and the fact that Eve had not been admitted to the town's select circles.

"Thank you, Eve," she repeated, "I will be glad to go with you and your mother."

The great night came. The auditorium was crowded and the lecturer was at his best. Dorothy's disgust at the company Patty had chosen was apparent even across the room in the lift of her eyebrows. Patty was uncomfortable and ashamed of herself for being so. "I don't care," she told herself; "and I would despise myself if I had refused to come with Eve. That would have been cowardice."

When the lecture was over and the people were streaming out, the great man stood near the entrance bowing, smiling, shaking hands, while the town's greatest strove to do him honor. Mrs. Lathrop, Eve, and Patty were slipping quietly past, when suddenly Patty saw the great man's eyes turn in their direction. A look of surprised pleasure came over his handsome face, and with a hasty apology to the group around him, he strode forward. Patty could scarcely believe her eyes as he bore down upon them, hands outstretched and a light of glad recognition in his eyes. "Why, Mollie, Mollie Lathrop; is it possible! Who ever would have expected such luck—and Eve too! Bless my life! How are you two? And this little lady is a friend of yours. Glad.to see you, I am sure." And Patty found Dr. Carmichael warmly shaking her hand.

"You three just wait a moment while I get my hat and tell some of these people I am going, and if you will let me I will walk home with you, and we will have a nice long talk together."

"Why didn't you tell me you knew him, Eve?" whispered Patty as Dr. Marmichael went in search of his hat.

"Why, it didn't seem necessary. It wouldn't have made any difference, would it?"

And Patty was so proud to be able to answer honestly, "No, it wouldn't have made any difference."—Selected.

OHIO CONFERENCE GENERAL CONFERENCE BUDGET CAMPAIGN.

Seven Groups Out of Nineteen Pass 25 Per Cent Mark in Pledges. Fourteen Charges Pledged in Full, $15,665.

Ohio is working. The budget program adopted by conference is being applied in any places with good results. Many pastors have other plans, but the disposition of all is to make this year an exceptional record. We expect to report progress from time to time, and it will be interesting to watch developments. Many churches have planned to conduct the every-member canvass during January; a few later in the year. We are indebted to Rev. Dwight L. Custis, the conference treasurer, for helping with this report.. Ohio is fortunate in having a treasurer who is so reliable and trustworthy as Rev. Mr. Custis has proven himself to be. His own church, West Lafayette, is on the honor roll and challenges all other Ohio churches to a 100 per cent achievement this year.

C. S. Johnson.

—The sudden death of Dr. Totten, of Baltimore, recently shocked his many friends. He was a brother of Prof. W. T. Totten, of Yadkin College, and was highly esteemed for the excellence of his character. He was a dentist by occupation. He was very much devoted to the church. He leaves a widow but no children.

—President Dixon is moving to the Conference Parsonage in Greensboro this week. He is expected to preach in Grace Church next Sunday morning.

—The annual Founder's Week Conference of The Moody Bible Institute will be held February 5 to 9, inclusive, in the Institute Auditorium, Chicago.

The Methodist Protestant church, Keswick, Iowa, had the right idea of what the children needed and shipped us a box containing tablets, pencils, handkerchiefs, needles, pins, hose, crochet thread and tape measures.

A box from First Methodist Protestant Church, Cumberland, Md., was filled with things which are needed in all our homes. It contained pillow cases, towels, wash cloths, stockings, soap, handkerchiefs, cakes, nutmegs, etc.

Bertha Brown, our last girl to leave the Home, who is now in training in Guilford General Hospital for nursing, was successfully operated on Tuesday morning for appendicitis.

Have You Decided to Furnish a Room in the Boys' Dormitory?

This offers a fine opportunity to make a memorial to some loved one. It offers an opportunity to do something definite.

These rooms must be furnished so we can soon move into them. We have four rooms that it will cost $250 each to furnish and the other dormitory rooms will cost $140 each.

How many stations will assume the obligation to furnish a room? How many circuits will furnish a room?

Henderson furnishes a room; Roanoke circuit furnishes one; one of our young and wide-awake stations (or rather a class) furnishes one—the name will be given later. Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Linville furnish one in memory of Dr. Linville's sainted mother; Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Montgomery, High Point, have assumed the obligation for a room. Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery do something definite each year for the Home.

Friends, we must act right away. There are a number of others who have intimated that they wanted to do something when we got the building up. We want to hear from a number of our stations, circuits and individuals.

Write us what you are thinking of getting your church to do.

We are glad to report that the sick are all up again. H. A. Garrett.

Glen Raven.—Our Sunday school report for January 7 runs as follows: total attendance, 128; total collection, $3.95. The treasury made a financial report for the year 1922 as follows: total collection for the year, $181.59; total disbursements, $178.93; leaving a balance of $2.66 in treasury. We made an offering of $55.67 to the Children's Home during the year. We made a policy of giving the collection of every first Sunday in the month to the Children's Home. Our school was opened by song service, after which the lesson was read in concert, then Brother Morgan was called on for prayer, after which the different classes went to their respective classrooms for the lesson. We had a very distinguished gentleman to join our young men's Bible class on last Sunday morning in the person of Rev. J. M. Morgan. So we will have the preacher on hand every Sunday except the second and fifth Sundays. On those days he has an appointment at the Haw River church. The preaching service began after a brief intermission. Brother Morgan preached a most helpful sermon.

At the evening service Brother Morgan drew a very beautiful picture of a happy home and how to make it. The love for one's homeland and loved ones was portrayed in struggles and the hardships of the children of Israel who returned of the captivity to rebuild the ruined walls of Jerusalem. Another striking illustration was Joseph sold into the land of Egypt by his brethren. Reporter.

High Point.—The pastor, Dr. George R. Brown, left yesterday morning on early train for Jacksonville, Fla., where he will hold a series of meetings in the church there, and will be away for about two weeks. During his absence, the pulpit of the First Church will be occupied by Rev. J. H. Stowe and Rev. G. L. Reynolds, both of whom live here.

The Foreign and Home Missionary societies held and interesting meeting Monday afternoon with Mrs. S. S. Coe. Mrs. Geo. R. Brown read an entertaining article on the Buried Treasure of India. A large number of members was present. The annual election of officers will be held next month.

There has been quite an epidemic of influenza at the Children's Home; Mrs. Garrett tells me that she has nursed 36 cases, all told. There have been several cases in the congregation in town also; Mr. J. W. Hinkle is still kept indoors, but Mrs. Hinkle is much improved and is able to get out. Mr. J. H.

Pritchard has been quite sick but is mending. The families of Messrs. C. L. and J. A. Gray have all recovered.

A meeting of Sunday school officers and teachers will be held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. S. S. Coe.

The many friends of Miss Ida Davis, who underwent a serious operation at the High Point hospital about a week ago, will be pleased to hear that she is improving.

Mr. J. E. Woolen, who married Miss Minnie Hough, now deceased, died Monday morning at his home on Ray street. The funeral services were held from South Main M. E. church this afternoon.

We are sorry to note that Mr. A. M. Idol is again confined to his bed.

Mrs. S. F. Coe of Greensboro, who has been here on a visit to her son, Dr. S. S. Coe, has returned home.

Miss Vera Idol spent the holidays with her father, Mr. A. M. Idol, and has returned to New York, where she is studying in Columbia College. Reporter.

Draper and Kernersville.—I guess some think that we have forgotten or did not appreciate the surprise that was given us, but it is not the case, but have been busy since Christmas holidays. The surprise was in the way of a generous pounding on Friday night before Christmas. While we were away at the church, an army of our members came to our home and proceeded to unlock the door and packed against our room door so many nice things—oh, I can not name them all, but it was all very useful in the cook room,—flour, meal, lard, sugar, coffee and other things good and useful. Also a large number of our good people have killed hogs, and knowing that we like meat too, remembered us with several nice bones, sausage, sause meat, and other meats. Also while we were away in Kernersville, Christmas, the people at Piney Grove were so nice; gave the pastor a real nice pair of shoes, given by the Sunday school. Also some of the good people remembered wife and little girl with useful presents. For all of these we are thankful, and may God's richest blessings rest on every giver, and may our lives be a blessing to every one we come in contact with the coming year, and may our people be blessed more the coming year, both spiritually and financially, than in the years past. Wishing the Herald every success, we remain God's humble servants,

D. A. Morgan, Pastor, and Wife.

January 8, 1923.

Reidsville.—Christmas with its joy and song has come and gone and with it have gone for a while happy faces and familiar voices; while that January feeling that every one experiences and no one can express has settled down upon us. We are planning, hoping and praying for the best year in the history of our little church in Reidsville. Since we have been among these good people and especially during Christmas holidays, we have been the recipients of many tokens of love and esteem, all of which we appreciate more than words can express. One Chrismas gift from the people of this church to the pastor is deserving of special mention—the presentation of a new Ford sedan with more than half of the price paid by the church. I desire to take this means of expressing the sincere and heartfelt thanks of pastor and family to every one who had any part in this donation. It is the desire of the owner of this car that it shall be used for the glory of God and the best interest of the church.

There has been much sickness among our church people for a month or more, which has reduced our attendance at Sunday school and church to some extent, but we are glad to say that most of the sick are on the road to recovery, though Mrs. M. A. Jones and Miss Lola McCollum are not so well at this time.

We held our first quarterly conference before Christmas with a good representation of the officials of the church. There was manifest in the conference a spirit of hopefulness and of progress in the work of the new year.

May the Lord bless the entire church and give us the best year in the history of our Zion, is the desire of this pastor.

J. D. Williams.

January 9, 1923.

Sandy Ridge, West Thomasville Circuit.—Our hearts were made sad on January 4 when death came and claimed Sister Lina Hubbard. She professed religion when 20 years of age and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Sandy Ridge, where she held her membership until she was called to her heavenly home. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, two daughters, three sons, a brother, 33 grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren and a host of friends. The funeral service was conducted by Brother Richardson of Kernersville. Brother Richardson made a very touching address, mentioning a number of good qualities of the deceased, after which the remains were laid to rest in Sandy Ridge cemetery January 4, 1923.

The condition of Mrs. Frazier is improving. With best wishes to the Herald and all its readers, Blanche Wood, Reporter.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Mr. Hulin filled his appointment last fourth Sunday. We had a Christmas tree and some recitations on Christmas day, an appropiriate talk by the pastor also. The occasion was enjoyed by all present.

On December 25 Mrs. Walter Vuncannon quietly passed away. Mrs. Vuncannon was a member of our Sunday school and a most estimable woman.

On January 1 we were again made sad by the death of Mr. Lola Vuncannon. He died at the home of W. R. Williams. Lola had many friends, and will be sadly missed, especially by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Williams, who so tenderly cared for him during his sickness of about twelve months, and with whom he had made his home for quite a while.

We have had an epidemic of "flu" in our midst. Hope it will soon subside.

A happy new year for all is my wish.

A. L. A., Reporter.

January 8.

Shiloh, North Davidson Circuit.—Our Sunday school started the new year with new interest and a good attendance. There were 121 present last Sunday. Several members were absent on account of sickness. Among these were Mr. A. W. Beck's family, Mr. R. L. Leonard's family, Mrs. R. B. Sink and Mrs. H. A. Leonard, who recently fell and broke her leg. We hope to have all the people back soon.

Officers and teachers have been elected. They are—Superintendent, H. A. Leonard; secretary, Miss Elizabeth Koontz; and organist, Mrs. C. L. Koontz. Teachers are J. L. Evans, Baraca class; J. B. Leonard, Philathea; R. L. Leonard, Junior Quarterly class; Mrs. C. L. Koontz, girls' card class; and R. B. Sink, boys' card class.

Our pastor, Dr. Whitaker, was with us at 11 o'clock. He announced that during this year he expects to give two appointments to each church and that he will preach at Shiloh on the first and third Sundays of each month. This is the first time Shiloh has been permitted to have more than one regular preaching service a month and the people have always felt the need of hearing the gospel oftener. The church is well pleased with the plan and expect to grow bigger and stronger as a result.

Dr. Whitaker preached one of his strongest sermons at this appointment. His text was, "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin as a reproach to any people." He said that nations think that riches will exalt them and have fallen as a result, and that our America should take warning from the record of fallen nations, and should use her money rightly. He said that the evils which are lowering the standard of Christian living are mammonism, the liquor interests, and non-observance of the Sabbath. When he had proved that the standard is being lowered, he showed that Christian citizenship is the only way to raise the standard and save our own America.

The Woman's Missionary Society will meet next Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. V. M. Walser. An interesting meeting is expected. Reporter.

Oak Grove, Forsyth Circuit.—As it has been some time since we have reported to the Herald, we will let you hear from us. We have a good Sunday school and we think we are doing well. We organized Sunday and have 46 on roll now; we will have more: we had 100 on roll last year. We all like our preacher; he helps us lots. Our superintendent is D. G. McGee; secretary, Miss Gertie Grubbs; teachers, D. G. McGee, Mrs. J. G. Smith, Mrs. D. G. McGee, Mrs. C. B. Stoltz. Our pastor preaches the second and fifth Sundays in the afternoon at three P. M.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR THE DAY.

January 7. All Is Peace, No Fear: Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.—John 14:27.

January 8. Unwearied Strength: They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength: they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.—Isaiah 40:31.

COMMENDATION OF DR. ELDERDICE'S BOOK, "THE PREACHER'S PROBLEMS."

Rev. F. T. Benson, A.M., D.D., Editor the Methodist Protestant: "We find in this new book what the church has long been waiting for—what is in reality a very timely utterance. The author is intensely and thoroughly orthodox in his conception of the call to the ministry. The whole book is beautifully written, full of interest. The chapter on Poise is one of the finest things we have ever read, and the closing chapter, the Preacher's Pay, will be a benediction to any preacher who reads it."

Rev. L. E. Davis, D.D., LL.D., Editor The Methodist Recorder: "The literary style of the book is faultless, and every chapter is rich with the ripened fruit of the author's wisdom and experience as a successful minister and as a great teacher of ministers. Dr. Elderdice is a safe and brilliant leader to the theologues of our own denomination, and every student and pastor will hail with joy the advent of this noble message."

Rev. J. F. Heisse, D.D., Editor Washington Christian Advocate (Methodist Episcopal): "The book at once gripped us. The style is easy and flowing. The author does not aim at ornate and didactic paragraphs. He aims to be straightforward, practical, helpful in valuable suggestion and brotherly sympathy. The result is a volume intensely interesting packed from cover to cover with fascinating discussions of problems right up to the heart of the pastorate of any preacher."

Harlan L. Feeman, D.D., LL.D., President Adrian College, Adrian, Mich.: "I said to myself as I closed the book, 'How many mistakes some of us might have missed and how much more alert to our opportunity, and how much more pleasure might have been ours had it been our privilege to read such a book twenty years ago.' It is wise in counsel, comprehensive but succinct in treatment, written in attractive style, and is a real contribution to the literature of this subject."

Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, D.D., President of the Ohio Conference: "It was with great profit that I read your book. It is inspiring, instructive, thoughtful, logical and helpful. Every young pastor ought to be required to read it; every older pastor ought to read it. It should be a part in every Conference Course of Study, and I shall recommend it to the Ohio Conference."

Rev. A. G. Dixon, A.B., D.D., President of the North Carolina Conference: "With pleasure I most heartily commend the new book on 'The Preacher's Problems.' Every chapter glistens with truths which thrill the heart of every Christian worker. Every minister in the denomination should buy it and read it and then pass it on to prospective ministers. My copy was read with delight and is now in the hands of one who I hope will be a preacher. When he returns it I shall pass it on to another. Laymen will also be helped and uplifted by reading the book and passing it on to others."

Rev. J. H. Straughn, A.M., D.D., President Maryland Conference: "Your book is, to my mind, the best statement of the spirit, teachings and character of Westminster Theological Seminary that can be set forth. You need no other apologetic. No fairminded man seeking training for the ministry nor benevolently disposed man seeking investment in the Kingdom for his money need ask for greater assurances than this book gives. I'll personally stand for this book as the voice of the Methodist Protestant Church, stating what kind of men we want in our ministry and what we stand for in the work of the Kingdom."

Rev. James M. Nourse, D.D., Washington City Presbtyery: "A most valuable contribution to Pastoral Theology and Homiletics. It is a book that every young minister should keep as a vade mecum alongside of his Bible. You have produced a discussion of pressing social problems from a minister's viewpoint by such evidences of rich experiences and profound thought that I most heartily commend it to young men entering the Gospel ministry."

Walter P. Taylor, Professor of Public Speaking, Canada: "President Elderdice's book reveals a penetrating insight into the actual problems that confront ministers, brings to their solution an unusual combination of shrewd commonsense and spiritual vision, and rivets the reader's attention by its compact and pithy phraseology. The author's vitality of thought and geniality of spirit grip one at the outset, and his complete mastery of his theme lends to his book a fine momentum which makes it difficult for the reader to lay it down until he has finished it."

Rev. E. D. Stone, A.M., D.D., Pastor of Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md., teacher of a Bible Class of fifteen hundred men: "Dr. Elderdice's book is so fresh and real, so much to the point, touching the very heart of the preacher's life and work, that I have wished many times that it might be in the hands of every preacher and Christian leader."

..The Methodist Protestant Book Concern says: " 'The Preacher's Problems,' by High L. Elderdice, A.M., D.D., President of Westminster Theological Seminary, Westminster, Md., will be a valuable addition to every Methodist Protestant preacher's library. Through the efforts of Dr. Elderdice more preachers have been trained for the ministry in the Methodist Protestant Church than through any other agency. Dr. Elderdice, in his able manner, writes upon this all-important subject of the preacher and his problems, and has given the ministry a book to be treasured for years to come."

Price $1.25, postage prepaid. Address H. L. Elderdice, Westminster, Maryland.

THIS IS WORTH WHILE.

Now that Victory Bonds—letters A to F—have been called in, and their value paid to the owners, and War Savings Stamps running to 1923 have matured and are being cashed by the government, many folks are wondering what is the best thing to do with their money.

The money which was spent in buying those bonds and Savings Stamps has not been missed in most cases, but the interest from the bonds has been helpful.

Having served one worthy cause by helping "Uncle Sam," why not now attest loyalty to Jesus Christ, and desire to share in making a peaceful conquest of the heathen world by investing in an annuity bond of the Board of Foreign Missions?

You will be sure of a regular, dependable income while you live through the payment of interest on the amount you give, and will also have the satisfaction of knowing that your money will be used just in the way you wish.

The making of a will is all right, and if you prefer that plan here is a proper form to use: "I give and bequeath to 'the Board of Foreign Missioons of the Methodist Protestant Church' the sum of $———, and the receipt of the Treasurer shall be a sufficient discharge to my executors for the same."

But we believe the Board of Foreign Missions Annuity Plan is better for several reasons. Wills are often contested and broken, and the wishes of the testator are not carried out as a result. Then there are delays, and also expenses, and estates are sometimes badly managed.

But when you get an Annuity Bond of the Board of Foreign Missions there will be none of those risks, nor delays, nor expenses, because your money will be an outright gift to the Board, and its bond will be your guarantee for the payment of the interest agreed upon, and will be paid regularly while you live.

As to the amount of interest, it will be more than the savings banks pay. The age of the donor enters into the consideration, for the older one is the higher the rate of interest paid.

The money is as safe as one can make a business transaction, for one of the most successful banking institutions of Baltimore is always consulted when any Annuity Fund money is to be invested, and their recommendations in writing are followed by the Board, The dependableness of the income guaranteed by the Board's bond grows out of the fact that the interest on the Board's investment of its annuity funds goes to pay the interest promised the donor, and any slight difference is made up from other sources.

For this reason, among others, none of the money given to the Annuity Fund is used in the work, but is held invested until the donor passes on to his eternal reward.

The Board of Foreign Missions acts for the church, and the Board holds in trust for the church in Japan, China and India, at least $300,000 worth of property which could be sold if church ordered it.

Ought not the patriotism and devotion to country, the espousal of high ideals for the good of other nations which were shown by our church members when they bought their Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps, to be paralleled now by fealty and love for our Lord Jesus Christ, and by high purpose to help develop the foreign missionary work under the Board in heathendom?

God owns all, we are only stewards entrusted with some possessions during life, and He expects us to use a part for His kingdom, and He will judge us finally.

By adding to the Annuity Fund you help safeguard the future work of the church abroad. Here is a splendid plan for you to help your church and secure a lifelong income. Write to me for particulars, 316 North Charles Street, Baaltimore, Md.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE WORK OF THE BOARD.

So many inquiries have come to the office with reference to the work being done by the Board of Home Missions that we have decided to give further reports of the work in the various fields where this board is giving assistance. During the fall conference period, your secretary gave detailed reports of the work in several conferences, and these letters have just recently closed. But we still have demands for information from every section of the church, and we have asked each pastor to give a brief report with the reasons which would justify the interest of the board in that particular church. If the readers of this column will carefully file the weekly issues of this paper, or clip these letters and file them where they will be accessible, they will have a volume of intimate detailed information concerning the work of the Board of Home Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church. In the requests sent out, it was suggested that each pastor write one hundred words, with the intention of publishing each letter verbatim. however, it has been found difficult to limit the articles to the space indicated, and it may be necessary to give the salient facts reported, with brief explanations by the secretary. We want to cover the entire field previous to Easter Sunday, so that pastors, superintendents, and others may have facts with which to support the appeal to be made for contributions for our work on that day.

Within the next thirty days, samples of the new Easter Program will be mailed to all the pastors and superintendents whose names are on file in our office. We have tried to keep a correct list of both, but it is not an easy matter to always have this file down to date. This year in particular there has been unusual delay in the delivery of the minutes of the annual conferences. Many of the pastors have been transferred to new fields, and third-class matter sent to the old addresses will probably not be forwarded to them. We have written for the minutes which have not been received, and several of the missing numbers have been supplied. But there are still many others which ought to be in hand. If you are the secretary of your conference, and your minutes have not been mailed to this office, it will be greatly appreciated if you will send them at once.

One thing more. These letters from the home mission pastors will begin next week. If their perusal raises a question in your mind, and leaves is unanswered, if you will be kind enough to send your question to us, it will be our pleasure to give any additional information. In fact, this is why this plan has been adopted. Our work will bear the closest investigation, and we believe every field will justify the expenditures made. We want the entire denomination to know what is done with every dollar contributed for Home Missions, either as a special contribution, an Easter offering, or through the regular channels as a part of the budget.

—The plans for the new church at Magnolia, Ark., are making fine progress. The canvass for funds is well under way; the old church has been torn away; and the ground is being prepared for the new building. The contractor will begin work in the near future. Regular services are being held in the Presbyterian church. It was possible to secure the use of this building of a sister denomination, since they hold only one service each month, and that in the afternoon. Rev. J. A. Wade is the energetic pastor at Magnolia, and much credit is due him for the present development of this worthy enterprise.

FOR DEFINITE READING.

The supply of literature over the world has become "top heavy." Many leaders and teachers have too much literature in their way— and many are hindered from the right thing.

The quiet farmer, in many cases, is hindered from his work, and from work that he should attend to. He pays for his papers, and then must read, so as not to allow the lively reading matter to "go to waste."

This reference is to a world of variation. Some seem to take their big papers (in part) for kindling, and read only a little, and then put the paper on the "woodpile." Numbers of men and women say, "Give me my Bible" —and, truly, the Bible is the book, and is the great light in the literary world. A man (and there are others such) did not join the church, but read his Bible very closely. He died at an old age, and at his funeral he was commended for his morality and his close Bible reading.

However, the sociology that this effort would speak for is of a wider extent. Established duty, and the social obligations by which we should be governed, would include all lawful literature. Church members need their religious paper, and as is the case with the Bible some have need to read it more than others.

The sun is the great light, and the moon is the lesser light—but the moon has its place. The planets have their place, and they give their light, all borrowed from the sun, and reflected. This reference helps us to think more clearly on the main subject that means to say that we need the Bible, and it leaves place and excuse for much other literature. Besides "Moses and the Prophets" there have been great lights, as Luther and Baxter, and Clarke, and many others.

There is room in the world for new books and lively papers regularly on—but the literary fiction novelty is not needed. Millions are being worse than wasted annually for literature that is crowding out the good and true. The vain exciting literature is crowding out the books and papers that we need. There are old books of the past that we need as much as some of the precious new books. The life of Martin Luther is a book that every family should have. John Summerfield lived in England near two hundred years ago—and he was one of the finest orators of his day. He was only short-lived in the world. He was licensed to preach at the age of 16 and died at the age of 27. However, he was a fine human specimen. He did not forget anything that was worth remembering—and he only had to read, or hear, a thing about one time to remember it. His history says that he remembered all the people that he ever formed acquaintance with, and that he could call the names of all, old and young, whenever he had ocacsion to meet up with them.

—Brother David Hunter, aged 90 years, and Miss Angeline Causey, already suffering from a broken arm, have both been sick at the same time in their home near Tabernacle. But through careful nursing, they are both convalescent. Brother Hunter still looks and talks like a man of seventy summers rather than a man of ninety winters. But he realizes that he is well along in life's pilgrimage, and while he retains a lively interest in the events of the world about him, he is looking forward to the "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Rev. Lawrence C. Little, our new field secretary, and Miss Katherine McKenzie, of New Orleans. The marriage took place December 30. We wish this young couple a very happy and useful life together.

There were fifty-five young people present on "Young People's Day" during conference held in Henderson in November. All of these were from the first and second districts. except three who came from Mebane, in the third district. Are our young people interested in the church? What compelled them to drive, some of them, nearly a hundred miles and return over the same mileage home if it is not interest? They are interested, and are willing to give their life to the church. With such young people in our membership the North Carolina Conference is compelled to go forward.

The following charges were represented, and the number opposite the name of the charge indicates the number present from that charge: Henderson—5; Vance—8; Granville—8; Whitakers—5; Halifax—18; Spring Church—4; Creswell—1; Greenville—3; Mebane—3.

All right, young people, let us see what we will do at the Summer Conference. Two hundred is our goal. Watch the next few issues of the Herald, something interesting is going to be told you about the Summer Conference.

Welch Memorial Junior Endeavorers.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Welch Memorial Church was organized with fifteen members in September, 1922. We now have on roll 37 members.

The average attendance at the meetings since its organization have been as follows: October, nineteen and three-fifths; November, 18 and three-fourths; December, 24.

We have agreed that each member pay one cent every Sunday, and on the fifth Sundays pay five cents. This money is given to home missions. Our collection last Sunday was $1.15.

Our Juniors prepared two baskets Thanksgiving for charitable purposes. Quite a number of the Juniors, with the president, Mrs. C. R. Ward, attended the Sunrise prayer meeting at the Friends church Thanksgiving morning.

We are planning to have a sock social at an early date to increase the funds of the treasury.

Our president. Mrs. C. R. Ward, who is loved by our Junior girls and boys, is always faithful to her duty. Best wishes to all the other societies. Mrs. D. B. E., Secretary.

The Best Work of Asheboro C. E. Society.

It is hard to say which is the best piece of work that our society has accomplished in the past six months. However, I think that our meetings which we have held with the inmates of the county home, and the prisoners of the jail have proven to be the most beneficial. It has certainly been helpful to the inmates and prisoners, and I am also sure that it has also been helpful to us.

The various societies of the town, namely the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church, the Epworth League of the Methodist church, and the Christian Endeavor Societies of the Friends church and our church have been holding these metings, each society holding a meeting once every two months—thus the inmates and prisoners have the benefit of a service once every two weeks.

Another thing in reference to the services held at the county home is that so far as is known our society was the first organization of the town to hold any religious service with the inmates. We think that this is remarkable for the Christian Endeavorers to have begun this work. Nan Lowdermilk,
Reporter.

The Best Work of West End Intermediates.

We consider winning the City Union banner twice in succession as the best thing that our society has done in the past six months. This banner is awarded every three months at the regular City Union meetings to the society in the city doing the best work.

This banner was awarded us for the following work: Organizing two Junior societies. One of these societies is in our own church, and three of our Intermediates meet with them every Sunday and assist the superintendent in the work. We sent three well-packed baskets of groceries to the poor Thanksgiving Day. Our society is helping a family of five fatherless children who do not have sufficient clothing. We have a prison committee in the society. This committee holds religious services at the convict camp once a month. The society has collected 25 books for the prisoners. Every time we go we take Christian Endeavor Worlds, and other good magazines. We also sent fifty handkerchiefs to the prisoners Christmas. The Intermediates furnish a children's visiting committee and a flower committee for the church. Some months this committee make as many as fifty visits in the name of the church. The flower committee furnishes flowers for the church every Sunday; sometimes they are bought flowers. On National Temperance Day the society gave a temperance program at the evening preaching service. Most of our members are members of the quiet hour comrades, and tenth legionaries. We have regular monthly business and social meetings. We try to make our programs interesting by giving them variety. Annie Livengood, Reporter.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

The Board of Young People's Work of the North Carolina Conference in its annual organization meeting elected me superintendent of Teacher Training.

Since that time I have informed myself on the very best material and methods to be had on the subject.

My aim this year is to get every young person in the church, who is interested in Sunday school work, enrolled in a Teacher Training class; and to get many more interested.

I can do very little in this work without your co-operation. So please talk with your Sunday school superintendents; select some promising young people who are either now teaching or are capable of being trained. Talk earnestly with them about the opportunity for knowledge and service. Send me their names, the name of your new Sunday school superintendent and write for information concerning the different courses offered.

Do not think because you do not have a large class or a good teacher for the class that you can do nothing. We have a correspondence course so that, if you have only one interested pupil you can make a start.

Please do not put this off until you have more time. Do it now.

Yours for better Sunday school teachers in the Methodist Protestant Church of North Carolina. (Miss) Mary E. Young.

Although we have broken our vows many times, God still gives us a chance to renew our covenant. We should pledge anew our allegiance to Him and say as Jeptha did, I have opened my mouth and cannot go back.—From Sermon by Rev. A. D. Shelton.

"If the churches of Christ throughout Europe and America allow that (another war) to fructify, they had better close their doors. The next war, if it comes, will be against civilization itself. What I say of the war, day by day, makes me vow that I will consecrate what is left of my energies to make it impossible that humanity shall in the future have to pass through the fire, the terrors, the cruelty, the horror, and the squalor of war." —Lloyd George, July 28, 1922.

Thanks.

I wish to express my deepest appreciation to the Denton M. P. church and Sunday school for the nice blanket presented to me at Christmas. I feel that it was the Christ-spirit that prompted the gift to be given, and I will assure you that I accept the gift in the same spirit. May God abundantly bless your church is my prayer. MORE MONEY.

This must be our request until our people pay the amounts due on the college. We have used up every available resource, but our subscribers are $25,000 behind; $10,000 of this amount is due us by our people in the North Carolina Conference, $15,000 is due by our High Point subscribers. So you see we have quite a sum due us and if we had it, it would go far towards the completion of Roberts Hall.

Won't you, dear reader, take this to heart and help us realize on these pledges. Quite a number of our subscribers have not yet paid the first instalment; kindly see them, remind them of our need and thereby help us even though you have paid your pledge in full. BUT in case you have neglected this, won't you PLEASE to let us have your payment at once.

Shall we disgrace ourselves? Shall we prove what some sceptics said about us in the beginning is true? Shall we "lay down" on this job half completed? WILL THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH in North Carolina be guilty of saying in black and white to a buiding committee, Go ahead and make your contract and build the college, we will pay you a stipulated sum every year for five years—and then fail? We MUST do all that we said we would do when the campaign was on. Your part was fixed by you; you named the amount, now let us have the annual payments that are due.

GIRLS' DORMITORY.

New Pledge.

N. W. Ogburn (paid)	$25.00

We yet lack $74,349.90 to build the Girls' Dormitory. Let us have your pledge or check, PLEASE.

Elon College has recently received a splendid gift of $25,000. We congratulate Dr. Harper and the Board of Trustees. It rejoices our hearts to know that Elon has among its constituency those who can and will give it such a splendid sum.

Guilford College has recently received an offered gift of $100,000 on conditions which its friends believe will be met. In the fulfilment of which already Dr. Binford has received a gift of $10,000. We can say in the well known phrase, "Let the good work go on." These are splendid Christian institutions and we rejoice to see them remembered in so substantial a manner by their friends.

We believe there are seventy-five people in the North Carolina Conference who can give us a thousand dollars each for the Girls' Dormitory, in addition to what they have given to the main building. How about it? Who is willing to join so select a list of subscribers?

WHAT MAKES A COLLEGE A CHRISTIAN COLLEGE?

An institution whose conception originated in unselfish love for humanity, the uplifting and betterment of society, and the advancement of Christ's kingdom in the world; whose trustees and directors are far-seeing, large hearted, conscientious Christian men, watching its interests, its influence with eternal vigilance; whose entire faculty is composed of thoroughly educated, consecrated Christian men and women. An institution whose curricula are founded in wisdom for the best interests of all its students; whose primary aim is to make Christian character—to make men and women for God and humanity. An institution that accepts the whole Bible as the inspired word of God and endeavors to instil its infallible precepts relative to an upright godly life into the minds of its entire student body.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit. — The writer has been very busy and has neglected writing several days. Our pastor, Brother Trolinger, has been away for several days visiting friends and relatives in North Carolina. The writer filled three of his appointments yesterday. The morning service at Philadelphia was attended by a large and attentive congregation.

Our Sunday school is growing and I believe that we are going to solve greater problems this year than ever before. Pray that we may. A few weeks ago one of my Sunday school members remarked to me that our church needed to be painted. That afternoon I put the problem before the school and to my surprise we raised $40. I think it was the following Sunday that we again brought this problem before the church, when we received additional pledges amounting to $50, making a total of $90. One of our leading members came to the writer at the close of the service with the following remarks: "Brother Chambliss, I would prefer not to mention the name, but a very prominent citizen remarked a few days ago, when he saw you were determined to paint the church, when you have raised a sufficient amount of money to convince him that you are going to make a home run he will pay $10." I said, "Brother, I would like to learn the name, but if you can't furnish me with the name come on with the $10." The painting of the church is just one of the problems since Conference and I trust and pray that many more may be solved before the next meeting of the Annual Conference.

The writer drove to Matthews Chapel for the afternoon service, but found a very small congregation. The opportunity for service at this church is great. Upon making investigation I found that the Sunday school was not what it should be. In fact there was no school at this church yesterday. I know not who is to blame, but I do know there ought to be a live Sunday school at this church. There are quite a number of boys and girls in this vicinity that ought to be in Sunday school. I know of no better place than the Sunday school where the young, the old and the middle-aged should meet to erchange ideas. To the parents—your children are your greatest heritage and it is your duty to hold them close to God both by precept and example.

The evening service found me at Wesley's Chapel. We had a very small but attentive congregation. Here they have their problems also. The church needs painting, especially on the inside.

Pray for us that great things may be accomplished this year. Yours for service,

M. P. Chambliss.

Consider and act with reference to the true ends of existence. This world is but the vestibule of an immortal life. Every action of our lives touches on some chord that will vibrate in eternity.—E. H. Chapin.

"FOLLOW ME."

I was but a little lamb
 Who from Him is straying.
When I heard within my heart
 Some one softly saying,
"Follow Me, follow Me,
 I will safely guide thee,
Though the stormy ways of life,
 Walking close beside thee."

Early to his loving care
 Shall my heart be given,
For each step I take with Him
 Brings me nearer heaven.
"Follow Me, follow Me,"
 Is the Savior saying
Unto every little lamb
 Whd from Him in straying.

DOT'S REVISED VERSION.

Little three-year-old Dot wanted to learn a verse to say in Sunday school, so her mamma taught her Luke 18:16: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of God."

Dot said it after her mamma several times each day, until she knew it perfectly: but when she stood up to say it before all the Sunday school she was frightend, and partly forgot it. She began, "Suffer little," -and stopped. Then she tried again: "Suffer little children to come,"—but, as she saw all the faces turned toward her, the words went from her mind and she stopped again. Once more she commenced: "Suffer little children to come unto me."—she paused a moment and then went on very quickly, "and don't anybody try to stop them, for Jesus wants them all to come." And that is just what the verse means, and Dot's translation was about as good as any one.—Selected.

"NOT ASHAMED OF BEING A GENTLEMAN."

Some years ago, walking along the shaded streets of a prosperous New England city, I saw a little incident which has always remained as vivid in my mind as on the day I witnessed it. A group of boys, averaging about a dozen years of age, were gathered at the foot of one of the great elms, when a lady passed, and in response to her greeting one of the lads raised his cap from his head and answered, "Good evening."

The lady had hardly turned the corner before a storm of ridicule burst from the little group. Apparently the courtesy of lifting the hat was not familiar in the town, and the boys seemed to think the opportunity of airing their wit at the expense of their companion too tempting to be let pass. The little fellow was a year or two younger than the majority of the others, and it was not surprising that the jests and laughter brought the blood to his cheeks. But I shall never forget the ring of manliness in his voice as he cried, "Well, you can say what you like, I'm not ashamed of being a gentleman." Young People's Weekly.

THE FIRST GLASS

If there never was a first glass there never would be a second, nor a third, nor a last glass. There is a beginning to all the evils that flow from the use of the intoxicating cup, and that beginning is the first glass. How often in days gone by this first glass was received at the hands of friends, and even at the hand of parents. Many a time in those old days when strong drink was upon every table and in every dwelling, the father having drained the cup would turn it over to his little son to dip the sugar from the bottom, and thus infuse the sweetened poison into the stomach of innocent childhood. With growing years came growing appetite, and that which began as an innocent comedy ended in some of the darkest tragedies that the world has ever seen. Thousands of men have gone down to the drunkard's grave who got the first taste of the deadly draught when they took the sugar from the bottom of a father's glass, and thus tasted that beverage which at the last biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder.

Thank God there are not so many parents who use the deadly drink as there were in other days; and many who do use it do not wish their children to touch or taste it.

If there never was a first glass drunk there would never be a second taken. If there was no first glass there would be no last glass, and men would escape the woe and sorrow of a drunkard's life and the despairing anguish of a drunkard's death.—The Little Christian.

"O, I FORGOT!"

I have a little girl whose great fault is forgetting. She forgets to hang up her dresses; she forgets where she left her mittens, or the scissors, or her thimble; she forgets to do her errands; she forgets to come home when she is told to come; yet she always seems sorry when I talk to her, and means, I think, to improve; but she does not. Every week finds her no better, and it leads to much disorder.

For a long time I could not think how she could forget so. I have found out now—the Bible told me. God says, "My son, forget not my law, but let thy heart keep my commandments." Now, I see Maggie does not use her heart in this matter. She wishes to mind me, but wishes are not strong enough. Maggie intends to mind; but intentions are not strong enough they easily break. Meaning to do right is never enough. Children will not improve if they do nothing but mean to. Nor will fear do it, nor hearing, nor knowing. What will, then? God knew when he said, "Let thy heart keep my commandments;" for what we love to do, we do. Poor Maggie, alas! has no heart in it, therefore she forgets and disobeys. And many a mother is grieving over this same fault in her dear child; and perhaps many a poor child is grieving for it too.. My dear child, I can only tell you to beg of God to give you that "new heart" which the Bible tells of, filled with the spirit of humble, faithful love. That will remember.—Selected.

BIRDS AND BUGS.

Bugs kill the plants, birds kill the bugs, but boys kill the birds. Then the bugs multiply, for the birds cannot keep them down, and then boys and men have to spend their time killing bugs, or lose their crops. The Lord has arranged this world very wisely, and if men do not meddle with it too much it runs very well; but when they interfere with the Lord's arrangements they are sure to have a great amount of trouble.

We knew a little boy who saw an old-fashioned clock, the weights of which were tin cylinders filled with sand; and on top of one of them lay a little piece of lead. The boy did not see the use of that lead, and so pocketed it and went off. But the clock would not go right, for the weight was not heavy enough; and the lead had been put on to make up for the lack of weight. The boy did not know enough to let things alone, but he was speedily found out, and taught a useful lesson. Many little things which we do are far-reaching in their results; therefore we should be very careful how we meddle with things which do not concern us, or try to interfere with things we do not understand.

Let the little birds alone!—Selected.

GETTING EVEN.

"I'll get even with you, Tom Byers, you'll see! Cutting the string of my new kite and letting it by away just to be mean!"

"I don't see how you can," said Bob, watching Tom slam the door of the tumble-down house where he lived. "He's bigger than you are, and his father is away 'most all the time, and his mother is dead."

"Let's go down behind the barn and talk about it," answered Ted, and the two boys ran to their favorite hiding place.

"I've thought of a brand new way," said Bob. "Listen, and I'll whisper."

At first Ted would not agree to the whispered plan, but Bob kept on talking until he said he would.

It was nearly dark that night when they went down the road, carrying a heavy basket between them. They crept up to the window of Tom's house and saw him sitting at a table with only a few dishes and a little bread on it. They put the basket on the step, gave a loud rap, and hid where they could watch him come out. He took the basket in, and through the dirty window they could see him standing and looking at it as if he did not dare open it.

"He's teased so many of the boys he thinks some one has brought a snake or a rat to scare him," said Bob.

Just then Tom took off the paper tied over the basket and very slowly opened one of the three boxes he saw. Then he gave a big jump of surprise and pulled open the other boxes. One was filled with crisp cookies, another held big red apples, and the last had hickory nuts. Underneath the boxes was a sweater, faded but thick and warm, and under that a suit of clothes. Tom could scarcely believe his eyes. He drew his ragged sleeve across his eyes and then looked again. At the very bottom of the basket was a piece of paper with "Ted" written on it.

"Where did you get all the things?" asked Bob as they ran down the road.

"Aunt Julia sent me the cookies for a present, and the nuts and apples grew on my own trees, so I could give them away if I wanted to. Mother said the clothes were too little for Harry and too big for me, so I could give them to Tom. She didn't know how we were going to do it, though."

The next night they found out, for there was a knock at the door, and when Ted opened it Tom was standing there holding a fine big kite. As soon as he saw Ted he said: "I'm awfully sorry I took your kite, and I made this one for you, and—and—I liked the things in the basket a lot."

Ted had "got even" in the "Jesus way," as he told his mother that night.—Sunday School Times.

Resolution of Respect in Memory of Silas Furr, by the Baraca Class.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our class by death our beloved brother, Silas Furr, therefore be it

2d, That we, as a class, strive to emulate his high standard of Christian citizenship while living and show to the world as he did, that we live for the betterment of mankind and the glory of God

3d, That we extend to his bereaved family our sympathy.

4th, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent his family, and a copy be sent to our church paper for publication.

THE MINNIS FUND.

I have made no report for several weeks for two reasons: there has been little to report; and there have been so many extra appeals that I did not want to detract from.

There seems, with these extra calls coming, little chance of reaching the goal of $300 I had set for this fund, so I have about decided to close it and send the money I have on to Brother Minnis. However, I shall hold it until this has appeared in print, and you who read it have had an opportunity to respond to the last call. I shall send the money off not later than February 1. So if you are going to respond, you must do so quickly. Give your Sunday school, or class, a chance to contribute. Let us make this fund at least $200.

The fund stands to date as follows:

Previously reported	$164.37
Chas. B. Auman	2.50
L. F. Ross	3.00
Total	$169.87

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

New Hope, Pageland Circuit.—The New Hope people were pleased to have Rev. J. W. Quick remain with us as pastor. After listening to his good and interesting sermons for nine years we would have hated very much indeed to give him up. May we members of New Hope church all stand loyally by him, co-operate with him in the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom in our church, neighborhood, and make his tenth year the best we have had.

Brother Quick filled his regular appointment the first Sunday at 11 o'clock and on the third at three o'clock. We hope each and every one of you were pleased with what Santa brought you. Wishing all a happy new year.

A Friend.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—In the first of the year we had a business meeting at which time we attended to the business of the church. We had a good time; we had Brother Moose, our pastor, with us He gave us good service last year and we are glad to have him with us another year, for he brings us the good old Bible story, and that is what we like to hear. I will say if we all would live up to the Bible we would be better men and women. We all look at some one else's habits too much and let ours slip. If we would all try to keep the trash swept from our own door steps all the time we wouldn't have so much time to be seeing the faults of our friends. Somehow we can see the mote that is in our brother's eye so much better than we can see the beam that is in our own eye. Let's all try to get the beam out of our own eyes. and then we can see clearly to get the mote out of our brother's eye. They are so many, if they can do anything that will down anyone, that is what they pride in doing. If you can't be a help to anyone for God's sake, don't be a hinderer. If I know my heart I really want to be a help to my neighbors and friends, and if I can't be, just let me get out of the way and let God have His way. Come on, neighbors and friends, and let us help to advance God's kingdom, for I have started out to find a better home where the trials of this world can never come; and when life's journey is over and down to Jordan I will go, there to meet my blessed Lord, He will take me home to glory, there to tell the old story, how I came through this troublesome world.

Christmas the best yet and still on. On Friday evening, December 22, we gave the children as well as the grown-ups the pleasure we find each year in our Christmas tree exercise. This is always a very informal program. In fact there is no program at all. At the appointed time we meet in a Sunday school room where a Christmas tree has been erected and decorated. The children are given front seats. Without any program pre-arranged the children are allowed for a time to act on the impulse of the moment. They sing, recite, tell stories, etc. It has been noticed with interest that during this time of impromptu activities they have always shown themselves well behaved and respectful to each other. While some part is being rendered the others sit quietly and listen. At the proper time the superintendent or pastor takes charge. Hymns are sung, scripture is read and prayer is offered. Then each member of the Sunday school is given a nice treat of goodies and we all go home happy and waiting for the next. This custom has been kept up for the last four years. Each year we have had a good time.

On Sunday evening, December 24, the educational program prepared by the Board of Education was rendered. This was one of tht finest programs ever rendered in the Charlotte church. It was so popular that by request it was repeated Sunday night, December 31. There was a large attendance on both occasions, but in spite of the unfavorable weather the attendance on the second occasion was larger. The offering amounted to $20.45.

It would indeed be difficult to enumerate the kind tokens that have come to the parsonage during the holidays. But much has been done to add to our happiness and joy. As usual just before a church entertainment the "preacher woman" was too busy with affairs of church to do much in the home in the way of cake-baking, etc. It so happens that not a Christmas cake was baked in our home. But my, we never had more and better cakes in all our lives. While the lady of the parsonage was doing church work the ladies of the church were preparing the good things for the parsonage. This was a fine exchange of commodities.

With the usual joys of Christmas times our Brother C. O. Garmon is rejoicing because of the joys to be found in blessings of matrimony. On December 24, in the city of Fayetteville, in the home of the bride, Brother Garmon and Miss Effie Shaw were married. Brother Garmon was a charter member of the Charlotte church and has even been one of our leading members. Mrs. Garmon impresses us as being a fine Christian lady and we welcome her to our midst. May God the Father bless, preserve and keep them in His holy love and may they live a long life of happiness and joy.

Rev. C. B. Way of the Burlington church worshiped with us on last Sunday morning. We were indeed glad to have Brother Way with us. We learned to know each other as pastor and parishioner. And to know Brother Way is to love him and to appreciate his very fine Christian qualities. We all the more appreciate his coming when we realize that because of his special interest in our church he came all the way form Burlington to Charlotte to be with us and to know something of what we are doing at first hand. Come again, Brother Way, and others do likewise.

Brother Charles H. Daughtry, our Sunday school superintendent, had the misfortune some time ago to break his arm while working as a mechanic installing a hot-air system in a school building in Rockingham, N. C. Brother Daughtry has suffered greatly but is now improving.

A number of our people have recently been sick, but all are now improving.

Among those of our people who were out of town during the holidays were Mr. and Mrs.

Geo. E. Young at Liberty; Miss Hattie Ashburn at Liberty; Miss Lola Ezell at Graham; Mr. Raymond Amick and Mr. Let Sikes at Burlington. All report a good time.

George L. Curry.

First Church, Thomasville.—We start the new year with 156 present in Sunday school. Our little orchestra is improving and enlarging. We miss our Brother T. G. Perry, who is reported sick. We hope he will soon be well. We had a real Sunday school report by our efficient superintendent, C. F. Finch, showing uc in figures just how we stand. On motion by Brother Troxler it was ordered that his report be published in the Methodist Protestant Herald. We feel as a church that we are fortunately situated in having Brother Troxler so regular in our Sunday school and other places where he can best help us in all lines of church work. The worst part is that we do not help him as much as we ought to help him in service. Our money is not enough; the pastor needs our presence and service.

After Sunday school Brother Troxler gave us a good sermon; subject, "Facing the New Year," showing us by word picture how we may improve over the past and make 1923 the best year in the history of our church along all lines. Following the regular service the Lord's Supper was administered.

Christian Endeavor met at 6:30, followed by preaching service; subject, "The Lost Jesus." We feel that there is a great lack on the part of a large number of church-going people. We all know the Sunday school is one of the feeders to the church, but we make a great mistake when we go to Sunday school and leave before preaching service. That habit demoralizes to a great extent what good we may have accomplished in Sunday school. We are sure that if we would get together and reason a little together on this subject, we would abolish the habit of leaving a lot of empty seats for the preacher to talk to. Hoping that we may make this year an improvement over last year, I am yours for service,

Reporter.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—We are now beginning in the first quarter in the Sunday school work. There are some faithful ones, and our Sunday school is interesting. The new superintendent is serving us faithfully. Mr. Avery Woodell is superintendent, Mrs. N. W. Lanier assistant superintendent, the latter being elected secretary and treasury on last Sunday.

Mr. LIoyd Wright, who got burned with gasoline six weeks ago today, is not able as yet to get out of his room. We miss him from our Sabbath school. He is improving a little now.

Our new minister, Rev. J. S. Riddle, arrived on this work about six weeks ago. He has preached for us twice and some soul-stirring sermons too, let me tell you. And if there is any reviving spirit in the people he is going to raise it. We feel so glad that it ever fell our lot to get another revival worker this soon. He is a believer in the old-time religion. While we all regretted to lose Brother Short and family, Brother Riddle has such a lovely wife and children, and we are so glad that Mrs. Riddle is such a good organist, so that is such a good standby to our churches.

On Saturday night before Christmas we had a Christmas tree at Cid and also Christmas exercises. The tree was a large one and well loaded with a treat to the Sunday school, and lots of presents too. A large attendance and the finest order that Iever saw on such an occasion. We were all congratulated on the exercises. But let it be little or much, it was all done for the glory of God. And may we all work this year as never before for dying men and women (spiritually).

There is some sickness with us now, deep colds. Mrs. Susie Beck, wife of the late J. Riley Beck, was buried at Jerusalem on yesterday: a good woman. She was about 80 years old. Sympathy to loved ones and friends. Yours in His name, A Member.

Denton Charge.—Our first quarterly conference met at Denton church on Saturday before the third Sunday in December at two o'clock. All the churches represented but one. The conference was opened by reading the first chapter of St. James and prayer. C. E. Ridge from Canaan church was elected secretary, after which the business was transacted in the usual way. The reports from class leaders and Sunday school superintendents were very encouraging. The stewards' report was below date. The budget was accepted as per Journal, and those that were there seemed desirous to collect the full amount.

I want to say the people here remembered us in many ways of kindness during the holidays; my own people, the Baptists, and even the Primitive Baptists, for which we are very thankful to them all, and pray God's blessings upon them all.

The prospect for a successful year is very encouraging. The first Sunday in December we organized a Christian Endeavor at Denton church with Charles Lambert president Lautin Hill secretary, with about 20 members. I feel this will be a great help to the young people of our church and will line them up for better service. Pray for us, and may this new year bring much happiness to all the brethren. Joel B. Trogdon.

Haw River Circuit.—Stereopticon views of the Methodist Protestant College at High Point and nearly fifty views of Bible characters will be shown by Rev. R. M. Andrews, D.D., at the following times and places on Haw River charge: Fair Grove, 11 A. M., Sunday, January 14.

Mizpah, 2:30 P. M., same day.
Friendship, 6:30 P. M., same day.
Midway, Monday, January 15, 6:30 P. M.
Brown Summit, Tuesday, January 16, at 7:00 P. M.

Public is cordially invited. No admission charged. Churches will be darkened at daytime appointments. E. G. Lowdermilk.

St. Paul Church.—St. Paul has been silent for a while. Our reporter has been so busy at other things. But we are still doing business at the same old star[illegible] Our Sunday school is doing fine for the time of year and the kind of weather. Our pastor and several members have had the "flu," but he was able to be out and preach. Has not missed any appointments. He preached a splendid sermon Sunday evening on Resolutions, using Joshua's resolution, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Brother pierce brought up the subject of helping replace the church at Haw River and we hope to raise at least $50. We hope all who are able will help in this worthy cause. As you would that men should do unto you, do ye even unto them likewise. You will not miss it so much, and it will mean so much to them. Our Ladies' Aid meets next Saturday night with Mrs. E. M. Routh, 45 Maple Street, Proximity. Hope all members will be present and start the new year with new interest, new zeal, new determination. We are entering into a new year, and may we all resolve to make all we can, save all we can, do all we can, give all we can. Give and it shall be given to you, good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over.

W. W. Oakes.

First Church, Concord.—The usual Christmas exercises were held here, and a splendid program was given. The literature sent by our Board of Education was used. An interesting feature of this service was the presentation of a gold fountain pen from the choir to Mr. R. P. Benson. Rev. A. D. Shelton, pastor, in a few well-chosen words presented the pen, stating that it was a small token of appreciation for the faithful service Mr. Benson has rendered as organist for a number of years.

The attendance at Sunday school and preaching services was fine yesterday. Brother Shelton preached a splendid new year's sermon, using for his text Judges 11:35—"I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back."

A movement has been launched for a new church auditorium here. A committee has been appointed to solicit funds and is now at work. They are having right good success. The plans are, to move the parsonage to another lot and build the auditorium on this lot, connecting it to the old church by a wing on the left. The old church is to be made into a Sunday school auditorium and rooms. It is estimated that the new auditorium will cost around $15,000. The committee wants to raise this amount before work will be started.

The usual services will be held next Sunday. Mrs. D. A. McLaurin, Reporter.

Concord, N. C., January 8, 1923.

Burlington.—The first Sunday in the new year was a good day for the Burlington church and Sunday school. We had 354 in Sunday school, which was an increase of four as compared with the first Sunday of 1922. The singing in the Sunday school was good, and much interest and enthusiasm was displayed. The Sunday school orchestra has been augmented with new players, which added much to the music last Sunday. Superintendent Rogers was gratified with the splendid beginning of the new year.

The senior Baraca class started the new year last Sunday with the new officers in charge. Brother M. A. Coble assumed his duties as president of the class, and Brother D. A. Neese, a recent newcomer among us, began his work as the new teacher of the class. Brother J. M. Crawford was elected teacher of the class at the regular business meeting, but resigned since then. Brother Neese was elected to succeed him. The class was well pleased with his initial teaching Sunday morning. Brother Neese came from the Henderson church last November, and the Burlington Baracas are very fortunate in securing his services as their teacher for the new year.

The morning church service last Sunday was well attended, the largest congregation present for several weeks. There were not more than four or five vacant benches in the entire auditorium. Miss Kay Sellman was in charge of the Junior Choir, which rendered a selection for the church service. Brother Taylor delivered a brief sermon on the subject of ''The Church,'' after which the ordinance of the Lord's Supper was very fittingly observed. A large number of the members communed, including the Junior Choir. Then the doors of the church were opened for the reception of members, and twelve persons were received: Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Moore, by letter from Concord M. P. church, Saxapahaw charge; Mrs. M. G. Trolinger and family (seven in number), by letter from Carolina M. P. church, Fairview charge; Curry Isley, by letter, from Friendship M. P. church, Mt. Hermon charge; Mrs. Curry Isley and A. M. Wagoner, on profession of faith.

The three Christian Endeavor societies held their meetings at the usual time for each one. The Juniors met at two o'clock in the afternoon, and the Intermediate and senior societies met at 6:30 o'clock. The senior meeting was conducted by Arthur Amick, and the topic, ''The Guide-Board Psalm,'' was discussed with profit by a fairly good number of seniors.

The weather was unfavorable Sunday night, and the congregation was not as large as was expected. Rain fell during the service. Brother Taylor seemed to be at his best in the delivery of the sermon. His subject was, ''A Declaration of a New Year Purpose.'' The text was Phil. 3:13-14.

Miss Emily Young, a member of the faculty of the graded schools of Burlington, was elected choir director for our church at the business meeting of the church last month, and will begin her duties next Sunday morning.

The senior C. E. society held their business meeting at the church last Thursday night. Among the items of business transacted was the election of officers for the coming year. Those elected were, C. B. Way, president; James Garret, vice president; Dace Jones, secretary; Miss Hallie McPherson, assistant secretary and corrresponding secretary; Edwin Moore, treasurer. A meeting of the Christian Endeavor council was held following the business meeting.

All regular services of the church will be held next Sunday. C. B. Way, Reporter.

Vance.—For several Sundays a remarkable decline has been noticed in church attendance. The main causes are inclement weather, bad roads, and influenza. It would take considerable space in the Herald to name every person who has had, or now has, what is generally called the ''flu.'' Brother Leonard Paschall is seriously il with pneumonia.

Since last reporting we have been very kindly and genrously remembered by the following: Mrs. Lonnie Harris, Mrs. Lucy and Mrs. C. B. Baskette; Mrs. Ola Hester and Mrs. J. W. Reavis; Miss Annie and Mrs. W. J. Satterwhite; Mrs. A. E. White and Mrs. Victor Smiley; Miss Hazel White, Mr. Bowden. Their generous offerings consisted of fresh meats, eggs, butter and cake.

Married.

On Christmas day at the parsonage, Mr. Leon Harris and Miss Maude Nelson were united in matrimony by the writer. Both are worthy young people and highly esteemed by all who know them.

Deceased.

Mrs. Mary Hoyle of Gillburg church died December the 15th, and was buried the following day in the family burying ground near her church. She was a good woman.

Mrs. Martha Fleming, who had been an invalid for some years, was buried January 6 at New Hope, where she was a member. She had suffered much, but was unusually patient and submissive through it all.

In the passing of these two good women, two churches have sustained an irreparable loss. The homes from which they have gone will miss them. We all will miss them, but our loss is heaven's gain. Wm. H. Neese.

January 8, 1923.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit.—This is the dawning of a new era, in the year 1923. We do not realize how fast time is passing, and we want to be more strenuous in the work of our church, for the whole hope of human progress is suspended on the ever-growing influence of the Bible.

Rev. A. Ridge Sunday morning at 11 o'clock preached an excellent sermon on ''The necessity of being obedient,'' and Sunday night delivered another wonderful sermon, the subject being, ''Yield yourself to God.''

The ladies' missionary society failed to meet at the appointed time, due to bad weather. We want to be more loyal this year, and put more energy in it, do more than we have ever done.

We extend our sympathy to the members who are absent on account of sickness. They do not realize how much we miss them. We hope to have their bright and sunny faces in Sunday school again soon. Vina Harwood.

Halifax.—A number of things have taken place since my last report that have been interesting. A splendid entertainment and Christmas tree at Eden. Miss Kathleen Moore of the Hardrawee school trained the children and they certainly did their part well. Brother Williams, the superintendent of the school, together with his good wife, arranged for the tree. Santa Claus came in and delivered the presents to the great delight of the children.

The Hollister Sunday school also had a tree and entertainment. Mrs. Wright trained the children and it goes without saying that it was done well. Brother Ross and Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Palmer looked after the treat and the tree. Santa Claus arrived on the scene here and it was worth going to see the little fellows' eyes as he handed them their presents.

Bethesda planned for a tree and entertainment and had bought the presents but the ''flu'' got in and broke it up. So the gifts were handed out at Sunday school and each child and grown-up enjoyed that part of it, although the sickness of so many of the leaders prevented having it at the time desired.

Union had a short Christmas entertainment the fourth Sunday morning, but the pastor could not be there on account of the regular appointments at the other churches. We are sure, though, that it was good, for they always do things right.

We have been remembered at the parsonage in a way that caused us not to forget that it was Christmas. Things before and after that we appreciate very much and all something that showed that the folks had taken into consideration our needs. Mrs. Henry Thomas, six jars of grape jelly; Mrs. R. S. Brown, sausage, back bones, barbecue; Mrs. N. M. Harrison, two lots of sausage, back bones, ribs, and liver; Mrs. Willie Aycock, sausage and ribs; Mrs. F. M. Taylor, big beef roast, nice lot oranges, apples; E. C. Harrell, back bones, ribs, sausage and liver, fresh fish and oysters; Miss Helen Harrison, apples; Mrs. F. V. Avent, box fresh meats, sausage, etc.; Mrs. W. L. Ross, one-half gallon damson preserves; Mrs. Dr. Palmer, dozen oranges, fruit cake; N. M. Harrison, quart fresh oysters; J. W. Hardee, pair men's silk hose, box fresh meats; Mrs. N. W. Cousins, two dozen eggs and can of sweet pickles; Harmony church, $16.50; J. G. Neal, $1; Bethesda Sunday school, fine silk muffler and pair ladies' silk hose; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Taylor, four pounds sausage and nice ham. We also received a number of presents from friends outside, as well as a lot of nice cards that we hardly feel at liberty to use their names; but we appreciate it all nevertheless. All these things are useful and very much appreciated.

While we are receiving these gifts from those who are interested in our comfort and welfare, we are made to rejoice in the fact that God first gave and that his love to us is proven in the fact of what is told us in John 3:16, and the results we see day by day and emphasized especially at his season. May our appreciation of the great gift of which all these gifts are reminders, be shown day after day in more loyal service to Him.

We are expecting as the epidemic of ''flu'' subsides to see more interest taken in the things that pertain to the Kingdom and that this may be a year of great ingathering with us all. Sincerely, N. G. Bethea.

Caroleen, Caroleen Charge.—Our Sunday school is growing rapidly in number, and interest is good. We have our prayer service each Thursday evening with splendid interest and good congregations. We also have our class meeting once a month. We have preaching at the regular preaching hour every Sunday. Our pastor, T. G. McAllister, has moved into our town and is proving a blessing to our church. Our church has learned to love him. He is a consecrated God-called man who loses himself in his sermons. He is the man that Caroleen needs and we believe that God has called him here. Everything looks bright and hopeful for a prosperous year at Caroleen; pray for our success.

DIED.

Chambers.

Elizabeth Chambers was born February 25, 1852, died January 1, 1923. She was a member of Clarke's Chapel M. P. church for several years. Her friends say she was a devout Christian, always faithful to her church. She left the testimony that she was ready to go.

She is survived by six children, three boys, three girls; boys as follows: Arthur, Bascombe, and Marvin; girls: Dallia, Mrs. A. G. McGalliard and Mrs. Geo. Gentry. All of these live in Asheville except Mrs. Gentry, who lives near Jupiter.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Flat Creek Baptist church January 2, after which the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery there. The large crowd present convinces one of the popularity of the departed sister.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

B. M. Williams.

In Loving Memory.

On January 1, 1923, death entered the home of Jay Fogleman and wife and laid his icy hand on their darling, little W. J., who had flooded their home with sunshine for three years. Little W. J. only budded on earth to bloom in heaven's eternal brightness. He is now in the arms of a Savior who will keep him pure and spotless; he is safe.

Fond parents, mourn not for him, only think of him as resting free from all pain, a bright star in heaven to lead you on. Hear the pledge of Jesus Christ: "I will not leave you comfortless. Lo! I am with you alway [illegible] to the end of the world!" [illegible] and our souls live does this pledge stand. Perhaps we cannot always feel His presence, but we can always know that it is there, always rest upon it, always think of it. There may be a moment in the very depth of sorrow and anguish when the presence seems hidden from us, but it is not, we are only stunned, unconscious, from grief. It is like passing through a surgical operation. The times come for the ordeal, the anesthetic is ready, you stretch out your hand to your friend; don't leave me, don't forsake me. The last thing you feel is the clasp of that hand, the last thing you see is the face of that fond parent or friend. Then a moment of darkness, a blank—and the first thing you see is the face of love again. So the angel of God's face stands by us, bends above us, and we know that He will be there when all else fails us.

Little W. J. was a bright little boy, and with his bright blue eyes [illegible] sweet disposition, none could know him but to love him. He was sick about five weeks.

W. J. is sleeping, calmly sleeping
In a new-made grave today;
We are weeping, sadly weeping
For the darling gone away.
One by one the gentle Shepherd
Gathers lambs from every fold,
Folds them to his loving bosom
With a tenderness untold.

W. J. is waiting, calmly waiting
For the friends he loved the best,
And he'll gladly hail their coming
To the mansions of the blest.
One by one the Lord will call us
As our labor here is done;
And then as we cross the river,
W. J. will meet us one by one.

To the bereaved family, relatives and friends, I can only offer my deepest sympathy and entreat them to look up beyond this thick gloom that has enveloped them, look up into the sunshine of God's great goodness and with the eye of faith see the precious little jewel who has gone before us, in the mansion above there with many others, singing heavenly songs and with their little angel fingers striking the chords on little golden harps. Learn to say with sweet joy, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

Little W. J. was tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery of Alamance church. The little grave was covered with flowers placed by loving hands.

Stafford.

On the night of December 26 our hearts were made sad when the death angel called to her heavenly home our beloved Aunt Emma Stafford.

She had been unwell for some time and gradually her afflictions grew worse until she could stand it no longer and God called her home.

She was 50 years, nine months and 25 days [illegible]. She was the youngest daughter of [illegible] and Sallie Roberson.

[illegible] service was conducted by the [illegible] the bereaved family. The remains were laid to rest in Mt Pleasant cemetery. The floral designs sent as a last tribute of esteem by loving friends and relatives were beautiful and covered the little mound.

She was married about twenty-five years [illegible] Everette Stafford, and to this union were born ten children. Three of them preceded her to the land beyond, while the remaining seven with the husband and a host of relatives and friends are here to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate wife; tender, loving, devoted mother; true, sympathetic and charitable friend. She was loved and esteemed by every one who knew her and she was true and devoted to her children, husband, and to her church. She always played the part of a real and true mother, both in precept and example. No home was ever blessed with a mother who thought more of her husband and children than she did.

She was converted between the ages of 12 and 14 years at Spring Church and she joined at Concord Methodist Protestant church and later in life moved her membership to the Mt. Pleasant M. P. church, where she and her whole life were given to God. She never wandered in the ways of sin. She loved her church and Savior best of all.

To the bereaved family we extend our deepest sympathy, but this we know cannot fill the vacant chair she left. But in Christ there is consolation.

Through Him we look beyond the cold, damp tomb to that glorious resurrection morn, when we shall rise from graves and meet our loved ones to part no more.

"Sleep on, beloved, sleep and take thy rest,
Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast;
We love thee well but Jesus loves thee best."

A Niece,
Mary Braxton.

HUMANITY PAYS TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF PASTEUR.

"Measured by the good he has done humanity Louis Pasteur is immeasurably the greatest man that ever lived."

These are the words of Dr. Ernest Laplace, one of Pasteur's pupils, now Professor of Surgery at the University of Pennsylvania. They are part of a speech made by Dr. Laplace in New York last week at a celebration of the one hundredth birthday anniversary of the great French scientist.

This was only one of many celebrations in tribute to Pasteur. In Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and many other American cities noted scientists gathered to honor his memory.

France Pays Highest Honors.

In France, where Pasteur was born and where he mads his wonderful discoveries and gave them to the world, celebration of his centenary was a national event. The French government issued a special Pasteur postage stamp. At a fixed hour there was five minutes of complete silence throughout France as a mark of mourning. In every French school a paragraph from a speech made by Pasteur, shortly before his death in 1895, was read to [illegible].

[illegible] the founder of the science of bacteriology, or the study of germs. He proved that impurities in milk and other liquids were caused by bacteria, or germs, and that by heating these liquids to the right temperature the germs could be made harmless. Thus the world owes pasteurized, or purified, milk to this famous scientist. How many cases of typhoid fever and other diseases have been prevented by the use of pasteurized milk no one can tell.

Found Treatment for Hydrophobia.

But Pasteur not only prevented terrible diseases. He also cured them. It was he who discovered a successful treatment for the deadly hydrophobia, whish results from the bite of a mad dog or other animal suffering with rabies.

After much experimenting Pasteur made a serum containing matter taken from the spinal column of a mad dog. With this serum he inoculated a number of healthy dogs. The same number of dogs were not inoculated. Then both sets were bitten by a mad dog. All those that had been inoculated lived. All that had not been inoculated died. Then Pasteur treated an Alsatian boy, who was suffering with hydrophobia, with the serum. The boy's life was saved.

After this the Pasteur Institute was founded in Paris. Here thousands of cases of hydrophobia have been treated and the death rate from this most terrible of diseases has been greatly reduced. Pasteur Institutes have also been established in many of the larger cities throughout the world for the treatment of hydrophobia.

Some Other Achievements.

Many books could be written on the great achievements of Pasteur for the benefit of humanity. His researches have been of the highest value in many branches of science. He almost revolutionized, or changed, the practice of medicine, although he was not a doctor. Many branches of industry owe their prosperity to his discoveries. He showed that bacteria were the cause of the deadly anthrax in cattle and of cholera in fowls. He saved the silk industry in France by finding the cause and pointing out the cure for silkworm diseases.

Was Unselfish and Patriotic.

Pasteur, however, was much more than a famous scientist. He was also a great and good man—unselfish and patriotic. Here the his words which were read to all French school children on the morning of December 27, the date of Pasteur's birth:

"All of you, whatsoever your career, do not allow yourselves to be deceived by that scepticism which is sterile and maliciously disparaging. Do not permit yourselves to be discouraged by certain hours of sadness that may pass over our country. Ask yourselves first, 'What have I done to educate myself?' Then, as you advance in your studies, ask yourself, 'What have I done for my country?' But whether your efforts are more or less favored by destiny you must, when you approach the goal of life, be ready to say truthfully to yourself, 'I have done my best'."

It is not surprising that a monument has been erected to Pasteur with this inscription: "From a Grateful Humanity to the Greatest of Scientists."—Current Events.

MARRIED.

At the St. Paul parsonage, Greensboro, N. C., December 30, 1922, Mr. Aquila Jones was united in matrimony to Miss Annie May Pope, Rev. T. E. Pierce officiating. May happiness attend them.

—South America's purchases of manufactured articles from the United States have increased through every month in 1922 and are largely in excess of those of 1921.

—Tokio, through the annexation of numerous populous suburbs, has passed both Paris and Berlin and now ranks third among the world's great cities. Its population now exceeds 5,160,000.

—"Blue-shell" eggs laid by Argentine hens have invaded American markets and the American Poultry Association has interested itself in the species of hen, called Arsucana, which produces them.

—A colored man took out a marriage license. A few days later he went back and asked the clerk to substitute another woman's name for the one on the license, as he had changed his mind. He was told that that would cost him another dollar and a half.

"You mean I got to get a new license?"

"Yes," said the clerk.

The applicant was silent for a few minutes, thinking hard. Then he said with an air of determination, "Never mind, boss, this ol' one will do. Thar ain't a dollar an' a half difference 'tween them two, nohow."—Boston Transcript.

GOOD ADVICE FOR ALL BOYS.

The pages, or errand boys, of the United States Senate were entertained at Christmas dinner by Vice-President Coolidge. Besides the dinner there was a fine program. Many of the pages gave toasts that would have done credit to grown men. The Vice-President made a speech in which he called the boys "My fellow public servants." Among other things he said:

"Always be true; be attentive to all requests; think not merely of pay day but give the best of your ability to the work of the thirty other days of the month.

"Acquire habits now that will warrant success in after life. You boys are favored and much will be expected of you. I have no doubt you will become men of character and ability. You must be thrifty, and remember that to honor thy father and mother is the beginning of wisdom."—Current Events.

TWO PRIZES FOR DR. NANSEN.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen received the Nobel Peace Prize at Christiania, Norway, November 19. This prize (for 1922) was awarded to him for his relief work in behalf of the starving millions of Europe. After presenting the prize money (about $40,000) the Nobel Committee announced that Christian Erichsen, of Copenhagen, had made Dr. Nansen another award, equal in value to the Nobel Prize.

After receiving the Nobel Prize Dr. Nansen gave a lecture in which he praised the American relief work under Herbert Hoover. He also announced that the money from Mr. Erichsen would be used in the relief work of the League of Nations. Dr. Nansen is the well-known Arctic explorer.

PLAN FOR GLIDER CONTESTS.

Glider contests will be held in the United States in the near future, if plans of the National Aeronautic Association are carried out. The Association has appointed a special committee, headed by Orville Wright, to work out a program for holding such contests. Glider, or motorless airplane, contests and tournaments were held in England and other European countries last year. The American committee will try to find a suitable location for holding such contests in this country, and will gather information about gliders for persons desiring to compete in the contests.

TRAVELER AND TRAMP.

The traveler put an apple into his pocket and pulled his broad hat down over his brow. "Now I'm ready for my travels," he said. With his hands in his pockets he trudged down the path, through the gate and round the bend in the road, scuffing his feet in the dust as he went. He was not sure where he was going, but he said to himself that he should keep on until he found a strange new country.

The curving road went up and down, and after a long while the traveler began to feel hot and tired. "I think I'll go home, now," he said to himself, "and find the new country some other day."

Just at that point the road divided; one fork turned a little to the right, and the other curved a good deal to the left. The traveler followed the big curve, for it seemed to be leading back toward home. But he did not seem to get any nearer home; it was hot and dusty toiling through the sand.

At last he stopped short with a little grunt. "I think my home must be just round that bend in the road," he said.

So round the bend he went at a run. But, alas! though he ran on and on, he saw no sign of home. When he turned the next curve he was running so fast, and his eyes were so full of tears, that he ran right into a tramp. The meeting was a great surprise to both of them.

"Hello!" said the traveler. "Where did you come from?"

The tramp said nothing, but he stared hard and looked pleased. He was all in shabby gray and seemed very warm and dusty. Suddenly he sat down at the edge of the road and heaved a long sigh.

"I am tired too," said the traveler. The tramp sighed again, but did not reply.

"And I'm thirsty," the traveler added in a sad voice. He came and stood close beside the tramp, who looked sorrowful but was silent.

"And I'm lost! I'm lost!" the traveler said in a choked voice. Before he could help himself two large, hot tears ran down his cheeks and fell on the tramp's nose.

"I wish," the traveler said, "I just wish you could show me the way home."

The tramp put on a very business-like expression and began to move along briskly in the direction he had been going first. The traveler turned and followed.

Back and back they went. At last the road began to look familiar to the traveler. His heart grew lighter, and he put his hands into his pockets again and whistled a little tune. The tramp gave him a pleased look and quickened his pace. Between them they raised a big dust.

After a while they came back to the place where the road divided. The traveler halted; he did not know which way he ought to go. "O dear me!" he said.

But the tramp was not at all worried; he turned briskly down the other fork.

The traveler followed him. "Perhaps he knows the way," he thought hopefully.

At last they came to a very sharp bend. Round the bend was a little picket fence with a green gate. A lady in a blue dress came running down to the gate.

"Come right in and get cooled off," she said to the traveler with a smile. Then she looked at the tramp in a puzzled way.

"I met him on the road," the traveler said. "He is hot and hungry too. O mother, mother may he stay?"

The lady in blue nodded. Then she ran into the house and came back with two bowls full of cold creamy milk and crisp crackers.

"Hurrah!" cried the traveler in delight.

"Bow-wow!" said the happy tramp.—Nancy Byrd Turner, in Youth's Companion.

NOTES.

—The Christmas just passed was the warmest December 25 in many years. States that reported temperatures 20 to 30 degrees below zero during the cold wave last month had weather above freezing for Christmas. In Kansas City, Mo., the temperature reached 68 degrees—the warmest Christmas ever officially recorded there.—Current Events.

—Prince Gelasio Caetani, new Italian Ambassador to the United States, has arrived in Washington. "I am happy to try and help Americans understand the new Italy," he says.

—The appointment of Pierce Butler as Associate Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court was confirmed by the Senate December 21. The vote was 61 to 8. Only three Republicans and five Democrats voted against Mr. Butler. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin and Senator Norris of Nebraska tried to start a filibuster to prevent confirmation, but they were unsuccessful. It was announced that Mr. Butler would take the oath of office and thus become an Associate Justice when the Court meets again after the holiday recess.

—Two thigh bones (the largest ever found) of a dinosaur, or prehistoric monster, have been discovered in Patagonia. This is announced by the La Plata Museum, of Buenos Aires. Each bone is nearly nine feet long. Besides the bones, fossil remains of this gigantic monster were also unearthed. From the great size of the thigh bones scientists figure that this monster, when it roamed the forests in the Mesozoic Age, was at least 140 feet long.

—Great Britain has paid nearly half a billion dollars on her war debt to the United States. The exact figures are $492,838,826. During the past year the British payments to this country have amounted to nearly 135 million.

THE STORY OF THE BIBLE

The Great Drama of Man and His Maker Retold by the Famous Author and Historian, Van Loon.

You have known the Bible all your life—yet how much of it have you actually read and understood? How many of its beautiful stories can you recall—all the way through? How many of its great characters do you know?

Dr. Van Loon wants to win over to a greater love and knowledge of the Bible not only his own boys but all young folks and the great public of intelligent people who have missed the companionship and inexhaustible beauties of the Bible.

Here has a master-writer and master-historian picked out the shining thread of the Biblical narrative, dropping away all details from it and presenting it not only in the simplest, most beautiful of English, but fixing it also in its exact historical perspective.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Executive Committee of the General Conference, M. P. Church, met in the Mount Royal Avenue Church, Baltimore, Md., Tuesday, July 10, 1923, at 10 o'clock A. M. Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., Chairman, presiding.

Members present: Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., Chairman, Rev. T. M. Johnson, Secretary, Rev. J. A. Selby, D. D., Mr. W. C. Scott. A telegram from Rev. C. D. Sinkinson, D. D., explained his absence on account of a funeral.

The meeting was opened by the reading of the first Psalm by Rev. J. A. Selby and prayer led by Rev. T. M. Johnson.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., President of the General Conference, read his report for the quarter. The report was received and ordered to be given to the church papers for publication.

The Committee by common consent approved of the proposition to bind in one volume the quadrennial reports to the next General Conference of the various boards, including the report also of the Executive Committee.

On account of the demands on the time of Chairman Lewis during October incident to the attending of Annual Conferences, it was decided not to hold the October meeting.

A suggestion was received from Rev. C. W. Bates, of North Carolina. to print a booklet to be called "The Methodist Protestant Church at Work," the booklet to contain information concerning the various activities of the church by the use of cuts, etc. This was referred to the various Boards to use so much of the suggestion as may seem to them practical in preparing their respective reports to the next General Conference, which reports are to be bound in one volume.

A request from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was submitted asking that the Society "be allowed to use their Thank-Offering as a special gift and not counted on the budget of the local church." On motion of Mr. W. C. Scott, seconded by Rev. J. A. Selby, such permission was granted, provided the Treasurer of the W. F. M. S. report to the general church treasurer all funds so received including the information as to the source of each contribution.

Treasurer's Report.

Report of the general church treasurer, Mr. H. C. Staley, from May 1, 1923, date of annual report, to July 1 was submitted. The Treasurer stated that the overdraft of the Board of Foreign Missions was allowed on account of the anticipated large receipts for Children's Day during July. The Treasurer stated that 14,000 copies of Doctor Lewis' booklet, "St. Paul as a Money Raiser," have been printed and all distributed except about one thousand, and this without any cost to the church as the charge of two cents each will meet the expense. (Note—In the extracts below the balance on hand in each instance May 1, 1923. and the amount received since that time are included in the one item printed "Receipts" as though the entire amount had come into the treasury since May 1.)

Board of Foreign Missions—Receipts, $9,331; Disbursements, $13,547; overdraft, $4,216.

Mr. Staley was instructed to return to the Home for the Aged $187.63. This amount had been sent to the general treasurer by the Home as the amount distributed to the Home as its portion out of the Inter-Church World Movement Fund, the management of the Home feeling they were not entitled to it, not having paid any part of the underwriting.

In response to an enquiry from Auditor Ernest Wooden, Mr. W. C. Scott was requested to instruct Mr. Wooden as to nature of report he will be expected to make to the next General Conference.

Board of Foreign Missions.

Rev. Fred C. Klein, D. D., Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, submitted the annual report of the Board:—

"Encouraging progress has been made during the year 1922-23 in all departments of the Board's work in Japan, China, and India." Numerous baptisms and accessions to the churches. a large number enrolled as enquirers, reception of theological graduates into the work, over one thousand students enrolled at Nagoya College at the opening in April, and substantial improvements at that institution through the gifts of its students and friends, and projected material developments in the other missions, and the arrival of a missionary and wife in India are the outstanding facts." The Board's working receipts were less than the preceding year by more than $11,000, notwithstanding an increase in Children's Day offerings of $800 and of special gifts of $150. Because of the decrease in the Board's share in the budget distribution and because of imperative demands of the work abroad the Board was compelled to sell Liberty Bonds at a loss on the face value.

The Board has in its three fields 14 missionaries, 22 native ministers, 42 preachers and evangelists, and five Bible women.—a total of 83—and 64 teachers in the schools. Missionaries, pastors and teachers make a total of 147. There are 32 organized churches and 52 chapel and mission appointments, a total of 83. In Japan there are 2,056 church members; in China, 1,287; in India, 151. In Japan 3,674 Sunday school scholars, in China 278, in India

No. 3—The Book of God.

There is something tangible about a book. You handle it. You know it by the feel. It's in plain print, black on white, words you know the meaning of without stopping to think into them. If it's a thoughtful worthy book you read and muse. And you are changed, maybe imperceptibly, but really quite radically.

Now, there is one outstanding book. It stands quits by itself. In its claim for itself, its power among men, its history, the place commonly given it, its distinctive quality of inspiration, even in the enemies it has made, it stands quite alone.

It is the old Book of God. It is the one book to which by common consent that little word "the" belongs, the Book. It was inspired. It is inspired. That simply means the breath of God was in it, and is. His Spirit was in the men who wrote, guiding, controlling, inspiriting, a supernatural touch through the human natural medium.

It is a book like any other, paper, print, stitching, plain words. Its contents must be got through reading and thinking, like any other book. It is unlike every other book in this, there's a living Presence in it.

It reaches into your thoughts. It searches the innermost recesses of your spirit. It touches deftly, unmistakably, your motives and purposes. It lays bare to your eye the inner hidden things.

And there's a distinct touch of life to it. It quickens brain and thought and the part of you that chooses. There's a rugged strength now in your decision that breaks habit, and shapes new ones.

It's a mother of books. It contains the oldest authentic history. All the roots of modern jurisprudence run down into the Mosaic code. Political economy and moral philosophy find their basic principles here. Its laws of sanitation, of hygiene, of diet, and of business ethics, originating here, are accepted standards.

It is not a scientific book. Yet its statements never conflict with the latest findings of science. Its ideals of life, personal, national and racial, can be found nowhere else except as inspired by its pages. Its literature, its love stories, its biographies, are unapproached. It contains the key to the intricate tangle in which the world finds itself today, the one key, the master key.

There's a fine modesty in its pages, and yet the most stupendous claims for itself. It claims to be a revelation from God himself. It tells what reason cannot reason out. True reasoning and this revelation are fellows, working together to reach full knowledge. It reveals the past, otherwise unknown, and God's purposes, and plans for the future, that otherwise could not be known.

It's a singularly honest book. It tells with frank bluntness the glaring moral failings of the men God used. He had to use some one. He got the best there was. He sternly rebuked them, and plainly points out their moral breaks.

This book is the moral standard of life. And morals are the throbbing heart-beat of life.. There must be a standard, or all life goes askew. A yard-stick for cloth, a foot-rule for timber, a sixteen-ounce bit of metal for sugar, truthfulness in speech, honesty in trade, a recognized propriety in cultured circles, a Gray's anatomy for physicians, a Blackstone for lawyers, and God's Book for strong winsome life and rest of heart.

The scholarship of the nations, and of the ages, has been devoted to the task of giving us this Book in our mother tongue, as to no other task. Its utter dependability from the scholarly standpoint is beyond question. The variations of translations in various versions have to do with incidentals, important incidentals, but never with vital things.

The modern English and American revisions have the advantage of the most recently found manuscripts, the latest scholarship, and the paragraphed printing. But one can rest content that the old common version is the most remarkable bit of translation ever done. In it we have the very word of God, in plain English, a sufficient guide for daily life.

And it is not a big book. Familiarity with its pages by daily touch makes that clear. A daily habit, a settled method of thinking of it as one book, and reading it from opening page on, as a story, ignoring for the time being, chapter and verse, gives a fascination to its pages.. And the poetial books and prophetical will fit into the story-part as drawers into a well-made bureau, as will Paul's letters and the others, into Dr. Luke's story of The Acts.

The practical key to this Book is simply this, reading it habitually, quietly, with mind alert, simply reading it, giving one's self up to it for a bit of time daily, and yielding the consent of one's life to its teachings and spirit. The famous artist kept the bright colored stones always in sight to tone up his sense of colors. The sailor keeps his eye constantly on compass and chart.

That's the thing here. Reading it habitually tones up the moral sense, clears the vision, steadies the feet, poises the judgment, stiffens the will, gentles the spirit, comforts the heart, quiets the nerves, and sets the day's work to music.

But, in sharpest contrast with all other books, it makes you face a personal decision. There's no personal appeal in Napoleon or Cromwell. No decision presses in. But here the Man of the Book looks into your face. He calls you to choose. And you do, this way or that. You are never again the man you were.

No. 4—The Beginning of Man.

JESUS, MY SAVIOR.

By L. K. Long.

Each individual, in the course of his life, passes through all the stages of human progress from primitive man on up to the present state of civilization — recapitulating in his own experience the entire racial history. Like the race, a man begins his religious experience before his mental powers are well devedoped. In most cases he becomes a Christian in his youth. This is as it should be. Accepting Jesus as his Savior he begins to order his life in accordance with his Master's teachings, and he grows, with the years, into a more or less perfect exemplification of the Christian character and life.

A person may be truly saved by Jesus Christ without knowing precisely how it is done—even without having clear and correct ideas as to why it is necessary to be saved. Most people, realizing their lost condition, accept Jesus as their Savior without having thought out a theory of either the person of Christ or of his atoning work. Perhaps they never reach a theory. They love him, they trust him, they labor to bring others into his kingdom, and their hope of eternal life is well founded.

In some respects these good people are to be envied. They are not theologically plagued like other men. It matters not to them whether their pastor is a fundamentalist or a modernist, so long as he preaches the gospel of the grace of God as revealed in Jesus Christ. To such the form of the creed or confession gives little trouble—whether it is ancient or modern.

But there are always people who persist in thinking. They endeavor to reduce the facts of their religion to a harmonious system, consistent with knowledge in other departments of learning. As information in many fields increases, these thoughtful people find it necessary to review the old statements and theories. This is where trouble is likely to begin. For, to some good people, the theories in which they were brought up are no longer theories and explanations. They have become so identified with the facts that they are held as facts themselves, and have become invested with all the sanctity of ancient, and hitherto undisputed, truth. Such persons only graduallly, if at all, realize the desirability of revision and change.

"God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not reckoning unto them their trespasses, and having committed unto us the ministry of reconciliation. We are embassadors therefore on behalf of Christ, as though God were entreating by us: we beseech you on behalf of Christ, be ye reconciled to God." This is Paul's statement of the atonement, the at-one-ment. The plan originates with God, it is in behalf of men, it is brought about through Christ, those who come into the benefits of it are to persuade others to accept the good news and to become reconciled to God.

Before making any attempt to interpret the atonement we should remind ourselves that our Christianity is largely a matter of experience. There is to be thinking and theorizing, but in it all we do well to keep close to facts and experience. There are five points in experience at which I, in common with all others, touch Jesus and have to do with him as my Savior.:

1. Sin. There is something wrong with me. I have sinned.. I am under condemnation. The fact that others have sinned gives me no relief. The fact that I was tempted does not excuse. I am entangled in the meshes of a net and can not of myself escape. But I read in God's word. "If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." Encouraged by that I read again, "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." I am sorrowful and make confession, and read again, "A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." Jesus is knocking at the door, and I open to him. He comes in and sits with me.

I am forgiven and he himself furnishes the refreshments for a feast of joy.

2. Sinfulness. There are within me wrong dispositions and tendencies, wrong thoughts and affections. I am weak, and liable to be surprised or enticed into evil. I need the presence and constant help of Jesus, not only to cleanse me but to keep me clean and right. I know of no one else who can save me from my sinful tendencies.

3. The Plan of Life. What am I to do? What about my ideals along the lines of character, education, occupation, and the service of God and men? These were live questions in my youth, and they have never ceased to be vital. For always I am reviewing and readjusting my ideals and plans. Here I need not only a Savior from sin and sinful tendencies I must have also a Savior to all that is high and worthy in character and life. Jesus proves himself to be such a Savior—sympathetic, inspiring, strengthening.

4. The Hardships of Life. Suffering, sickness, failure, bereavement—these are a few of the many things, great and small, that make up life's adversities. It is not so trying to run the Christian course or to fight the good fight of faith, for this stirs the blood. But slowly to walk in the dust of daily toil and strife, or to sit still, or to lie and wait and suffer through long days and weary nights, and to bear the loss of loved ones—is to feel the need of help. When Jesus says, "Lo, I am with you always" and "I will not leave you comfortless," I am satisfied with his companionship and the resourcefulness of the Holy Spirit.

5. The Future Life. Old Testament saints passed into the beyond without a definite hope of immortality. The Christian, however, desires full confidence in a future life of blessedness. There are many intimations of immortality in nature, but I find assurance in Jesus only. "In him was life." "For as the Father hath life in himself, even so he gave to the Son to have life in himself." "I am the resurrection and the life." "Because I live ye shall live also." "I go to prepare a place for you," "that where I am there ye may be also."

With these words ringing in my heart there is no reason why I should not take at its full face-value the exhortation of the Apostle Paul at the end of his great resurrection chapter: "Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." The future is clear only in Christ.

Let us now give some attention to explanations of the atonement, a great subject on which many learned volumes have been written. Speaking with a young lady, a man mentioned that he had failed to keep abreast of the scientific advances of the age. "For instance," he said, "I don't know at all how the incandescent electric light is produced." "Oh, it is very simple," said the young lady. "You just turn a button and the light appears at once." If it is difficult to understand the nature and production of the electric current, in case it really is a current, why should any one imagine it is easy to comprehend and explain the mysteries of redemption—God in Christ reconciling the world unto himself? Yet, notwithstanding the difficulties in the way, if this field of investigation is entered with becoming humility and earnest effort, it will prove to be most fruitful in mental and spiritual growth.

There are many theories of the atonement: I will characterize very briefly a few of the most important:

The Ransom Theory. Man came into bondage to Satan. In order to free him the death of Christ is paid by God as a ransom to Satan This theory reflects the forms of thought prevalent in the times of brigandage.

The Divine Honor Theory. All owe obedience to God—a debt of honor to a Sovereign. Sin is non-payment, robbing God, violating his rights and honor. If punishment is remitted a substitute must suffer death to satisfy God's honor. Christ is that substitute. This is Anselm's theory, and reflects forms of thought prevalent in an age of chivalry.

The Governmental Theory. Hugo Grotius is its chief exponent. He says: "God was moved by his own goodness to bestow distinguished blessings upon us. But since our sins, which deserved punishment, were an obstacle to this. he determined that Christ, being willing of his own love toward men, should by bearing the most severe tortures, and a bloody and ignominious death, pay the penalty for our sins, in order that without prejudice to the exhibition of divine justice, we might be liberated, upon the intervention of a true faith, from the punishment of eternal death." Grotius wrote his treatise in answer to Socinus, who taught that if men are required to forgive on repentance "until seventy times seven times," God may be expected to do as much.

The Penal Satisfaction Theory. These words of Dr. W. G. Shedd set it forth clearly: "Retributive justice is necessary in its operation. The claim of justice upon the transgressor for punishment is absolute and indefeasible. The eternal judge may or many not exercise mercy, he must exercise justice. . . . Hence, in every instance of transgression the penalty of the law must be inflicted, either personally or vicariously; either upon the transgressor or upon his substitute. The remission of penalty under the divine administration is not absolute, but relative. It may be omitted in respect to the real criminal, but, if so, it must be inflicted upon some one in his place."

The Ethical Satisfaction Theory. This has many forms; a quotation from Dr. Samuel Harris will suffice: "Jesus, in his humiliation and in all his earthly life, obeyed the law of love in perfect self-renunciation through sufferings unspeakable, and even unto death on the cross, to bring men back to reconciliation with God. Thus he revealed the law of love more fully than it had ever been revealed before, and fully asserted and maintained the righteousness of God and the universal obligation and inviolable authority of the law of love at every step in the redemption of men and in the forgiveness of sin. And thus he made atonement for sin and guilt."

Not many people today accept any one of these statements as fully representing their views. While each of these, and several theories and combinations of theories, contains a measure of truth, no one of them is perfectly satisfactory. Each expresses only a part of the truth. We might say: It is as though God, by the gift of his Son, bought us back from the enemy, and set us free; it is as though Christ, by his perfect obedience, satisfied the requirements of the broken law and relieved us of the burden of guilt; it is as though his perfect example of sinless living and guiltless suffering smote our hearts with penitence and we determined, by his help, to sin no more; it is as though his perfect righteousness, by some sort of unmerited imputation, became ours—and we are holy.

But none of these set forth what to my mind is the central, most important, teaching of the Bible with reference to our salvation.

To me, (pardon the personal element, and remember this is largely an experience article), to me, the outstanding thing in the Old Testament is not its system of animal sacrifices, nor the elaborate ritual of worship. Even in the Old Testament the great thing—because it is so unique among ancient religions, and because it binds so closely into one the two Testaments—is the grace of God. God loves men and graciously comes to them—in his own person, in the persons of his servants, and in the events of their history. Here are two instances:

First. In Isaiah 53 we have pictured the Suffering Servant of Jehovah. The Prophet of the Exile describes the vicarious sufferings of the righteous remnant of God's people, or, as many with reason believe, the sufferings of a righteous individual; for at that time the individual was coming into prominence, the center of the stage having been occupied previously by the nation. Here is a godly man, misunderstood, held by the people as guilty and forsaken of God, suffering unjustly and quietly for the sins of his fellows, and bringing salvation and healing to men:

"He is despised, and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and as one from whom men hide their face he is despised; and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows, yet we did esteem him sricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

In the next verse the lamb and the sheep are not sacrificial animals—they are the innocent lamb slain for any purpose, and the sheep uncomplainingly submitting to be shorn: "He was oppressed, yet when he was afflicted he opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as as sheep that before its shearer is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."

Professor George B. Stevens well says of the entire representation in Istiah 53: "This idealization of God's holy Servant is not created out of materials drawn from the Levitical ritual, but was produced out of Israel's experience of trial and suffering, illumined by an invincible faith in God's purpose of grace."

Second. Isaiah 63: 8, 9 represents God himself as having been, through all the history of his people, their Savior by moral and spiritual means: "For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not deal falsely: so he was their Savior. In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them, and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old."

No wonder we think of Isaiah as having its perfect fulfillment in Christ, and cling to it as though it were a part of the New Testament. Jesus is indeed the Suffering Servant, acquainted with grief, wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, carrying our sorrows, by whose stripes we are healed. Likewise in Isaiah 63 we identify Jesus with Jehovah, our Savior, and feel that he is afflicted in all our affliction, and redeems us in his love and pity. All this is closely akin to Paul's idea of salvation by union with Christ: "If any man is in Christ, he is a new creature: the old things are passed away; behold they are become new."

Any and all theories of the atonement may be established from the Bible, if we use the proof-text method. Most of them, however when closely examined reveal elements contrary to the teachings of the Bible as a whole. And they contain assumptions or inferences abhorrent to the Christian feeling of spiritual men. While I enjoy studying into these things and forming my own opinions, I gladly recognize the right of all others to their views. Jesus is my Savior, and my trust is in him rather than in any theory, my own or that of anyone else, as to how he accomplishes his part of the work.

(The fourth article in this series will be on the words of Paul, "I Think.")

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

OUR SLOGAN:—As Faithful in Service for Christ as for Self.

OUR AIM:—1. A Family Altar in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
2. The Church Paper in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
3. A Revival in Every Church With a Worthy Increase in Members.
4. Every Member a Contributing Member.
5. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
6. The Full $300,000 Subscribed for the College by June 1, 1923.

OUR MOTTO:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all our workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

I am glad that Dr. Andrews has again called attention to the work at Haw River. The people there lost their church by fire. They are struggling to build a better house of worship. They need and will appreciate your help. I shall be delighted to know that many have responded and that you have done it quickly. Come on and come quickly, please.

The Budgets.

We are woefully behind with our conference budgets. See Herald of July 12th, Bro. Taylor's S. O. S. call. Just a bit over three months will bring the Annual Conference. So pastors and stewards must bestir themselves if we meet our obligations. We trust that no charge will be so derelict in duty as not to report anything paid on the budgets. We purpose publishing in the Herald as soon as possible after the first of September the amounts in Bro. Taylor's hands from each charge up to September 1st.

That Prayer Covenant.

Did you or did you not covenant with the brethren at the Children's Home to pray, and pray most earnestly, for a gracious revival in all our churches? Many revivals are in progress, and will be in progress for the next few weeks. There is much need for prayer. Dear reader, please pray for a great revival among us.

Uwharrie Charge.

Saturday and Sunday, July 14 and 15, were spent with Rev. J. S. Riddle on Uwharrie Ct. It has been several years since I visited this work, and I can see many signs of improvement and progress. These seem to be a consecrated people. They need more than anything to realize the blessedness of giving. Pastor Riddle is doing his best among them and they speak well of him.

High Point City C. E. Union.

Tuesday evening, July 17th, I had the pleasure of meeting with and speaking to the High Point City Union of Christian Endeavorers. I was delighted to find three of our Methodist Protestant churches of the city furnishing at least 75 per cent. of those who were present. It was a delight to meet with them and to participate in the program.

In Lexington.

On Wednesday evening I met with Rev. J. H. Abernethy and several laymen who are interested in building a new church in Lexington. We met in the Lexington House Furnishing Company's Store. The men present were enthusiastic for the new church. Three very definite things were done: 1. Bro. Abernethy was authorized to organize the class on some Sunday in the near future. 2. A subscription was taken with a view to clearing up all indebtedness on the lot before Conference. The debt was found to be $1,012.92, and more than half of that amount was subscribed by the few present; $537.92 subscribed, leaving $475.00 to be raised. 3. Rev. J. H. Abernethy was instructed to select some of the men to help him and make a canvass with a view to paying off all debt on lot by Conference.

West Forsythe Charge.

Friday to Sunday, July 20 to 22, was spent with pastor, Rev. A. M. Hamilton, on West Forsythe. He was just closing a meeting at Tabernacle church in which Bro. Ed. Suits assisted. Bro. Suits had gone home, so I preached to a very attentive congregation. The people heard the word gladly. Saturday night I preached at Stony Knoll, and Sunday assisted the pastor in opening his meeting at Harmony Grove, and finished the rounds with him at Pleasant Hill Sunday night.

The work, in the main, is going well. The people like the most of us, need to see the importance of giving more largely of their means for the support of the Kingdom purposes.

We are leaving early this week for Spring Church charge to be in the District Young People's Meeting at Spring Church this week, and from there we will go to Westminster, Md., for the Maryland Conference Young People's and Ministers' meeting, July 30 to Aug. 6.

Don't forget the budgets. Send in all you have collected to Rev. S. W. Taylor. Yours in the Master's Service, A. G. Dixon.

—A visitor at one of the art galleries of Florence said to the aged attendant: "I do not think much of your pictures." The answer of the old man was: "Oh, sir, the pictures are not up for judgment, but the visitors are." Jesus Christ is above judgment, but those who make light of Him are condemned in their judgment.

This week Friendship Church, Haw River charge, pledges its quota, likewise Randleman charge secures its quota. We congratulate these churches on getting their quotas. It has not been easy for any church to get the quota assigned it. We are not doing an easy thing; if any of you expected it to be easy when you set out on this campaign you have been disillusioned. But we are not trying to do an impossible something. There is not a church in the entire conference that is unable to subscribe the quota assigned it. There may be some that are yet unwilling, but every week we win one here and there and so the work goes on. Let us not be weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

THE BURLINGTON MEETING.

I want to commend the enterprise and wisdom which planned and held the meeting of the pastors in the third district in our church at Burlington last week. Every pastor in the district was present save one, Rev. A. O. Lindley was absent. We were guests of the laymen of the Burlington church, the ladies of the church serving a splendid dinner; it was a pleasure for the writer to be present and we feel confident much good was accomplished The meeting was not held to consider the college enterprise alone, various activities of our church were considered, but the college enterprise was not forgotten; there were too many strong friends of the enterprise present to allow the meeting to close without due consideration being given it.

THE REVIVAL SEASON.

While we recognize the custom in our rural churches of devoting July and August largely to revival services we are not ceasing our activities for the college in these sections, except where the churches have secured their quotas or the pastors prefer that we come later. In fact, the college enterprise is so vitally related to our church that we feel we must build the college or even our revival meetings will fall short of the full purpose for which they are held. So when you pray for your revival, please to pray for the success of our college enterprise—it must not fail.

THE AUGUST PICNIC.

Fearing that some of you did not read my former letters in which I named August the 18th for our get-together picnic, I am putting a line in the Herald this week telling of this event. The plan is for all who can to come to the college ground Saturday, August 18, bringing a picnic dinner and eat it together. We have not arranged for any speaking—we simply want our people to get better acquainted with each other and to see the college. Why not spend the day in social enjoyment, having fellowship one with the other? It would do us all good and might lengthen our lives many days to take this one in that way. Hoping to have at least one thousand present on this occasion, I am, with sincere good wishes,

Very truly yours, R. M. Andrews.

OUR GREAT NEED.

The sense of our own helplessness and need of Divine help is the first thing in religious experience. A man who does not feel the need of God's forgiveness will never repent of his sins. Resolving to do better, brings no man to salvation, but rather to self-righteousness. They that feel they are whole, will not send for a physician. And yet they may have a deadly disease.—Exchange.

MOUSE TRAPS OR AUTOMOBILES.

Many years ago an emient writer penned these lines, "Build a better mouse trap than any one else, and the world will beat a path to your door." These words have been quoted all over the English-speaking world as being words of wisdom, but they will not meet the tests of modern salesmanship. In these days the man who builds the mouse trap must also go out and tell the world what he has done, if he wishes to sell his traps. Honest business is no longer transacted "on the quiet" or in out-of-the-way corners.

The world is no longer beating paths. It has built its highways, of stone and steel, and travels by steam, and gasoline, and air. The hangars, the terminals, and the filling stations are placed in the most advantageous locations. The air routes, the railroads, and the automobile highways have been carefully located and charted. Mistakes may be made, but the best efforts of the best men available have been employed in the location and development of these transportation lines.

Business and factory locations are no longer selected by haphazard methods. The United Cigar Stores Company, when desiring to locate a new store will place an experienced "checker" at the site being considered with instructions to check every person passing that point during the usual hours for business of this character. Other sites may be checked, and comparisons made. This may be continued for weeks before the final decisions are made. The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company sends out experienced surveyors, to carefully canvass a given community in which it is proposing to establish a new branch. The most accurate information obtainable is secured. The number of dwellings, apartments, the probable number of families, and the approximate population of the district are listed, and laid before the management before any effort is made to secure a suitable location for such a business. Factories are located with reference to markets, supply of raw materials needed, and labor available. Climatic and health conditions are considered, the water supply is analyzed, and the probable living costs for the workmen and their families enter into the consideration. Other items affect decisions for a given industry, and the whole question is settled upon the lines of most approved business efficiency.

In such an age as this your Board of Home Missions must pursue modern methods or its work will go for naught. We must meet the demands of the times, or we might just as well suspend operations and save our money. A little box chapel, on an obscure lot, will mean but little for the community, the denomination, or the kingdom. The best corner in the district, with a complete modern working plant is a necessity. Even good Methodist Protestant people will go long distances into adjoining communities to reach such a church rather than to worship in the small mission chapel described above. We cannot appeal to the community until we prove to them that we are an up-to-date, aggressive and efficient organization. We need the best men available, with an adequate equipment for every community.

But modern methods cost money. It would require $200,000 per year to meet the demands the denomination is making upon us. The General Conference has allowed us $120,000 per year, but the methods employed in collection have only secured a little more than 25 per cent of the amount appropriated. The Methodist Protestant Church is limiting its own activities in almost a sinful manner by its failure to meet the budget in full and when due. The church must keep pace with this automobile, and aeroplane age. Charles H. Beck.

We have been publishing the account of the evangelistic tours made by Rev. Florence Williams Theophilus, and her corps of preachers and Bible women, throughout the district, and this is the conclusion.

"The greatest trouble we have had this year has been lack of water throughout the district. The puddles left in creek and river beds that supplied our water last year—though sometimes most unpalatable — were scarce this year. This was due to shortage of rainfall last monsoon.

"One thing noticeable this year is the establishment of Bhajan Mandlis (a set of men with musical instruments appointed to play and sing songs to the gods, at stated times, where all the villagers can gather and listen) in many of our villages.

"This we too are doing more and more each year, but our songs are to the glory of God and His Christ. Often our Bhajans bring out a whole story of the Bible, as the life of Joseph or David, but always the way of salvation is stressed.

"These Bhajans catch and hold an audience by the hour, sometimes the tune is just the same as their own, but the great difference is in the pure, beautiful words and the spirit revealing Him who is 'the fairest among ten thousand and altogether lovely.'

"In order to accomplish more for God in our district we will have to have better equipment, and be free from other duties to give this work our best.

"We now have two preachers stationed at Songir, two at Khed, one at Ner and one at Mukti, and S. Kasote stationed at the Settlement.

"Missionaries are supposed to take the hardest places in all the work. The touring is hard, the heat, the high winds, disastrous rains, etc., make it hard, but it is not of this that I wish to speak.

"I want to bring to your attention the faithful Indian men and women who are ready to endure hardships, and we have some of that kind.

"Please write a short letter to the district workers. They would be greatly encouraged, and they deserve it."

Some of India's Ways With Her Dead.

Mrs Theophilus has sent an interesting paper upon this subject, and we give an extract which will be followed by others later.

"A poor sick wanderer lay suffering in the "dharamshalla. No one to hand him a cup of water, no one to speak a word of comfort or hope as his immortal soul took its flight. A casual passerby saw the still form, and reported it to the headman of the village, whereupon an order was sent to the Mahara to bury him.

"It was my privilege to attend the funeral. I followed as two men bore the corpse along at a fast trot, across unploughed rice fields. A bamboo pole across the shoulders of the men supported the dead body, by means of a rope tied under the arms.

"The body was dragged across ditches, up and down, bounding over rough places till they reached a suitable ditch.

"The corpse was dropped down, stripped of its dirty clothing which was carefullysearched, then stones were brought to break off the iron bracelet from the left wrist. It was a heavy bracelet, and required quite a lot of pulling, tugging and pounding to get it off. At last it gave way, and with a wicked smile it was placed by the heap of dirty rags. A bed of grass was then made in the bottom of the ditch at one side, the corpse was dragged to it, and loose earth from the bank was pulled down over it. One of the men, noting my look of consternation, said to me, "Because you were here he had a better funeral"—the grass bed.

"For nights after that, when the jackals howled, I shuddered, knowing what was probably taking place over in the rice field."

Fred C. Klein.

—One afternoon a stranger debarked from a train at a hustling town in the West and headed up the street. Finally he met a man who looked like a native.

"Pardon me," said the stranger, "are you a resident of this town?"

"Yes, sir," was the ready rejoinder of the other. "I have been here something like fifty years. What can I do for you?"

"I am looking for a criminal lawyer," responded the stranger. "Have you one here?"

"Well," said the native, reflectively, "we think we have, but we can't prove it on him."—Washington Herald.

—When Mike Flannigan, the contractor, got up in the world, his wife and daughters surrounded themselves with many comforts and household conveniences. One Sunday afternoon an old friend visited them, and while he was there the maid wheeled into the room a vehicle containing light refreshments.

"Phwat's that thing, Mike?" asked the caller.

"Why, that's a tay-wagon," replied Flannigan.

"A tay-wagon, is ut?" rejoined the other. "Shure, I'd call it a push cart that's broke into sassiety."—Boston Transcript.

Father was just coming in the door, and, handing Alice a plate, he said, "Run down cellar, little daughter, and get some apples. After supper we will roast some over the open fire."

Alice took the plate. "I do wish people would not always expect me to do things because I'm the youngest," she sighed.

Her father looked after her with a half smile, half sigh. "What shall we do with Alice?" he asked. "She does errands for us all day long, willingly with her feet and hands but unwillingly with her tongue. I have it. Until we can make her realize her fault all of us who love her must meet her requests as she does ours. It will be hard for us to do, but we all love her too much to see this fault grow larger. Hush, she is coming. Remember we are to begin at once and all treat her as she treats us."

"Agreed," said all the family softly, for they all loved Alice dearly and had grieved to see the ungracious habit growing stronger day by day.

They were soon seated at the table, and it was not long before Alice turned to her oldest brother. "Pass the salt, Rob, please," she said.

"I do wish that once you would put the salt in front of you," said Rob, passing it. "You set the table, don't you?"

Alice looked up in surprise, but Rob looked so entirely unconscious of what he had said that she thought to herself: "Poor Rob. He is tired and doesn't realize how cross he sounds."

"Please give me some more pudding, mother," she said a few minutes later, passing her plate.

"Certainly," stid mother, helping her generously, "but I do wish you would know in the beginning how much you can eat, so I could give it to you all at once."

Alice's eyes opened wide, but she said nothing.

After supper they all gathered around the fireplace to roast apples over the fire. Alice sat on the hearth rug holding the plate for those that were done, while father carefully put them one by one on a long, pointed stick and turned them slowly around over the open fire.

"Harold," Alice said, "won't you get the plates and spoons ready? This plate has all the apples on it it will hold now."

Harold rose. "I do wish," he said crossly, "you would sometimes think and get things before you sit down. You are the youngest, and you should wait on all of us," he added as he brought the plate.

"What is the matter with them all tonight?" thought poor Alice. "I never knew them to be so cross to me before," and her eyes filled with tears.

To hide them she got up slowly and turned to where Fluffy, the big Angora, lay in a chair just outside the family circle. "I am going to sit in your chair now," she said, lifting her. "Fluffy, let me have your seat and you shall lie in my lap."

"Certainly," replied Fluffy looking gravely into Alice's face, "but I do wish you would make up your mind where you wish to sit before I get settled, and not make me move when I am so comfortable."

Poor Alice! She dropped Fluffy on the floor and burst into tears.

"Why, don't be frightened, dear," said mother, putting a comforting arm around her. "You know that was only Rob practising his ventriloquism. Fluffy has often talked to you that way, you know."

"I know," sobbed Alice, "but that isn't it. It is because you are all so cross to me. Every single thing I ask you to do you are cross and don't want to and"—

Suddenly she raised her head. "Oh, mother," she sobbed, "is that what I do? Is that why you all did it, even Fluffy?"

Mother patted the head now hidden again in her shoulder. "Dear little daughter," she said, "it hurt us all to speak so crossly to you, and we are glad Fluffy betrayed us so soon. Perhaps this little bit of a lesson will be all you need."

"It will make me try to remember," said Alice thoughtfully. "I really like to do things for you all; it is just a way of speaking. I will make myself remember some way. Oh," she cried, her face lighting up, "I'll fine myself a cent every time I do it and pay it out of my allowance, and with the money I will buy Fluffy a new collar to thank her for her helping me, through Bob, to see how it sounds."

"A good plan," said father, smiling. "I hope Fluffy will never get the collar that way, though. If in six weeks there are so few pennies in the box that there is no hope of her getting it, I will buy her one myself as a reward of merit."

"Oh, Fluffy," cried Alice, catching up her pet and burying her face in the soft fur, "I hope you get the collar the last way, but either way you shall have it."

"Thank you," purred Fluffy, "I trust I have earned it. It will be a very suitable reward for a good action." Then curling up in Alice's lap, she went to sleep.—Emma F. Bush, in Zion's Herald.

A WORD TO THE BOYS.

If you have anything to do, do it at once. Don't sit down in the rocking-chair and lose three-quarters of an hour in dreading the job. Be sure that it will seem ten times the harder than it did at first.

Keep this motto: Be on time in small things as well as great. The boy who is behind time at breakfast and school will be sure to "get left" in the important things of life.

If you have a chronic habit of dreading and puting off things, make a great effort to cure yourself. Brace up! Make up your mind that you will have some backbone. Don't be a limp, jelly-fish kind of a person.

Depend upon it that life is very much what you make it. The first thing to decide is what you are going to make it.

The next thing is to take off your coat and go to work. Make yourself necessary somewhere. There are thousands of boys and young men in the world who wouldn't be missed if they should drop out of it to-morrow. Don't be one of this sort.

Be a power in your own little world, and then, depend upon it, the big world will hear from you.

—Tim—"How are you getting along at home while your wife's away?"

Jim—"Fine! I've reached the height of efficiency. I can put on my socks now from either end."

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Thomasville.—The reporter of the Thomasville church and Sunday school has again prevailed upon me to report the events of the church for the Herald this week. Last Sunday was a very good day for the church and Sunday school. The attendance in the Sunday-school was 250, an incdease of 30 over the previous Sunday. The music by the orchestra was fine as usual and the various classes had good reports of attendance and offerings.

Bro. C. F. Finch, superintendent of the Sunday school, has made an advance step in the betterment of the school. Recently he sent out a number of questionnaires to teachers and leading members of the school, asking five questions as to the betterment of the school. He stated Sunday morning that the replies to the questions were very encouraging and some of the suggestions would be carried out in the work of the school. Another feature of the contemplated improvement or betterment of the school as regards the teaching of the lesson is the granting of a vacation to the teachers during the month of August. Each class will have a substitute teacher during the four Sundays of August. The teachers will visit other schools and classes and gain new ideas and methods of teaching. It is the hope of Superintendent Finch that this plan will be a very profitable one to both the teachers and the members of the various classes.

The annual picnic for the entire Sunday-school was held at the Children's Home Thursday evening of last week and was attended by a good majority of the Sunday school. Baskets and boxes of the many good things to eat were taken and placed on the large picnic table at the college where it was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present. After the supper was over, the crowd moved on to the Children's Home, arriving there about 7:30 o'clock. A few games were played by the young people and the children enjoyed several rides on the merry-go-round, after which the children of the Home and the school were served with ice cream in cones. The crowd visited the buildings at the Home. All returned to Thomasville between nine and ten o'clock, having spent a most enjoyable evening together.

At the morning church service Pastor Troxler delivered a very helpful and instructive sermon from the text, St. John 3:30. Four different thoughts were discussed in the sermon: 1. Putting self in the proper place; 2. Putting Christ in the proper place; 3. Putting people in the proper place; 4. Christ will put us in the proper place.

Announcement was made at the morning service last Sunday that the third quarterly conference will be held on Tuesday night after the 5th Sunday in July. The pastor is very anxious that every official member and as many others as will attend be present for the conference.

The Christian Endeavor Society held a very interesting service at 7:15 Sunday evening. The topic, "God in Nature," was discussed by several members of the society. D. R. Connell is president of the society.

Owing to the tent revival meeting in progress near the church, being conducted by the Holiness people, the congregation at the evening service was not as large as usual. Bro. Troxler delivered a good sermon.

Next Sunday morning Pastor Troxler will be at Rockingham assisting in the organization of a community church. In his absence C. B. Way will have charge of the service. The speaker for the service will be Miss Reed, the special agent for the Woman's Home Missionary Society of North Carolina, who is making a tour of the conference in the interest of new missionary societies. Miss Reed will be on the West Thomasville charge Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, and will visit the Thomasville church Sunday morning and speak during the morning service. The vote for delegate to the Annual Conference will be taken at this service and the result of the vote will be announced at the quarterly conference on Tuesday night following.

C. B. Way, Assistant Rep.

Lebanon Charge.—The third quarterly conference convened at English Street on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in July. The attendance was good. Bro. J. M. Harvey was declared elected to next Annual Conference All the business was transacted in a spirit of love. [illegible] reports showed finances were behind, but we are confident Lebanon charge will pay all of Annual Conference budget and some of the General Conference budget.

The special meeting for Pleasant Grove, which was set for the fourth week in September; has been changed and will begin on Thursday night, August 2nd. This change was made because local conditions seemed to indicate that it would be best to hold the meeting now. The Sunday-school attendance is not so good this hot weather, but despite the hot weather, pleasure trips, swimming pools, and other attractions, our attendance is the best it has been during my stay here. Edw. Suits.

Granville Circuit.—I have taken up so much space in the Herald recently with the Minnis Fund that I have hesitated to take up any more with any report from my circuit. But now that the Minnis Fund is completed, signed, sealed, and delivered, I may be permitted to say a word. I don't know just where to begin because I am not sure where I left off. But we'll start this way:

The organ at Rehoboth church gave way some time ago, as organs have a habit of doing, and it was decided to replace it with a piano. The young folks have had various events to help pay for it, and with contributions from the elders, are a long way on the road to full payment.

The music at Union Chapel is showing a marked improvement since our brother Lewis Hedgepeth has been helping out with his violin. "Let us praise the Lord with stringed instruments."

Attendance at Sunday school is reaching high water mark. There is perhaps a 75 per cent. increase over last year. And the interest is increasing also. But we are not going to be satisfied until every member of the church is present at Sunday school.

Congregations are on the increase also. It looks good to see a house full of folks at an ordinary preaching service.

Children's Day services were held at both Union Chapel and Rehoboth. The programs were gotten up by the young ladies at each church, and were exceptionally good. Total offering, $42.00; considerably better than last year.

Quarterly conference met last Saturday at Mt. Carmel. A fine turnout, with every church represented. Bro. O. H. Powel was declared elected delegate. Among the matters discussed was a proposition to relocate Antioch church. The conference voted to appoint a committee with the pastor to canvass the Egypt neighborhood to see what can be done taward establishing the church in that section. A fine opportunity there for us, I think.

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Asheville.—Our revival campaign closed on Sunday night. Services were held every night for two weeks. Bro. Gerringer did the preaching. His sermons were earnest and thoughtful. His strength kept up well in spite of the series of strenuous weeks preceding—a week in Winston-Salem, a week of the Young People's conference, a week of the summer conference at High Point.

The meeting was well attended, especially by the faithful ones. Six new members were received Sunday morning—Ralph Beacham, Guy Allison, and Kathleen Haney on profession of faith; Bro. and Mrs. F. Allman from Clarksburg, W. Va., and Mrs. Minuie Boyd from Gastonia, these last three by letter. The attendance Sunday morning was the best during the present pastorate.

Our hearts go out to Bro. R. C. Maynard and family on account of Mrs. Baynard's untimely passing Thursday of last week. Mrs. Salisbury, another of our good members, is expected to go at any time. Mrs. Tootles, another beloved member of our church, is also nearing the end.

We have enjoyed seeing the following young ladies at church during their attendance at the summer school here: Misses Mary Willey of Enfield, Mary Young of Henderson, Eva Spruell of Creswell, and Miss Crouse of Advance. Mrs. N. R. Oliver and Miss Frances Oliver, of Kernersville, and Miss Johnnie Oliver, of Winston-Salem, mother and sister and aunt of Mrs. Gerringer, were a great help in the meeting. Miss Frances was pianist for all the services. The congregation gave a token of appreciation of her faithfulness, last Sunday morning.

We are grieved to learn that Bro. E. L. Douglass and family will soon move to High Point to live. They will be a splendid addition to our membership there.

Their part in the church life here will never be forgotten.

Mrs. George F. Leonard, formerly Miss Jessie Rowe Williams, and her two children are visiting in Asheville.

On the 8th of July an offering was taken for foreign missions amounting to $20.00.

Misses Novella and Verdie McIntyre are in Philadelphia.

We are still hearing echoes of the young people's conference at Weaverville. Every one is speaking in the highest praise of the conference. J. S. Williams.

New Hope, Why Not Ct.—We had our 3rd quarterly conference Saturday, with very good reports. Mr. Charlie Stuart was elected delegate to the Annual Conference.

The Why Not Circuit convention will be held at Pleasant Hill, Saturday, August 4.

Last night Bro. Hulin preached a very helpful sermon. Collection for the Children's Home, $3.79.

Miss Louzena Presnell, of Asheboro, was with us to worship Sunday night.

Misses Ollie and Ella Sink spent the week end with their aunt, Mrs. C. E. Durham, of Worthville.

Mrs. J. T. Williams is visiting her son, Mr. Yancy Williams, of near Asheville.

The protracted meeting will begin here the fourth Sunday in September. Pray for us that we may have a great revival.

Rosa Merritt.

Macedonia. An Invitation.—Friday eve, 20th, I went to Tabernacle to the meeting controlled by Bro. Hamilton; Dr. Dixon preached. Tabernacle is two miles from the station, Tobaccoville (Macedonia, Baptist church).

The superintendent of Macedonia S. S., Bro. Hauser, was at Tabernacle. He kindly asks all who can to get in on next Sunday by ten o'clock and take an active part in the S. S. At eleven o'clock exercises of the Spainhour reunion are to begin—and to serve several hours. It now seems that Bro. Hauser and his singers of the church and the school will be the main dependence for the music during the prospective meeting. W. F. Grabs.

P. S.—It seems that numbers of the relatives and friends may manage to get to the church to the S. S. by 10 o'clock and thus make a generous start with the local forces for the prospective engagement and duties of the day. Bro. Hamilton will be in reach and will be on hand in the evening. W. F. G.

Owing to circumstances we have decided to change the date of our special meeting from the 4th Sunday in September to Thursday, August 2, beginning with the night service.

We held our Children's Day service the 1st Sunday in July. The program was good.

Mrs. J. R. Meredith and Mrs. F. N. Kennedy took great interest in training the children.

Reporter.

Pageland Circuit.—Our special meeting will begin at Pageland next Sunday, July 29. Bro. Stubbins will do the preaching; he will come to us on Monday and remain through the first Sunday in August. Friends, pray for the success of these services. J. W. Quick

Salem, Saxapahaw Circuit.—Silence is no indication from our church that there is nothing doing. We are having good attendance in Sunday school. On Saturday, July 21, we held our Children's Day service at 11 o'clock. We were glad to have with us our pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley, also Mr. Edwards of Gibsonville who made an intersting address at the close of the service and also gave us an excellent sermon in the afternoon. We hope to have Mr. Edwards with us again sometime soon. The offering amounted to $19.29.

After the picnic dinner, which every one enjoyed, ice cream and lemonade were sold, the proceeds, which amounted to $29.40, to go for the benefit of the church.

Our special meeting will begin second Sunday in Augst with Mr. Lowdermilk as pulplit help. Pray that we may have a great revival in our church. With best wishes to the Herald, Ilene Thompson, Reporter.

July 24.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—The Sunday school is fine, we are glad to say. Our pastor is still on his job. Our church is growing in interest. We have a large congregation each time. Miss Reed from Greensboro will be with us next Sunday night to speak on home missions; we urge that we have a large attendance to hear her as it will be of interest.

We have planned to have our Children's Day ,the third Sunday, the 19th of August. Our pastor was holding his meeting at Sandy Ridge and could not be with us the third Sunday, and Brother George Berrier from Canaan filled the pulpit; he brought a fine message. We have purchased 50 yards of carpet and placed it on the floor of our church and it helps to beautify it so much. We also have purchased a lawn fence for our cemetery, which goes to help to beautify our church yard.

Mrs. A. D. Sink, Reporter.

Laymen and Ministers Get Together.

On the seventeenth of this month the ministers of the third conference district were guests at a luncheon given by the laymen of the Burlington church. The meeting was held in the Hut, where the luncheon was served by the Aid society of the church, and done after their most excellent manner of serving such occasions. Besides Mr. R. F. Williams, who acted as master of ceremonies, other laymen of the church were present, and every minister of the district except Brother Lindley, who expected to be present, and was evidently unavoidably kept away. Rev. R. M. Andrews, D.D., was also present as a specially invited guest.

Considerable time was spent in discussing the College, out of which came a decision to raise the full quota of this district. Some of the charges made splendid reports while others did not make quite so good a showing. The deficit seems to be about $9,000. A specially appointed committee will meet tonight in Graham to formulate plans for raising this balance. It was the judgment of the meeting that the College is the BIG, OUTSTANDING enterprise before us, and that it must go forward.

Another thing done by the meeting that promises much good was the organization of what was termed the District Workers Council, composed of both ministers and laymen and laywomen. Officers were elected as follows:—President, R. F. Williams; vice president, Rev. C. L. Spencer; secretary-treasurer, Rev. C. J. Edwards. The constitution provides for two meetings a year, Monday after the first Sundays in March and September.

Steps were also taken looking toward the organization of a District Methodist Protestant Missionary Union; also, Fifth Sunday Rallies in the district.

This meeting was a wise move by our laymen, and certainly has promise of great good for the future. The laymen proved fine hosts, and the ministers appreciative guests. Head to head, hand to hand, heart to heart, and all following the lead of our Great Captain is our spirit—and "By this sign we conquer."

We received by letter at the Sunday morning service, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Jones. Brother Jones comes to us from Tabernacle church, and Sister Jones from Springwood Presbyterian church. We are glad to welcome these splendid people to our communion.

Brother Little is to be with us for the day Sunday. We are praying and planning for a good day. It is the generous custom of this church to give the pastor a vacation during August. With the exception of Sunday school and Christian Endeavor our church will be closed during that month. It will be our aim and our prayer to come back with renewed energy for the finish in the fall.

Burlington.—Last Wednesday night our third quarterly conference was held. Something very unusual occurred at this conference, something that the writer had never seen occur before. The stewards reported the result of the election for delegate to the annual conference, Brothers T. T. Stafford and J. G. Rogers being the nominees, and both received the same number of votes, each receiving 27. The pastor, as chairman declared that there was no election, and stated that according to the discipline, the quarterly conference must elect. Brother T. T. Stafford received a majority vote and was declared elected.

Sunday was exceedingly hot, and not quite the usual attendance at the Sunday school and preaching services. The Sunday school is enjoying special music by our orchestra. This is indeed a very fine orchestra for Sunday school music, and is much appreciated by our people.

The 11 o'clock preaching service was well attended, and the pastor gave us an unusually good sermon on the theme, "The Christ-in-Me Christian." All were agreed that this sermon was helpful and profitable to the hearers, and enjoyed by all. At this service two new members were received, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L Jones. Mr. Jones comes to us from the Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church and Mrs. Jones comes from the Presbyterian Church. This makes 46 new members received into his church during this conference year. The pastor states that he hopes to receive more yet, before the year ends. We are wondering if the number will reach the mark of one new member for each Sunday in the year.

Announcement was made that next Sunday is to be Young People's Day. Rev. Lawrence C. Little is to be with us for the entire day, speaking at the morning and night services. In addition, he will hold a Young People's Rally at 3:30 P. M. and we are looking forword to a great day next Sunday.

Brother Charlie Riddle, one of our members, also a member of our Baraca class, is very ill with typhoid fever. The doctors state, however, that he is holding his own, and that this week a change for the better is expected, and we are anxiously awaiting this announcement. D. A. Neese, Reporter.

It is a sin to be a mocker.—Shakespeare.

Belmont, Mt. Hermon Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely. Mr. Alfred Thompson, our faithful superintendent, is doing his part to make it a success. Our attendance has been cut down by the whooping cough in our community. We sincerely hope that it will soon be over so we can have a bigger, better Sunday school.

Brother Lindley filled his appointment Sunday. He preached a soul-stirring sermon on Love and Unselfishness which everyone seemed to enjoy. Communion was served at the 11 o'clock hour. We have started a special campaign for the College which we are trusting will be a success.

Our revival services will begin the fourth Sunday in August with Brother Troxler as pulpit help. Let us pray that God will revive us and send an old-time revival like we had last year.

We are sorry to report that Miss Mavis Sharpe is sick; hope she will soon be well.

We were glad to have Mr. Baxter Buckner, of Burlington, worship with us Sunday, also Mr. and Mrs. Roe Garrett and son. Visitors are always welcome at our church.

Ramah Shoffner, Reported.

Lexington.—The third quarterly conference met at Yadkin College Saturday, July 14. All the churches were represented and we had a good conference save the gloom which was everywhere apparent on account of the death of Mrs. W. T. Totten. In that Yadkin Colllege sustained a great loss.

Brother Hermon Swicegood was elected delegate to the annual conference.

Last Wednesday night we held a business meeting in Lexington. President Dixon of Greensboro, Rev. C. B. Way of Thomasville, and Mr. E. S. Welborn of Mt. Pleasant attended and made talks. A number of the local brethren gave talks. Several hundred dollars in pledges were given to help pay the lot and street improvement debt. But it will require several hundred more to pay this debt.

It was decided to meet at a later date and organize a new church in Lexington which ought to have been done years ago.

The first Sunday in August the revival will begin at Mt. Carmel. Preaching at 11 A. M. and at two P. M. with dinner on the grounds. There will be two services each day following until the meeting closes, the hour for the day service to be announced later. The second service will be at 7:30 or 8:00 P. M. through the week. We are expecting Rev. A. M. Hamilton of Jamestown to be with us and do most of the preaching. J. H. Abernethy.

July 23.

Democrat Circuit.—We began a series of revival services at Pleasant Gap on Thursday, July the 19th, and closed Sunday, the 22nd. Rev. T. E. Pierce came in time for the first service Thursday, 19th, and remained through Thursday, 26th. Brother Pierce brought some wonderful messages to us; sermons were of the evangelistic type and of a high order and well received. The results were not what we had hoped for, but we feel there was much good done. There were six conversions and four additions to the church. I am sure the people of Pleasant Gap will be glad to have Brother Pierce come their way again.

IN MEMORIAM.

Burt.

Mrs. Nannie D., wife of the late John J. Burt, passed from labor to reward July 15, 1923, age 57 years.

She leaves five children, three sons and two daughters, three children and her husband having preceded her to the spirit land some years ago.

Mrs. Burt joined the church at Eden when a child and remained true to her vows until called by a loving savior to a higher service.

She had been a sufferer for several months gradually growing worse. But in all her suffering she was cheerful and the sunshine of her life that she enjoyed when well, she carried with her to the sick room, and it was evident to the last.

She was the kind of character that caused you to feel better when you came in contact with her. She will be missed much in her home, for "She guided her affairs with discretion." Her children were faithful to the last. Captain Wilkie C. Burt of U. S. Cavalry got leave of absence that he might be with her to the end of her life. Miss Winnie gave up her school work and the children at home, John, Oliver and Nannie, were always ready for her call.

Children, your mother was a great character. May you emulate her good traits and keep prepared for the family reunion over yonder.

Eden church and pastor loses a loyal and faithful member. She was a friend to her pastor. That means much to one who has the good of his people at heart.

The unusually large company of people attending funeral and the many expressions of regret together with the large floral offering showed in a measure the high esteem in which she was held.

We deeply sympathize with these children in their loss, but feel sure that the grace which sustained the mother in her trying hours, and which they have all accepted, will carry them through if full dependence is placed in Him who hath said, "My grace is sufficient for thee."

We laid her body to rest beside that of her husband in Eden cemetery, there to await the resurrection call. N. G. Bethea.

Mary Sue Dunn.

Our hearts go out in deep sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Dunn in the loss of their sixteen months old child, Mary Sue. It was not whooping-cough alone, but a complication. For some time the little life seemed to hang in the balance. At times she seemed better, at other times we felt we did not know, but we prayed and hoped. Finally and suddenly there was a turn for the worse and in a few short hours the little spirit went back to God who gave it.

The unusually large number attending the funeral service evidenced the sympathy of a large circle of relatives, friends, and neighbors. This was also expressed by a large number of floral designs. When the little form had been laid to rest to await the resurrection morn, the mound which marks the place was covered and hidden by the flowers.

The funeral was conducted by the writer assisted by the pastor of the M. E. Church, South, a friend of the family.

I would commend these sorrowing ones to Him with whom this little one now dwells, to Him who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." He loves children; He loves the parents of children. T. M. Johnson.

SARAH JANE, ASSISTANT M. D.

Sarah Jane lived with Dr. Knipe, and in some of his cases even the kind and wise physician would not have known how to get along without her assistance. She never looked at people's tongues, nor felt their pulse, like the doctor did, but she was often worth more than medicine to some of his patients. Indeed, Sarah Jane might have been regarded as medicine, since it is something that helps cure people when they are sick; for sometimes medicine is fresh air, or sunshine, or exercise, or even a good laugh.

Sarah Jane was a little black-and-tan terrier, so small that in very cold weather the doctor carried her in the pocket of his great fur coat. Often, when the doctor and the fathers and mothers of the sick boys and girls, were unable to get them to do what was needful for their recovery, he would say, "Oh, I understand this case; all he needs is a dose of Sarah Jane," and she would always come to their assistance.

There was Helen Bath, who would not take the milk the doctor had ordered; so the next morning, when he came, he brought Sarah Jane with him.

"Sarah Jane, you show Helen how a little lady takes her milk when the doctor orders it." And Sarah Jane sat up on a chair beside the doctor, and looked very obedient as he fastened his handkerchief about her neck. Then the doctor took from his medicine case a little glass and a tube, poured some milk into the glass, and, as he held it, Sarah Jane slowly drank it through the tube.

Helen laughed, and thought she might drink some, too, if she had a small glass and a tube like Sarah Jane used.

Helen really got to like milk, and she would ask for it every hour, but she could not drink it without the little glass tube.

Harry Wagner had the measles, and did not want to take his medicine; so the doctor had to call in his assistant.

Sarah Jane, you show Harry how to take it, will you?" and she jumped up on a chair, opened her mouth, and the doctor gave her some out of a special bottle. Harry laughed and opened his mouth, and thought it great fun to take it every time the clock struck the hour.

Charlie Lewis had broken his leg by a fall, and when it was taken out of the cast, he was afraid to try to put his foot to the floor, for it hurt him every time he attempted to do so.

"Well! Never mind today, Charlie! I'll bring my assistant with me tomorrow, and she will show you how to do it."

The next morning the doctor and his assistant came to see Charlie.

"Charlie, this is my assistant," said the doctor. "Speak to Charlie, Sarah Jane." Sarah Jane stood on her hind feet and said, "Bow! wow! wow! wow!" which, the doctor said, meant "How do you do?"

"Now, Sarah Jane, show Charlie how you walk when you are lame." And she started off on her two hind feet, limping a bit as she went.

"You try it, Charlie, and see if you can do as well," kindly urged the doctor. Charlie tried, and, though it hurt him some, he persevered, and was soon able to run about as well as ever.

All the boys and girls wanted the doctor to give them Sarah Jane, but he always said: "Come, Sarah Jane, we must go to someone else who needs us."—Christian Advocate.

Bro. Charley Finch, superintendent of our Thomasville Sunday school, and a hundred or more after having a picnic supper on our college campus Thursday evening, came on to the Home and served all of us well with ice cream, the kind Bro. J. W. Boyles manufactures. He understands his business and always pleases his customers.

Sunday afternoon Bros. W. H. Scarboro and Dan McLaurin accompanied by their families and a number of friends from Concord paid us a pleasait visit.

Our visitors expressed themselves as being pleased with the investment they have made here. When Concord has not led she has been with the highest in point of amount contributed.

Have you noticed the amounts contributed for the last few weeks? They have not been enough for the support of the old number of children and now since the boys' building has been completed our number has been increasing and we are looking for six more this week.

Please don't hold your offerings, but let them come right on.

We are most grateful to Dr. Coe and Dr. Austin for removing the tonsils and adenoids from eight of our children last week. Two of the little girls entering the Home Monday were among the number and we believe great improvement will be made in their physical condition. H. A. Garrett.

IN THE INTEREST OF DEAF PEOPLE.

To Pastors.

The Bureau for the Deaf was recently created in the Department of Labor and Printing for the purpose of establishing a clearing house for deaf people, and placing them in touch with work throughout the State.

As Chief of this Bureau, I am endeavoring to promote the welfare of the deaf at large, and am very anxious to have your assistance in solving the problem of placing them in sustaining positions. May I use you as the best means of educating the public in regard to the deaf and their capabilities?

You have employers of various classes under your charge. Will you kindly get them interested in and willing to employ the deaf? Many of the employers know nothing about the deaf, and, therefore, are afraid they cannot use them to advantage. You know deaf people are handicapped in some ways, but they can do many things as well as their more fortunate workers. It is a deplorable practice on the part of some employers who hire deaf persons, on finding them inefficient, to discharge them on the assumption that they represent the deaf as a class. It is manifestly unfair to appraise the qualifications of the deaf as a whole by the shortcomings of a few. This practice entails unnecessary hardships on the deaf.

Please impress upon your members the fact that one unsatisfactory deaf person does not represent the deaf people as a whole. Furthermore that the deaf dislike to be given employment for charity's sake. All they ask is a fair show. Ask employers to exercise patience in handling the deaf on giving them work. considering the handicaps this class of employees have to overcome. As a rule the deaf are quick to take hold of new work and with a little time and effort can master the tasks assigned them and soon give good service.

You can be of great help to this bureau. By arousing in your membership and congregation a sympathetic interest in and an understanding of the deaf, you will help put me in better position to make employers more willing to listen when I call on them in the inter est of the deaf workers. I feel certain that you will be glad to co-operate with me.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Very truly yours, J. M. Robertson,
Chief of the Bureau for the Deaf.

ELON COLLEGE.

The death of Col. R. L. Holt has been a serious loss to Elon College. Col. Holt had proved himself a loyal and devoted friend. It was Col. Holt who began the movement to have the county erect the fine new administration building on the Elon Colege Campus which bears the name of the county, whose devoted citizenship has given it.

Col. Holt began the movement by a gift of five thousand dollars. It was the second time in the past four years that Col. Holt had done that, and it was a fine example to translate his sympathy into such concrete terms. He felt for the college on the morning of January 18 as its administration building lay a smouldering mass of ruins, and so much of the equipment of the college had been destroyed; he felt for the college a deep sympathy, and he translated that sympathy into five thousand and concrete terms of sympathy. The people of Alamance county responded nobly to this example, and it is by their loyalty that the Alamance Hall will occupy the center of the quadrange at a cost of $100,000. Elon appreciates this building, not so much because of its actual cash cost or the fine addition which it will make to the plant of the college, but Elon appreciates this building more because it comes to the college from the hearts of its neighbors. It stands as a token of their love and loyalty. There is no greater test of greatness for an individual or an institution than the esteem in which his or its neighbors hold it, and this fine edifice is the proof of the respect and love which the people of the county of Alamance feel for the college in the midst of them. The building is the gift of men and women who have grown up along with the college, of men and women who know its failures and its achievements, and in whose hearts the college has found a place for itself. These are the things which make Alamance hall mean so much to Elon College, and these, after all, are the assets which count for most in the final reckoning.

The Alamance Hall will house the class rooms, the administrative offices, the literary society hall, and the modernly arranged and well equipped domestic science department at whose head will be one of the daughters of Alamance county. Miss Deloris Morrow, of Burlington, will head the work of this department, and she is well qualified for giving training to young women in the fine art of homemaking. She thoroughly understands home economics, and is giving her summer to a further study of her subject at Columbia University. She will be at Elon in the fall to begin her work. Elon is her Alma Mater, and she will bring to her work, not only efficiency, but love for the college which she serves. Miss Morrow is admirably fitted for her work, and Elon is fortunate in finding among the people of Alamance county a young woman for the position.

Besides the Alamance Hall the building program includes six other buildings, four of which are to be erected along with the administration building. The four buildings will form a quadrangle at the center of which will stand Alamance Hall.

On the southern corners of the quadrangle will be placed the science hall and the Whitley Memorial building. The science hall will be devoted to the departments of science, and will house the branches of chemistry, physics, geology, and biology. It has been planned after a careful study of the best science buildings all over the country, and the professors of the different sciences at Elon have aided in arranging the floor plans of the building after a careful study of their subject and its needs. All these needs will be met in the new science building and it will give Elon one of the best arranged buidings of the kind in the South. Science is being stressed at the present time in the college curriculum, and the new building will give Elon a leading place in the work certainly in North Carolina.

The Whitley Memorial building is the gift of J. M. Darden of Suffolk, Va., and will be the auditorium building of the college. It will have a seating capacity of one thousand, and will also house the excellent music department of the college on which much stress is laid.. The Whitley Memorial building will cost $50,000, as will each of the corner buildings forming the quadrangle. The Whitley Memorial building will be one of the most beautiful auditorium buildings standing on any college campus in the South, and it will be equipped to care for the needs of Elon College for a number of years to come.

On the northern corners of the quadrangle will be erected the Carlton building, which will be the library, and the Religious Activities building. These two buildings will add greaty to the efficiency of the work of the College and to the beauty of the plant.

The Carlton building will house the library of the college, and will have a capacity of one hundred thousand volumes. It will also be equipped with the most modern library facilities, and with reading rooms adequate to care for the needs of the college. The Carlton building is the gift of P. J. Carlton of Richmond, Va. Mr. Carlton is secretary-treasurer of the Imperial Tobacco Company, and has previous to the fire given largely to the college. On January 1 he gave $25,000 for the erection of the Carlton building. Mr. Carlton has given more to the college than possibly any other living man. He, like Col. Holt, could transate his sympathy into tangibe terms.

The Religious Activities building will be a unique building. There is not a similar building now standing on the campus of any college in America. The building plans originated with the religious education department of Elon College, and were drawn under the supervision of that department. The plans for the proposed building have been submitted to the leading authorities on religious education all over the United States, and have met with the approval of experts everywhere. This will put Elon in the lead in the field of religious education.

The other two buildings included in the program are dormitories, and will be erected as the student body increases and demands them. Besides this gigantic building program Elon proposes to add to its endowment the sum of three hundred thousand dollars. When the Board of Trustees met and outlined this tremendous program on January 24, many openly doubted the possibility of achieving it. Yet within six months after its birth the plan is far toward completion.

Credit for this phenomenal success is due largely to the untiring efforts of President W. A. Harper, who stands at the head of this small, but valiant institution. He has given himself unreservedly to the accomplishment of the program outlined, and he is succeeding admirably with his task. With such loyal supporters as the people of Alamance county, and others throughout the length and breadth of this country who love the cause of Christian education, he can not not but achieve a great success.

Elon College was founded 33 years ago, and has been steadily growing by continued sacrifice of the people who stand behind it. While it is the college of the Christian Church, and is largely supported by that brotherhood, it is a religious democracy. Not once in all the 33 years of its history has it discriminated along denominational lines. During the past year there were seven denominations represented in the faculty of the college ,and ten were represented in the student body, and yet all these worked together harmoniously in the religious activities organization of the college. No one was made to feel that he or she was not a definite part of the religious life of the college. It is a proud boast of the college that it has taken young people from other denominations, trained them for Christian service, and returned them to their own fitted for Christian leadership of whatever faith.

Elon College is living in the resplendent dawn of a larger day of service. It is coming into its own, and great as it may have been during the past 33 years, and large though its service has been, it is destined in the years to come to wield a far larger influence, and to render a far larger service to the church which it serves, to the county in whose borders it stands, and which has shown its loyalty in so fine a way, to the state and to the nation.

The pain in the hearts of the students and faculty of the college as they viewed the catastrophe has given place to songs of gladness. Where there were tears there are now smiles, and the whole of the men and women who suffered with Elon feel that there is a greater day awaiting the college which they love. Out of her ashes she has arisen, and she will continue to arise. Sion M. Lynam.

The apportionment of the budget to the various annual conferences remains the same as last year.

On motion the January, 1924, meeting of the Executive Committee will be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., the time to be determined by the chairman.

It was his first great speech, and he wanted to make it tell—something to label him for once and all as the greatest orator since ever.

His oration was long and passionate, and he wished to end it with a warning. He could have couched his warning in the old proverb about locking the stable door after the horse was stolen, but that was too commonplace. He wanted something original.

He quickly thought of something better. Then he shouted—

"Don't, fellow-countrymen and citizens, I beg you—don't wait till the house takes fire before you summon the firemen."—The Congregationalist.

Vance.—On the first Sunday in July we began our revival at New Hope. Rev. J. H. Bowman was pulpit help. There were four conversions and four accessions.

The second Sunday we began at Harris Chapel and were assisted by Rev. C. L. Spencer. Here we had fourteen conversions and ten accessions.

On the third Sunday we began at Flat Rock with Rev. J. E. Pritchard pulpit help. The meeting resulted in fourteen conversions and eight accessions.

The helper at each place was at his best, and presented the word with earnestness and power. The attendance throughout was exceedingly gratifying, and the interest good. We have never held three revivals equal in interest and sweet spiritedness to the three just held.

At this writing Brother J. W. Dowling of New Hope is seriously ill in the hospital at Henderson.

At the recent quarterly conference it was found that Brother A. E. White is delegate elect to the ensuing annual conference.

REV. W. E. SWAIN PASSES ON.

One of the pathetic sights that this life presents to view is that of a strong man within the grasp of a disease that is slowly but surely sapping his strength and robbing him of life. For some time the close friends of Dr. W. E. Swain have realized that he was marked for death. He had two strokes of paralysis from which he never recovered, though he still had left strength enough to move about among his friends. But though he could move about, he was far from his former self. We saw him in Greensboro a few weeks ago and could not avoid noticing how changed he was. He talked but little, although formerly he was ever a ready and interesting conversationalist. Disease had touched his brain. From Greensboro he went to Raleigh to visit his younger son, and while there he received the third stroke which in a few days terminated his life. He was taken in an automobile to the home of his daughter in Wilson where on Saturday of last week he breathed his last. He was buried last Sunday in La-Grange, N. C., the funeral being conducted by Dr. C. L. Whitaker.

Brother Swain was born July 26, 1856, and was a little more than 67 years old at his death. He attended school at Yadkin College in his young manhood and entered the ministry in 1884. He served a number of our leading charges and was five years president of the Annual Conference. He it was that suggested the beginning of our orphanage work at Denton, and he continued to the end of his life to interest himself in the Children's Home. In our Conference sessions he was interested in the work of the Conference and often took part in discussion. He will be missed among us, but he will not soon be forgotten. He leaves besides Mrs. Swain one daughter and two sons, all of whom are married.

—Rev. E. G. Cowan has been ill of typhoid fever for three weeks. A note from Mrs. Cowan says he is better now and she has hope of his recovery.

VACATION NOTES.

Our vacation was spent at Wrightsville Beach again this year in the pleasant cottage of our brother C. E. McCulloch. This beach is nine miles from Wilmington through which city the trip from Greensboro is made.

There are several routes from Greensboro to Wilmongton and going we chose the route by Raleigh, intending to pass through Goldsboro. In passing through Burlington we were sorry to see the ruins of Brother Thompson's foundry which fire had recently destroyed. We took our dinner on the grounds of the capitol building in Raleigh. We looked into two or three of the state offices, and in the treasurer's office saw Mrs. Hattie (Harris) Perkins in her place of labor. She has a good position.

Raleigh garage men advised us to go by Lillington rather than Goldsboro and we followed their advice, though we added miles to our journey. We passed through Fayetteville, Elizabethtown, and Whiteville. Between the last two named towns we had the only bad road we found, and this would have been good if dry; but a recent rain made it so slippery that we had to move very slowly to keep in the road, and sometimes the slipperiness threatened to reduce our speed to zero. But [illegible] ton about seven o'clock P. M. We [illegible] boro at eight A. M.

Our few days on the beach passed quickly. Brother's children, having spent two summers on the beach, take to water like young ducks and are expert swimmers, while their parents seem to enjoy ocean bathing fully as well. The writer tock only one plunge in the whole four days. We found that we could still swim, but we preferred to walk on the land rather than swim in the ocean. We heard much complaint this year of stinging jelly fish, a creature that looks like the white of an egg but is able to sting like a bumble bee. The sand crabs and sand fiddlers noted last year were still in evidence. We saw three sharks that had been brought in by a fishing boat, two of them of the man-eating variety. One of them was six or seven feet long. He had a very broad mouth lined with a row of very sharp teeth. We heard of a monstrous fish caught off the coast of Florida some time ago, a fish that weighed 30,000 pounds.. It had to be harpooned several times before it could be taken. It drew a ship far out into the ocean—a hundred miles or more—while it was being captured. It was the largest fish ever caught, and it was not a whale.

Saturday morning we bade brother and family good by and started home about eight o'clock. We returned by way of Lumberton, Raeford, Aberdeen, Asheboro and Liberty. We reached Greensboro about seven o'clock. We had not a particle of car trouble. Our son took us in his new Studebaker. We were accompanied by a niece, Irene McCulloch, of Tabernacle. We found things at home about as we left them, and took up our tasks with new strength although our vacation was brief.

We are glad to greet our readers again this week and wish all of them who need it at least a week of rest from their ordinary labors. Vacations are good indeed, provided they are not too long protracted.

—President Harding died suddenly on August 2. He had been ill with pneumonia, but was better and his wife sat by his bed reading to him. His last words were: "That is good: read on." A stroke of apoplexy came and with a slilght tremor of the body, our president resigned his great office and passed on to another realm. This was about seven o'clock in the evening. The same night Vice President Coolidge took the oath of office and became President of the United States. He promptly announced that he would continue the policies of President Harding. Harding was a man who made friends outside his party as well as inside. It is to be hoped that the new President will measure up to the demands of his trying position.

The thirtieth annual report of the Woman's Board of Home Missions makes a pamphlet of [illegible] in it. Mrs. [illegible] president; Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, is recording secretary and Mrs. J. M. Millikan, of Greensboro, is secretary of Thank-offering and Blessing Boxes. The last meeting was held in May of this year at Alvin Drew Industrial School, Pine Ridge, Ky. The treasurer's report shows that the receipts of the year were $16,539.33.

—Dr. J. C. B[illegible]omfield is preaching in Asheboro in a ten-day series. Cottage prayer meetings are being held.

—Rev. C. A. Isner, former pastor of our church in Asheville, later pastor in Columbus, Ohio, has had to undergo an operation and little hope is entertained for his recovery. He is a good man and his going will leave a decided vacancy.

—Rev. B. F. McLendon numbered over nine hundred converts in his meetings here. The series of six weeks ended last Sunday night. A wind and rain storm came near the beginning of the last meeting and threatened for a time to produce a panic. To add to the horror the lights went out, leaving the vast congregation in total darkness. But the great choir continued to sing through the darkness and most of the congregation kept their seats. After the storm had abated Mr. McLendon preached one of the most impressive sermons of the entire series. Quite a number went forward to the altar in this last meeting.

A NEW DAY.

"I will start anew this morning with a higher,
fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's
call is clear;
I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear.

"I will sometimes look about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude
the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths
that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

"I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll try to prove my own;
I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach your duty and be more concerned with mine."

THE IDEALS OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

A church is made what it is by its ideals. To appreciate what any particular church is like it is much more important to know what motives animate its people, than to know its denominational name, its doctrinal standards, or its types of organization and service.

Two churches which are identical in these particulars may be as different as night and day in their real inwardness and life. The ex- spiritual power, while another has no effective impact upon the life and spirit of the community in which it is situated. The difference is to be found in the ideals, the motives, and standards of the churches themselves. The most useless thing in the ecclesiastical world is a church which has organization, equipment, and everything else which is needed, except ideals.

Four motives should control a church that claims the name of Jesus Christ. First, The church should insist upon the value of every soul, and the necessity of winning every man, and the last man in its community for the church and kingdom of Jesus Christ. Accidents of birth, or social and financial position, mean nothing as compared to the value of the souls of men. A real church of Jesus Christ will not be content to eliminate any one from the possibilities of membership in the church and discipleship with our Lord. To be satisfied when we have just won "our set" is to forget the spirit of the Master. The church that voluntarily limits its own evangel, has assumed an attitude which cannot be supported by anything in the gospel, or the spirit of Jesus Christ. To win the last man is the motive of evangelism.

Second, The church should insist upon the importance of the welfare of the whole man. The church affirms that God meant life to be a good thing for everybody. A saved soul should dwell within a saved body in a saved community. There can be no divorce between evangelism and service. To minister to obvious need is the only natural expression of the gospel, and is a necessary prerequisite to building men up in the Christian life. This is the motive of service. A true church of Jesus Christ follows the example of "the man of Galilee" "Who went about doing good."

Third, There must be an abiding faith in the importance and efficacy of Christian ideals in controlling human life. True religion takes root in knowledge, not in ignorance nor superstition. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." This is the motive of Christian education.

The three ideals and motives named group themselves around the local church, and the well organized community. The fourth ideal of the church is expressed in the command of Jesus just before "the cloud received Him out of their sight." "Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

These are the ideals and motives that make a church more than a piece of machinery. If the Methodist Protestant Church is not more than a piece of machinery, it is not a church. If it is a church, it must function perfectly in every department, evangelism, service, education, missions both at home and abroad, and in fellowship with all the forces of the Kingdom in every community, and in all the world.

THE CHILDLESS.

From the calm, almost stern face, you would have mentally measured him as a man devoid of emotion. In the lines about his mouth, in the squareness of his jaw, in the way his eyelids narrowed at times [illegible] temples, and a promise of additional avoirdupois about his waist in the near future; but somehow, I knew he would grow old with dignity. And when the time came for the last card to be played in the Great Game, he would accept either defeat or success as calmly as he turned homeward now.

A woman awaited his homecoming; a gentle, sweet-faced fatalist, with a constant longing in her eyes that hurt him even to see. For many years they had gone the way together, the twain no more. At first, life had swung them further apart, through a mutual disappointment, and now, closer together by the same compelling force. I doubt whether adversity's uses are really sweet enough to balance the pain, but there is no avoiding them, and through her sorrow he had taught himself to hide, if he could not bury, his own.

At the corner there came upon him, breathless, bubbling with health, a tiny ragamuffin, soiled face, hands, and arms outstretched, head back, eyes almost closed, the child blew into the grave man's arms, like a wind-driven bird, athrob with life. The grave, immaculate man hesitated, stooped, picked up the tiny stranger from another strata of life, and suddenly kissed the sticky lips and cheeks and hair, hungrily—hungrily!

The baby, awake to his mistake, kicked himself out of the arms that held him so awkwardly—and was gone. The grave man, his chin a bit lower, turned homeward.

Sometimes it seems as if Fate were blindfolded rather than consciously cruel. I wonder—I wonder.—Selected.

WINSOME CHRISTIANITY.

An old book bears this title. It is the kind of Christianity the world needs. Carlyle described such an one when he said, "She was the rainbow to many a poor dripping day." The faces of such persons are always lighted with cheerfulness. Their coming is always welcome. A humble tombstone in an eastern cemetery bears an inscription of four words. "She Was Always Pleasant." Visitors linger longer at that grave than by the lofty monuments that surround it. A poor woman came to Henry Drummond and asked him to come and pray with her dying husband. "My husband is deein, sir. He is no able to speak 'you, and is no able to hear you; but I would like to hae a breath o' you about him before he dees." When Stopford Brooks was writing the biography of Frederick W. Robertson he went down to Brighton to gather information. He found an old bookseller who had known him well. "Do you remember anything interesting about him?" he asked. The old man took him into a little room back of his store and pointed to a portrait of Robertson on the wall, and said, "Whenever I am tempted to do anything mean, I run in here and look at that picture, and the pure face recalls me to my better self."

An immensely popular girl, when asked why everyone loved her, modestly replied, "If such is the case, it must be the result of a few simple rules that I try to follow." It might help us to know them:

(1) "I will give more to others than I spend on myself.

(2) "I will do all I can for those at home

(3) "I will make some neglected girl happy and introduce her to some pleasant gentleman at every party.

(4) "I will draw other people out without trying to shine myself.

(5) "I will always act in such a way that I would not be ashamed to pray at that moment."

The Apostle has put it thus: "Be ye all likeminded, loving like brethren, tender hearted, humbleminded, not rendering evil for evil and reviling for reviling, but contrarywise, blessing." "Be tenderly affectionate one to another, in honor preferring one another."

It is not enough to do a bare deed of kindness, or speak certain articulate words. Words and deeds must be lighted up with winning smiles. There is as much in the manner of giving as in that which is given. Even conventional politeness is better than rudeness. It is like an aircushion—nothing in it but air, but it eases the jolts wonderfully. But it is possible to be more than conventionally polite. If the heart is right toward our fellow men, our conduct will be right. A loving heart, a watchful eye and a ready hand make a winsome personality.

Life is marred by little infelicities and made beautiful by little kindnesses. War, pestilence and famine combined have not caused so much suffering as the sharp tongue and the nagging disposition. Intellectual brilliancy counts for nothing in comparison with gentleness. The most winsome Christian the world has ever seen was described thus: "The bruised reed He will not break nor quench the smoking flax."—United Presbyterian.

QUIET TALKS ON THE SIMPLE ESSENTIALS.

No. 5—The God-Man.

The blacksmith was right. Ignorant, blasphemous, he railed on the man trying to sell him a Bible. The man deftly left a copy behind as he slipped out. The blacksmith began reading. Caught, surprised, startled, he sprang up crying, "There's a man in the book."

Yes, there is a Man in the Book. That's the outstanding thing. Look at him. Born in obscure poverty, cradled among cattle, his home in an unsavory village, among people intensely clannish, he had no touch with schools, never traveled far, had no book, except one, and wrote none, left no organization and died a death of peculiar shame. Yet within three days after, he was seen alive, and within three centuries he changed the calendar of imperial Rome.

It is fascinating in these older leaves to get fleeting glimpses of an Unusual Man. He talks with childless Abraham under the blue, and used the twinkling stars to number Abraham's unborn heirs. He wrestled one dark night with crafty Jacob, and gives the strange soft touch which bends that rugged chieftain's will. He meets intrepid Joshua at Canaan's gateway, calmly gives orders, and is obeyed.

He talks with cautious Gideon and the nation's long captivity becomes overwhelming victory. Strong Sampson's father is overawed to find the Man talking with him strangely no more man. The Jewish statesman [illegible]tering the world's empire of the Euphrates is dazed by a Man of Fire in a blinding blaze of light.

At first it is simply a man, in outer appearance, in tone of voice, in garb, in the interest shown. Then, quietly, unmistakably, comes indescribable overpowering evidence that he is not simply a man.

And there is something more that runs along with these fleeting glimpses. There is an Unusual Man coming. These glimpses merely illustrate the meaning of that. That same childless exile of Ur is told that through his unborn son will come a man who will bless the race.

Sightless old Israel, on the Nile, sees a Man coming to lead the race. The foremost racial lawyer speaks of a Man coming to do for all what he does for the Hebrews. The royal poet sings sweetly of a Man coming to rule, and do it right, and be as a benediction to the earth fragrant of the dew of the new morning.

Then— then, The Man is here. He is born in a way unknown before, and unrepeated since. He grows up in the simple Nazareth home. Thirty out of thirty-three years, ten-elevenths of his life, is spent in a whitewashed stone cottage and a carpenter shop.

Nazareth means a commonplace life, in its outer circumstance, lived truly for God. Look a moment; rising in the morning, the kindling, milking the cow likely, hanging the kettle over the fire maybe, down the street with a cheery "Good morning" to his fellow-craftsmen.

Then the carpenter shop, amid the odor of the pine shavings, hammering nails, gouging with a chisel, pushing a saw, polishing off the leg of a table for a crusty customer. Back at night, stretching weary muscles, the evening meal, talking over with the mother of the home the small, big, home problems, rent-day maybe, making both ends meet.

And then off sharing sleeping space on a pallet in a corner with a brother. And that not for a year, thirty of them. The Father's plan for the God-Man's life down here meant just that, living, simply, living a truly human life, commonplace in its outer round.

Then there was the smaller part, measured in years. Feeding men's hunger, healing the maimed and lamed and diseased, robbing the grave of its victims, comforting sore hearts, talking over personal problems in the doorway, teaching by the roadside.

Is it any wonder the Galilean hills rang with praise of this Man, faces brightened at the mention of him, homes echoed glad songs, little children came a-running, strong men and women came and listened and went with a peace within.

Then the opposition. Of course. The enmities aroused, the selfish ambitions blocked, old prejudices rudely jolted, cherished plans threatened. And then the climax. Ten times the leaders tried to do him to death, and are held off with an unseen power they can't understand and can't resist. Then he allowed them to take him, and do their worst.

And he did it, he said, for us. There was some terrible need that it be done, that dying. So he died. And when the tomb had quite done its work, he quietly let himself up, up toward his true center of gravity. No tombs for him when that one had done its work. [illegible] man as though only human and nothing more: as really God as though only God and nothing else. Jesus was the Face of God looking into men's faces. He was the Voice of God talking into men's ears. He was God himself in human shoes, hand-pegged, and in human clothes, home-spun, hand-stitched.

DOUBLE OUR CAPACITY IN FOUR YEARS.

Pride and prestige are both fine things if used in the right way. We would indeed be proud of ourselves as a conference if we had every dollar of every claim paid in full when we go to Thomasville for our Annual Conference in November and this can be done if we will only try, and try, and try, and keep on trying.

Priding ourselves on paying every dollar on every claim is a fine thing, but we can do more than that. We can clean up the old [illegible] eral clean-up day at church. In many places we need new church houses, and they should be large community centers. But one thing we should have at all of our rural churches and that is a sign painted reading—

ST. JOHN'S M. P. CHURCH,
WHITE HILL, N. C.,
REV. JOHN DOE, PASTOR,
WELCOME.

Put this in a conspicuous place in the church yard, so every one passing will know who we are and what we are doing. This will give us more prestige.

We are greatly in need of well trained young men for the ministry, as our ranks are rapidly being depleted by superannuates. Would we not be proud of ourselves if every station and charge in North Carolina would furnish us with one well-trained high school graduate to enter the ministry in the November conference? Indeed we would shout for joy. But suppose we had enough money to send them through college in four years, we would have a fine conference composed of well-trained leaders. Would this not add dignity and prestige to our church?

Folks, the way to double our capacity in North Carolina as a church, is to work, pay and pray. Let's do all three, and then the North Carolina Conference will have the honor and distinction of putting on a program to be followed by all other annual conferences.

BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS

Rev. C. H. Beck, Sec.

MORMONISM.

Many of our home missionary workers depend upon these letters from the secretary of the board to keep them informed upon the developments in the various lines of work and opportunity. At intervals we have discussed the various special types of work being carried forward in our land. The Methodist Protestant Church is not doing special work among the Mormon people, but does come into contact with them in a number of states. The following facts gleaned from the Annual Report of the Home Missions Council, will be helpful to such persons as desire to be informed upon this subject. Many of these statements are supported by special investigations of the secretary, and all are properly supported as being reliable.

Mormonism has been active throughout the country this past year as in previous years with its missionaries going two and two into many communities. Inquiries for literature show that this propaganda is being pushed most aggressively in Maine, Florida, Alabama, England, and even in India. Our information would seem to show, however, that the results being secured are disappointing to these missionaries, and to those who send them forth. It would seem as if the worst period of Mormon aggressive teaching is over. However this foe of the evangelical churches, and of every form of organized religion, is never asleep, and new methods of approach may be expected from the leaders of this movement.

Practically all literature on the Mormon question falls into two classes. The first class, which is the most common, and the most easily prepared, is of the alarmist type. It is addressed to people who are not Mormons and who need to know what Mormonism is. This literature does not convert Mormons, nor does it influence those who have come under Mormon propaganda. It frequently angers Mormons and makes them more positive in their views. It serves the useful purpose however of arousing the church to the menace of Mormonism, and in enlisting allies in resisting its approaches and dangers.

The second class of literature is irenic and persuasive in its character. It undertakes to reason with Mormons, and those who are under the influence of Mormonism. There are but few pieces of approved literature in this group. A pamphlet by Bishop Spalding, of the Episcopal Church, entitled "Joseph Smith, Jr., as a Translator," showing the claims of Joseph Smith to have correctly translated the Egyptian hieroglyphics found on two mummies are altogether unwarranted. The book by Rev. William E. Lawe, "The Foundations of Mormonism," is a fair review of the claims of the leaders of the Mormon church. A pamphlet entitled "Ten Reasons Why Christians Cannot Fellowship the Mormon Church. Answers Given by Brigham H. Roberts," is an effective piece of literature, and has attracted the attention of many Mormons. Steps are being taken for the preparation of a smaller leaflet, more popular in character, but in a similar way setting forth the objections to Mormonism. This is intended for people of moderate education who are assailed by the Propaganda of Mormonism. Other phases of the subject will be discussed in later articles.

The superintendent and Mrs. Garrett motored to Wilmington and Wrightsville and were delightully entertained by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McCulloch in their home on the beach.

The death of Rev. W. E. Swain, D.D., brings sadness into our heart. He was once our pastor. It was he who was responsible for our coming to our Children's Home and we feel that we have lost a personal friend by his death. We attended the funeral and burial in La Grange Sunday, 12th. Rev. C. L. Whitaker, D.D., who has been a close personal friend for many years conducted the funeral and paid a beautiful tribute to him which is Friendship, Stanly Circuit.—Our revival meeting has just closed here, with promising hopes for the future. The meeting was a great success, with forty-some conversions and reclamations, and 25 accessions to the church. Rev. Mr. Trogdon did the preaching. All seemed to enjoy his preaching and want him to come again. The sermons delivered were not only excellent, but Mr. Edmund Ridge furnished some splendid music which was enjoyed very much.

It is encouraging to any pastor when he sees the great interest people manifest in church work. I think we should be more loyal and put more energy in our church work than ever before. Strong salvation will make the church grow in grace. And let us remember the seed that is sown in the springtime of life determines the character of the harvest that must be reaped in the autumn.

Best wishes. Vina Harwood.

Sandy Ridge.—We have had so much sickness in the family I have not had time to write. Guess you all know by this time what a good meeting we had. We had several conversions and some reclaimed. I can't tell you all how much good preaching we did have, something that was far above any of the great evangelists I have heard this year.

We had our Children's Day service last Sunday. It was well attended and greatly enjoyed. We had a good program in the morning, with our pastor's splendid address just before dinner, and then we adjourned for dinner. The good men wanted to help out Children's Day, so they made a nice long table for us and we all served our dinner in picnic style and we all had a nice time. The children from the Children's Home took charge of the afternoon services. They certainly did fine. We want to thank them very much and invite them to come again. Mrs. Holt joins me in thanking the people, and especially the parents, for co-operating with us toward making our Children's Day a success. We certainly appreciate their sending their children regularly to practice. That meant a whole lot more than anything else.

We will have prayer meeting at our church next Sunday night: every member of that church is requested by the class leader to be there. We hope to have someone there to make a talk for us.

We have had so much good happening to make us feel like saying amen till I forgot the baptizing Saturday evening; there were six immersed and four sprinkled.

The Baptist meeting is still going on. Let us not be selfish; let us fall in line and help them in any way that we can, for some of them were some of the best workers that we had in our revival and we certainly did appreciate their work. May God continually bless us, we pray. Assistant Reporter.

Does China need evangelization? Ah, yes! But does not America need it eighteen times more, measured by the relative yearly per capita consumption of opium derivatives in the two countries?—36 grains in America to only two in China! India, 27; France, 4; Great Britain, 3; Germany and China each 2; Italy, 1; America, 36!

The individual who is popular with himself is usually unpopular with other folks.

Moore.—Frank G. Moore departed this life Thursday, July 19, 1923, aged 74 years. He leaves a wife and six children, four boys and two girls. One child and his first wife preceded him to the spiritland some years ago.

He joined the M. E. Church when a young man and moved his membership to Matthews Chapel some twenty-five or thirty years ago, where he remained until death.

For more than four years he had been paralyzed and confined to his room and had suffered much; several days before his death he could not eat.

His last marriage was just a few months before he was paralyzed.

The funeral was conducted by the writer and his body was laid to rest in the family burying ground to await the resurrection. We extend our deepest sympathy to the wife and members of the family and pray God's abounding grace may lead them in these dark hours. James H. Trolinger.

Wright.—Margaret Elizabeth, the three-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister John Wright, departed this life July 18, 1923. The funeral service was conducted by the writer in the presence of an unusually large number of relatives, friends and neighbors, after which her little body was laid to rest in the nearby family burying ground to await the coming of the Lord.

May the sorrowing father and mother be comforted with the thoughts of some day going to be with their darling, where there will be no more sickness, pain, nor death.

Thompson.—John Alexander, aged nearly two years, son of Rev. and Mrs.. H. S. B. Thompson, of Worthville, died July 18, 1923, and was buried at Cedar Cliff near their old home the following day. Funeral services were very impressively conducted by Rev. A. O. Lindley, assisted by Rev. G. W. Holmes, after which his body was tenderly laid to rest beside his little sister, Bessie Lou, in the presence of quite a number of relatives and friends, who completely covered both graves with the most beautiful flowers. A beautiful tribute to their memory and a symbol of the loving sympathy for the parents, for we too have loved and given our dear ones back to God. We can not witness a dear little child's funeral without feeling anew our own sorrow and extending our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved, as only those who have gone through a similar experience can. John A. was a beautiful, sweet little flower, budded on earth to brighten the lives of the family for a short while, then transplanted by the Good Gardener to a fairer, more fertile garden above, there to bloom in eternal beauty, shedding his fragrance in such immortal glory that it reaches back to earth with such magnetic power that father and mother, brothers and sisters are drawn with the tender loving power of the Father to that beautiful, eternal garden above where bloom so many fair flowers; for we know a little child doth lead us. In our imagination we love to picture the meeting as the angels bore John A. through the pearly gate up very near the throne where "their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven," and there, we imagine, after receiving the welcome blessing of the Father and Son, that Bessie Lou gave him such a joyful welcome, so glad to have brother come and share with her God's bountiful love and blessings. Then to be received in the arms of many other relatives who rejoice to meet him. Yes, we believe as we sorrow on earth, there is rejoicing in heaven over the coming of our dear children, and as our spiritual eyes are opened, we too will rejoice, for nothing can harm them now, nothing mar or molest. We cannot lose those whom God keeps for us. John A.'s work was not here. Dear parents, rejoice that God wanted another one of your children for a special work that required heavenly training to fill. Dear Lord, Thou knowest best. We humbly blend our will with thine. We can not understand it now, so we just praise God for His loving foresight and pray for His guidance till our spiritual eyes are opened and we shall understand.

Loving sympathy of Mrs. R. W. Lindley

CHILDREN'S CORNER

THE LITTLE GATEKEEPER.

Judith lived in the country because her father was a farmer. She was so small for her age that strangers thought she was only five years old, when she really was eight on her last birthday. Her eyes were blue and her hair was the golden color you read about in the fairy tales. Her blue eyes were bright, probably because she went to bed early. Perhaps the reason her hair was pretty was because she never made any fuss when her mother combed it.

Anyway, Judith was an unusually good little girl. That is why her father was surprised, and her mother was surprised, and her brothers were surprised the summer day she was naughty. And she was naughty, and cried because she had to be her father's gatekeeper, instead of going every afternoon the week before Children's Day to rehearse a little play at Miss Edson's home. Miss Edson was Judith's Sunday school teacher. There were six other little girls in the class. Going to rehearsals at Miss Edson's house was as much fun for the class as attending a party every day; that is the reason Judith cried and was cross when her father said:

"The men are coming next week to haul stone from the back lot, and Judith will have to tend the gate to keep the cattle and colts from getting out of the pasture. If one of the men should forget to shut the gate, the colts would be sure to get out."

"Can't one of the boys tend the gate?" inquired Judith, pouting so her mother turned away and looked at a cheerful robin for comfort.

"I have other work for the boys," answered Judith's father.

New, the hired man, who never went to church, liked to tease. When he saw Judith looking cross, he pretended to be astonished.

"I thought you were a Christian!" said he.

"I am," grumbled Judith, cross as ever "Why not?"

"Because," answered the hired man, "I supposed a sure-enough Christian would tend to her father's gate—cheerfully."

"It looks to me," the hired man went on, "as if a sure-enough Christian wouldn't shirk her duty."

Those were big words for the hired man to say, and big words for Judith to think about as she watched him walking slowly to the barn, shaking his head.

The next thing the hired man knew, there was the little gatekeeper playing with her dolls beside the big gate, happy in the June sunshine, while Jim, her dog, mounted guard close by. The hired man grinned and the little girl smiled. The next afternoon, when the hired man passed, the little gatekeeper was studying something, and Jim was asleep with his nose on his paws.

"What's the news?" he inquired.

"Oh, I've got to learn the first psalm to recite on Children's day," replied Judith. "The superintendent said so. It is long, too; six verses. I wish you'd hear me say the first verse, and see if I've got it."

The hired man took Judith's Bible and listened while she repeated: "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers."

"You see," commented the hired man, "I suppose you would have been standing in the way of a sinner if you had kept on fussing and pouting about doing your father's work like a Christian when he needed you. I'm a sinner because I haven't been to church regular since I was your size and went with my mother; but I know a sure-enough Christian when I see her. You're acting like one, all right, opening and shutting the gate for your father's men, cheerfully. Well, I must be a-going."

Although she was sure the hired man was still teasing and certainly didn't know how to explain the first psalm, Judith felt much comforted.

One day, when the Sunday school superintendent passed in his automobile, he noticed the little gatekeeper happily tending the gate, Jim close beside her, as usual. He bowed and smiled to Judith and when she waved her hand he had a sudden happy thought. You see, he knew why Judith could not take part in the little class play.

Every day Judith and Jim guarded the gate. And every afternoon until Children's Day the hired man listened to Judith repeat the first psalm.

"You have learned that piece by heart, and so have I!" he declared the last Saturday afternoon, laughing as if it were a great joke.

Children's Day was a day of surprises. To begin with, the hired man went to church dressed in his best and looking rather fine, his face shining and his shoes blacked. Jim cried because he couldn't go, too.

"Judith invited me," the hired man explained. "You see, we've worked rather hard this week a-learning that sam." The hired man said "sam" for "psalm."

The second surprise was a surprise for the whole Sunday school. You remember the superintendent had thought of something, and this was it. He had built a beautiful white fence across the space separating the Sunday school room from the church auditorium. When the big door lifted on the morning of Children's Day, there was the white fence, trimmed with trailing rosebuds, and in it the prettiest white gate you ever saw. It must have been copied from a fairy-land picture: Back of the fence, in the Sunday school room, were all the little children, sitting in their classes; and seated in a wee white chair against a bank of roses, was Judith, tending the gate.

The hired man's eyes were round with astonishment when he saw his little friend, Judith, tending the children's gate on Children's Day in the morning.

When the babies who were to graduate from the cradle roll into the kindergarten marched to the platform, the choir sang, while the big pipe organ played, "Open the door for the children," and little Judith opened the gate, while the babies passed through. She opened the gate for all the graduates when they marched up on the platform and back again; even for big boys like her brother John, who graduated from the primary that day.

When at last the superintendent said, "We shall now ask our little gatekeeper to repeat the first psalm," the church was so still, except when the canary birds sang, you might almost have heard that pin drop. The hired man was so interested that he bent forward and whispered the first psalm, word for word, with little Judith.

The minister noticed the stranger whispering the first psalm word for word, and when the service was over, the minister walked up to Judith's father's hired amn, shook hands with him and said, "I trust, sir, that you will come to church and Sunday school every Sunday. We have a men's class you should join."

"I thank you kindly," answered the hired man. "Me and Judith'll be here every Sunday!"

Judith's family were very happy when they heard that, and no one smiled because the hired man said, "Me and Judith" instead of "Judith and I."

Judith has been glad ever since that she tended well her father's gate.—Frances Margaret Fox, in The Continent.

THE BROWNIES' NEW NEIGHBOR.

It was a very eventful day for the Brown children in the little cottage when a moving-van halted before the great white mansion that was their nearest neighbor. To be sure, the handsome big house stood in the middle of a perfect park, so that in summer one only glimpsed its balconies and rose-wreathed pillars. A great iron fence along the front gave it the privacy its humbler neighbors lacked; and a high stone wall separated the south lawn from the little yard where romped the three "Brownies," Ruth, David, and Betty.

For years the "white house," as it was called, had been boarded up and lonely. So there was a stir of expectation through the town when it was learned that old Judge Whitford, from the capital city, had bought the place and would move in immediately.

"O dear! They say he's old and alone, so that means no children for playmates," mourned Ruth, in disappointment. "I did hope there'd be at least a child apiece for us."

David was not so unselfish. "I don't want any more girls," he observed frankly. "I'd like some live-wire boys that would share that dandy place with a fellow. Most likely the old judge is cranky and particular and will keep a watch-dog as big as a bear. So we won't dare even peek into the orchard when the cherries and June apples are ripe," he ended gloomily.

Though three pairs of sharp eyes kept guard over the white house, nobody was in evidence except the movingmen, a stout, energetic woman who was undoubtedly the housekeeper, and an old darky couple, cook and coachman, probably.

"The judge won't come till everything's settled," guessed Ruth. "Well, I don't think I even want him to come. I suppose we'll never get to climb over the stone wall and play in our whole lives, and I've just dreamed about it!"

It was little Betty who made the first dis-easy to do when you have a beautiful character to speak about. The wife and children have the sympathy of a host of friends.

CROOKED JOE.

In a little manuscript book of "Reminiscences," by the late James Kite, is found the following narrative, says F. T. R., in The Friend: A railway station is a rather poor home for a boy, but crooked Joe had scarcely known any other. He was less than one year old when the dreadful accident occurred which not only made him an orphan, but changed him from a strong, healthy child into a poor, helpless wreck. "What a pity he was not killed outright," said every one except his mother. She said it was only her need to care for his poor, flickering little life, that kept her from being crushed by her grief for her husband.

The railway officials were kind to poor Mary Ryan, and gave her employment at the station, and there Joe was brought up, at least in the daytime. Everyone liked the patient little fellow, going on errands so willingly, and tugging manfully at his mother's heavy water buckets.

When Joe was eight years old he was sent to school, and that night he wakened his mother by his crying, and told her, when she begged to know the trouble, that some boy—more thoughtless than cruel, let us hope—had called him "Humpy," and asked if he carried a bag of meal on his back:

Mary Ryan flamed with the fierce auger of a mother: "You shan't go to school another day!" she cried, "I won't have my darling put upon by the likes of them!" And so Joe's schooling came to an untimely end. And yet he learned many things at the station. He knew all about the sidetracks and switches, and could tell when trains were due as correctly as the time-table. How he envied the active lads that he saw every day on the platforms—the brakemen and firemen; and the engineers most of all! For one week of such life he would have given all he ever hoped for. He could never be anything but a poor cripple.

He was a special favorite with the telegraph operator, and the wonderful clicking instrument had a fascination for him.

One day there came a message which sent the operator out in a hurry. An engine had broken loose and was coming without a driver, at the rate of 40 miles an hour. "Clear the track," was the word. Now a little beyond the station was a steep upgrade, and then a high trestle across the valley. "She will go over the trestle," every one said, and all ran to see the accident.

The engine ran nearly up the steep grade, and then she stopped. What could it mean? The driving wheels were revolving, but she was motionless. The foremost runners saw a crippled boy crouching down with a big empty oil-can at his feet. "He has oiled the track! Hurrah for Crroked Joe!" Joe was carried back on the men's shoulders in a kind of triumphal procession. "Pass around the hat!" cried someone and everybody seemed to have something to put into it. "Hold your cap, Joe," cried the man with the hat, "Your hands won't hold all this!" But Joe's hands were clasped behind him, and he cried out, "No, you shan't do it! You shan't pay me! Don't you see what it means to a fellow like me to be of some use, just for once? I don't want anything you can give me! I can never be anything but 'Crooked Joe.'" His voice rose almost to a scream, and seemed to hold the suffering of years in its sharp tone.

But the superintendent took him in his arms, and said, gently, "No, Joe, we can't do anything for your poor back. But it was your brave heart and the quick intelligence God gave you, that showed you how to save the engine, and you must let us at least give you the chance to learn, and to work, and then, 20 years from now, it will depend upon yourself whether you are 'Crooked Joe,' or Joseph Ryan."

Lodging in the town of C——, my host said, "Court is in session, I want you to attend it with me." We found the room crowded, and when the brilliant young lawyer rose to make his plea, I noticed, with pain, that his fine head surmounted a small, misshapen body. But I soon lost all thought of this as I listened to his wonderful eloquence, which held the whole room full of people spellbound, and which I was told was taking him to the head of his profession.

"A wonderful man!" said my friend, as we walked slowly homeward. And then he told me the story of "Crooked Joe."

THE LIFE THAT LEAVES OUT CHRIST IS VITALLY DEFECTIVE.

There are plenty of groups of people who are willing to accept all that the Bible teaches about love, so long as you will let them leave out of it the love of God as it was expressed in the cross of Christ. The difference between a self-centered love and the love which is really the love of God is that the latter does not balk at the crucified Christ. There is a socialistic group that has Sunday schools. They have a hymn book, and in it they have put that great hymn, "O love that wilt not let me go," but they invariably leave out the last verse. They are willing to sing of love, but not the love of God in Christ. This defect is fatal, for all so-called Christian service and welfare work that leaves out Christ is absolutely powerless against the plague of our own hearts. The last verse of that hymn is:

"O Cross that liftest up my head,
  I dare not ask to fly from thee;
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms red.
  Life that shall endless be."

WHEW!

A Frenchman, boasting in company that he had thoroughly mastered the English language, was asked to write the following from dictation: "As Hugh Hughes was hewing a yule log from a yew tree a man dressed in clothes of a dark hue came up to Hugh and said: 'Have you seen my ewes?' 'If you will wait until I hew this yew I will go with you anywhere in Europe to look for your ewes,' said Hugh."

THE HOUSE OF OBED-EDOM.

The house of Obed-edom
  Where safe the ark abode,
What time were wars and fighting
  On every mountain road,
What time was pitched the battle
  In every valley fair,
The house of Obed-edom
  Had peace beyond compare.

The line of Obed-edom
  Is on the earth today;
In the house of Obed-edom
  Still he may safely stay
Who, dearer than all treasure,
  For which men toil and plod,
Shall prize the covenant blessing,
  The hallowed ark of God.

And never strife nor clamor
  Shall break the tranquil spell
In which our Lord's beloved
  Forever safely dwell.
In the house of Obed-edom,
  In sunlight or in dark,
Abides the ceaseless blessing
  That rests within the ark.

WILL THEY EVER STOP?

The ocean liner had just come within hailing distance of the Emerald Isle. An Irish traveler, getting his first glimpse of "The Old Country" after a long absence abroad, threw his hat up in the air and yelled enthusiastically, "Hooray for old Ireland!"

"That's right," flashed back the Irishman, "every man for his own country."

BLAME THE DENTIST.

"Henry, why didn't you come to school yesterday?"

"I couldn't, Miss Spink, I had to go to the dentist with a toothache."

"Well, that's too bad. Does it still ache?"

"I don't know, ma'am."

"You don't know! Henry, you are trying to deceive me. How it is that you don't know whether your tooth aches or not?"

"The dentist kept it, Miss Spink."

Poor Pat spent almost his last dollar for passage to America. After a week in New York looking for work he was dead broke. As he sat on a beach in the Battery he saw a diver being pulled upon the dock. "Arrah!" said Pat, "If I had known you could walk over I would have saved me passage money."

In the early days of printing, about 1500, the dash (—) or perpendicular line (|) was the only punctuation used. Later it was learned that "The art of poynting, well used, makes the sentence very light." The graceful comma (,) succeeded the awkward (|). The colon (:) was later introduced, "Showing that there is more to come." Not till about 1633 was the semicolon (;) adopted for English printing.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

RALLY DAY SERVICE.

Samples of our Rally Day Service have been sent to all pastors and Sunday school superintendents whose names and addresses appear on our files.

We have endeavored to give our people the best program we could secure, and are hoping it will meet with approval and general use. Some of the best chorus leaders in our denomination have passed upon the music and in harmony with their judgment the selection was made.

The program will be furnished free to all churches and Sunday schools of our denomination upon the condition that an offering be taken for the support of the Board of Young People's Work.

Rally Day affords an excellent opportunity for the churches to gather their forces for the fall and winter activities.. Has the church reached all the people in the community? Are we using all the latent forces of our present constituency? These questions, if thought over, will show the advantages and opportunities of a great Rally Day at the beginning of the fall work when a well planned effort should be made to reach and use all the people of the community.

The Board of Young People's Work is almost entirely dependent upon the offering taken upon this occasion for its support. We are therefore asking that you make it as large as possible, and that unless otherwise directed by your conference, it be sent to Mr. H. C Staley, Treasurer, 1025 Calvert Building, Baltimore, Md., as soon as convenient after the service is held. You will greatly assist our work by sending it in promptly.

May we ask your hearty co-operation, first in holding the service and endeavoring to make it a blessing to your church and community: secondly, in supporting this board by a liberal offering?

Please send all orders for the Rally Day Service to the following address as soon as possible.

West End. Greensboro.—Our Intermediate Christian Endeavor society has been organized one year and six months. We have nine active members, three of whom are Christian Endeavor Experts, and all the rest of the society are about ready for the examination. We have 190 points on the Efficiency Chart. Since January, 1923, our society has held 31 shut-in meetings, and made 323 visits, carrying flowers to those who were sick. All our members are Quiet Hour Comrades and five are Tenth Legionaries. We use and report report regularly on the Monthly Service Program Our society furnishes several assistant teachers in the Sunday school, also furnishes pianist for Sunday school and mid-week prayer meetings. Three of our members are taking the Sunday school Teacher Training Course. A committee from our society meets with our Junior Christian Endeavor society and superintends them. We hold meetings at the county convict camp every third Sunday, carrying magazines, etc., each time. We have given 25 books for the library at the camp. Each week we read good stories to shut-in people.

We have furnished our Intermediate room with its needs, and we have paid off the debt on the piano which was purchased for our room.

We have pledged $10 to state work, which we have paid; $20 to home missions, and have paid $14.05; and $20 to foreign missions. We have plans on foot for raising money for the remainder of our pledges.

Since January, 1923, our society has put in 154 hours clerical work for our church and Young People's Board.

We have good committees and we have varied and interesting prayer meetings.

At the present time our society holds three banners:—the Intermediate City Union Banner of Greensboro, which we have won five successive times; the Guilford County Union Banner of North Carolina and the Intermediate State Shield. Margaret E. Osborne,

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, AUGUST 26.

Scripture, Matthew 18: 19, 20; 21: 18-22.

Man is naturally religious. He has some altar before which he bows down and worships. His religion is not always the proper religion and how often it is the case that the altar is erected to a false god. To the end that the religion of all people may be directed into the proper channels and that they may erect an altar in their hearts to the one true God, is the task of the Christian church. And prayer is the dynamic through which the church will be able to meet the challenge.

Prayer is vital. Prayer is necessary. Prayer is inspirational. A person should not only pray while passing through the trying experiences of life, but he should pray when the pathway is smooth, in fact he should always be in the spirit of prayer. The individual should "pray without ceasing," but he should have a special hour or hours for his devotions. It seems that the morning hours are the most fitting for devotions. The individual has just passed through a night of sleep and rest, his body and mind have been refreshed and he ought to reverently kneel and thank God for His watchfulness and care. More than that. the whole day is before the individual. He does not know what will befall him that day: he does not know the temptations that will be in his pathway; he does not know the burdens which he may be called upon to bear: so he needs the aid of the Holy Spirit to lead and direct him through the day. Thus in the early morning hours find time for private prayer, but always have the spirit of prayer as some one has said:

"When is the time for prayer?
In every hour while life is spared to thee,
In crowds or solitude, in joy or care,
Thy thoughts should heavenward flee.
At home, at morn and eve, with loved ones there,
Bend thou the knee in prayer."

A prayer should have five elements. First, Adoration. When we pray we are talking with One before whom the seraphim continually cry, "Holy, holy, holy is Jehovah of hosts;" thus we should pray with reverence and adoration.

Second, Confession. We sin and it is necessary to confess. "If we confess our sin, He is faithful and just to forgive our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

Third, Thanksgiving. A deep manifestation of gratitude for the goodness and mercy of God.

Fourth, Supplication. Led by the Spirit of God we should make our petitions to the throne of grace.

Fifth, Submission. In the spirit of Christ we must say, "Not my will, but Thine be done." To the end that our prayers may be effective, let this request be constantly on our lips, "Lord, teach us how to pray."

"When cold our hearts, and far from thee
Our wandering spirits stray,
And thoughts and lips move heavily,
Lord, teach us how to pray.

"Too vile to venture near thy throne,
Too poor to turn away;
One only voice,—Thy Spirit's groan.—
Lord, teach us how to pray.

"We know not how to seek Thy face,
Unless Thou lead the way;
We have no words, unless Thy grace,
Lord, teach us how to pray.

"Here every thought and fond desire
We on Thine altar lay;
And when our souls have caught Thy fire,
Lord, teach us how to pray."

Rockingham Circuit.—We are slowly but surely making progress on this work. Last Sunday we had 116 at Sunday school, and a collection of almost five dollars. Last year our Sunday school was only about 30 strong.

Sunday night the unusual occurred at our church After an ordinary sermon the pastor made an altar call and 29 people came forward. Six were already church members, and joined our church by letter, while 22 accepted Christ, and will join our church. One will go into the M. E. Church.

This week our church is being wired for electric light. We also have 150 chairs for our Sunday school rooms to be put in this week. Work has also been started on our basement.

Financially we are a little behind, but are observing dollar day once each month. Each member is asked to pay one dollar that day regardless of what they have paid.

The good people do not forget their pastor and are very liberal with their gifts. Mrs. Samuel Covington keeps us in milk and butter daily, and also gave us a chicken and some honey; Mrs. D. E. McKenzie, chicken, pickles and potatoes; Mrs. Annie Martin, vegetables of all kinds; Mr. J. D. Jenkins, potatoes, beans and okra; Mr. J. W. Russell, two chickens; Mrs. E. Thomas, jelly; Mrs. Nealie Dawkins, cantaloupes and jelly; Mr. Clay Long and father, a $7 ironing board. We thank all of you good people.

Two weeks ago we closed a fine meeting at Melton's Grove. Pastor Troxler did the preaching. The results were fine; however, only two people have joined the church as a visible result.

We thank Mrs. Ingold and Mrs. Thomas for butter, eggs and jam, J. D. Hardy, covery. Ruth and David had rushed in from school, trailing the cooky jar, when Betty ran in from the garden, her eyes big as saucers. "Hurry!" she urged. "There's a boy! The housekeeper's boy, I guess. And there's a swing and a trapeze and a puppy!" With David and Ruth on her heels she scampered back to the crack in the wall.

"Ho! I can beat that," scoged David, and he raced to the old apple tree where Betty's big box cupboard stood. Another second and he was standing up intending to look over boldly. "Great Caesar!" he gasped and nearly tumbled backward, for the minute he looked over, somebody on the other side did the same thing. The new boy had climbed to a wheelbarrow to investigate the other side of the wall. He and David had nearly bumped heads.

After the first shock, things moved rapidly. The over-wall boy was determined to annex friends without delay. "Come over, all of you," he urged, adding anxiously, "if your mother'll let you." After they had gained permission, the blissful Brownies tumbled over the wall, and Sydney, their new neighbor, was saying in high spirits; "It's great to have neighbors! I didn't have any in the city and I'm going to make up for it now. Isn't my puppy cute? He's an Airedale, and I call him 'Happy.'"

Ruth had to giggle. She was remembering the "watch-dog as big as a bear" that David had expected and predicted so darkly. "Come and see the calf and the horses. No, first have a look at this big oak. Don't you think we could make a Swiss Family Robinson house up there?" Sydney appealed to David, who was in transports over this happy beginning.

"I'm to have this side of the place for my very own," went on the boy. "I wanted to be close to you, and we'll make a little ladder or maybe cut a door through the wall. And I'll have a tent and a regular playground. We'll have no end of fun."

"How do you know the judge will let you?" asked David frankly. This "housekeeper's boy," as the Brownies had guessed tim to be, seemed full of wonderful ideas. "Maybe he won't have us around."

Sydney laughed and laughed while the three waited politely, rather puzzled over what was so funny. "But of course you don't know him yet," Sydney stopped to explain. "Why, grandfather's just an old boy himself! I live with him, you know. He's all I have got, and we're chums. He'll be camping out here with me and doing stunts we can't. Here he is now! Hey, grandfather!"

For one breathless instant it looked as if the Brownies would vanish over the wall in sheer panic. But the judge's friendly greeting, his jolly smile, reassured them, so that soon he had Betty on his back and was conducting the rest to the orchard to raid an early cherry tree.

He it was who secretly told Ruth that his grandson's birthday came very soon, and on the first of May. He gave her liberty to have a surprise party for Sydney under the trees. "We haven't mentioned it, so he'll have no idea of it. Syd doesn't know any one yet, so you'll have to help out by doing the inviting this time." Then he whispered that the boy's birthday gift was to be a pony and cart. "I'll have Mammy bake a whopper of a cake with frosting an inch thick," this delightful young old man promised, "and Uncle Amos will manage to hide plenty of ice cream away. I'll keep Sydney busy all morning. We're tinkering a gymnasium out in the barn. You get the crowd together and march over on the young man. He'll think we've forgotten his birthday," the judge chuckled gleefully.

As the morning of May Day wore away, Sydney began to feel injured. Over their jolly carpenter work he had carelessly mentioned the date, expecting grandfather to catch on, but evidently, so far as birthdays went, grandfather's mind was a blank. It wasn't like him to neglect such a red-letter day, nor like Mammy either. Still Sydney felt shy about mentioning the great fact. They would feel badly to think they had overlooked it. But when noon came with no cake, no gifts, Sydney felt desperate.

He scooted over to the wall and whistled the signal. The Brownies appeared as by magic. "Hi, come over after lunch!" sang out Sydney. "It's a secret. Something special, though." Sydney after a peek in his bank had decided he was rich enough to treat to Eskimo pie. Ruth and David were dumb for a second. "He knows!" was David's fear. Luckily Ruth spoke before the cat escaped from the bag.

"I'm sorry," she called sweetly, "but we're invited out." To herself she said, "Now we'll see whether he knows."

"That's tough," was Sydney's sad reply. "Guess I'll have to play Robinson Crusoe before he found Friday. Maybe grandfather will go fishing with me to the river," he added hopefully as he disappeared, leaving a relieved trio. But there were a hundred and one reasons why grandfather could not possibly get away. So Sydney gave up all hope, and taking a favorite book withdrew in silent injury to his desert isle in the old oak, alone except for faithful roly-poly little Happy.

It was a wonderful book, and Sydney was far out in the wilderness fighting savage natives when he woke up to the fact that a small army had entered the gate and was advancing on his retreat, where they began shouting: "Happy birthday!" "Come down and get acquainted!" "Aren't you s'prised, Syd?" This from Betty, who was so happy she was truly a bouncing Betty.

Somehow a dazed boy scrambled down just as grandfather appeared, leading a beautiful new pony. Ruth pressed nearer with a dainty wreath she had worked long to make. "You're King of the May!" she told the surprised Sydney, who ducked instantly, to the amusement of the boys.

"No, sir!" he declared with spirit. "This is a free country. If I'm anything, I'll be President! Come on, and take turns trying out the pony-cart."

"All right, Mr. President," laughed Ruth, good naturedly. "This is the 'white house,' too!" So the pretty wreath was neglected while the children romped that merry afternoon. Then Mammy appeared, bearing the most marvelous cake ever seen in that town, and Sydney led the cheers. "Mammy ought to wear the wreath," piped up Betty, and at once Sydney clapped it on the dusky head of the smiling old lady as she served generous helpings of strawberry ice cream to the President and his jolly guests.—Daisy D. Stephenson, in Zion's Herald.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Haw River Charge.—The third quarterly conference met at Brown Summit Saturday, July 28. Each church on the charge was represented. On canvassing the ballots it was found that W. H. Chilcutt of Brown Summit was elected delegate to the next annual conference. Finances are behind on this charge, but we trust with such favorable changes in the seasons as we have had of late will also come a favorable change in finances. The last quarterly conference of the year will be held at Mizpah.

E. G. Lowdermilk,
Pastor.

St. Paul Charge.—We have not written of late, as we have been away in revival meetings. Wednesday, July the 11th, we started for Democrat, where we assisted Brother L. S. Helms in a meeting. We enjoyed our trip up in the mountains, especially the association with Brother Helms and his good family. We also enjoyed the hospitality of the good people. While we did not have the interest throughout the meeting which we had hoped to have, yet we feel that our efforts were not in vain; the church seemed to be revived, and there were several professions, and I think some additions to the church. Brother Helms is doing all that any consecrated pastor can do to build up the work of the church. He has a very discouraging field. It takes grit and grace to stick to the job. Yet through all the discouragements, he is very hopeful, and is planning to stay with them for another year.

On Friday, the 20th, we returned home, and the following Sunday we went to assist Brother Bingham in a meeting at Union Grove, preaching twice on Sunday, returning home for service at St. Paul in the evening, where we heard Brother Grady Wyrick preach. Brother Wyrick is a local preacher in our church, who was licensed to preach in our third quarterly conference. He is a splendid good man, and we predict for him success in the ministry. On Monday we returned to Union Grove, where we preached at night, and on through the week until Friday night. We enjoyed very much the association with Brother Bingham; he is a splendid good man and is a good preacher and pastor. We also enjoyed our stay among those good people. There were some visible results of our labors.

On the fifth Sunday we preached in our own pulpit at St. Paul in the morning, and in the afternoon we went over and began a meeting at Fair Grove, on the Haw River circuit. Brother Lowdermilk is the efficient pastor. We remained with Brother Lowdermilk throughout Thursday, closing the meeting in the afternoon. We very much enjoyed our stay with this pastor and his good people. Our association with Brother Lowdermilk and his good wife was very pleasant. There were some visible results at Fair Grove.

While we were away Brothers Highfill and McCulloch filled our pulpit, at the morning services. Brother Highfill preached the third Sunday morning; all who heard him appreciated his wonderful sermon: they would love for him to come and preach again some time.

On the fourth Sunday Brother T. F. McCulloch preached a delightful sermon, which was very much appreciated by all who heard him. Brother McCulloch will be a welcome visitor at St. Paul church any time it should be convenient for him to come. After a few days' rest, we will go to Brother Bethea's work to assist him in a meting at Union the second Sunday. We desire an interest in the prayers of the readers of the Herald for a successful meeting at this place.

T. E. Pierce, Pastor.

Henderson.—Some time ago our editor, speaking in irony or otherwise, said he could almost hear the sound of the hammer and saw on our new Sunday school building. If he were here today he could at least hear the sound of the trowel, for the masons began laying brick this morning. The new building will simply be an addition to our Sunday school building and will be 38x40 feet with two stories, a basement and a main floor. The main floor will be on a level with the floor of the old building so that one will go right out of the old into the new.

Our choir leader, Brother S. R. Harris, Sr., has been ordered to bed for ten days by his physician. He has not been well for some time and we are hoping the rest will do him good. His daughters, Miss Mabel from Westminster, Md., Mrs. Yerkes from Philadelphia, and her husband and little girl, and Mrs. R. M. Andrews and her children have been here for the past week. Prof. Earl Harris, who has been studying in Paris for the past year, is also at home. He will return in a few weeks to Paris.

The sympathy of our people goes out to Mrs. C. C. McIntosh in the death of her little girl, Mary Clem, aged about 18 months. Mrs. McIntosh, who is a daughter of Brother W. M. Ellis of this place, has had much to bear in the past year and a half. When Mary Clem was about a month old Mr. McIntosh died. In a few months Mrs. McIntosh's grandomther died and a few months later her mother died and now the precious little babe. The funeral was held from the home of Brother Ellis last Wednesday morning and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. H. Neese and Rev. H. A. Ellis of the First Baptist Church.

Miss Helen Harrison of Brinkleyville has been here for the past several days making arrangements for a private music class. She will play the pipe organ in our church and teach music in our city.

Congregations are reasonably good for this season of the year. J. E. Pritchard.

[The editor was not speaking in irony, but in faith based on the character of those back of and in front of the undertaking.—Editor.]

Maple Springs, Forsyth Circuit.—Our special meeting began July 28. Brother T. M. Johnson came on Monday and preached for us until Friday night. To say we enjoyed his sermons would be putting it lightly. I think that he made impressions on our minds and souls that will last throughout time. Brother Bingham closed the meeting Sunday morning when he received one into the church and administered the sacrament.

On the third Sunday night Brother Stowe preached for us in the absence of our pastor. He preached a splendid sermon from the subject, "Right Relationship With God." We would be pleased to have him come again.

Ida M. Long.

Asheboro.—Misses Iola and Nan Lowdermilk entertained the Senior Christian Endeavor society at a watermelon feast at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Frank Lowdermilk, on South Cox street extension last Friday evening. The Misses Lowdermilk entertain the society at a feast each summer and this event is looked forward to with much pleasure. The lawn where the social was given was decorated with Japanese lanterns.

Tyson Ferree, vice president of the society, presided over the business meeting, after which games were played for quite a while before the melons were enjoyed. A large number of young people were invited besides the members.

Rev. P. E. Lindley, working for the new M. P. College, High Point, was the week-end guest of Rev. H. F. Fogleman at the parsonage. Mr. Lindley spoke at both services Sunday in the interest of the College.

Rev. J. C. Broomfield, D.D., pastor of First M. P. Church at Fairmont, W. Va., arrived in Asheboro Wednesday, August 8, to assist Rev. Mr. Fogleman in the revival at the new M. P. church, which begins August 8 and will continue for ten days.

Prayer meetings were held at five different homes in town Monday evening and were attended by a large number of people.

Several of the Asheboro people attended the county Sunday school convention, which was held at Trinity July 30 and 31. This was one of the most interesting conventions held in the county in a number of years and Randolph ranks next to the top in Sunday school work.

Sunday, August 5, the M. P. church issued attractive church bulletins. These contain a picture of the new church, program of services for Sunday, announcements and the church directory. These pamphlets will be published each Saturday.

The annual picnics of the various church organizations were enjoyed during July at the different ponds, lakes, etc., near town. The Sunday school picnic was July 14 at Kenny's Mills and was largely attended. R.

Roancke Circuit.—Our third quarterly conference was held on July the 27th. The vote for delegate to the next annual conference was announced and J. R. Powers was declared elected.

Miss Mary Wiley united with our church in Enfield on June the 10th and on the fifth Sunday in July Brother B. R. Kimball, Sr., came to us from the Christian church, and Mrs. Ida Keeter will unite with us next Sunday.

For the past year our streets and sidewalks have been torn up, and this has interfered with our church attendance, but the work will soon be complete, and we hope soon to get back to normalcy. We are glad to say we have water installed in the parsonage.

Our special meeting begins at Whitakers Chapel second Sunday in September with Brother J. A. Burgess as pulpit help; Enfield church, second Sunday in October, with Brother J. R. Hutton as pulpit help.

D. R. Williams.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—Our church has just been overhauled, with two coats of paint. We wish to thank those who contributed to this cause, and to say to those who have not taken part in this work, that we are still waiting with interest to hear from you. Now don't be like the fellow who was trying to sympathize with his neighbor who had just suffered a great loss by fire, and when asked how much he would give to prove his sympathy, said, "Oh, I didn't mean it just that way." Christ said, Inasmuch as you did it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye did it unto me. 1 Cor. 16:1, 2: Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia even so do ye: upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come. Of course we are inclined to think that the favored few should see to it that the church is painted and the well is looked after, the yard kept clean, etc. Isaiah 43:10: Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord of hosts. His claims to be the Son of God are to be witnessed by those who have experienced the saving power, through faith in His shed blood. Therefore, Christ is calling for the witnesses. John 15:8: Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples. The world wants a religion of deeds rather than words. Talk is cheap. It is a sad thing to hear a man get up and stroke his whiskers and read his testimony and say he has ben a member of the church for forty years and somebody come along and make him out a fraud and hypocrite. Oh, the world can tell whether you are a hog or a sheep, whether you are led by the flesh or the Spirit. Not as many as know the catechism long and short: not as many as know the 39 articles of confession: not as many as have been confirmed—you can be confirmed every fifteen minutes—but as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God.

Now a word about the Sunday schools. Our school is good but could be made much better if the people would only meet with us. It is a sad day ever for any congregation when its own membership begin to absent themselves from its services. It is a sad day for any congregation when those who compose it can be counted on to be there at the social function, there at the place of business, but cannot be counted on when the kingdom of God is at stake and when the Son of God goes forth to war. It is time we were about our Father's business. And if we were found doing nothing in this world that was not in keeping with our birth from above we would have brought this old God-forsaken, Sabbath-breaking, whiskey-soaked, gambling-ridden, blaspheming world to Jesus Christ long, long ago. But we have been playing with religion. It seems to me that about four out of every five with their names on church records are doing nothing to bring the world to Christ. The church seems to be courting the world and is bringing her down to the level of the ungodly. And the business men, influential church members, don't do their duty. They are wrapped up in their own affairs and busy with the pursuits and frivolities of the time. No wonder you have not been to church since last August when the special meeting came off. Some people would go to hell sure if they died out of revival season. Some of you in the church, yes, your officials, you are too far from God. No wonder you are not in sympathy with the preacher. No wonder you are not in sympathy with the revival efforts. No wonder you are not in sympathy with your church and Sunday school. I will tell you Christianity is not a certificate of church membership. God will not send wind to drive our ships unless we have faith enough to raise our sails. Then He will do it if we will only believe and trust in Him. Oh, let us arouse ourselves. Don't be like an undertaker and third-rate preacher. The minister did not appear so he thought it would not be right to have a funeral without a few appropriate remarks, so he stepped to the edge of the coffin and he said: "Friends, this corpse has been a member of the church for forty years."

Yours for service, M. P. Chambliss.

Graham.—Professor Hamilton was with us Friday night to organize a singing school. A good crowd attended and seemingly much interest will be taken in the school.

We voted Sunday morning to picnic at High Point the 18th. A number of folks are planning to go.

Our pastor was away Sunday evening. Mr. Isley of Saxapahaw circuit preached a very inspiring sermon, which was enjoyed by all.

The senior Christian Endeavor society will give an ice-cream supper on the lawn Saturday evening unless prevented by inclement weather. Best wishes to the Herald.

Bertha Barbee, Reporter.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—We were glad to have Miss Reid with us July 29, at which time she delivered us a fine address on home missions. Let us all get the spirit of missions to help each other to become better Christians.

The third quarterly conference met at Canaan with good attendance, at which time we elected our delegate, Mr. E. E. Weevil, to the annual conference.

Since we last reported we have learned that our Children's Day will be the first Sunday in September. The first Sunday is our regular preaching day and at 11 o'clock the pastor will administer communion. The time is set for our revival the third Sunday in September. We ask that everybody pray for the success of the revival that many souls may be saved. Mrs. A. D. Sisk, Reporter.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—The revival meeting at Piney Grove began the 5th inst., and is still in progress. It is having much success and real large congregations. Quite a number have been saved and on yesterday there was one of the greatest spiritual revivals that have been seen at old Piney Grove in a long time, as the old saying is, "the dead, the live and sinners coming home." Mr. and Mrs. Harris Hill of High Point have been assisting Brother Riddle in this great work. Also Rev. Robert Short and family of Handy have been on the job, also Rev. J. B. Trogdon and family of Denton. Many old friends that have left Piney Grove and now live in High Point and Thomasville have been frequent visitors at this meeting. There are some of them that are great singers and their help is needed. The Cid people have been attending more or less all the time. May the good work still continue. There is being some of the best old-time Holy Ghost gospel being delivered and it is enough to raise the spiritually dead, looks like, but still some will not listen.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Lanier and son Foy spent Sunday evening in the kind home of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Morgan. They were also accompanied by Miss Ora Wright and Miss Ida Belle Leonard. The two are accomplished daughters of Mr. J. D. Wright and Mr. C. O Leonard, respectively, of Cid.

The Sunday school at Cid is increasing and great interest is manifested. We have over 140 on roll. The Bible class is gaining ground. Mr. A. M. Woodell quit as superintendent and Mr. C. G. Leonard was elected yesterday. Mr. Ben Parrish, who was assistant Bible teacher, was given the teacher's place and Mr. C. M. Craver, one of the new members, was elected assistant. Miss Ida Belle Leonard was elected assistant teacher to the junior class. Miss Jesse Hunt was elected assistant organist at Cid church.

Mrs. Delethia Wright spent last week with her daughter at Thomasville, Mrs. Frank Metters, who is in very delicate health. Hope for a recovery.

Yours as a worker in His vineyard,

Reporter.

Mt. Hermon.—Our special meeting will be begun at Mt. Hermon on third Sunday in August. Rev. R. S. Troxler will assist us. We are hoping for a good meeting.

Brother J. D. Williams was with us at Friendship in a meeting which was started on the first Sunday in August. He gave us sermons that were highly appreciated. The congregations after Sunday consisted of church members mainly. There was one conversion and two accessions.

There may be a dearth of students for the ministry on some fields, but it is not true on Mt. Hermon charge. There are five young men on Mt. Hermon charge preparing to preach the gospel. Four out of this number have been given license. In this number I counted Brother H. L. Isley, who is now serving Saxapahaw. The others are W. M. Loy, Claris Isley, Baxter Buckner, and O. C. Loy Jr. The latter has not applied for license; but will enter Elon College this year, if his plans are carried out, to prepare himself to preach.

Our series of revival services are to begin at Belmont on the fourth Sunday in August. Brother Troxler is to assist us here also. Pray for us. A. O. L.

Asheville.—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met in their regular monthly meeting August 9, inst., at the home of Mrs. E. L. Winslow, with 15 members and three visitors present. The three visitors became members at this meeting. Our auxiliary is showing good progress. The election of officers was held at this time, which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer; first vice president, Mrs. E. L. Winslow; secretary treasurer, Mrs. E. F. Tllman.

In July Mr. E. L. Douglass threw out a challenge to the society, saying he would double any amount of money which they would raise up to the amount of $50 by the August meeting. The ladies soon got busy and at this meeting when the group captains reported it was found that we had raised just $50, which with Mr. Douglas's additional $50 means $100 for this society, and we feel benefited by having worked to obtain the full amount of this challenge. This not only helps the W. F. M. S., but that amount will be given credit on our church budget. We have adopted the slogan: "Every member of the church a member of the W. F. M. S." After adjournment the hostess served delicious and cooling refreshments. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Faucett, on the second Thursday in September. Mrs. E. F. Allman,

Secretary.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Brother O'Brian has filled one and had Brother Fishel to fill two appointments here since I reported. Large congregations out each time. You have not seen an account of our death yet and we do not mean to let go if we can possibly help it. But we do feel so despondent since Mr. Carter died. We regarded him as a father of our Sunday school and of almost all of our church matters. Seldom we ever ventured to do anything in the line of church work, without first consulting him. He attended Sunday school and took his children and grandchildren as long as he was able. He never would accept any excuse anyone rendered for non-attendance. He was the only aged father that attended Sunday school. How we miss him! But what he was to us still lives. His influence lingers and the good deeds he did will be spoken of as a memorial in days to come. We pray that his children may soon recover, that they may regularly attend church as he did and bring with them their children as they did before he gave down. We need them in our work.

Each of us should do all we can to keep our church moving. But for the past few months the writer feels like she has fallen short, very short of her church duties, but is trying to fill those of a child to her parents.

Fannie Barnes.

—Germany is full of trouble. Chancellor Cuno has resigned and is succeeded by Dr. Stresemann. Bands of hungry men are raiding stores and there are frequent clashes between the police and the rioters, resulting in wounds and deaths. The new chancellor declares that Germany would welcome arbitration of the Ruhr question and promises resumption of reparation payments when the restoration to Germany of the Ruhr resources makes it possible.

DIED.

Edwards.—Robert Daniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edwards, died August 1. Funeral services at the home August 2 conducted by Rev. C. W. Bates and the writer, after which the remains were placed to rest in Clarke's Chapel cemetery.

Robert was a little more than a year old. Our hearts go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Edwards. May God comfort them in their bereavement. Sincerely,

B. M. Williams.

Lutterloh.—Mrs. Annie McPherson Lutterloh was born September 14, 1871. She departed this life May 29, 1923. Her age was 51 years, eight months and 15 days.

Sister Lutterloh was born near Snow Camp, Alamance county, and was the daughter of Cicero and Mary McPherson. The early life of the deceased was spent in the vicinity of her birthplace. In later years she came with her family to Burlington, and the remainder of her earthly life was spent here.

It was the pleasure of the writer to receive her, on confession of faith, into the church last year. From that time to her death she was a faithful member of the church. Her religion was of the quiet, unpretentious kind, but evidently genuine; for one who had known her intimately for a long time said of her, "She was always good."

Death came to her like a thief in the night The writer was from home at the time and was surprised and distressed when the telegram was receiced, bearing the sad information of her death. But why should we be surprised? Both the Word of God and our own observations are constantly warning us that at a time when we expect not the summons may come. Every voice of God is a call to us to be ready, and if we are prepared, as we believe she was, the time and place of our going matters but little.

The deceased is survived by three daughters—Mrs. Kenney Evans, and Misses Mazie and Eula Lutterloh. She is survived also by her mother, Mrs. Cicero McPherson and eight sisters—Misses Mamie and Flora McPherson. Mrs. H. H. Buckner, Mrs. W. M. Campbell. Mrs. Lula C. Foster, Mrs. Frank T. King, Mrs C. C. Dixon, and Mrs. E. B. Horner.

We pray that sustaining comfort may be granted to these, bereft of their loved one, and may the family circle, so unexpectedly broken here, be reunited where such separations never come. S. W. Taylor.

Mendenhall.—Adeline Parsons Mendenhall, wife of the late Julius Mendenhall, born October 19, 1857, departed this life May 18, 1923. Her early girlhood days were spent at the old home five miles east of High Point. On February 11, 1879, she was married to Julius Mendenhall, who answered the death angel's call some 15 years ago. To this union were given 13 children, 10 of whom were gathered around their mother's bedside at the time her spirit sought its home on high. The other three passed from this life some years ago. She and her husband joined the M. E. church at Prospect 26 years ago, to which she remained a faithful and loyal member as long as she lived. When health would permit she was always present and for many years was a teacher in the Sunday school. No more fitting tribute can be paid to the memory of this dear mother, friend and neighbor, than to say that she has done what and all that she could, that she has fought a good fight and won a glorious crown, a crown of many stars. In her meek and humble and quiet way a more devoted wife, mother and kind neighbor never lived. Her days were spent in service for those around her. Her manner, regardless of surroundings, was always calm and peaceful. No one ever heard her complain of the trials of life or utter one word of the hardships of everyday toil. She lighted the path of those around her with the sunshine of a pleasant smile and a helpful and inspiring word.

Dear mother, our grief for thee is more than we can tell;
But we know that with thee all is well.
Thy hands are silently folded across thy peaceful breast,
And thou art gone to the home of thy eternal rest.

Mrs. Mary Blair.

Sexton.—It is with sad hearts that we give up our faithful and beloved member, Mr. J. Wilson Sexton, whom God has called to eternal rest. His splendid Christian character and firm and steadfast faith in Jesus will be an inspiration to us left behind.

Whereas, It has pleased God to take him home to rest, and whereas we desire to extend our love and appreciation, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Denton M. P. Baraca class, do hereby express our love and appreciation for him as our friend and fellow-member. To his duties he gave unstintingly of his time, thought and prayers. Be it

Resolved, also, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, with the expression of our deepest and sincerest sympathy, and that a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

C. A. Hoover, Chairman,
H. L. Snyder,
W. M. Sexton.

Denton, August 5.

Tucker.—On May 7, 1923, death claimed Mr. J. E. Tucker. He was 70 years, eight months old. On the third Sunday in May, 1920, about daylight, he had a stroke of paralysis, from which he grew weaker from day to day until Friday, May 4, 1923, he had the second stroke, from which he died on Monday afternoon following. One of our best members has gone home to glory.

He is survived by a wife, 11 children, five sons and six daughters, one daughter having preceded him to the grave a little less than a year ago. He leaves three brothers and one brother-in-law, one uncle and one aunt.

He was a true and loving father, a good and kind uncle, and the loss is hard to bear. But how comforting it is to lean on the strong arm of our blessed Lord.

After his marriage he and his good wife took into their home and cared for the mother of his wife until her death. For a number of years they gave home to an aunt of his wife. And at the time of his death his only aunt, Mrs. Betty Sharron, made her home with him. He reared in his home a niece, besides twelve children of his own. A good man is usually known by his works. His funeral was held at Palestine church, of which he had been a member for about forty years, conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton. How sweet it is to know, when life is over we have left friends behind that know our Christian life and speak of our life as sweetly as Brother Hutton did at this funeral. Uncle Jem always attended church, even when he was not able to attend. We might know he was seriously ill if he was absent from church. Bad weather never kept him away from the house of worship.

May we bow humbly and submissively to the will of God and lean safe and secure on the blessed arm of Jesus until the summons comes to come up higher. His niece, Grace Tucker.

Mabel Isley.—The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Isley died on July 20, 1923, at the age of nine years, six months and 26 days. This is the second time these parents have had to give up a child to the death angel within a year. The funeral services were conducted at the home, where a sick mother and another sick child could hear the words spoken. May the grace of God be given to all those whose hearts are broken by sorrow; and may the hope of meeting loved ones again in heaven cheer them. A. O. Lindley.

Henry Leaven Wood.—Brother Wood was perhaps the oldest of the members of Mt. Hermon charge. He died on July 14, 1923, at the age of 93 years, three months and five days. For several years he has been deaf and blind. Like many of the older ones, he had never taken much medicine. Nor did he like to take it. The funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. G. W. Holmes—a neighbor—after which the body was interred at Mt. Hermon.

May our heavenly Father sustain his companion and all the children and relatives. May they think of him as having gone to the Great Physician Who can give sight to the blind, and to the deaf, power to hear.

———A. O. Lindley.

Allene Mann.—Allene Mann, the daughter of Eugene and Lula Mann, was born February 20, 1916, and died June 16, 1923, after several weeks of suffering. Different physicians were consulted, and gave treatment; but though all was done that could be, yet death came. The immortal spirit went back home to God. On Sunday, 17th of June, the funeral services were conducted at Mt. Olive Baptist church by Rev. Mr. Byrd, the pastor, assisted by the writer, where the body was interred. The grave was covered with flowers. A few days later the body was removed to the cemetery at Center M. P. church, on the Alamance circuit.

Grieve not for her who sings with angels in the presence of God. A. O. Lindley.

HOW JACK WON.

It was too bad. Jack loved his father and mother dearly, but it was beyond him to understand their way of looking at things sometimes. Now why couldn't they go with him next Sunday?

He sat on the back steps whittling disconsolately, thinking the matter over. “Rally Day!”—that was what the Sunday school superintendent had called it. Next Sunday would be Rally Day. How his face had shone as he spoke of it! “It will be a big day for our splendid church school,” he had said. “No one must miss it. Bring every member of your family. And particularly invite father and mother to enjoy the program with us. Can you remember that? How many can?” Up had gone eager hands, with Jack's among them.

Then, after the lesson, Jack's teacher had spoken so earnestly and happily to them about the fine program for Rally Day, and had given each one of them an envelope containing an invitation, which she herself had written, to their parents. All of the six boys in the class secretly adored her and would do anything for her, and, besides, they knew there would be a big time next Sunday. Had not their class been drilling on a special part in the program?

So it was no wonder that Jack had run home full of enthusiasm, and could talk of nothing else at the dinner table that day. Not only father and mother must come to the church school, but even tiny sister, Lou. Jack knew there was a special room called a cheche where baby girls and boys could be taken care of while the school was going on. “Won't it be fun for us all to be there!” he had exclaimed, after telling all about it.

But somehow his enthusiasm had failed to be catching. Jack gave the stick in his hand several vicious jabs with his knife as he thought about it. Here it was Friday, and he had not yet made mother and father see how important it was for them to attend the Rally Day service. He had done everything except coax and whine about it—no self-respecting boy could do that. He had cornered father alone, and then had interviewed mother, but to no effect. Both had smiled at him and said they were glad he enjoyed his Sunday school, and so on; father had even joked him a little about it; but as for taking his invitation seriously—they sipmly put him off by saying there was too much to do on Sunday.

He had gone so far as to offer to take care of Baby Lou all Sunday afternoon, if mother would go in the morning. If that did not work, what would? And it didn't.

Jack had never stopped to think of it before, but really, father and mother never went even to church on Sundays. They liked to have him go to Sunday school, but never asked him what he learned there. If they only could hear the stories and songs and the verses, and meet the teachers they would understand. Yet he remembered that they had been very particular when they moved to this neighborhood where there was a good church, but—funny now, wasn't it?—they never went to that church.

He paused a minute in his whittling. How was there “so much to do on Sundays” that Rally Day had no attractions? Mother had said something about household duties, and guests for dinner, and taking care of the baby. But father—“I know!” exclaimed Jack to himself, and went on whittling again, “it used to be the Sunday paper, but now it's the automobile!”

That was it! Sunday morning was father's big chance to go out and rub and polish and tinker and experiment with the pride of his heart, the handsome new car, only one month old, that stood in the garage. How they had all wanted a car! From the time that Jack had first learned to steer a tiny automobile with pedals, and then his velocipede, and roller-coaster, he had dreamed of the day when he would get his hands on a giant steering wheel and make a real automobile go the way he wanted it to.

So he knew how his father felt about the big car. He loved it too. And one day when he and Dad had been out in it alone on an open road, he had been allowed to squeeze up close beside his father and take the big wheel and guide it almost a mile; and his father had said, “You have a surprising knack at it for such a small boy.” That had been a great day. And yet—and yet—weren't there other times besides Sunday morning to play with the car?

Jack started up. Who was stealing their car? Mother, the only other one in the house who could drive it, was upstairs in bed with a sick headache, where she had been all day

But was she? The garage door opened and there was mother driving out the car with baby on the front seat beside her. She had resolutely pulled herself out of bed to keep her promise to meet father with the car at his office four miles away. Her head was throbbing in tune with the motor, but she thought she could make it all right, and the fresh air might do her good. Lost in his brown study, Jack had failed to see her cross the lawn to the garage.

In a moment he was beside her, lifting baby Lou over to the protection of his right arm so that he could be next to his mother.

“Your father wanted me to come for him early, at four o'clock. We just have time to make it if we go a good pace,” she remarked, as they turned into the street.

They rounded one corner and another and then turned onto the highway that gave them almost a straight run to the business district with a stretch of country between. Jack's mother ran the speed up to twenty-five miles, regulating the gas by the throttle at the wheel, and releasing her foot; she had found that her foot was too shaky from weakness to feed the gas steadily that way.

On they sped. Only occasionally did they meet a car. Suddenly Jack realized their machine was moving from side to side. It started to veer to the right.

He shot one look at his mother's face and then grabbed the steering wheel. That glimpse had shown him a white face and closed eyes!

He threw all his strength on the wheel, wrenching it from the edge of a ditch. At the same time his mother seemed to collapse sideways away from him. She had fainted.

Jack did not dare even to look at her as he clung to the wheel. The car swayed this way and that before his “knack” of steering seemed to return. As white-faced as his mother he got it in the middle of the road and held it there.

But how could he stop it! He knew nothing as yet of throttles or switches, and all of his strength could not have handled the brakes.

Beside him Baby Lou was calling, “Mommer! Mommer!” and beginning to clutch at him, somehow sensing danger.

Would no car come? He must hold on. He could save them—he could! But—what would happen when he reached the business streets with the traffic and the street cars—and he could not stop! Twenty-five miles had not seemed fast when his mother had the wheel, but now it seemed like racing.

Then there flashed into his mind the closing words spoken in his class last Sunday. They had stood together and said, “Be strong and of good courage!”

Over and over he said them out aloud. Over and over again: “Be strong and of good courage!” and his trembling hands tightened on the wheel. Was there really One who was with him?

He did not dare look to right or left. It was all he could do to hold himself in position beside his mother. He was half standing now. “Be strong and of good courage!”

He tried to cry out, but could not. If only someone would come! There—there came a car! But it sped by him. They had not seen. “Be strong and of good courage!”

The country stretch was now behind him, and houses grew closer together. Soon a business street would be reached. Some one on the sidewalk, looking up, saw his plight, and began to run. But he was soon left behind. “Be strong and of good courage!”

Another car was coming! Slower this time, too! As he swished past it he heard a shout and the grinding of brakes. Then behind him the throb of an engine growing louder. A man's voice was calling, “Hold on, boy! Hold on!”

The car loomed alongside. A man stood on the running board. With one leap he was beside Jack, grasping the wheel and jamming down the throttle. Leaning over the wheel he switched off the power, and then held the car steady until it stopped.

“That's a plucky lad of yours, sir.” The man who had leaped from the other car now stood in the office of Jack's father. He had driven the car the rest of the way into the city, after Jack's mother had been revived and tucked in with the baby on the back seat. He had stopped just long enough to describe what had occurred, and to remark on Jack's bravery..

“I wish I knew,” he added, “what it was the boy was saying to himself when I came up. It sounded like some kind of charm to keep up his nerve.”

That night they sat around the fire close together, father, and Jack, and mother. They talked but little, sobered by the crisis through which they had passed, and the thought of what might have been.

Suddenly, as if just remembering something, Jack's father asked, “What were the words, son, that our friend heard you saying when he stopped the car?"

Jack hesitated, then answered slowly, "'Be strong and of good courage,' sir."

"Where did you learn it, boy?"

"It is the motto of our church school class, father. It is one of the verses and stories we learn there."

"Did it help you, Jackie?" asked his mother, quietly.

"Oh, mother, I—I don't think I could have hung on without it—I was so scared!" and Jack turned his face away where no one could see it for a minute. And then they were all quiet, looking into the fire.

But next Sunday, at the Rally Day program, Jack was radiant; for on one side of him sat father and on the other was mother And even baby Lou came and toddled about in the cheche.—Helen Patten Hansen, in N. Y. Advocate.

HARDING'S GOOD PHRASE.

In the stirring days of the World War. President Wilson coined a phrase that went round the world, stirring hope in the hearts of thousands, when he said we must enter the war to "make the world safe for democracy." He saw the danger that "government of the people, for the people, and by the people should perish from the earth." He saw the effort to give imperialism universal sway.

Now President Harding has given a new version by changing a word, urging that men must now be concerned to "make the world safe for humanity." The phrase is less definite than Wilson's phrase, but more inclusive. It implies that governments have a purpose beyond that of self-preservation: they are to minister to those beneath their sway, they are to be servants, rather than lords, of humanity. The thought of Harding's phrase is worthy to live. It breathes a spirit of love for men.

THE HOME STRETCH.

Brother Andrews reports this week that the aggregate of college pledges has passed the two-hundred-thousand mark. As the goal of the present effort is $300,000, we may think of curselves as now on the home stretch. This is always the hardest course to run, but at the same time there is inspiration in the thought that it leads "home." How can this difficult run be made on schedule time? Why, by all doing their part. It would be dreadful to fail. Let no one be trying to reconcile himself to the thought of failu[illegible] Let all be considering how they can do yet [illegible]ore to make complete success actual. Whe[illegible] this is done, we can rejoice together in th[illegible] thought that we have made three or four buildings possible.

Then after a short breathing spell, we will be glad to join in another effort to create a necessary endowment. To stop without that would largely def[illegible] our purpose. Let us build a whole coll[illegible]nd then take up some other good and [illegible]ork for Christ and the church.

APPEAL FOR HAW RIVER CHURCH.

We are asking every loyal and true-hearted Methodist Protestant to please send us one dollar to help us place our church back that was destroyed by fire last year. A CALL.

In recognition of the tremendous propaganda which is being carried on seeking to nullify the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act and to discredit all law a Citizenship Conference is called to assemble in ——— Hall in Washington, D. C., October 14-15-16, 1923. The conference is convened by the joint action of the Commission on Councils of Churches and Temperance of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America who have exercised their good offices in appointing committees under whose auspices and direction the meeting will be held.

New Church Opening.

We will hold our first service in our new church at Midway the first Sunday in September at three P. M. Our special meeting will also begin at the same time. We cordially invite all the near churches to be with us at the first service. J. H. Bowman, Pastor.

—Brother W. S. Jobe, of Greensboro, took a great trip with a party recently. He went to California, stopping on the way to see Yellow Stone Park and other wonders of the West. He went out for miles on the Pacific Ocean. He saw volcanoes in action. He saw enough to furnish his mind with interesting pictures as long as memory turns on her light.

—Rev. C. L. Whitaker reports a good meeting at Shiloh last week. There were about 18 converts and 13 accessions to the church. Rev. J. H. Moton assisted the pastor in the preaching. The meeting closed Thursday.

—Last year 1,437 students, representing 280 Chicago churches, were enrolled in the evening classes of the Moody Bible Institute.

—Brother J. L. Trollinger reports a great meeting at Lebanon church last week. There were a dozen or more professions and nine accessions. Brother Taylor was preacher and was at his best. Brother Bates is preaching this week at Spring Church, —Rev. S. W. Taylor is spending most of his vacation preaching in revival meetings. It is fortunate that he can find rest in this useful way.

—Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation declares that prohibition has been of incalculable benefit to the employees of the company.

—Continued expansion of the fruit industry in Texas calls for the expenditure of $1,200,000 for a large fig orchard and equipment at Alvin, Texas.

"I can truly say that the traveling men of the United States as a body are heartily in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law enacted to enforce it. I am confident that in the coming presidential election, any political party which advocates the cause of the wets will find more men than they realized opposed to it."—F. H. Whitney.

—Part of the old Pabst brewery property in Milwaukee is to be converted into a cheese distribution depot to be operated by the Pabst corporation. According to one of the firm, it is the intention to enter the national field in production and sale of fancy cheese under the Pabst brand.

—During the last sessions of legislatures in the United States, New York was the only state that took a back track on the question of prohibition. While New York was repealing its state enforcement code, 19 other states were strengthening their laws against the sale of liquor. The position of the state governments therefore is stronger than ever before on the question of enforcing prohibition.

—The United States, with six per cent of the World's population, owns 13,000,000 of the world's 16 000,000 motor cars and trucks.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley is responsible for this statement: "I do not know where any speakeasies are and I don't believe any other decent citizen knows where they are. If they exist, it is not prohibition that causes them but a violation of prohibition. You might as well say the increase in the number of bank robberies is due to the law against burglary."

—Since saloons have gone from Monroe, county. O., the children's home at Woodsfield, with 30 acres of ground and a building worth $40.000, has but one child in it, a little boy of four years. In old saloon days there were as high as 76 children there.

—A watermelon, large and luscious, was left in the Herald office yesterday morning by Brother Peter A. Hardin, of Tabernacle. This is a rounding much appreciated by every member of the Herald force.

SOME HYMNS I LOVE.
By Luther Kendall.

Immortal Love.

The hymns of the Quaker poet, John G. Whittier, are particularly free from theological speculation. Like the religion of his fathers they are gentle and full of the inner spiritual light. While not possessing the rousing qualities of revival hymns they are very effective aids in worship. I am very fond of the one beginning,

''Dear Lord and Father of mankind.''

The fourth verse expresses a fine longing for quietness and peace:

''Drop thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of thy peace.''

This hymn, with the one below may well be committed to memory.

We may not climb the heavenly steeps
To bring the Lord Christ down;
In vain we search the lowest deeps,
For him no depths can drown.

The healing of his seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again.

Through him the first fond prayers are said
Our lips of childhood frame,
The last low whispers of our dead
Are burdened with his name.

O Lord and Master of us all,
Whate'er our name or sign,
We own thy sway, we hear thy call,
We test our lives by thine.

—John G. Whittier, 1866.

No. 8—Falling Up? Or Down?

When Newton's apple swung loose from the tree it didn't fall up, nor out, but down. It fell to the earth.

It grew up out of the earth through the tree. It was a bit of the earth. Now, when free it went straight back, back to its mother-earth. The earth pulled the apple. The apple yielded to the pull toward the center of its gravity. We call that the law of gravitation.

But there are three laws of gravitation. Newton discovered one. There's the law of spirit gravitation. It pulls man toward his spirit center of gravity. There is always a pull up. Man's center of spirit gravity is up. That's a second law of gravity, spirit gravity. It pulls up.

There is still another, a counter law of spirit gravity. It pulls a man away from his true center of gravity. It pulls him down toward another center. It's the pull toward the thing that's wrong. Wrong has a gravity of its own. Its gravity is always down, like the physical law. That pull is a pull down.

The gravity of wrong has its center in the Evil One. He is the opposite center of moral gravity, opposite to God. The pull-down is a distinct pull away from the God-center-of-gravity. Man is between the two pulls, up and down. The weight of his choice decides which way the thing goes.

Every man feels the God-pull inside. It's a pull up. There is an inner voce. It calls up.. Everyone hears it. It's a quiet voice, but distinct and insistent. It never quits, or very very rarely. There is a hand beckoning up. There is a light shining on the next step up. There's a gravity pulling gently, strongly up. It makes the next step up easier, even when it's not easy.

And every man feels that other Evil-pull. It's a pull down. It's an outside pull. It becomes an inside pull. There is an insistent voice calling down, a hand beckoning down, a light luring down, a gravity pulling down. Sometimes coarse, sometimes cultured, it is always down. Everyone feels the two pulls within, up and down. He hears two voices. He sees two beckoning hands. Two lights catch his eye. And he decides which wins. Neither can do a thing except through his consent. There's no appeal from his decision. His say-so goes.

That pull-up is very distinct. That inner voice insistently, unceasingly says, ''Do the right. Don't do the wrong. This is right; do it; do it now. Do what you ought to.'' And everyone hears that voice.

That pull-down says, ''Do the thing you want to. Don't bother about moral distinctions.. Don't be so particular. It won't matter. Do the easy thing. Do it now. Don't think into things. Now, do it now.''

It's the natural thing to say ''Yes'' to the pull-up. We belong up. That's the first pull, the real human pull. As Newton's apple, detached, went to the earth, so man unhindered falls up, up to where he came from. He grew out of God. His life centers in God. He answers the pull-up toward his true center of gravity—when unhindered.

But—but, the terrible bother is the hindrance. That pull-down has become a second nature in all of us. It gets terrific. There is a suction to it, sometimes like the ocean's undertow in a wild storm. It seems resistless. It's easy to yield. It's desperate hard not to yield.

Yes—yet, the man himself is stronger than the pull-down, even when he's weak. He's stronger in this that he can't be budged nor pulled down without his own consent. No man goes up nor down except as he chooses to.

That pull-down makes a break with the center one pulls down from. It's a gradual break. It gets tenser. By and by the strings can't stand the tension. They snap off short. That's the last stage. The common word is death. At its core death is a separation in spirit from God. We think most of the body part. That's bad. The other's far worse.

The pull-down gets to the bottom of the hill. The common word turns that i into an e. That makes a hateful, hated word. But the thing is worse than the word. It may be left out of one's thinking, but it refuses to be left out as a fact. Gravity puts it in. It's gravity down, at the last lowest pull-down.

The Old Book gets the story straight. The Man of the Book came to break that pull-down. He came to start a new pull-up, and to start it strong enough to offset clean the down pull.

It was a stiff job. It took his life clean out. But he did it. He starts a new pull-up inside a man. It's a resistless pull-up, through a man's own choosing to have it so.

Victor Hugo describes a man caught inadvertently in a treacherous quicksand, at low tide, on the coast of Brittany in France. Despite his frantic efforts, the merciless pull-down persisted silently, relentlessly.

Now the man is down to the knees, the loins, the vitals. Now only the head is seen, then two glaring blood-shot eyes, then a tuft of hair. Then only the smooth, pretty quicksands. That's how gravitation works, Newton's, and the other, too.. But the other is worse, and worst.

(No. 9—The Knot on the End.)

HEAR THE VOICE OF NATURE.

The heart, that ancient battle ground of bloody struggle, is ever combating problems and perplexities. Those staunch warriors, Desire and Duty, are constantly engaged in raging controversies. Love gets in the debasing company of Hate and wrestles for supremacy. Right and Wrong cross swords—thus conflicting emotions and contending motives struggle for mastery until our minds are in a chaos of contradictions. Selfishness, cupidity, and greed are continually luring us with their offerings. Despicable comparisons taint our viewpoint with their venomous excrescences. We would gratify animosities; we would retreat before just condemnations; we would arrogate to ourselves a power so unlimited as could belong only to God.

''The world is too much with us: late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers.
Little we see in Nature that is ours;
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon.''

But subjugate those evil promptings! Do not for immediate, evanescent pleasures encircle your neck with a yoke of hateful consequences and commit yourself irrevocably to future sufferings. Remember there are bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking. Every day wealth and renown are purchased by the dispensation of happiness and love.

Instead when life is merciless to the extent that you have abandoned faith, when you look in the eyes of disillusion, when you are confronted with that miserable interrogatory, What's the use? go sit you down at the feet of the great philosopher Nature and imbibe her wisdom; explore her mightiness; be initiated into her mysteries, and feel the propinquity of God. That is not a prerogative extended to an exclusive few, but each individual's indisputable right. As your eyes rove over the undulating hills their very repose restores you to equanimity. After all was that attack on my fellow man justifiable? Are you able to sustain your antagonism against fate? Or as you raise your eyes to the stars cool and white, are you not able to reconsider that vindictive purpose? As you behold the afterglow of the sunset as it tints the heavens with its magic strokes, are you comparing your nest-egg to some one's mountain? No, sunsets obviate contrasts and give you as broad and illuminating a view point as its diffusive glory.

Nature is God's propaganda! The heavens electrify; the hills shout; the stream murmurs of His ubiquitous presence. True nature is as nonpartisan and benevolent as God's love. Fill the callous palm of the poor! Tear away the adhesive slime that clings to the freed prisoner! Lift up the prostitute sunk in her degradation! Do your duty and if need be, perform beyond what duty requires! Love all is a part of her teachings. Divine her secrets. She will make it easy for you to bare your imperfections before God in a frank exposition. She will teach you that there is no inconstant Christian—that one cannot be capricious to Him or to mankind and be acknowledged as one of His. But that Christianity is a consistent something to be lived daily. Nature is conducive to peace and tranquility. She lifts your spirits on high altitudes, and contact with her gives you strength to face the future. She is conducive to love, and is beseeching you to converge and solidity your current sentiments into a oneness of sentiment—that of love. She shapes your thoughts and deeds into noble accordance, and importunes you to invoke the blessings of God even on those who curse you.

John Haywood Siler.

LITERARY DEVELOPMENT.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I wish to commend an article in your issue of July 5. It is by William Thornton Whitsett who writes on the subject, "Our Schools and Our Literary Development." Ability to read understandingly is a key to many store-houses of knowledge. When with the ability to read is coupled a taste for what is fine in literature, the store-houses become veritable golden treasuries from which one's mind may be endlessly enriched.

Mr. Whitsett has done a real service by calling attention to present conditions. He does well to point out the obligations of well supported schools and well paid teachers. They surely should be able to turn out intelligent readers who will live full lives, and be leaders of culture in their communities.

Ministers can aid in cultivating an appreciation for the best in literature by emphasizing the fine literary qualities found in the Scriptures and in our best hymns. Parents, also, may help by adding from time to time select books to the family libraries.

SEPTEMBER—LITERARY AND HISTORICAL.

By William Thornton Whitsett.

The Roman year began with the month of March, and the month of September was named from the number "septem," meaning seventh. When the Julian calendar was adopter it retained the same name, and the same number of days, thirty, but placed it as the ninth month as at present. Among the Anglo-Saxons the month was called "Gerstmonath," or barley month, because their crops of barley were usually harvested at that time. Among the Swiss the month is still known as "Herbstmonat," or harvest month.

"September stood upon the earth like a goddess of might and glory."—Anna Katherine Green,—The Sword of Damocles.

"The morrow was a bright September morn;
The earth was beautiful as if new-born;
A nameless splendor was everywhere,
A wild exhilaration in the air,
Making the passers in the city street
Congratulate each other as they meet."

—Longfellow,—The Falcon of Sir Federigo.

The famous September slaughter took place in Paris in September, 1792, on receipt of the news of the capture of Verdun at which time the loyalists confined in the Abbaye to the number of three to four thousand were killed.

September the third became known as Cromwell's day for the following reasons: on September 3, 1650, he won the Battle of Dunbar, and on September 3, 1651, he won again the Battle of Worcester. Cromwell's death occurred on September 3, 1658.

The Ludi Magni or Ludi Romani in honor of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva was celebrated on September 4.

Ecclesiastical feasts falling in this month are as follows: on September 8 the Nativity of the Blessel Virgin, on the 14th of September the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, on September 14 St. Matthew, the apostle, and on September 20 St. Michael, the archangel.

In the calendar of Charlemagne September is spoken of as the harvest month, and in the first French Republic it partly corresponds to the Fructidor, and in part corresponds to the Vendemiaire.

Ass tated above, the Romans began their year with March; the ancient Athenians with June; the Macedonians with September; the Persians with August; the ancient Mexicans with February; the Mohammedans with July. The Chinese year begins with January and in every nineteen years they have seven years with thirteen months instead of twelve. and in every cycle of sixty years they have twenty-two intercalary months.

The autumnal equinox begins in September. The Grecian Mundane Era began September 1, 5598 B. C. and the Civil Era of Constantinople September 1, 5508 B. C. The Syro-Macedonian Era began September 1, 312 B. C. and the Destruction of Jerusalem occurred September 1, in the year 69 A. D.

There will be an eclipse of the sun on September 10, 1923, at four P. M. visible in California and Mexico. September 3 is Labor Day, a legal holiday. Venus is morning star until September 10 and evening star after that date. September 19 is Ember Day. September 11 is Hebrew New Year Day. September 6, 1875, the Constitutional Convention was held in Raleigh, N. C. September 11, 1862, William Sidney Porter (O. Henry) was born in Greensboro, N. C. September 13 is Jewish Feast of Gedalish. September 17, 1787, North Carolina's representatives signed the Constitution of United States. September 20 is Jewish Day of Atonement. September 25 is Jewish Feast of Tabernacles. September 28, 1765, stamp paper arrived for Colonial use.

September 10 begins the 5684th year of the Jewish Era; September 14 begins the 7432d year of the Byzantine Era; September 1 begins the 2235th year of the Grecian Era; and September 12 begins the 1640th year of the Diocletian Era.

The days and nights will be equal on September 22d.

There is only one proof of ability,—action.

THE SECRETARY AT THE ONONDAGA CONFERENCE.

I was not officially assigned to this conference by the Executive Committee, but it is understood between the committee and the secretaries that where the business of the boards requires the presence of the secretaries they are under no restraint and are permitted to go if their other obligatioons will make it possible.

The Onondaga Conference has never been very large in its membership and the churches have been somewhat scattered through Northern New York. Lakeview, the conference camp ground, is located on the southern shore of Lake Ontario near Oswego, New York. The grounds are not large but are very attractive and are becoming more beautiful each year.

A camp meeting is held for a week preceding conference. These meetings are well attended and are of an uplifting and helpful character.

Conference opened Tuesday evening, August 14. It was my duty to present the work of three of the general boards. Rev. E. A. Sexsmith, secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, had attended the Young People's Assembly at the Camp Ground and had brought that work very effectively to the attention of the people present. Rev. C. E. Wilbur, Ph.D., represented our publishing interests and did very effective work in presenting our denominational literature to the conference. This conference is always courteous to the visitors representing the general denominational work and your secretary was given abundant opportunity to discuss the denominational program.

The conference has opened a new work in the city of Rochester and it is expected that the Board of Home Missions will co-operate in its development. A fine location has been secured in the Eastern part of the city and services have been opened in rented property. A splendid parsonage is being erected with the expectation of using the first floor for chapel purposes and the second floor for Sunday school work. This will probably be completed within the next sixty days. This work has been under the care of Rev. Henry N. Becker and Rev. Dorland Shorts.

I was very sorry I could not remain through the entire session. but was compelled to leave on Wednesday night in order to meet my engagements at the Indiana Conference.

RELEASED FROM DEBT.

In a Scottish village, alleges the Sunday School Chronicle, lived a doctor noted for his skill and piety. After his death, when his books were examined, several accounts had written across them in red ink: "Forgiven—too poor to pay." His wife, who was of a different disposition, said: "These accounts must be paid." She therefore sued for the money. The judge said: "Is this your husband's handwriting in ink?" She replied that it was. "Then," said the judge, "there is not a tribunal in the land that can obtain money where he has written 'Forgiven'." So when Christ says: "Thy sins are forgiven," we are released from spiritual debts.—Exchange.

HURRY UP THOSE CARDS!

Return postal cards for delegates' credentials were sent out about two weeks ago. Up to this writing not more than half of them have been returned. I am very sure practically all third quarterly conferences have been held, so there is no excuse for the delay in returning the cards. Brother Dixon needs to know who the delegates are so he can make out the conference committees. I need to know so I can make out the Conference roll. Please do not delay sending the cards because you are not sure whether the delegate-elect will attend Conference or not. That, frankly, is none of your business. "The pastor, immediately after the third quarterly conference, shall certify to the Secretary of the Annual Conference the representative elected."

In order to save time and postage, I indicated on the postals sent the pastors the amount due from each charge for Journals. If you failed to notice it or destroyed the card let me know and I will tell you how much you owe the Journal Fund. I very greatly desire to get the money all in before Conference so I can make a full report.

The official blanks will be sent out about the middle of September. The same blanks we have used for the last three years will be used again this year. New blanks will have to be printed after this year, and the Committee on Blanks, of which the secretary is chairman, will very greatly appreciate any suggestions for the improvement of the blanks. We want to make them simple but at the same time complete. You can help us greatly if you will.

C. W. Bates, Secretary.

THE METHODIST PROTESTANT COLLEGE.

It was my good fortune to attend the picnic at the Methodist Protestant College on August 18. There we found numbers of friends and acpaintances and the association was both pleasant and profitable. Mr. Hunter, the architect of the college, and also of other colleges that I know, was there and he was ready to explain in detail any part of the great building of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The building is a magnificent structure and the location is admirable. For an administration building it would seem that everything is perfectly adapted. And the plan calls for additions to the building as they are needed. Every Methodist Protestant should feel a pride in contemplating what has been done by his church, and a still greater pride in what the church is planning to do. When the necessary dormitories are built and the College is opened for students, then his bosom might swell with a still greater pride in the educational work that the church is doing. All honor is due to those who have worked so nobly and well in this great undertaking; but, as a whole, the church has held up their hands rather feebly.

It is my purpose to say a few words about the vital interests of the Methodist Protestant College. In the first place, too much money has been spent for the church not to spend more. A college can not do real work unless it has homes for its students. The time has been when students could get board and room outside the college walls, but that time has gone forever. At present, no college can exist without providing homes for its student body. And before the Methodist Protestant College can be opened, it must have dormitory halls. So the church must rise and build these dormitories, money must be paid in in large amounts, and the work must be pushed to completion before the College can be opened in the fall of 1924.

Again, the College must have a good endowment fund. The history of all colleges shows that this is an absolute necessity.

To raise funds for these and other necessary purposes, the wealth of the church must be tapped.. It is wise to get a subscription from every member of the Methodist Protestant Church and thus enlist his sympathy, interest, and efforts. But the rank and file of the Methodist Protestant Church, like the rank and file of other churches, can not give large sums. Would that they could do so. They are doing and will do what they can and they are sacrificing and will sacrifice according to their ability. But, to build a great college calls for large sums of money. Doubtless there are many men and possibly a number of women of large means in North Carolina who are members of the Methodist Protestant Church. At least we have heard that there are several such persons in the state. These men must not be asked how much they will give, but they must be approached, by the proper authority of the College, and the opportunity of giving their thousands to the church, to humanity, and to God must be laid upon their hearts. They must be asked for definite sums, sums worthy of the men who are asked to give them, sums of money large enough to challenge them to the magnitude and greatness of the work. All this must be laid upon their hearts and conciences in faith and prayer, and then the solicitation must not cease until the heart is impressed and the gift made.

Some time ago a secretary of the board of missions of one of our denominations went to a wealthy man and spoke to the gentleman of the greatness as well as the need of the mission work of his church. The man felt the voice of conscience dictating to him to give to the cause and he commenced writing a check, saying as he did so: "I will give you $100 for the cause." The secretary replied, "I did not come to you for $100, I came to you for $1,000." This challenged the heart of the gentleman to a great undertaking and the secretary went away with the one thousand dollars for the cause of the Master.

At one time while Mr. Moody was in England conducting one of his evangelistic campaigns, it was necessary for him to raise quite a large sum of money for carrying on the work of God. He sent out solicitors and the money came in by nickels and dimes, as we would call it. On the lists of the collectors was the name of a lady who had given five pounds. Mr. Moody knew that she was able to do much more for God and so he went to see her himself. He said to the lady that he had come for $500 pounds for the work of the church and for God. The lady was challenged and she gladly gave the sum called for.

And so, in faith and prayer, the responsibility of building and manning, as well as of endowing the Methodist Protestant College must be laid upon the rich and wealthy. The small sums that the rank and file of the church can give help, and they help wonderfully, but they can not build and endow as well as to run an A grade college in North Carolina. The wealth of the church must be enlisted in this great cause. Our wealthy men and women must be made to see a vision of what their wealth, when invested in this college, can do for the cause of their church, for their fellow men, for the world, and for God.

Some men of wealth have caught this vision already. J. Norman Wills has been on the mount and he has seen the glorious future of the Methodist Protestant Church with a strong college in North Carolina. He has offered his thousands if the church will make it worth while. The men of wealth in the Methodist Protestant Church must be made to catch the same beatific uplift. Let the church set aside a week of prayer and let that week cover Sunday, and let the chief object of prayer of the Methodist Protestants in North Carolina be that God will impress the men of wealth in the church to give largely of their means to the College, that God may touch the hearts of these men and women, as well as their purses, their stocks, bonds, bank acocunts, lands, securities, etc., and let the Sunday service in all the churches be conducted along the same lines; then let Dr. Andrews, fired with the vigor, faith, and wisdom that comes from God, go to these men and women and we will see an outpouring of their treasures. Let him go with a definite sum in mind, a sum large enough to challenge these men to a great deed and a great gift and we will see the College dormitories built and the College opened by the fall of 1924.

Some have objected to great, broad-minded, heroic souled men's giving a challenge to the church. They say that if these men can give, let them give and say no more about it. I disagree with any such argument. If I had the money to give, and I wish I did have it, I could not afford to give $100,000 to this enterprise unless the enterprise is to succeed. It would really be throwing away money to useless purposes. Mr. Wills is a business man and he cannot afford to give the proposed sum to this college unless the college is to be a success. He feels like, if he is going to give this princely sum, he would rather invest it where it will really bless the world and advance the kingdom of God. The fact is that God would hold him accountable if he did not so invest this money. Mr. Wills knows that $600,000 is the smallest possible sum on which to build and start a college on the road to success. And he knows that he can not give this whole $600,000, and, if he could, he knows that it would not be wise for him to do so. He knows, as a matter of plain business, that he would be throwing his gift to the winds unless the church meets it with a sufficient sum to guarantee the success of the institution. And so he challenges the church, his church, and his father's church, to rise to the greatness of the opoprtunity which God has placed before her. For my part, I admire and approve of Mr. Wills's methods, and I hope and trust that the Methodist Protestant Church will rise majestically and pledge not only what Mr. Wills calls for, but much more. In fact, the church can not afford to do one whit less than Mr. Wills has asked.

Through the wisdom of God, the writer has been placed in the position of treasurer of one of the small colleges in North Carolina and he knows what is necessary to make a college go and function for the church. Some feel that all that is necessary to run a college is to put up some buildings and elect a faculty, and then let this faculty do all the other. But that is not all. Just doing that and no more is simply inviting ruin to the whole enterprise. Not a college in North Carolina could keep its doors open today unless suported by the state (taxation), or by an endowment.

The Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina has addressed itself to the magnificent and sublime task of building and operating a college where the sons and daughters of the church may be educated and trained for citizenship, for service, and for God. The crisis is now upon the church.. The fathers of the church who have gone before are now watching from the battlements afar to see whether their children will be worthy of the great heritage that has come to them by inheritance. And now may the church as sublimely and courageously arise and complete this great undertaking as she began it.

DOUBLE OUR CAPACITY IN FOUR YEARS.

Article 3.

Growth and progress are so closely related that we can hardly separate them. For convenience' sake we will define progress as "Moving forward in space, or advancing." While growth "is the gradual increase of a living thing by a natural process." Every one will agree that we are making progress as a denomination. But how about our growth? Our annual budget is $500,000. In 1921 we raised $166,214.20. In 1922 we raised $138,175.82, a decrease of $28,038.38. Certainly we are not growing as a general church financially.

Why are we not growing? Because we do not pay our general interests in full. The North Carolina Conference along with many other conferences is really grieved, and regrets this fact. But regrets and grief hinder progress, and stop growth. Therefore we are not progressing or growing as we should.

What is true in our general church is also true in the annual conference. The North Carolina Conference is not growing and making the progress it should because it does not pay its annual conference interest. The local church fails to pay its apportionment, and then we fall behind. Every local church should pay in full every penny of its claims. If every local church would pay all of its financial obligations each year in full for four years we would easily double our present capacity in four years. This can be done and will be if we will determine to do so, and then go to work.

Would this not be a practical way? Elect a traveling secretary for full time work in our conference to handle nothing but the financial side of the work. Let him have full control over the general and annual conference budget, but not the local church funds. His business should be to visit all local churches that did not pay up all claims last year, and show them the need and necessity for paying all claims in full. He might locate new church sites, and buy church building lots on which new fields could be opened. Such an office could be easily created in our next conference, and a man elected to fill the position for four years.

KEEP ALONGSIDE THE CHILDREN.

A very practical father surprised his boy one morning by appearing in the school room at the study hour and talking with the teacher. There were a few hushed whisperings and snickerings, and knowing glances were directed toward the boy by his mates. But suddenly the boy found that he was really mighty glad that his dad was there, for the teacher and he seemed to be in a happy and friendly mood. As his dad went out of the room, the teacher walked all the way to the door with him, and in shaking hands showed he was much pleased with the visit.

Unconsciously, the boy had the feeling that "Dad is certainly a wonder." "He is a real dad." "What a fine man he is!" "The teacher certainly does like him." "I wonder what he was here for?" "Nothing wrong about me, I guess, because they didn't call me up." At the door the father gave a little wave of his hand and a smile to the boy. That was all, but it spoke volumes to his son. It was the kind of wave that meant good fellowship, and the smile was the kind of smile that meant "everything is all right."

The visit also told the boy that his father was keeping in touch with him and with his school and that he knew what manner of man was teaching him.

* * * *

Not long after that time the school principal and his wife were guests at dinner at the boy's home. The lad did not learn of it until that afternoon. He did not have to dress up. He was not told how to talk, but everything was just as natural as it always was. The food wasn't any better; the conversation was not stereotyped. They were "just folks," and the principal and his wife seemed to have just as good a time as all the rest of them. After dinner, they talked and listened to the victrola and then mother made a suggestion that they all go to a wonderful movie which had just come to town and for which they had tickets. The boy was not even asked to play his special number on the piano, or to "speak his piece." At the table he was not criticised for eating his soup from the end of his spoon, or for not sitting up straight, and there were no secret kickings under the table. Everything was just as natural as could be. The boy felt that the principal of the school was a real man.

* * * *

This is only a homely illustration. We can't all invite school principals to dinner, and maybe if we could it wouldn't be the best thing to do. But how can we expect to hold the best and fullest influence over our children if we do not know their daily surroundings and do not take time to interest ourselves in their every-day life?

The man who does not know his boy in his school life and in his play hours and keep sufficiently in sympathy with him to be in spirit a boy, too, is missing one of the greatest opportunities of his life and can never make up for it by paying tuition in a fine boarding school or trying to "pal" with him in college days. The same observation applies to mothers with their daughters. The days of parenthood and childhood are priceless days. We lose or gain our children when they are children.

* * * *

A famous lecturer on child development in speaking to a large number of men and women of influence urged that parents should spend more time with their children in innocent play.

MAKING RALLY DAY REAL.

Rally Day will soon be here and every wideawake school is already making extensive preparations for making it a real event in the life of the boys and girls of the community. At this season the young people of the church who will be away for college have gone, and all the new life and enthusiasm that the fall season naturally brings is evident. The church that fails to put on a constructive program to enlist all the young people in the church school at this time misses a great opportunity.

Let us urge every Sunday school to utilize to the fullest extent the special program prepared by our denominational Board of Young People's Work for this occasion. In the opinion of many of our leaders, it is the finest Rally Day Program ever presented to the schools of our church. Be sure to make the most of it. If you have not already received material for the program—and it has been sent out to all school superintendents listed—please drop a line at once to Rev. E. A. Sexsmith, 3437 Piedmont Ave., Baltimore, Md. It will be sent gladly free upon request. The program will be most valuable to your young people through its inspirational features and because of its enlisting their talents for the work of the Kingdom.

Every school is urged to make the offering as liberal as possible this time. The Board of Young People's Work is almost entirely dependent upon the offering taken upon this occasion for its support. Surely we cannot afford for Dr. Sexsmith to be hampered in his great plans for the young people of our church because of any lack of funds. Let us prove to him the loyalty of the splendid Sunday schools of the Old North State.

Order your supplies at once. Then send your offering to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Burlington, N. C., with a statement that it is for the Rally Day service of your school and is to be credited to the Board of Young People's Work. Thank you! Any questions you care to ask will be cheerfuly answered. We want to help you to make this Rally Day a real one.

Lawrence Little, Field Secretary.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to take this method of extending my sincere thanks to our many friends for the kindness shown through death and burial of our husband and father. May God bless every one.

Mrs. J. S. Crutchfield and Family.

There are two kinds of genius. The first and highest may be said to speak out of the eternal to the present, and must compel its age to understand it: the second understands its age, and tells it what it wishes to be told.—Lowell.

DO YOU BELIEVE THIS?

Our country recently passed through a most severe strain. The death of our President, Warren G. Harding, came as a distinct shock and semi-awakening. Not since the declaration of war pronounced by our Government in the World War, has our nation and peoples, in whatever angle you care to speculate, felt from center to circumference the acute tremor that was absorbed at the time of the sudden passing of the President.

Every true and thoughtful American citizen recalls, either the night of August 2 or the morning of the third, the real shock the disturbing news gave them. Hourly did every one listen for any additional information. Every detail was of the most profound interest. The imagainative mind visualized the scenes on the Pacific Coast that surrounded and obtained at the going out of the Executive of a great nation.

For a whole week the newspapers, great and small, kept the nation and the world informed of every movement of the funeral arrangements. In this respect the newspapes rendered an enormous service. A service too little recognized usually. A nation's grief and tribute, as the nation's dead was carried across the continent, was vividly, thoughtfully and deeply impressed upon all by the excellent work of the newspapers.

This may appeal to the reader as being a somber introduction to the purpose of these lines. In the minds of many, who are not fatalists, the lamented President was a martyr to the terrific, resistless and almost malicious rush of our time. There is an unwillingness to patiently wait until one thing is accomplished in quietness and order, but instead many things must be done in record time.

Our analysis of this whole thing is that this grief has come to our nation to quiet the national nerves; to slow down a bit; to help us to think; to give thought to things other than speed and action; to turn us toward some of the deeper and constructive things of life Furthermore, there will recur from time to time outstanding events that will disturb. shock and be revealing, that will continue to turn us toward Him, with whom there is no variableness neither shadow of turning, for in Him will the world find peace.

Do you believe all this? If you do the church has a real place in the program. The outstanding plans of the church must sense every opportunity of a nation-wide deepened sentiment like this and secure an increasing number of people to become a part of the church in its God-ward activity. Every program should invite and please the souls of men. They should reveal to men the realities of life.

Throughout the year the church appeals to the world for their attendance and co-operation in the work of the Kingdom. Every effort made in a definite fully planned way always brings results for the Kingdom. Too many times just a pulpit announcement is the greatest effort made and the results are always disappointing. As one of the appeals of the year for the Kingdom begin now on your Rally Day plans. Get a program under way that you can gladly, happily and enthusiastically invite the whole community to attend and inspire in it a real desire to be a part of the effort of the church.

Secure materials and suggestions from Secretary Sexsmith who will enter gladly into your plans and problems. Do not overlook your responsibility and privilege in the work of the Kingdom, but have a Rally Day program just at the opening of your year's work in the fall.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN THIS? WHAT IS THE ANSWER?

FIELD DAY IN KALGAN, CHINA.

Dr. C. S. Heininger gives an account of the Field Day held at the Boys' School at Kalgan, in reporting the work of the quarter ending July 1, as follows:

"Because of a few outstanding events in connection with the Boys' School during this quarter we will first speak of the educational work. The first of these events was the Field Day which the boys held on Saturday, May 26. This was a great day for the school. It was the first one ever held in Kalgan, and the great majority of the boys had never seen one, indeed not over a dozen in the school had ever seen one. We have a very good young man in charge of our athletics and teaching drawing and science in the school. He put the job over in fine style. He had the boys trained in a large number of drills which they gave between the various races, and these drills were just fine. These drills were by about forty of the middle sized boys—fifth and sixth grade boys especially. Then in the races the boys did not do so bad, and there was no bickering or quarreling so we felt very happy over it.

"All the schools in the city above the fourth grade were invited to be spectators, and they turned out in full force with their teachers—we had the Government Middle School, th Government Normal School, and its two practice schools, and the Railway School and the Wanch'uan Higher Primary, and the general public came in so that the number was certainly over one thousand, and probably nearer 1200.

"Every one was much pleased, and the American consul was profuse in his praise of the boys' work. I think that the reputation the boys won will give us all the students we want this fall, and in spite of a larger building we will be hanging out the same old sign of full house.

It will, of course, help the spirit of the school. We are very glad we have a good roomy campus with places for an athletic field. There is practically no school in Kalgan with such a good chance for an athletic field as we have. It will take a while before we can get a large percentage of our support from the local community, but there is no reason why it should not come later on.

"Indeed the percentage of funds from abroad to the local receipts is all the time falling, as far as our records show. Of course, for some time the more we put into it the more we will get out of the school.

"We asked a number of friends here in the city to come and start a fund locally to help with our Boys' School building campaign. We have every assurance of at least Mex. $2,000 and at our commencement we reported over $1250 already subscribed.

"Work has been begun upon the assembly hall and recitation rooms. Soon we will begin work on the dining room and kitchens, and we hope to be able to enter a new class of students on September 10.

"Just after commencement our educational committee met, and made plans for better work not only here, but also in the outstation schools.

"We hope to get most of our teachers at a Summer Institute."

One hundred and ten students were enrolled last scholastic year, no more could be accommodated, hence the urgent need of additional rooms, and there were 3 graduates at commencement.

We echo Dr. Heininger's hope that we "can soon send a man there to devote himself fully to the educational work, for it is a big proposition."

DENOMINATIONAL EFFICIENCY.

By President A. N. Ward, D.D.

The budget of $500,000 laid upon the church by the last General Conference was carefully considered, and represented the actual needs of the boards and institutions of the church. It was not too high. It was not beyond the ability of the church, as is evidenced by the fact that the churches that got the vision and made the effort to raise their assessment found it possible to do so. I know we are raising more money for general interests than ever before, but that is not saying much. For years the Methodist Protestant Church gave to Foreign Missions a sum of money that would not equal the amount necessary to build a quarter of a mile of a concrete state road. The amount we are giving now to foreign missions, including the amount raised by the Woman's Board, would build annually less than four miles of concrete highway. I know of one man, a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, who built for his own convenience more than one mile of a concrete road. And the great Methodist Protestant Church is giving less to missions anually than would build four miles of a state highway! And the world is waiting for the only Gospel that can possibly save it from chaos and despair! While we are making up our minds about it, the civilizations of the world are hanging in the balance, and nobody knows the outcome of it all!

The budget, raised in full, would carry forward efficiently all the boards and institutions of the church as now organized. Before this quadrennium comes to a close, two, and perhaps three, of our educational institutions will practically cease to function, unless the church comes to their rescue. And all three of these institutions could live efficiently, if the denominational budget had been raised.

Twenty-four per cent of the budget has been allotted to the Board of Education. In other words, $120,000 was allotted to the educational work of the church. But only 28 per cent of this amount has come in; in round numbers, $33.000. And when the Board distributed its funds to its beneficiaries, the amount actually paid to the college I represent was only $2,000; an amount less than what we actually received before we ever thought of having a denominational budget.

I do not put the blame anywhere in particular, It is a general blame, not a particular blame. Our church officials are not to blame. We are all to blame. The whole church is to blame. The Methodist Protestant Church has never experienced a consciousness of responsibility in terms of efficiency. We have been asking for money in a hazy sort of way, and we have taken what the people have given and suited our program to the money received. We have failed as a denomination to survey our responsibility as a denomination. A survey of our responsibility should come first, then the program, and then the asking for the money with which to meet the responsibility.

Look for a moment at our educational history. Certainly our denomination has never had a denominational educational responsibility. We have never made an educational survey of our field and of our responsibility as a church to Christian education. We have prayed to the Lord of the harvest to send forth reapers, and have largely let it go at that. And the Lord of the harvest has done the best he could to answer our prayer. We have given little thought to the Wilderness that must be subdued, to the ground that must be plowed and cultivated, to the harvests that must be tended. We have had no real educational program of a constructive character.

There is the field—behold it! Westminster College ,and our responsibility to the people of the Southwest, Kansas City University, the greatest, perhaps of all our responsibilities, certainly the greatest of all our educational er than the opportunities offered by all our other institutions put together; and the response of the church so meager, so pitiful! And Adrian—how dear that name is to that chosen few that have largely made the denomination in the Middle West! Struggling on, administrations rising and falling in a vain attempt to do what no church college on earth could do without larger denominational support—what a brave record she has made! And Western Maryland, the most successful of our colleges in some respects, but whose success was made possible through the subsidy given by the State of Maryland. And now comes the baby of the family, a lusty youngster with a voice like one crying in the wilderness, but who knows if it will survive the vicissitudes of childhood and youth!

The whole recital seems a doleful tale, and it is! And I would not tell it if it could not be told as a challenge for the future.

The Methodist Protestant Church needs an educational consciousness. It does not have any to speak of at present. The denomination can not exist without denominational educational centers. A man can as easily lift himself by his boot-straps as a church can go on without a denominational college. No church can do it. No church has ever tried to do it. The marvelous efficiency of the Roman Catholic Church is largely due to its church institutions. All the great denominations have followed in her train. All recognize the necessity of church colleges, and all denominations except the Methodist Protestant Church are now or have recently made mighty gifts to their church schools. The state schools have their place, and a great place in our national educational scheme; but the state schools will not, can not produce the church leaders, the Christian leaders, in sufficient numbers. The denominational college provide 90 per cent of the Christian leaders of the country; the other schools only 10 per cent. No denomination can function without educational centers. The Christian church would be paralyzed in its right arm if the denominational schools were to cease to exist.

Our denominational budget, if raised in full, will save for the church every one of our church colleges. The standardizing agencies would speedily recognize them all as accredited A-1 colleges. The budget raised would put new life into our institutions. It would save the day for the church. And if the church would open its doors, as all other denominations have done for their colleges, to the college appeal for funds for endowment and equipment, a new day would come to the colleges and to the church. For it is absolutely impossible for the church that we love, and to which we have given our lives, to live worthily and to continue to function as a church, with a program for the times, without a more adequate support for our church colleges.

I have a plan to outline before the Board of Education that I think is practicable, if the Board will hear me. I am not willing, as one of the denominational college pesidents, to refuse to lift up my voice in appeal for our church colleges, which sustain such a vital relation to the future of our church. When the colleges go, the church will not be long in following. But the church colleges will not go, for the people that make up the Methodist Protestant Church will do their duty when the leadership of the church submits a program that challenges their respect and authority. The budget is with us to stay, and a program to suit the budget is already announced. But the people need education along the line of the budget and the church program; and when that is fully given, the people will respond with a readiness that may surprise us all.

A NEW DAY.

"I will start anew this morning with a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear.

"I will sometimes look about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
Ii will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

"I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll try to prove my own;
I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach your duty and be more concerned with mine."

FROM MR. AND MRS. MINNIS, MISSIONARIES.

My dear Friends:

On the last foreign mail a letter came to us from Brother Bates. In this letter was a list of names and a row of figures. As we have seen something in the Herald about sending all money to C. W. Bates, Henderson, N. C., we most naturally came to the conclusion that to Brother Bates the Minnis Fund had ceased being fun, and had become a menace.

It is said, "It is a bad wind that blows no one good." For as Brother Bates was calling for the doxology, and asking you to rejoice with him because he was getting rid of some money, we in turn are singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and rejoicing because this same money has found its way to us here in India.

We wish that you could know our feeling of gratitude. We rejoice in the fact that we are a part of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Conference. We are grateful to God for you, our friends, and for your expression of love. Blest be the tie of Christian love that binds.

We regret that it is not possible for us to send each of you a personal letter in recognition of your most generous gift. But as this is impossible may I ask you that as you read these lines you consider this a note of thanks to you personally?

If I may, I would like to mention three churches which have remembered us but not at this time—West End, Greensboro, sent a tennis set, Mebane church is sending money to purchase something for the boys, and my home church, Chestnut Ridge, took an offering before we left.

For what you have done for us, we thank you, individually and collectively. And may God supply every need of yours according to his riches in glory.

Three Recent Experiences.

While going along the street we saw three holy men, with long, unkept hair, only a loincloth for clothes, and their bodies covered with ashes, which had been applied in a liquid form. About two of these was nothing unusual, but the third attracted our attention, as it was our first time to see such. There was a small platform on wheels. The platform was completely filled with sharp iron spikes, and on these the third was lying, trying to find peace for his soul.

Recently while in Bombay we went to the seashore to rest. On the shore were many well dressed, fine looking men. They were Parsees. As their behavior was unusual we tried to see what they were doing. As they came down the shore, they rushel out to meet a wave and washed their face. Then standing near the water they worshiped. There seemed to be no uniform method of worshiping,. for some read from books, some threw something into the water, while others stood praying in a very devout manner.

And why do they come to the seashore to pray, you may ask They come to the seashore because they worship the water. And this is not the only thing they worship, but include the earth, air and fire. As they consider water, fire, earth and air sacred they had to find some way to dispose of their dead. They would not bury in the earth or water as this would contaminate both. For the same reason they cannot cremate, so they put their dead in the Tower of Silence to be eaten by vultures.

Coming from Dhulia recently there was a Hindi (all people of India are called Hindis and not Hindus) and his family in the same compartment with us. The man was quite poorly dressed, but his wife was conspicuously overdressed. As her cast required her to stay in seclusion, her face was supposed to be covered when out. Her jewelry made her appear too much dressed, for she had bracelets and rings galore. When her head-dress was not kept too close one could see her face. She had many rings on her fingers, rings in her ears, one in her nose, and on her hair which was in one tight braid hanging down her back were many rings. On her arms were great bracelets which appeared to be solid gold. Below the elbow were about fifteen and as her whole arm was bare to show the jewelry, above the elbow to her shoulder was covered with bracelets—enough, you say, for one woman, but not for a woman of her class, for she had great decorations on her toes making a collection on top of her feet about the size of an average man's first. When she walked she made quite a fuss as her foot ornaments were made to rattle as well as for looks.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVROR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9.

Different Forms of Gambling, and the Evil of It. Prov. 16: 3; Jer. 17: 9-11.

I What is gambling? Gambling is getting something for nothing, and the only difference between gambling and stealing is that in gambling one has the consent of the one robbed.

Gambling is a very old method of stealing. In many of the old Egyptian tombs have been found pictures of people throwing dice. The Chinese, a people who until recently had not taken up a new idea for centuries, are great gamblers. We are told that they often stay in the gambling den day and night.

II. Different Forms of Gambling: Possibly the first form of gambling that comes to our minds is cards. This game is of Eastern origin and is very old. It was introduced into Europe in the 15th century and immediately became a gambling game. Playing for money became so common among the Europeans that at one time it took the place of sports.

Dice also had their origin in the East. Today they are used mostly for gambling in the game of crap which seems to be the favorite form of gambling among the negroes, though it is by no means restricted to the negro race.

While both of these games and many others are common forms of gambling in the United States, possibly the largest per cent of gamblers are losing or making money on horse racing, base-ball games and stock gambling.

Certainly the most of our Christian Endeavorers would not be guilty of any of these baser forms of gambling but how about matching nickels for drinks or to see who pays for the dinner? Some do these things, claiming that there is no harm in so doing because they do not mind paying the bill anyway. Well then, just pay it without gambling over it, for matching is gambling. We are told in the Bible that if we keep the whole law and offend in one point we are guilty of all.

Some people would not think of betting $50 but think it is all right to bet "a set-up" at the drug store. The principle is the same and starting with small stakes often is just a seed for the growing of a big gambler.

Many churches allow at their suppers and other forms of social and money-making entertainments certain forms of raffling and lottery, not stopping to consider that any form of "taking a chance" is gambling, and that they are "letting down the bars" for the more vicious forms of this vice.

III. The Evils of Gambling: 1. Gambling excites and intoxicates like liquor. The tension makes the heart beat fast and the blood run high. When once indulged in it seems to call for more until the gambler neglects his other duties, sits up into the small hours of the night and makes himself physically unfit to tackle his job the next morning.

2. It often leads to crime. We hear of bank clerks taking money from the bank, not with the intention of stealing it, but just to make a little for himself.. He so often not only loses the other person's money but also loses social position for his family while he, with his life blighted, lands in the penitentiary.

3. Gambling makes people hard-hearted. The gambler has no pity for the loser, so long as he is the winner.

4.. It is the short road to riches and it makes honest toil seem disgusting. Gamblers soon become mere leeches, never doing anything that will produce, but constantly sucking the blood out of the toilers.

5. It leads also to dishonesty. When the gambler is losing he will do almost anything to keep from losing more and from his first step in cheating he goes on to the next until he finally is loading his dice, marking his cards or framing up with the other horse racer.

Ross in his Sociology tells us that "Once the something-for-nothing itch seizes upon it a people loses heart for industry and saving, while all the parasitisms—theft, swindling fraud, extortion, graft, vice-catering, imposture—flourish with a tropical luxuriance."

Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Coble, Greensboro, the children enjoyed a watermelon feast.

Our number of children has increased to 68 and I am asking you to call the attention of our Sunday Schools to that fact. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Rev. C. J. Edwards, pastor, and Supt. D. M. Davidson of Gibsonville came and brought a number of the young people of their Sunday school the other day and left us a fruit jar full of money (pennies). Besides taking the regular offering the members were asked to drop into the jar a penny for each year of their age on their birthday and we are glad they had birthdays. The pennies represented 1,175 years.. We hope for those good people many more birthdays. We can always count on Gibsonville.

School will open September 4 and if you have extra pencils and tablets let them come our way as we can use them to splendid advantage.

JAILS AND ALMSHOUSES CLOSING.

Probation Officer Edward Hall at Springfield, Mass., is authority for the statement that since the Volstead act went into effect seven jails and nine almshouses in Massachusetts have been closed for lack of inmates. In addition to this and other blessings which have come from prohibition, Mr. Hall pointed out that the orphan asylums and home for deserted children which formerly were overcrowded are now scarcely half filled.

In the old days there were never fewer than 2.300 men and women at any given time in the state reformatory at Bridgewater. About 25 per cent women. Today there are but 300 prisoners at Bridgewater, and only a few of them are women The same is true of the Good Shepherd and of women's reformatories in general.

NOT TRUE TO TYPE.

"Smell anything, grandmother?" asked the youngster who was lying on the floor drawing.

Grandmother assured him she did not.

The young artist gave a few finishing touches and repeated his question. Grandmother sniffed the air and again declared she smelled nothing.

"Well," said the boy, "you ought to. I have just drawed a skunk."

"LEAVE THE MIRACLE TO HIM."

"Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."—
John 2: 5.

Whatsoe'er He bids you, do it
Though you may not understand;
Yield to Him complete obedience,
Then you'll see His mighty hand;
"Fill the water pots with water,"
Fill them to the very brim;
He will honor all your trusting—
Leave the miracle to Him!

Bind your Isaac to the altar,
Bind him there with many a cord;
Oh, my brother, do not falter,
Can't you fully trust your Lord?
He it is Who watches o'er you,
Though your path may oft be dim;
He will bring new life to Isaac—
Leave the miracle to Him!

See them march around the city,
Scarce a sound from day to day,
Scoffers from the walls deride them—
"Jericho can stand such play!"
But the Lord's time cometh swiftly,
Then they shout out with a vim:
"Look! the walls are tott'ring, falling!"
Leave the miracle to Him!

Face to face with host of Midian,
Gideon's men are sifted out;
Forth they go, these chosen heroes.
With no sword the foe to rout;
Do you wonder if the vict'ry
Can be gained by band so slim?
See! Jehovah's sword is gleaming,
Leave the miracle to Him!

Watch that scene on plains of Dura,
See that Hebrew martyr band,
Firmly standing for Jehovah,
Trusting in His hidden hand.
"He is mighty to deliver"
From the power of death so grim;
Fiery furnace cannot harm them—
Leave the miracle to Him!

Bring to Christ your loaves and fishes
Though they be both few and small,
He will use the weakest vessels,
Give to Him your little all.
Do you ask how many thousands
Can be fed with food so slim?
Listen to the Master's blessing—
Leave the miracle to Him!

Oh, ye Christians, learn the lesson,
Are you struggling all the way?
Cease your trying, change to trusting,
Then you'll triumph every day!
"Whatso'er He bids you, do it,"
Fill the water pots to brim;
But remember, 'tis His battle—
Leave the miracle to Him!

Christian worker, looking forward
To the ripened harvest field,
Does the task seem great before you?
Think how rich will be the yield?
Bravely enter with your Master,
Though the prospect may seen dim,
Preach the Word with holy fervor—
Leave the miracle to Him!

CHILDREN'S CORNER

"NUMBER ONE."

"He is a Number One boy," said grandmother proudly. "A great boy for his books. Indeed, he would rather read than play, and that is saying a good deal for a boy of ten."

"It is, certainly," returned Uncle John; "but what a pity it is that he is blind!"

"Blind!" exclaimed grandmother. And the Number One boy looked up, too, in wonder.

"Yes, blind, and a little deaf also, I fear," answered Uncle John.

"Why, John, what put that into your head?" asked grandmother, looking perplexed.

"Why, the Number One boy himself," said Uncle John. "He has been occupying the one easy-chair in the room all forenoon, never seeing you nor his mother when she came in for a few moments' rest. Then, when your glasses were mislaid, and you had to climb upstairs to look for them, he neither saw nor heard anything that was going on."

"Oh, he is so busy reading," apologized grandmother.

"That is not a very good excuse, mother," replied Uncle John, smiling. "If Number One is not blind nor deaf, he must be very selfish, indeed, to occupy the best seat in the room, and let older people run up and downstairs while he takes his ease."

"Nobody asked me to give up my seat nor to run on errands," said Number One.

"That should not have been necessary," urged Uncle John. "What are a boy's eyes and ears for, if not to keep him posted on what is going on around him? I am glad to see you fond of books; but if a pretty story makes you forget all things except amusing Number One, better run out and play with other boys, and let grandmother enjoy the comfort of her rocker in quiet."—Church Progress.

HOW BILLY WAS A SOLDIER.

"My, but I just wisht I was growned up so I could be a soldier!" said Billy as he and his father passed a little group of soldiers on the street. "I s'pose by the time I'm a man the war will be all over."

"I sincerely hope it will, my boy," answered his father gravely, "and that there will never be another; but if there should be I trust you will be ready to do your duty though you will find it far from pleasant."

"Isn't there any way little boys can hurry up and grow faster when they want to, Papa?

"Not that I know of, but let me tell you, my son, a good soldier has a great many hard lessons to learn before he is fit for service. You can be learning many of them while you are growing up if you will, and you can find all the fighting you want to do every day of your life."

"Why father Baker," I'd like to know how," said Billy, stopping right where he was to stare at his father in amazement.

"One of the first and most important lessons a soldier has to learn is to obey promptly and without a question. I think I know why he must do things he is told to do. And very often, I am sorry to say, he disobeys father, mother and teacher."

Billy looked rather discomforted.

"That's different," he said, "if I was a soldier of course I'd obey."

"I'm afraid not unless you had learned to do so before. Suppose you begin this very day to try to do just as you are told every time without one question or murmur, will you? You can imagine that you are in a training camp if you like."

"That will be sort of fun," said Billy, "but I don't see what chance there is for me to do any fighting."

"Don't you? Well, we are all encountering enemies every hour of our lives, and either we overcome them—or they conquer us. Sometimes we have to make a pretty fight if we want to come off victorious.

"Every time you are tempted to say or do anything that is not strictly true you are face to face with the enemy deceit. When you are tempted to think of your own pleasure first, or to keep things for yourself, and not share with others Selfishness is trying to get the best of you. When there is work you ought to do and you try to shirk it—Indolence is the foe. Then there is Disobedience, Ill Temper and ."

"Don't tell any more, please—that is enough for once, it sort of makes me tired to think of so many things. But I guess it will be easy enough to conquer 'em. I can do 'most anything if I just make up my mind to it."

"Billy," said mother that very afternoon. "I want you to look after baby while I go down street to do an errand."

"Oh dear!" exclaimed Billy fretfully, "I was going over to Tommy's, and we were going to have lots of fun. But that's always the way when I want to go anywhere I have to stay home to do something."

"I thought you were going to be a little soldier boy," said mother gravely. "Isn't this a good time to begin fighting? Here's disobedience and selfishness trying to overcome you; are you going to let them conquer? I shall not make you stay home—go to Tommy's if you wish, but I shall be disappointed not to be able to do my errand, and I shall be even more disappointed to have my soldier boy defeated."

Billy felt very uncomfortable. He wished that mother had not such an unpleasant way of making him decide things himself.

"I told Tommy I'd be sure to come," he said, "he will be 'specting me."

"Very well," said Mamma.

Billy waited a few minutes, hoping she would say more, but she did not.

"You 'most generally say I must keep my promises," he continued, but there was no reply to this.

He waited a few minutes, then he slipped out of the room, took his cap and went outdoors.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" something kept saying inside of him. "You're a pretty soldier to be beaten the first thing like this. You are selfish not to be willing to give up your play when mother does so much for you. And you are disobedient, because if you go you are doing what you know mother does not want you to. You're no soldier at all unless you can fight better than this."

Billy was almost to the gate when all at once he squared his shoulders and marched back doublequick.

"I 'most got beated," he said, "but not quite. You go right off, and I'll take care of baby. But I wish it was as int'resting and easy to be a soldier as it is to think about being one."—Kate S. Bates, in Christian Intelligencer.

FAIRY HELPERS.

Nobody liked cleaning up the nursery floor. It was covered with papers now, and to "tidy up" seemed hard work. Mother came in and turned the task into a game.

"I am the fairy queen," she said. "I'm powerful, and I have many fairy helpers. When a whirlwind has turned any town topsyturvy, then I sing:

"Leave your dance, leave your song,
Come along, come along,
Come and clear it all away,
Willing work makes happy play."

"And my fairy workers have such nice names."

"O, I want to be one!" cried Margaret.

"I do, too," said Katherine.

"And I," said John. "Margaret may be the 'Pick-Up Pixie;' Katherine, 'Elf-Elf, tidy up the shelf;' and John may be 'Brownie, Brownie, bring a broom, Brownie.'"

How the fairies worked! John ran for the broom, Margaret swept and brushed up all the cut paper, and Katherine tidied the shelves. In fifteen minutes you never would have known the nursery. Then mother said: "Now, dance in a ring and sing:

"'Happy when our work is done,
Being fairies is such fun!'

and I'll go down and send up the fairies' banquet."

After that they always played fairies when cleaning-up time came.—Youth's Companion.

The motto of the State of North Carolina is "Esse Quam Videri" and means "To be rather than to seem to be."

In 1901 an Act of the Legislature was passed naming October 12th in each and every year as North Carolina Day in all the public schools, when some special subject of State history shall be studied.

In 1885 an Act of the Legislature was passed establishing a State Flag to carry two dates, viz: "May 20, 1775" and "April 12. 1776." An amendment passed in 1907 orders that this State Flag shall be displayed on all State institutions and public buildings, and in each and every court house.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Friendship, Haw River Circuit. — Sunday. August 19, at the usual preaching hour quite a number of people heard Brother Lowdermilk's sermon. His text was—"They looked for a city whose builder and maker was God." The general theme was "Our Heavenly Home," and I'm sure that many were enlightened upon this subject.

The Junior Christian Endeavor held a called business meeting immediately after Sunday school. It was decided that the society have a "wiener roast" near the home of Miss Fannie Gordon Saturday night, August 25. They are still trying to push forward in their work.

Our weekly prayer meeting is still in progress, although it doesn't progress as rapidly and successfully as we would like for it to. We trust and pray that the people will become more enthusiastic over this branch of work and the community may be greatly benefited by it.

The choir here has been invited to render special music on Thursday night, August 30. at Brown Summit during the protracted meeting. Members note this and give heed to it.

When I returned to the community after our meeting here it wasn't necessary to ask if the meeting had been successful, for I quickly saw a new community spirit. Though converts were not so numerous, the few mean much, and the revival of the old means equally as much. In behalf of Brother Williams we give praise for this good work, which to some might have seemed invisible, but to me it was visible results. May this spirit continue to grow. Reporter.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—No, dear readers, we Zoar people are not asleep, but the reporter has just failed to get her report written.

Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday with two services, one in the morning, and one in the afternoon about 3:30. He certainly preached two good sermons. He rendered the Lord's supper after the afternoon service. We were indeed glad to see so many take part in this.

On the fifth Sunday in July our revival meeting began; Rev. Mr. Riddle was our help. We certainly had a good and spiritual meeting. Mr. Riddle did extra fine preaching. He preached the most spiritual and Holy Ghost sermons I have ever heard. I am sure his grand sermons did everyone much good, for I feel that no one could sit under the sound of his voice and listen to such sermons as he preaches and not be benefited. At this meeting we had about 25 conversions. We also gained six members, namely: Mr. Culp, Mr. Bob Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Osborne, Misses Agnes Osborne and Rana Hoyle. We are indeed glad to have these people join us. We hope that they will be a help to our church and that we may be a help to them. We feel that all of this good that was done during our meeting was due to the faithful preaching of our helper, Brother Riddle, and also to the help of others. We are also thankful to the "Business Men's Evangelistic Club" of Fort Mill for their hearty co-operation and help during the meeting. We enjoyed their good talks very much; also enjoyed the singing of the Fort Mill and Greenville quartette. We invite them to come back again at any time. Another helper during our meeting was a Mr. Kindley that came with Brother Riddle. We thank him for his faithful work. Come again, Mr. Kindley!

We made up a purse of $31.17 for Brother Riddle for his good help. This did not near pay him for the good that he did, but we wish to say that he has a warm spot in our hearts, and we also wish to extend to him a hearty invitation to come back again some time soon, for everyone enjoyed his sermons so much. and everyone I have heard say anything about him has a desire to hear him again. So come again, Brother Riddle, you will be welcome!

On Tuesday night, August 7, we were glad to have Miss Laura Reid give us a lecture on the Woman's Home Missionary work. I am sure everyone present enjoyed her talk very much. Come again, Miss Reid! We will be glad to have you. Bertha Hartis, Reporter.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit. — Brother Riddle filled his apopintment at Cid on yesterday at 11 o'clock and delivered one of the most able sermons, as several said, that he had ever delivered at Cid, I suppose the ground being more ready to receive the good seed. The prayer service at Mr. Isaac Black's last Saturday night was well attended and good interest was manifested. Mr. Ed Kindley and family of Jackson's Creek were with us. So glad always to have those good people with us. The prayer service next Saturday night goes to Mr. Henry Easter's.

The special meeting began at Canaan church yesterday; a very large crowd was in attendance. This is on Rev. J. B. Trogdon's work.

The spiritual work yesterday was very encouraging. Several people were made to rejoice aloud in the Savior's love. Brother Riddle preached for Brother Trogdon in the afternoon and it was a soul-stirring sermon too. The choir delivered some of the most impressive songs I almost ever heard, and when it comes to singing and playing the music, Mr. Edmund Ridge can hardly be beat. He is a great leader and hope he will accomplish very much in the spiritual work. Several people from Cid attended the services at Canaan Sunday evening. Mr. Trogdon spoke a few words in the end that were very deep in meaning. May he have a great revival as it is needed everywhere.

The work of overhauling Cid church is to begin next Thursday. The lumber is on the grounds now.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris Hill returned to their home at High Point last Friday evening after laboring very hard to help redeem the perishing at Piney Grove, and they did not forget their old friends, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Lanier, to call on them on their return home. They used to attend Cid church and work for lost souls. We wish Mr. Hill great success in the ministerial work. So come again.

We are just back from Fallston; fine meeting, which we presume will be reported from that end of the line.

We begin revival services at Charlotte next Sunday, Brother Spencer, of Graham, to assist. Revival services to begin at Giles Chapel third Sunday in September, Rev. R. C. Stubbins to assist. Special meeting at Browers fifth Sunday in September. We request prayers for these meetings..

Conference will soon be here. We have much to do if we close the year creditably. Let us be up and doing.

Asheboro, August 27.

Lexington.—Our meeting began at Mt. Carmed the first Sunday in August. The pastor preached Sunday morning and afternoon, and Rev. C. M. Davis of Lexington preached Sunday night. Rev. W. T. Totten of Yadkin College preached Monday afternoon. Rev. C. J. Edwards of Gibsonville came in time to preach Monday night and did the preaching till the meeting closed. The preaching was plain and effective. The music was fine. It was the best meeting I have been in for some time. The church was wonderfully blessed and some shouted the praises of God as was done in other days. There were 11 conversions and 10 accessions. They are: Oleta Lambeth, Arline Hedrick, Effie Swicegood, Grady Lanning, Herald Lanning, Cletus Hedrick, Omah Hedrick, Clifton Waitman, Nona Fritts and Reba Fritts.

Rev. C. B. Way of Thomasville preached for us in Lexington the first Sunday night in August. The death of Brother J. D. Davis at Yadkin College will be a great loss to our church there.

The Lexington people have put in a new platform across the church for the pulpit and choir and made other improvements which add greatly to the appearance of the church.

Yesterday we had good congregations there and collected the balance due on the annual conference budget. Yadkin College has paid the annual conference budget and nearly all the General Conference budget. Mt. Carmel will soon have the annual conference budget paid. J. H. Abernethy, Pastor.

August 27.

Rockingham Circuit.—Rockingham is planning to put on a School of Methods for its young people beginning September 18 and running through the 21st. A complete program will be printed later.

Yesterday the pastor received twelve children into the church on confession of faith. Ten came out of the Junior Christian Endeavor. The Junior Christian Endeavor also had charge of the evening church service. They gave a demonstration program of their Bible work. $20 was received as an offering.

This week we are holding a special series of services, each night.

We thank Miss Myrtle Baldwin for tomatoes and pears; Mr. J. D. Jenkins for a nice ham. Thank you, good people.

J. D. Hardy.

August 27.

Thomasville.—The reporter for the Thomasville church and Sunday school has been on a vacation for the past few Sundays. Also the assistant reporter has been engaged in services at other churches for two Sundays in August, consequently no reports have been made to the Herald for a few weeks.

Last Sunday was a very good day for the church and Sunday school. There were 158 in Sunday school. This was a slight decrease from the previous Sunday's record of 166 in attendance. Superintendent Finch announced last Sunday that a special program would be rendered in the Sunday school during the month of September. Next Sunday morning will be observed as ''Boys' Day.'' An outside speaker will be present and make a brief address in the interest of the boys' work. The following Sunday a group of children from the Children's Home will be present and render a program. There will be a special feature in the Sunday school every Sunday in September. This departure from the ordinary routine of exercises will doubtless prove interesting and successful.

Pastor Troxler delivered a very forceful sermon Sunday morning on the subject, ''Little Foxes.'' He chose as a text Songs of Solomon 2:15. Three impressive thoughts were ably presented: (1) The purpose of Christians in the world is to bear fruit; (2) there is a sad possibility of a barren or fruitless life; (3) it is beautiful to see the beginning of a divine life.

During the month of August Pastor Troxler has had special services at the evening hour each Sunday. The first two Sunday evenings song services were held. On the third Sunday evening the Christian Endeavor society rendered a program. Last Sunday evening the laymen had charge of the service. The Sunday school orchestra furnished music, Brother D. R. Connell led the singing and two brief talks were made. Brother Henry Hankins spoke first, using as a subject, ''The Attendance Thermometer of the Church.'' His talk was full of good thoughts for every one. He stated that the Thomasville Methodist Protestant church compared very favorably with other churches in the matter of attendance.. The other speaker was C. B. Way, who spoke of the spiritual thermometer of the church.. The pastor was present and presided. A large congregation was present for this service.

The special protracted meeting for the Thomasville church has been announced to begin the third Sunday in September. Pastor Troxler wil probably do the preaching himself. Already the people here are beginning to prepare for the series of services and evangelistic subjects have been discussed in the Sunday and mid-week services for the past few weeks. which is calculated to prepare the hearts and minds of the people for the revival campaign.

The time for the convening of the Annual Conference is rapidly aproaching. The Thomasville church and pastor have already begun to plan for the entertainment of the conference. A committee on entertainment was appointed some time ago, headed by D. R. Connell, and the committee will soon get busy with preparations for the conference. Time passes rapidly. It seems but a few weeks and months since the adjournment of the Henderson Conference, and by the time this appears in the Herald the Annual Conference for 1923 will be only two months hence. The Thomasville church and pastor expect to make all preparations necessary for entertaining the ministers, preachers and delegates on the same plan, we presume, that the Henderson Conference was entertained. The new and magnificent church now nearing completion will be ready for the conference, and will afford ample room for the sessions of the conference and the various committees for their work. Information in detail concerning the entertainment of the Conference will appear in the Herald from time to time.

The Baraca class of the Thomasville Sunday school is anticipating a pleasant and enjoyable occasion on Tuesday evening of next week when they will go to Willowmore Springs for a supper and outing. The event will be the entertaining of the class by the Blues as a result of a contest which closed some time ago in which the Reds were victorious. The members of the class, together with the pastor and superintendent, will be conveyed to the springs in automobiles.

Whitaker, Whitakers Charge.—It has been quite a while since this reporter has made a report to the paper, but many things have happened since my last report. One thing of great interest is our wonderful trip to the Weaverville Conference. This was indeed a wonderful privilege.

But the thing of greatest interest is the glorious revival we've just had in our church, with that wonderful saint of God, Rev. C. Morgan Compher, doing the preaching. It is a blessing to any church to have him visit them. His sermons were wonderful, and the people came in crowds to hear him. While the results were not what we had hoped, much good was accomplished. There were 16 conversions and 10 united with our church, as follows: Billie Braswell, Edward Carlisle, Joseph Fisher, Minnie Outterbridge, Margie Pittman, and Emma Avent Outterbridge joined the night the meeting closed. Miss Nina Wilma Neville was received into the church that afternoon, and this (Sunday) morning Mrs. Robins, Essie Ray Neville and Emily Avent were received. All of these except two were children, ranging from eight to fifteen years of age, therefore it means the saving of a soul plus a life. Besides this our church was wonderfully blest and revived. We are still praying for the men of our town, most of them fathers, who are out of Christ, and we believe there will yet be seen greater results from this meeting.

Our Sunday school is getting on fine, have from 70 to 80 present almost every service.

I must not fail to say that our church was visited by the ''K. K. Klan'' on Sunday night before the meeting. As pastor Surratt was reading the Scripture lesson, in came four veiled figures, marching slowly to the altar, where they presented to the pastor an envelope, and turning marched slowly out. On opening the envelope it was found to contain a note stating that one week from then a revival would begin in that church, they highly approved of said work and to prove their interest in same there was enclosed $25 to go towards the expense of the meeting. We appreciated the gift, but more than that we appreciated the interest shown in the revival.

On account of the meeting our Ladies' Aid and W. F. M. S. were called off last Monday and will be held tomorrow afternoon, I guess. I'd better quit now and make another report later.

Whitakers, August 27.

Halifax.—Good revival at Eden. Severe weather first four days of meeting. Brother J. L. Trollinger did good work. He is a good preacher, not sparing sin in any form. A number of renewals. Two joined the church.

Brother Pierce did all the preaching in the Union meeting. We all enjoyed his preaching. The weather was hot, but not any hotter than he made it for the wrong-doer. A good revival in the church. Two accessions.

We planned to begin at Harmony the third Sunday and Brother Bates came and preached two uplifting sermons for us but owing to the unusually busy time it was decided to postpone until third Sunday in September. Brother Bates kindly consented to return at that time.

On Wednesday, August 22, at two P. M., the third quarterly conference convened with the Harmony church. All churches represented except Ringwood. Finances are somewhat behind. Hoping for better reports later. B. F. Lewis of Union delegate-elect. Fourth quarterly conference to be at Bethesda.

Brother Spencer is helping this week at Ringwood. Good services Sunday. Two professions at the third service. Brother Spencer preaches well. Pray for us. Fuller report later. Sincerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Weaverville Charge.—We were glad to have Rev. C. L. Spencer preach for us at Mt. Zion August 19, 11 A. M.

Rev. N. M. Harrison and his bunch of Boy Scouts visited Weaverville Saturday and Sunday, 25 and 26. Glad to have them at our services yesterday. Brother Harrison preached in our Weaverville church; at the close he made an appeal for Life Work Recruits. Five came forward and presented themselves as recruits.

Will be glad to have Brothers Spencer and Harrison come this way again.

We are hoping to wind up the year's work successfully. Weaverville church says she is coming out with pastor's salary and annual Conference budget.. Hope we can come out with everything.

B. M. Williams.

Asheville News.—Since the pastor last sent in any news items from the Asheville church the work has been making steady progress. No big things have happened but there are many evidences that we are gaining ground.

The interest that is being shown in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is one of the outstanding features of the work here. Because of the very generous offer of Brother E. L. Douglas to match dollar for dollar to the amount of $50 any amount the women would raise, the local society has $100 to its credit. This will be sent as a donation to the hospital work in India.

The Ladies' Aid Society, made up largely of the same ladies who work in the missionary society, now has on a compaign to finish raising their pledge of $200 on the church debt. Here's wishing them success.

I think there is hope for the church so long as the people attend the services. Our Asheville church has not felt the effect of the summer slump to the extent that some have. The attendance has held up well. The attendance for July was as good or better than any previous month during the present pastorate. The average attendance for August fell below only two months of the present year. This good attendance is due in part to the increased interest in all departments of church work, and also to the good work being done by the Christian Endeavor society. The society has conducted two attendance contests during the year.

The number of additions to the church membership has not been large but we believe substantial.. Only fifteen have been received during this year. We are expecting more before the conference year closes.

At the third quarterly conference, held on August 1, it was found that Brother C. C. McNeil had been elected delegate to our next annual conference.

A new organization in our church is the Sunday School Workers' Council. We believe this new machinery will assist in the promotion of the Sunday school work.

With the spirit of the Master permeating all of our church life, assisting us in loving one another and in working together in harmony and co-operation, making our personal wishes, opinions and plans all subservient to His will, I am sure our church here has a great opportunity and a future worth while.

L. W. Gerringer, Pastor.

Mt. Pleasant Circuit.—Our third quarterly meeting convened in Pleasant Union church July 21, 1923. The business was transacted in a business-like way. Finances not alarming. Pastor's salary and A. C. B. especially. Brothers J. Tilden Shoffner and H. Floyd Amick were the nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference. J. Tilden Shoffner was declared elected, having received one vote over Brother Amick.

Our special meeting at Pleasant Union commenced on the fifth Sunday in July, closing on Saturday night following. Rev. N. G. Bethea was our help and good help too; everybody was pleased with him. There was a good revival in the church, eight conversions and reclamations; two joined the church.

Our revival meeting started at Mt. Pleasant on the third Sunday in August, closed on Thursday night following. There were about 20 conversions, 13 united with the church. Rev. R. C. Stubbins assisted. Much good was accomplished. All were well pleased with the preacher and his preaching.

The people have been and are very kind to us; have remembered us by many helpful gifts. We appreciate it very much.

G. F. Millaway.

St. Paul.—It has been quite a while since I sent in a report. Nevertheless we are still existing and a few of the faithful ones are trying to advance the Father's Kingdom as best we can. We are having a pretty good attendance at Sunday school, and a goodly number at church.

Brother Pierce has returned to us after three or four weeks' absence. He has been off helping other brethren in their revival services. We were indeed glad to see him come back again, for it seems without a leader or a shepherd of the flock very little good is accomplished. Brother Pierce brought to us an inspiring message and we had one addition to the church. We pray God's richest blessings upon him and that he will walk and talk with the blessed Redeemer from day to day and I am sure that he will always find Jesus precious to his soul.

We are not having any evening services now, owing to the fact that Mr. McLendon is in our community and every church is trying to give him a hearty co-operation. We are trusting that many, many souls may be born into His Kingdom and that several additions will be made to our flock.

Brother Pierce has stated that he hopes to be able to start his series of revival services the second Sunday in September. We desire the prayers of all the good people that we may have a glorious meeting and the people who are unsaved might be saved.

After next Sunday regular services will be held and we, the people at St. Paul, wish to extend an invitation to all the people who would like to join us occasionally or permanently. For it is our hearts' desire to make St. Paul Sunday school and church a home church.

Mrs. W. S. Wade.

Bethany, Randolph Circuit.—It would be supposed that if any one thought of us at all they would decide that we had disappeared or gone out of existence. But that would be wrong altogether. We are here and more alive than ever. Since our last report it would be hard to tell all we have done. A few months ago a Christian Endeavor Society was organized and is getting along nicely; believe their number has increased to 20 or more.

During this summer the well on the church ground has been dressed up with a nice new cover.

The Sunday school is doing nicely. The attendance was the largest three weeks ago that it has been this year. The number present was 102. A new class has also been formed.

Our protracted meeting was held the week after the first Sunday in August. We consider it a great success. Seven were received into the church and as many more were reclaimed. I think it would be true to say every one was delighted to have our old pastor who had served us on Randleman circuit as the help. No pastor was better loved by his people than Brother O'Brian and his wife. All enjoyed his sermons as well as his visits in the homes. We truly hope that he and Mrs. O'Brian will be allowed to come again.

High Point.—In the presence of a few relatives and friends last Friday evening at the parsonage, the marriage of Mr. Porter Montgomery and Miss Edith Oliver was solemnized in a simple, impressive ceremony, Dr. George R. Brown being the officiating minister. The bride, who is a native of High Point, is attractive and popular, and the groom, a son of Mrs. B. F. Montgomery, is energetic and industrious, being associated in business with his brother, Mr. J. R. Montgomery, a well-known contractor. A large circle of friends of this popular young couple extend hearty congratulations and all good wishes to them, as they embark on life's journey together. May the voyage be happy and prosperous.

Dr. Brown has returned from Mocksville, where he spent several days last week assisting Rev. C. H. Whitaker in a series of meetings.

There was a very important meeting of the trrustees of the new College last Saturday afternoon at the Sheraton Hotel, at which 14 members were present. The question of electing a President was discussed at great length, when four names were prominently mentioned for this most important and responsible post. No agreement was reached, however, and the matter was deferred to a later date. The names of these four men were not made public.

Quarterly conference will be held next Wednesday night in the church. At this time the result of election of delegate to the Annual Conference, which will convene October 31 at Thomasville, will be announced. Messrs. V. W. Idol and C. C. Robbins were the nominees.

Work on the new church is progressing nicely, and a great many favorable comments on its appearance are heard on all sides.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Noble and little daughter, of Chicago, are guests in the home of Capt. A. M. Rankin. Mrs. Noble was Miss Etta Blair of Asheboro, and a sister of Mrs. Rankin.

Mrs. S. S. Coe, Mrs. Vernon W. Idol, and Miss Vera Idol are in Madison as guests of the family of their brother, Mr. Victor H. Idol.

Miss Margaret Rankin is expected to return home tonight from a visit of ten days to friends in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Marr and Weaver, Jr., are visiting relatives in Bryson City, N. C.

RALLY DAY.

Rally Day is one of the most natural of all our special days. It follows the period of summer vacation when the flocks are scattered so that there is need for the assembling of the hosts for battle. It is the time too when the school rooms are being filled and classes organized from the first grade to the senior high; the time when young men and women are packing their trunks to go to college and leave the home associations.

"Rally Day," I say, grows out of the actual needs of the season and is not a special day which has been arbitrarily determined. The church or the Sunday school failing to observe this day has clipped the wings of its own opportunity and will go, through the year, with shortened horizon and weakened morale.

Let us boost Rally Day and show Sexsmith that we are behind him and his board in the purpose to organize and lead the young life of our church into Christian life and action.

Heartily, Harlan L. Feeman.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Memory of Our Loved One.

Early Tuesday morning, June 12, 1923, Cecil Poythress, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Poythress, took his flight to heaven. He was only one year, one month and 23 days old. He had always been a sweet child, and loved every one he came in contact with. He was sick only three days before he died, but the Lord knoweth best, His will must be done. He is missed in his home and by his friends and relatives. He is survived by his parents, one brother and relatives. May the Lord bless and lead his parents in the paths of righteousness that they might meet him again in that beautiful land.

The funeral services were held at the family burying ground on Wednesday afternoon at Mr. G. M. Stanback's, conducted by Rev. W. H. Neese, with a large crowd and beautiful flowers which showed our love for him.

''He is sleeping, sweetly sleeping,
In a new-made grave today:
We are weeping, sadly weeping,
For our darling gone away.''

He is sleeping with Jesus, with a cape jessamine in his hand. Oh how sweet it will be to meet little Cecil again!

Alma Poythress.

Resolutions of Respect.

We, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, together with the members of the Asheville M. P. church, desire to offer a tribute of love and esteem to three of our dear sisters who were called to their reward within seven days: namely, Mrs. Claudia Baynard, Mrs. Mary E. Tootles, Mrs. J. F. Salis bury.

Because of illness these good women were not in recent months permitted to attend church services, but they remained faithful to the end, and were loved by all who had the pleasure of knowing them.

Resolved, That we patiently submit to the changes which God in His wisdom permits to come to us, realizing that they are at rest, and their good works do follow them.

Resolved, That we place in the hands of each family and send to the Methodist Protestant Herald and the Methodist Protestant this evidence of our sympathy in their sad loss, which to the deceased is eternal gain.

We commend those who mourn this loss to the Master whom the departed loved and served.

He alone can comfort the broken hearted.

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer,
Mrs. E. F. Allman.

Pauline Elizabeth Combs, ten-year-old daughter of Luther P. and Della Pegram Combs was struck by an automobile while visiting in Greensboro July 25 and died two days later at Long's Hospital. The child had just stepped off the steps leading to the side walk and started down street and threw a ball to a little girl near: the girl missing the ball, Pauline ran across street to get it and stooped almost against the curb to pick it up, and the car, a Ford coupe, struck her, dragging her some distance. She never regained consciousness She was terribly bruised and broken up.

Pauline was the eldest of four girls: Eva Avahlee, Mabel and one brother, Loyd, survive, also the father and mother. Little Pauline was a bright, energetic little girl, always full of life, so unselfish and ready to do something for some one else. She loved to go to Sunday school and church, loved her people devotedly. She was sweet-natured, kind and good to all. Oh, how we miss her little willing footsteps in the home and everywhere we go! She had a clear, sweet voice and dearly loved to sing, oftentimes singing herself to sleep at night. It seems I can almost hear her singing, ''I want to go to glory some day,'' and lots of other songs. Bless her little heart, she is singing with the angels in glory now and will never have to face the trials and troubles of this world. Though it is hard for us to understand why little Pauline had to be taken, especially that way, we know it is for the best and we will try to bow in humble submission to his will, who knoweth and doeth all things well. Jesus loaned her to us for a little while, and indeed this is a brighter place for her having lived her short little life here with us on earth.

The funeral services were held at Bethel church near her home by Rev. J. R. Hutton. There was a large crowd present and the little grave was covered with beautiful flowers.

Sleep on in thy beauty,
Our sweet angel child,
By sorrow unblighted,
By sin undefiled.

Like the dove to the ark,
Thou hast flown to thy rest,
From the wild sea of strife,
To the home of the blest.

May God help us all to meet Pauline in heaven is the prayer of

One That Knew and Loved Her.

Mr. Richard James Paschall.—On Friday morning, August 18, the grief-stricken members of his family saw the passing of Mr. R. J. Paschall to his heavenly home. Uncle Dick, as he was known to all around him, was in his 77th year. He had been in declining health for several years. Sometimes he was quite a care, but his loving wife was ever ready to do all in her power for his good and happiness, never tiring in her effort. The sons and daughters were especially kind and attentive to him in his later years, assisting in every way.

Mr. Paschall was a true and active member of New Hope church, Vance circuit, having held his membership there for more than 50 years.. He was one to hold himself in the back-ground of others, but the true Christian life has shed an influence that no one can measure. It is seen most vividly in the lives of his children and grandchildren.

He was twice married. His second wife, who was Miss Josephine Dowling, and the following survive him: Messrs. W. H., J. E., A. B.. and J. R., Mrs. Hugh Wilson, Mrs. Lewis Lambert, Misses Esther and Louise Paschall.

He was laid to rest at New Hope church, his pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, assisted by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, in charge of services. The four sons and two sons-in-law acted as pall-bearers, with grandsons and nephews as honorary pall-bearers.

M.

Rice—Edith, the 18-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Rice, died August 23, 1923. Funeral services conducted by the writer August 24, after which the remains were placed to rest in Clarke's Chapel cemetery. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

THE GLORY OF SALVATION.

The Holy Scriptures reveal at least three purposes in the plan of redemption. The first and most evident is, of course, to deliver the individual from the guilt and power of sin. The second purpose is to fit the believer for service by the infilling of the Holy Spirit. The third purpose is to glorify God.

There is abundant evidence in the Scriptures that God permitted sin and suffering to come into the world in order that He might be glorified in the salvation and restored happiness of the race. The disciples were anxious to know in regard to the man born blind: ''Who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?'' Jesus replied: ''Neither hath this man sinned nor his parents; but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.'' He was permitted to be born blind in order that God might be glorified in his restoration to sight.

In regard to the sickness of Lazarus Jesus said, ''This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.'' God permitted the sickness and death of Lazarus in order that He might be glorified in his resurrection from the dead. By the same analogy of reasoning it is plainly inferred and substantially revealed that sin was allowed to enter this world in order that great glory might come to God through man's salvation. ''Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound.'' The grace of God is more than a remedy for all sin.

It is evident that the redemption of fallen man is the crowning achievement of God through His Son, Jesus Christ. '' 'Twas great to speak a world from naught; 'twas greater to redeem.'' The atonement is more than a divine gesture in the direction of righteousness. Redemption is more than repairing the waste places along the trail of the serpent. Christian experience is more than escaping hell fire. The most effulgent glory of God streams from the cross, beams from the soul and life of the believer, and culminates in the attainment of immortal destiny.

The more complete the experience of salvation, the greater the glory that comes to rejoice the heart of God. ''There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.'' But the profoundest satisfaction wells up in the heart of the Redeemer. ''He shall see the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied.''

Man's supreme duty is to ''render unto the Lord the glory due unto his name.'' This duty demands the exercise of a faith that claims ''the fulness of the blessings of the gospel of Christ.'' For ''without faith it is impossible to please him.'' It demands also the living a life of blameless conformity to the will of God. It demands furthermore the most unselfish and extensive service possible. ''Herein is your Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.''

HOW TO MAKE GRAPE JELLY.

A recipe much in demand now is one for making grape jelly. Mrs. Cornelia C. Morris gives the following recipe which she has found to be very good in her work with the Agricultural Extension Service:

8 pounds grapes (one-half under-ripe)
2 pounds water (one quart)

Crush grapes and boil with the water 20 minutes. Strain through cheese-cloth and pour juice through a flannel jelly bag. Measure and add from one-half to three-fourths as much sugar as juice. Cook to 223 degrees F. Grapes require less sugar than apples as they contain less pectin which is the jelly-making substance.

Over-cooking and the use of too much sugar cause many failures in jelly-making.

—If plant diseases troubled your garden and truck crops this year, learn how to control them by writing the Editor, Agricultural Extension Service, Raleigh, N. C., for a copy of Extension Circular No. 138. It's free for the asking.

—Franklin Sherman says that the cotton leaf worm will probably be epidemic this fall. No need to worry, though, for the pest only strips the leaves, generally, after the cotton is made.

—Plow up the cotton stalks this fall as soon as possible after the crop is picked. This will send the boll weevil into winter quarters early and hungry.

—Health work among the colored people of North Carolina has attracted outside attention for a number of years. The work of Mrs Florence C. Williams, who has labored among the people of her race in North Carolina for three years under the extension department of the State Sanatorium, is a single feature that has become well known. Recently the State Health Officer of West Virginia made request for the loan of Florence Williams for one year, that she might help organize and set to work along health lines the colored people of that state, as she had been able to do in this State.

Mrs. J. Henry Highsmith, who before her marriage was Miss Kate Herring, is to have charge of the publicity work for the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association, the North Carolina Sanatorium for the treatment of Tuberculosis, and the extension work of this institution.

—Fruit and vegetable growers throughout the South will be interested in the formal opening of the new Cincinnati Fruit Exchange building as it will provide better facilities for handling the large volume of perishable products from the South destined for markets of the Middle West which moves through Cincinnati.

—To put Georgia peaches on the distant markets of the East and West in the fast time necessary to insure their arrival in good condition, the Southern Railway System operated 173 special peach trains during the season that has just come to a close.

—Save the whey from cottage cheese, use a small amount of lemon juice, sweeten to taste and serve as lemonade. No water is needed and when this drink is served with cracked ice, is it very refreshing, says Miss Flax Andrews of Robeson county.

HE AIDS STARVING RUSSIANS.

A new type of "Old Clothes Man" is Charles Hanson of Minneapolis, who goes from house to house in Minneapolis to beg worn and cast-off clothing.. Because so many Russians were freezing to death, there came to Mr. Hanson—to use his own words—"a vision to empty the unnecessary clothes out of every closet in the United States, to clothe naked Russia." These garments he is renovating and getting ready to send to starved and naked people in Russia.

The American Bible Society is giving Holy Scriptures in the Russian language, so that Mr. Hanson might put a Bible or Testament, or a Gospel, in a pocket of every single garment sent to Russia, so that not only the bodies of these unfortunate and suffering people may be warmed by the clothes given, but that their souls might also be warmed and comforted.

According to one of the secretaries the great mass of the Russian people are ineradicably religious and docile, and a deeplly pious people. Several facts show the deep regard the Russians have for the Holy Scriptures. One religious worker states so scarce are Bibles in that distressed and famine stricken land that despite their poverty and lack of even the bare necessities of life, as high as $100 has been paid for a single Bible. Sometimes when a Bible is secured in a region that is destitute of the Scriptures, the book is taken to pieces and a gospel or a small portion is given to one congregaton, another gospel or part is sent to another body of believers, and thus the book is broken into fragments, that as many hungry souls as possible may get at least a crumb of this "living bread."

FOUND HIS SISTER BY RADIO.

A homemade radio set in the hands of a boy living in Ohio enabled him to accomplish in a few weeks what his mother, assisted by lawyers and private detective agencies, had been trying to do for thirteen years. He succeeded in finding his lost sister. The story, as Mr. Pierre Boucheron tells it in the Radio Broadcast, is one more instance of the romance of wireless telegraph.

One evening, says Mr. Boucheron, Lester Archer of Toledo conceived the idea of broadcasting a call inquiring for and describing his lost sister whom unfriendly relatives had placed in a children's home many years before. The powerful amateur station 8ZL sent out his call in the continental Morse code, and hundreds of other amateurs relayed it.

Night after night Archer sat at his receiving set, listening for an encouraging reply. Weeks passed, and his task began to seem hopeless when one evening the faint call 8KV, Archer's own registered call signal, came from an amateur at Van Wert, Ohio. Following the call came some words that were hardly discernible, but among them Archer was able to distinguish "your sister."

Late the same night when there was less local interference in the air he got into communication with the station at Van Wert and learned that a young girl who answered the description of his sister was living at the house of a nearby farmer at Rockford in Mercer County. The amateur added that he had been trying to reach Archer for the past two weeks.

To the surprise and joy of Archer and his mother the report proved to be correct; Mrs. Archer recognized the girl instantly as her daughter.—Youth's Companion.

"MY MOTHER NEEDS ME."

Two young colored girls sat behind me in a railroad car that had just left a small town in New Jersey. Their conversation was interesting. One of them evidently lived in the city and had been to the little town on a visit. She was much better dressed than the other girl, who was rather shabby. The girl from the city said:

"I tell you, Emmy, yo' kin make a heap mo' money in de city than you kin in whar you lives, an' yo' kin hab a heap bettah time. Dar's something doing all de time in de city. Plenty to go to, an' girls fo' all kinds o' wuk is so in demand yo' could git a place right off, 'deed you could."

"I reckon likely dat is true," said the other girl, "but yo' see my mothah needs me at home. She is gittin' old now, my mothah is, an' her ha'r is gittin' white, an' she ain't none too strong. She done haf a hard time r'arin' us up when she was left a widow with six ob us. All de res' is left home, an' my mothah needs me mo' an' mo'. I reckon dat all you say about de big pay in de city is true, en' I'd like some ob de good times you is been tellin' me about, but I ain't gwine ter leave my mothah long as she needs me like she do."

These simple words came from a true heart. They voiced a poor colored girl's recognition of all that she owed to her mother in her declining years. There was a spirit of affection and loyalty and fidelity to duty that put this shabby, ignorant colored girl in a place of honor in the world. She was not indifferent to the lure of the big world to which her friend had gone, and she would have liked some of the "good times" her friend was having, but she was brave and strong enough to put them aside in loving recognition of the fact—"My mother needs me."—By Paul Creighton, in the Youth's Temperance Banner.

INDIVIDUAL REGENERATION NEEDED.

There can be no complete social transformation without individual regeneration. The church must focus her efforts upon living and teaching personal religion. She must give herself to prayer and meditation, for it is while we muse the fire burns and passion is born of thought. It is passion we lack. It is spiritual passion we need. In addition to intellectual culture, which was never more necessary than it is today, the church needs this spiritual passion, which will clothe her message with authority in dealing with men and nations.—J. D. L. Thomas.

No grace is more necessary to the Christian worker than fidelity; the humble grace that marches on in sunshine and storm, when no banners are waving, and there is no music to cheer the weary feet.—S. J. Nicholls.

—Out of 80,000 samples of seized liquor analyzed at Washington, one per cent were found to be pure. In other words, drinkers of the stuff have 99 chances in 100 of encountering blindness or sudden death, and 100 chances, even of acquiring a habit which if ever broken, will be at a cost of indignity, suffering and unutterable sorrow.

THE SINGER.

The mountain's height allured him, and the steep
Pale seat of Poesy; but he fell on sleep
  At sunrise, wandering o'er the hill and vale
  Where eager hearts were listening to his tale
Of bird, and flower, and hearty, homely song
Revealing heart that throbbed at ev'ry wrong.
  The distant peaks were far, and still unscaled;
  But as men loved him, shall we say he failed?
No; for this world is fairer for his life,
  And Nature dearer, her he gave a voice
    That found its echo in the heart of truth.
His song of beauty rose above the strife,
  And though he fell, his comrades still rejoice,
    For dream and song know neither age nor youth.

—Wm. Thornton Whitsett in "Saber and Song."

MUTUAL TRUST.

One said, "I always treat every man as a rascal till he proves himself trustworthy." This is not creditable to him, nor is it fair. The generality of people are trustworthy. Of course do not tempt the weak unduly or purposely; but avoid being oversuspicious.

Often in large cities I see a pile of daily papers lying on a box at a busy street corner; a passer, who wishes a paper, takes it and leaves a nickel. The loss through dishonesty is very small, else the practice would be discontinued. Along our own fine Californa highway much fresh fruit of many kinds is displayed for sale. The price is stated on a card; you take what you want and leave the money. Wouldn't you think any one would be ashamed to take advantage of such trust?

A well known manufacturer went into a unique cafeteria in New York City, took a tray and plate, went along and helped himself to whatever he wanted; there was no one at the food counters to serve him. He sat down at a table and ate the food. Then he stepped to the cashier's desk and said, "I ate fifty cents' worth." The cashier took the fifty cents and said, "Thank you." Then the customer asked, "How do you know I didn't eat a dollar's worth?" "I don't know; I simply take your word for it." Evidently the loss is not heavy, or the policy would be changed.

There are a thousand and one cases in which we have to trust those with whom we associate and do business. Trust sensibly and you will be trusted, and your trust not be often abused. Of course you may lose some small sums by trusting; but it is doubtful if this loss would hurt you as much as being all the time suspicious of everybody.—Selected.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Greensboro, N. C.

—Last Sunday Rev. J. H. Bowman had the pleasure of seeing another church built under his leadership opened for service. He has led in the building or remodeling of so many churches that the experience of last Sunday was perhaps without much novelty to him. Anyhow he is to be congratulated on his success in getting this church built. It stands on the highway between Greensboro and High Point, perhaps a little nearer Greensboro, and takes the place of a school-house hitherto used as a place of worship. The men and women who have stood back of Brother Bowman and worked with him in this enterprise are to be commended for their interest. This church will be worth much to their comunity, and all the people for miles around should welcome it and lend it their interest and support.

There were six Methodist Protestant ministers present last Sunday afternoon in the opening service, which was the beginning of a series of services to be held during the week, Rev. G. F. Millaway to be preacher. Rev. R. C. Stubbins preached the first sermon in the new church last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Edw. Suits and Rev. N. M. Harrison were also present and took part in the services of the afternoon, which included the communion service.

The building is a one-room church with a large recess on one side for pulpit and choir loft.. The ceiling is the natural pine varnished. The wainscot is stained the color of walnut. There are hanging lamps and carpet. The windows are Gothic. There is a bell tower. There is ground enough to enlarge the building when it becomes necessary. The little band there have hoped and labored on, and they should now take new courage. May they succeed in gathering to themselves all who ought to cast in their lot with them, and may this church be a genuine lighthouse to keep the souls of men from the ways of destruction and point them to the haven of safety and life.

—Grace church last Sunday voted to sell the present church property for $100,000, which sum [illegible] understood a certain party stands [illegible] give. The present site is the [illegible] church site in the city, but business is encroaching upon it and there is great probability that the city ere many years if not soon will condemn part of our lot to widen the street, leaving our lot too small for our use. We have secured a larger lot not very far from the new court house, one block from the car line.

—Terrible news comes from Japan. An earthquake, followed by a tidal wave, a fire and a great wind, has destroyed many thousands of people and left the country's greatest cities in ruins. We have missionaries and mission property there. It seems very probable that our property will be found injured, even if our missionaries are saved. The cables are broken and reports must come by wireless or in an indirect way.

—The men who write the headlines for daily papers are not always careful enough. We were startled recently to see this headline in a Greensboro daily: "E. T. Hicks Arrested with 90 Pints Booze". The report thus headed emanated from Henderson, N. C. Could it be possible that E. T. Hicks had descended to such a level? We read the report and were relieved to find that it was only a mistake of the hasty headline man. It was another man that had the booze, and Mr. Hicks was only employed as his attorney in the effort to secure justice for him.

—Rev. J. F. Minnis, our missionary in India, writes: "The paper comes in good shape and never once yet has one gone astray. I never appreciated the Herald so much until I came here. I read all of it with the greatest interest. Anything the church may be doing is interesting as I am even more interested now than ever before. The work at the Home and College both concern me and I only wish that I could do something towards the new College. I have been waiting for the report of that great young people's meeting at Weaverville. It must have been the greatest meeting of its kind in the conference. It will be in the paper next week, I suppose. I am happy to say that we are enjoying the new experiences we meet here. We are very happy now, even though we are three hundred miles from the station, Dhulia, doing nothing but studying this language. We hope to pass the first examination in October and shall return to Dhulia to take up the work there."

—Brother Edwards was in our office last Saturday and gave verbal report of the meeting in Gibsonville, declaring it to be the best meeting except one ever held there, according to the verdict of the older residents. The people were much pleased with the sane, earnest preaching of Rev. Mr. Millard, and showed their appreciation in a substantial way at the close of the meeting. All denominations attended and took earnest part in the meeting.

—Nature teaches us to love our friends, but religion our enemies.

THE TERRIBLE DISASTER IN JAPAN.

All the missionary work of the Methodist Protestant Church is in the devastated section of Japan.

Dr. Layman only returned to America a short time ago, and Rev. Messrs. Obee and Auman reside at Nagoya which, the papers state, has been destroyed, but we hope has not suffered to that extent. They may have been at Gotemba, not very far from Hakone, but Hakone suffered greatly.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society's ladies reside in Nagoya, Hamamatsu and Yokohama, their Girls' School is on a hill and may have suffered severely from the quakes, and possibly from the fire.

We infer that the churches and chapels in Tokyo, Yokohama and the cities and towns down to and possibly beyond Nagoya have suffered greatly, or been destroyed.

It is possible, of course, that a number of our pastors, and many of our people have perished, at least have been seriously wounded.

No word has yet reached us from Japan, as the cables are broken, and we can only pray and wait.

The board never has faced such awful conditions, and we earnestly appeal for immediate help to meet the demands which will come shortly. I start the subscription with $50, and am sending check to editor Benson, as money will, doubtless, have to be cabled.

Send at once your contribution, and make it as large as possible, to Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D.D., Greensboro, N. C., and he will acknowledge in the Herald. Prompt action will be of greatest service now.

When word comes, the church will be promptly informed.

Fred. C. Klein,
Corresponding Secretary.

Henry Martyn prayed that he might "take each day as an important trust for the Lord." This is the true view to take of time. Each day and each hour is a trust committed to us by God.

Every morning the Christian should ask, What is the day given me for? The question then arises. How does God wish him to spend the day? No trust is given to be wasted. The day is not to be spent in mere idleness. We are faithful to our trust, when we spend the day as God would have us spend it—whether in manual labor, in prayer, in rest, or in presenting divine truth to the minds of others.

Happy is he who, in reviewing the day at its close, can thank God that, through grace, it has been spent in accordance with His will.—Selected.

WHEN IS EDUCATION CHRISTIAN?

By Wilbur Stout.

With all due respect to those writers in denominational circles who use the term Christian education with such frequency, there still lingers a doubt as to just what the term will cover. It will be noted that the great schools, who are not tied up with either church or state, do not use the qualifying adjective; yet the smaller church schools use it constantly. Of course many answers have been given, but, if one may ask, when can education properly be called Christian?

We cannot believe the mere statement that education at a church school is necessarily more Christian in spirit than education at a tax-supported or secular institution. The blanket assertion is not self-evident, and the alleged proof that the teaching of Christianity is prohibited at such institutions by the law of the land does not seem conclusive Then too, the inference is made that education is more Christian at some church schools than at other church schools.. What constitutes the essential Christian element?

If the church schools take as their platform the doctrine that experience of God should be united with knowledge of mankind and of nature, certainly the platform may be very good; but it can hardly be claimed as distinctive of one type of school when the doctrine is such a commonplace in higher education. And so far as that particular doctrine is concerned, are not the universities—in the true sense of the word—better able than the church schools to give education in these three worlds and to equip students to move in them when they go out from college?

Good atmosphere is truly an asset wherever found. Still it must be remembered that an atmosphere where certain approved creeds and dogmas are easily and quickly absorbed by a sponge-like process may not be essentially Christian.. Students do not attain their best development under such static and artificial systems of education. A little investigation will usually show also that the students soon develop resistance to both maximum humidity and saturated solutions. The misfortune of receiving such a college education is hard to estimate.

Can it be said that denominational education is more Christian, because the church schools can designate Christian ideals and motives to the students; whereas the other schools can only offer much learning? The answer must be no. A set of designated ideals and motives is apt to be found inadequate if the student has not been taught to think for himself. Any student who is to lead a Christian life ought to be so trained that his search for reality can go on as long as he lives. The college, therefore, ought to be a stimulating rather than a static place to spend four or more years in preparation. The question: "What do other people believe and what do other people do?" must always be secondary to the student's own patient and discriminating search for the ultimate. Here scholarship is a requirement.

It is to be remembered too that much learning is perfectly in accordance with the teaching of One who came that we might have life and have it more abundantly. The love for that which is true, righteous, and perfect—whether it be on the physical, the emotional, the intellectual, or the religious level—is a vital part of the human machinery and must not be called unChristian.

Incidentally, the churches are in need of well trained leaders if Protestantism is to be protected against the danger of crystallization and blind dependence upon formulated creed. Already in places the foulness of stagnation and decay is beginning to appear. Of course denominational schools of the right kind can do much in the training of both leaders and laymen.

To be a guiding influence in making life, including religion, a matter of knowledge and spiritual insight rather than hearsay and custom is a task for any institution whether great or small, sectarian or non-sectarian. Was not education of this order an essential part of the teaching of Christ? Observation will indicate by what institutions the business is now carried on. When done by the universities, needless to say, the law of the land offers no opposition.

"I THINK."

By Rev. L. K. Long.

In the seventh chapter of his first letter to the Corinthian church Paul takes occasion to discuss certain family matters requiring attention at that time.

On one question he speaks with authority from Christ (10, 11): "Unto the married I give charge, yea, not I, but the Lord; That the wife depart not from her husband (but should she depart, let her remain unmarried, or else be reconciled to her husband); and that the husband leave not his wife."

In the next instance (12, 13) he speaks on his own authority: "But to the rest say I, not the Lord: If any brother hath an unbelieving wife, and she is content to dwell with him, let him not leave her. And the woman that hath an unbelieving husband, and he is content to dwell with her, let her not leave her husband."

Again (25, 2) he gives his own thought: "Now concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord: but I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be trustworthy. I think therefore that it is good by reason of the distress that is upon us, namely, that it is good for a man to be as he is."

At the end of the chapter he tells those to whom he is writing: "A wife is bound for so long time as her husband liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is free to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord. But," he continues, "she is happier if she abides as she is, after my judgment: and I think that I also have the Spirit of God."

So Paul has two bases from which he speaks: 1. The "charge." the "say," or the "commandment" of the Lord. 2. His own "judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be trustworthy," and his "I think that I also have the Spirit of God."

Paul completed his ministry before much of the life and teachings of Jesus had been written. He was dependent on the recollections of Peter, John, and the other Apostles, for reports of the commandments of his Lord. In Paul's preaching and writing he does not often quote directly the words of Jesus. He had in large measure the mind of Christ, he was possessed by the Spirit of his Master, and meant to represent truthfully his teachings.

However, the great Apostle, being required to speak on so many questions not elaborated, or even directly touched by Jesus, spoke and wrote in accord with his own judgment. He does not often make a distinction between what he says on the authority of the Lord and what he speaks from his own mind possessed by the Spirit of God. Nor does he make a distinction between what are thought of as his inspired utterances and his opinions. He does not seem to have thought of the fine, hair-splitting treatment of the questions of inspiration so much enjoyed by many theologians who came after him.

All thinking has a back-ground. Paul's background was mental as well as physical. He was a Jew of his times in mind as well as body.. He could no more avoid using the forms of thought and the philosophical assumptions of his training than repudiate his mother tongue. He used other languages—having acquired them by study and practice. In much the same way by communion with the mind of the Master, by association with fellow-believers, by observing the course of events, and by intensive thought, he became a developed Christian thinker and a wise Christian philosopher.

The Christian consciousness is the consciousness of a person who has become possessed by the mind and heart of Christ. He sees problems and situations as Christ sees them. He thinks and acts as one in whom Christ lives and reigns. As time went on Paul's consciousness became increasingly Christian; so that he could truly say (Gal. 2:20: "I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me: and that life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself up for me." The great mind of Paul being thus intimately united with the heart and mind of Christ, we may expect the Apostle to give utterance to thoughts, opinions, and judgments of great interest and value.

His treatment of the question of our Lord's speedy return to the earth furnishes an interesting instance of Paul's change in thinking. As a Jew he, and all his Christian brethren, shared the current Jewish Messianic ideas. He expected the return of his Lord during his own lifetime. In his earliest writing (1 Thess. 4: 15-17) he says: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we that are alive, that are left unto the coming of the Lord, shall in no wise precede them that are fallen asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we that are alive, that are left, shall together with them be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." After more than 1900 years the Lord has not returned in any such manner as here described.

Now examine his second letter to Timothy. This is the last message of Paul. He is closely confined in a Roman prison. Nero is on the throne. Christians are being persecuted, and the Apostle expects a violent death in the near future. He writes to Timothy of the things lying near his heart:

"I know whom I have believed, and am peruaded that he is able to guard that which I have committed unto him against that day." "The things which thou hast heard from me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." "For I am already being offered, and the time of my departure is come. I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousnes, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing." Paul is no longer expecting to see the Lord's return. His thinking has become truer to the facts. Evidently he believes that the agencies for the conversion of the world and the establishing of a Christian social order are in hand. He expects Timothy and those who come after him to continue the work he is leaving.

Let us turn to the Old Testament. Here God has much to do with the thoughts and devices of men. Wisdom in agriculture, skill in adapting means to ends, cunning craftsmanship—what we think of as human ingenuity—are represented as the results of the inspiration of God. A most beautiful passage is (Isa. 28:24-29): "Doth he that ploweth to sow plow continually? doth he continually open and harrow his ground? When he hath leveled the face thereof, doth he not cast abroad the fitches, and scatter the cummin, and put in the wheat in rows, and the barley in the appointed place, and the spelt in the border thereof? For his God doth instruct him aright, and doth teach him. For the fitches are not threshed with a sharp threshing instrument, neither is the cart wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod. Bread grain is ground; for he will not be always threshing it: and though the wheel of his cart and his horses scatter it, he doth not grind it. This also cometh forth from Jehovah of hosts, who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in wisdom."

In a somewhat higher sphere the devout Pascal, as he studied the stars, exclaimed: "Oh God, I think thy thoughts after thee." It seems perfectly fitting that when Peter is writing of the way in which spiritual truth comes he should say: "Men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit."

Jealousy has manifested itself in connection with receiving and giving out divine truth. Those who have been designated to speak from God have been fearful lest some unauthorized individual take it upon himself to think a thought and deliver a message; and the rank and file sometimes have felt themselves unfairly discriminated against by authorized interpreters of the truth. In the wilderness (Num 11:26-29) the Spirit rested upon Eldad and Medad—who were not of the seventy elders—and they prophesied. "And Joshua, the son of Nun, the minister of Moses, one of his chosen men, answered and said, My lord Moses, forbid them. And Moses said unto him, Art thou jealous for my sake? would that all Jehovah's people were prophets, that Jehovah would put his Spirit upon them." In the kingdom of God—which is a spiritual democracy—all his people are eligible to be prophets, to think and to give expression to their thoughts.

An interesting illustration of the power and fruits of thinking is the way by which the Jews arrived at belief in immortality. They achieved a reasonable hope of life beyond only after long experience with doubt and struggle. The writings in which the fine results are given belong to near the end of the Babylonian captivity, or later. Previous to this time they found comfort in the hope of a brilliant future for the nation; for themselves, as individuals, the grave and all beyond was dark. Sheol, the underworld, was full of gloom, a place of shadows and unreality. Thinking of the good fate of the tree that, after having been cut down, sends up sprouts from the stump, Job (14:10-12) complains bitterly of the hopeless lot of man:

"But man dieth, and is laid low:
Yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?
As the waters fail from the sea,
And the river wasteth and drieth up;
So man lieth down and riseth not:
Till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake,
Nor be roused out of their sleep."

The Psalmist (38:13) in his sickness and dread of personal extinction prays for a little longer life:

"Oh, spare me, that I may recover my strength,
Before I go hence, and be no more."

A spirit of revolt developed against the inequalities and seeming unfairness in the earthly lot of men. The fact that good men, as well as bad men must go down to the darkness and hopelessness of Sheol rested so heavily upon their hearts that certain individuals set for themselves the task of thinking things through. The writer of the sixteenth Psalm is one of these men. Here is his course of thought: Jehovah is his Lord; he will not pour out drink-offerings of blood to other gods; he will not take their names upon his lips; Jehovah is the portion of his inheritance; at night while his own heart has instructed him Jehovah has given him counsel. In short, he feels himself so closely united with Jehovah, morally and spiritually, that he concludes God will never forsake him—and for him Sheol loses its terrors (7-11):

"I will bless Jehovah, who hath given me counsel;
Yea, my heart instructeth me in the night seasons.
I have set Jehovah always before me:
Because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved.
Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth:
My flesh also shall dwell in safety.
For thou wilt not leave my soul to Sheol;
Neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption.
Thou wilt show me the path of life:
In thy presence is fullness of joy;
In thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

The author of the seventy-third Psalm works out the same problem. He notes that wicked scoffers with their oppression and pride are not in trouble like other men—having more than heart can wish, their eyes standing out with fatness; while himself, endeavoring to be clean and innocent, is plagued and chastised continuallly. The solution of the puzzling problem is beyond his ability until he goes into the sanctuary of God and considers the hopeless end of the wicked. From slippery places they are cast down and consumed with terrors. Turning to his own situation he finds satisfaction in his unchangeable union with God (23-26):

"Nevertheless I am continually with thee;
Thou hast holden my right hand.
Thou wilt guide me with thy counsel,
And afterward receive me to glory.
Whom have I in heaven but thee,
And there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee.
My flesh and my heart faileth;
But God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever."

In the book of Job the hero is struggling with the problem of his overmelming misfortunes and his lothesome physical afflictions. Revolting against the ancient explanations and advice of his three friends, out of the depths of his sad plight he reaches up bare hands and, in an agony of thought, grasps the truth that ever since has been the divine word of comfort in the face of suffering and death (19:25-27):

"But as for me I know that my Redeemer liveth,
And at last he will stand up upon the earth:
And after my skin, even this body, is destroyed,
Then without my flesh shall I see God;
Whom I, even I, shall see, on my side,
And mine eyes shall behold, and not as a stranger."

We have made a brief excursion into the field of revelation, and noted a few facts and incidents. I think that the following statement is justified as a description of God's way of working in and through men's minds:

God endowed man with power to think; and in all ages he has broadly inspired the minds and guided the thoughts of men, to the end that they might increase in ability to think truly and to judge righteously.

QUIET TALKS ON THE SIMPLE ESSENTIALS.

By Mr. S. D. Gordon.

(Auspices Atlantic City Council of Churches.)

No. 9—The Knot on the End.

The knot on the end of the sewing cotton holds the seam in place, and the garment together.

There is a Knot on the End of our Christian Faith that holds all in place. It is tightly knotted. That Knot is the tragic end of the outstanding Man of the race, with the tremendous finish the Third Morning After.

The race has one outstanding religion. That one religion produced the one Book. The book reveals the one Man. That Man's personality stands wholly alone in its sheer size. His life stands solitary in its purity and humanness. That His life went out, and so tragically, has become the central point of history. The calendars of the nations revolve around his birth. The calendars of human hearts revolves about the hour when His great heart broke.

Look at that Knot on the End. Thirty years were in Nazareth. Three and a half more were tireless in helping man. That last week spells graphically the Man's lonely homelessness.

Each night he walked out to Olivet and slept under the stars. Each morning he walked into the city where the world crowds were gathered thick, and where his enemies were supreme.

For two or three days his steps can't be traced. Was he off in the quiet gathering strength for the coming day of days? Then there is the bold ride into the capital on the royal ass. The King comes to his own. But his own received him not.

The common thousands sing their grateful hearts out as they lovingly strew the roadway with garments and living green. But the leaders with green narrowing eyes, and tightened fists held the national reins tight and drove hard.

The betrayal night finds the little inner company gathered about the frugal board. Then the traitor's withdrawal into the dark night, and the last long quiet talk under the full moon. And then the sore strain of spirit under the olives.

Now the arrest, the pretended trial before the two chief leaders, the courtyard with the soldiers' coarse cruel mockery, and the thorn crown, and poor Peter by the fire. Then the Jewish Senate's official action, and Pilate, and Herod.

Then Pilate again, consciencepricked, cowed and cowardly, with the crowds jeering and the coldly passionate priests insisting. And the terrible scourging, the dramatic handwashing, and at last the decision wrung out by bitter hate, given out by official cowardice.

One could never tell the story if he were not held in the hard grip of a great purpose. Both shoes and hat go off, and one stands with bated breath and hushed pained heart, and watches with staring eyes.

The man is laid down upon the crossed logs, and the spikes driven into sensitive hands and feet. Then the cross is lifted and dropped roughly into the hole prepared, the Man's weight coming suddenly down on the nails. It is nine of the morning clock.

As the nails are being driven, the Man is speaking quietly, "Forgive them, the soldiers, they don't understand; the blame's farther back." And the soldiers greedily throw dice for the cast-off garments. The leaders dicker over the kingly inscription hung over the Man's head.

The passing crowds with morbid curiosity throng and jeer. Yonder in the group of pain-stricken friendly faces, John's arm is tenderly supporting the woman of the grief-stricken spirit.

In the thick of it all the one masterful Man is on the middle cross. He forgets all else for the personal touch with the man hanging by his side. Again he turns and quietly speaks to his mother, and then to John. What thoughtfulness! What self-mastery!

And now it's high noon. The sun is at its flood. Then the sudden fearsome darkness Noon suddenly becomes midnight. And a terror spreads in the very air, and seizes men's vitals. What is this? Who can this be? And for three long hours that strange darkness!

Then the distinct piercing cry heard, "Why did'st thou forsake me?" That's the hardest thing for the suffering Man, the loss of sweet consciousness of His Father's presence. But it's past now.. Then the tense thirst. But nothing will be drunk that dulls in the slightest, for even the briefest moment, his masterful consciousness.

Then the great shout of vistory: it is finished: the thing's done: the battle's fought; it's over now. Victory! Full victory! Then the quietly breathed prayer, "Into thy hands I commend my spirit."

And then the most striking thing of all, "He yielded up His spirit." He was not overcome by death. He yielded to death, masterful to the last breath.

And the Roman spear revealed how death came. The blood and water separated tells of a broken heart. The tense suffering of spirit, it was that that snapped the life cord when he yielded up his spirit. And out from that cross of suffering rings out to all men the cry, "I gave my life for thee."

The Knot was tied on the End, and tied tight. He died. He died for us. He died of his own accord. It was his own act, the time, the manner, the fact.

It had a purpose. Its meaning is found in his own heart. It had to be done.

LITERATURE AND MARRIAGE.

By Wm. Thornton Whitsett.

Much of the literature of all the ages hinges upon the fact as stated in Genesis 1:27—"Male and female created he them." From earliest days the relationships of man and woman have claimed the largest thought of writers in every land. The moral and spiritual condition of any land can almost be known with certainty by a study of its literary output, for we find reflected upon the written page the moving causes of the day.

"Marriage rightly understood,
Gives to the tender and the good
A paradise below."
—Cowper, "The Fireside.."

"She is mine own;
Anl I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sands were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold."
—Shakespeare.

In American fiction, and in American poetry, for the past decade we find a reflection of the jazz spirit of the day, no less than in the riotous and nerve-racking chase after pleasure that besets the present generation. The scenes of our divorce courts are but reflections of the ideas that reek upon many pages of the fiction of our time. The marriage vows rest loosely, and pretexts abound for their severing. Day by day writers are coming forward who are glad to pander to the sensual for the sake of a lurid day in the public eye. Our States with their diversity of marriage laws, and their greater diversity of divorce laws, afford every opportunity to those who wish to get as far as possiblbe away from the ideas of constancy and eternal fidelity. The dazzle of money, the lure of dress, and the promises of self-styled social arbiters, prove the undoing of many of those who are beautiful, and attractive, but nevertheless, thoughtless. Refined vice finds a large place in this twentieth century, but it is vice despite all the gloss with which it is covered. The style of a master word painter may enchain us with its many charms, but it can never sweeten the immorality that too often creeps like a poisonous stream through pages that tell of ways that open on death. The school of realists of our time who turn out such a large bulk of our fiction find ready made on every hand the living actors in the mad drama of unholy desire. Too aften in halls of wealth we find high ideals of marriage and home life looked upon as out-of-date and old-fashioned, and prohibitive of the possibilities that come for those possessed of a store of dollars.. Writers constantly seize upon these tendencies of the times, and transferring them to the printed page, give them widest circulation. Censors in literature have never amounted to anything, and hence every age will be fed upon what it seeks, and every time will reflect in its literature the purity or the grossness of its thought. If we are to judge by what we are reading in these later years here in America we must conclude that the home is becoming weakened, and that never since time began have the courts afforded a wider sweep to ungoverned passion and unbridled and unholy desires.

It may be interesting, then, to give some consideration to the topic of marriage, and make some applications to literary development in various ages, as it reflects itself as a mirror of the morals of a given time. Disregard of marriage means a disregard of morals, and hence, a large output of writings breathing a spirit of weakened and ignored marriage vows gathers its heat from Satanic fires that would burn to ashes the dreams of the ages as to happy homes, virtuous womanhood, and manhood true to vows of chaste living.

During the ages marriage as an institution has usually been regarded as possessing three stages,—1. The Physical Stage, 2. The Legal Stage, 3. The Moral Stage. In the first stage the relation of the sexes had but little regulation, and there was but little of permanence; in the second stage the husband acquired a property right in his wife, and in the third stage she becomes his comrade with rights before the law approximating her husband's. As a modern fact, it is almost always true that marriage begins with the moral, moves on to the legal, and is completed in the physical union. The discussion has never been fully closed as to in just what sense marriage is a contract; certainly it is unlike most contracts in many particulars. Lawyers invariably recognize its isolation from all other classes of contracts. "It is doubtless true, as anthropologists have pointed out, that in the history of the race 'marriage is rooted in the family, rather than the family in marriage.' "

Under primitive Roman law woman by marriage came under the "power" of her husband. The restrictions in the main were those that have continued to prevail in modern Europe. The church early recognized the validity of the Roman law, modified by the teachings of Christ, and the dictum of the fathers of the church, and further defined by popes and councils. The indissolubility of marriage proclaimed by Christ was the one great addition made by Him. St. Paul's interpretation of marriage was that it was only a concession to fleshly weakness, but this found but little favor. His other idea of marriage as a sacrament was eagerly seized upon to stamp the union of souls and bodies with a mystic meaning. The early church regarded disparity of faith as a bar to union.

Exclusive control over marriage was held by the Roman Catholic church, and at the council of Trent the opinion of Luther and other reformers was ridiculed that marriage was a question for the civil courts.

England regulates marriage largely by statutory legislation, the chief bills controling same being the ones of 1823, 1836, 1886 and 1898. Scotland goes further than England in recognizing irregular marriages. In the United States the chief points of the law of England are recognized with certain deference. The various States of the Union have different laws, but it is commonly agreed that a ''marriage at common law is good'' unless in the cases where same special local State law has a particular law of nullity. When then State legislation requires some particular form to be used, the want of that particular form only invalidates when so expressly stated in the statute. In the physical point of view the entire United States is moving rapidly forward upon the question in dealing with feeble-minded, epileptic, drunken, narcotic-using, and other classes of persons.

Divorce laws vary in the various States of the Union. This diversity of laws, and regulations, has been the means of affording unbounded opportunities for abuse and injustice.. Legal skill and money have wrought havoc in many cases with all that pertains to right and justice in the cases of many marriages. With many States with different laws of residence, and cause, in easy touch by rapid means of communication it has been very easy to secure legal approbation for much that was plainly wrong and vile.

There has been much said for years about the sex-novels, and yet they flourish as never before. Their wide circulation leads to the further spread of such ideas, and the wide prevalence of indifferent views upon morality leads to the writing of such fiction. They are an outgrowth of the day and the times, and the day and the times at the same time foster them.

The sensational always attracts attention beyond its merit, and we can only hope in this case that our people who read are not so deeply interested as they sometimes seem to be in the sex-problem novel of the hour. It would, however, be much more comforting to know that we had a demand for pure books always, that were widely read in happy homes, that were based upon marriage vows that had the highest approbation of man's deepest thought, and God's fullest revelation.

DOUBLE OUR CAPACITY IN FOUR YEARS.

Article 4.

Why not build a church in Kannapolis, Lexington, Roanoke Rapids and Rocky Mount immediately? Yes, why not? Because we do not have the money, neither have we the pastors. Nevertheless we have more people in Rocky Mount today than we had in that town when our church was there. In the other mentioned towns we have more people than we have in some local churches. It is a shame that we do not possess territory that is by rights our own.

Why not let the building and loan association build us a church in each of the above mentioned towns? That is a fine way, it seems, but it is also a wonderful way to incur a large debt we can not pay. The common sense way is to pay up in full all assessments to our general and annual conference and then let the Board of Church Extension put up those buildings without expense to any one.

Why do we not pay up in full? Our good churches and good circuits pay. But how about the weak church and circuit? We don't have any. They are all strong, but they have not found it out yet. Those that pay little get poor service. If they help themselves they get help. If they want organization they get it. The church that doesn't pay its pastor fusses because they have a poor preacher, yet it keeps him because he is cheap. Can this be overcome? Certainly. In our district rallies many of the local churches were not represented at all, and in some cases the pastor did not attend. In those fields we need to do special work in order to show the local people just how strong they are. I hope the pastors of the following circuits will pardon X. .Y. Z. for using them as illustrations. In the first district rally Greenville and Littleton were poorly represented. Pageland and Rockingham were scarcely represented at Concord. What is true with those pastors and local churches is also true with many other circuits. Concentrated effort is needed in each local church in all such fields in order that they may know their strength. This is not a criticism. But to point out the fact that if we develop the local church it will double is capacity.

Now, brethren, let us make up our minds to double our capacity as a conference in four years. Let us pay all financial obligations in full in every local church; find one hundred high school boys for the ministry in North Carolina and send them through college and seminary; build a church in every town where we have people; organize thoroughly every local church in the North Carolina Conference; select and put on the road a field financial secretary to work on a ''double-our-capacity program'' for four years; never close up a church unless forced to do so; stick to our college financial campaign until it is put over big. X. Y. Z.

LIFE WORK RECRUITS.

At the Pastor's Summer Conference at High Point in June a motion was adopted urging every pastor in the conference to preach to his young people at each church, during the month of August, on the Call to Life Service. At that time, and later in a letter reminding the pastors of the motion, I asked each pastor to send me the names of those who offered themselves. I want to keep in touch with these young people, and Dr. Sexsmith, secretary of the general board, wants them. So far I have heard from the following charges with the results indicated in each case:

Rockingham Charge:
  Lee Watson, Ministry.
  Miss Nanie Spears, Foreign Missions.
  Miss Velnia Mills, Foreign Missions.
Weaverville Charge:
  Harry Burgin, Undecided.
  Arthur Edwards, Undecided.
  Miss Evelyn Gill, Undecided.
  Miss Jessie Gill, Undecided.
  Miss Christine Young, Undecided.
West End Charge:
  Miss Annie Livengood, Foreign Missions.
  Miss Irma Lawrence, Undecided.
Forsyth Charge:
  Claud Spaugh, Ministry.
  A young woman undecided, name withheld for the present.
Saxapahaw Charge:
  Miss Scelene Thompson, Missions.
  Howard J. Layton, Ministry.

Possibly there are other pastors who have presented this matter to the young people and have had some response, and will let me hear from them later. I hope there are such.

Brethren, it pays to present this matter to the young people. We reap a joy of being thus used of God; the young people reap the joy of finding their places in life; the church and the kingdom of God reap the harvest of their labors. So far as I am concerned I believe that God expects me to preach dedication of life as well as dedication of heart. I believe that there are many young people who sit before us every Sunday who, if we ardently hold up Christ's work before them, will enter therein for all-time service, either in the ministry, home or foreign mission work, or some other distinctly Christian work. Brethren of the ministry, in the name of Christ, I challenge you to present this matter with all the power that you have to the young people of your churches. If every pastor in the conference would do that I believe that when our college opens in September, 1924, there would be no less than 100 entering to prepare themselves for some all-time service for the Master. That's my goal, FIFTY FOR THE MINISTRY, AND FIFTY FOR THE FOREIGN FIELDS BY SEPTEMBER, 1924.

Please send me the names and addresses of all the young people who offer themselves for any of God's fields. N. M. Harrison, Jr.

HATE!

Drifting hate, detached from its original source, makes a lot of trouble in the world. It lights on political candidates and blackens their characters. It observes social and economic problems. Hate on the loose is more dangerous than love on the loose, but we do not realize it. Love invites people to all sorts of kindness, while hate is always deadly. It seems natural for the human heart to hate, but that is no reason for encouraging it.

It is curious that we know so little about the nature of hate when it blooms in every heart. Perhaps it may be roughly divided into unconscious hate, as shown in slips of the tongue, reveries and dreams; loose hate, which has been unconsciously shifted from an intimate, revered object and placed on a more impersonal object; and, third, direct, conscious hatred. Only by understanding about the nature of the emotion can one control it when it makes a rush for freedom.

Wherever there is love, there is also the possibility of hate. Just as fast as we can bring ourselves to admit this, we advance in the understanding and control of dangerous emotions. Formerly we insisted on dividing humanity into two separate groups, the angelically minded and the villainously intended. Now we are beginning to realize that a saint and a sinner walks in every pair of shoes. Every lover is a potential hater! Hate is love turned inside out.—From the Designer

SUNDAY SCHOOL DEVELOPMENT IN WOLFE COUNTY, KENTUCKY.

Wolfe County Sunday School Convention was held June 30 and July 1 at Campton, the county-seat, with Rev. Thomas R. Woodford, president of the association, in the chair.

Mrs. Joplin, wife of the State field secretary, who attended the convention, writes that the officers of each of these schools had some interesting and encouraging things to report. The Pine Ridge School has several splendid organized classes, classes which are carrying on week-day activities under the direction of class officers or committees. There is no county in the state where such real progress has been made as in Wolfe country during the past three years. It is very encouraging to see the workers moving forward to reach their ideal.

Though sixteen Sunday schools are located in this county, but 11 were represented, and five of these constitute a portion of the Pine Ridge work, and are under the care of the president.

Dr. Woodford adds, "one of the other six Sunday schools, coming from Vortex, gave us a great surprise,—not only because of the size of their delegation, about twenty-five—but also because they had made great preparation, and sang about a dozen different songs by themselves. When I asked the leader to tell the convention how such an interest had been worked up, he said, 'It is all due to the suggestion and efforts of my two girls who came home from the Pine Ridge school in May and insisted that we must have a Sunday school.' The girls are Arzela and Bonnie Taulbee, and the man who replied was their father. I said. 'Praise the Lord,' and many said 'Amen'."

The names of the two girls will be familiar to those who have read the Pine Ridge Album or the Alvin Drew Bulletin. These are not the first girls who have gone out from Pine Ridge and organized a school or done other constructive work. This proves the fact that the people of these mountains have marked executive ability and are well worth while. They are not satisfied to enjoy the Gospel alone but they immediately pass it on to others. As said Andrew to his brother Simon Peter, "We have found the Messias, and he brought him to Jesus."

The formation of a live Sunday school by two girls is another evidence of the justification of the claim that when those of the mountain region now out of Christ, shall have been placed in a working relation with Him, they will prove a valuable asset in the progress of the living church and accomplish much more than some of those who have heard the Gospel all their lives, and yet who apparently are unconcerned about those less fortunate than themselves, and are at ease in Zion.

BACK TO AMERICA.

Rev. Dr. Leigh Layman, the board's missionary in Japan, reached his home in Ohio on Saturday, August 18, having left Yokohama August 4. He reports that he was not the least seasick, but had no appetite, "food too long in cold storage."

After seven years of faithful labor, the supervision of a large amount of building, and problems and difficulties incident to missionary work, he has returned to America for a much needed furlough.

Dr. Layman is our senior missionary, having been in Japan a great many years, and was at the head of Nagoya College, which had an enrollment of 1020 at last report.

He has, of course, seen the development of the work in all departments, and had a conspicuous part in the planning and laboring which produced the results in which the church rejoices.

His good wife returned some months ago on account of the serious illness of her only sister, and to be with their children, two daughters, one of whom graduated at Oberlin last year.

It was no small sacrifice for Dr. and Mrs. Layman while in Japan to be separated by thousands of miles, out of reach of the 'phone and quick mail, from their children for several years, while at school here in America, and one can appreciate the joy of meeting and being together again in the homeland.

Their case is duplicated now in the experience of Rev. and Mrs. E. I. Obee at Atsuta. Nagoya, Japan. Their two oldest children are here in America attending school in Ohio, and the others are with them in Japan, and are largely without the extended companionship of American children, and the associations which add so much to life in our land. Why not, friends, send them a little cheer, say at Christmas time?

Our missionaries bear their lot cheerfully, but those having children have much care and anxiety in regard to their education, and kindred considerations such as parents in America do not know, and for this, and many other reasons our church people ought to have much sympathy for them, and evince appreciation of their devotion and services by generous support of their work which often is hampered by lack of funds.

They are in the midst of rank heathenism they yearn to lead souls to Christ, to train youths for life's grave responsibilities, but when a greatly needed chapel is asked for at an important center, or a church large enough to minister to the needs of the thousand students at Nagoya College and the surrounding community, and they are told by the board there are no funds in hand, it tends to discourage them, to raise questions as to the extent of missionary zeal in the home church, and makes it extremely difficult to explain matters to the Japanese.

An illustration of this is found in the case of the Nagoya College students and friends raising a fund of Yen 50,000—U. S. $25,000—for buildings and improvements at the college and the board unable to provide the needed church and Science Hall as agreed to.

Put yourself in your missionaries' place under those conditions, and what would you say to the Japanese? What do you think of our people blessed so wonderfully of God, and who have failed to supply the money, God's money which He has entrusted to their care and for the use of which He will call all to an account? There are individuals who could give at once $1,000 for the church at Nagoya College, there are churches that could give twice that much, yea, five times that much, and be the happier for doing it. Why not give God what He asks for through the needs of His work in heathendom? He may ask you for an answer to that shortly.

You had better respond as you are able, and thus be ready to answer Him gladly.

Fred C. Klein.

A GREAT DAY IN YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHURCH LIFE.

My dear Fellow Workers:—

For the last six years I have appealed to you to observe Rally Day for three specific reasons, and I am just as much interested in this work now as I ever was, because it stands for the development of our children and young people. Our church of tomorrow depends wholly upon our children and young people of today. As we train them so will be our church. Ihave examined the Rally Day program which has been prepared by our Board of Young People's Work and is now ready to be sent out to you free of cost provided you will use it and take a free will offering for the board. Your offering in each case will apply on your General Conference budget.

The program is a good one and you will do well to order at once from Rev. E. A. Sexsmith, 3437 Piedmont Ave., Baltimore, Md. Order the programs and use them, or prepare a service of your own.

Benefit of Youth.

First for the benefit of your young people. So often our children and young people feel that they have no part whatsoever in our church services until they become adults. And shame upon us it is usually all too true. For the sake of their development and future usefulness give them something to do.

Benefit of Community.

Second, make Rally Day a community affair and see to it that all the church folks, and all the new church folks are invited to come.. Do it in a whole-hearted, enthusiastic way that will impress them that you really want them to come. Then make the day so interesting and helpful that they will want to come again. It is a day for the whole community to rally around the church and the cause of righteousness. It will not make itself, but God's children can use the day with great good to the community if they will.

Benefit of the Board.

Third, of course the offering to be taken on that day is for the benefit of the Board of Young People's Work to enable it to do the work mapped out for it by the General Conference.

No other department of our church life is doing more efficient service than is this board. The fact is,—it is doing the biggest business on the smallest capital of any department of our church. Encourage the board with a liberal free-will offering. Send your offering to your own conference treasurer as Rally Day money.

Praying God's richest blessings upon our new secretary and upon all the work of this board, I am

Yours in the Master's service,

A. G. Dixon.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

Sunday, August 26, was spent on Randolph charge with Rev. W. F. Ashburn. It is always a pleasure to be with Brother Ashburn. He is one of God's noblemen, and we have been very warm friends for many years. We reached Gray's Chapel and Shiloh churches. These are both splendid church buildings, and the buildings and the grounds are kept in first-class condition. A nearby camp meeting caused the congregations to be smaller than they otherwise would have been, but those who were present gave earnest heed to the Word.

Saturday and Sunday, September 1 and 2, will be spent in company with Dr. R. M. Andrews at Dunn's Chapel, near Columbia, S. C., in an inspirational meeting and conference with the brethren of the South Carolina Conference in the hope of carrying some hope and cheer and helpful suggestions to them.

September 3 to 10 will be spent on the Yarbrough charge, Cross Anchor, S. C. We will engage in evangelistic services at Yarbrough's Chapel for the entire week. On Sunday morning, September 9, I will go to Harmony church and Mrs. Dixon will remain at Yarbrough's.

Reports.

Twenty-five pastors only have sent in their reports for third quarter. One of those had no name signed to it, and this time I am afraid I cannot guess whose it is; for it comes from a post-office where four of our pastors are located.

Delegates.

Just fifty of our pastors have mailed cards to me giving name of delegate-elect. One other card was mailed to me but had nothing on it except what was put on it by Brother Bates. It was not even postmarked, so I do not know where to return it.

A Worthy Salary.

Delegates will be approaching the stationing committee at conference calling for "A live, energetic, wide-awake, consecrated man, who can preach well and who is a good mixer."

If you would have that kind of man then at your fourth quarterly conference think a bit about what kind of a salary such a man should have. Many charges should increase the salary for next year.

Your Record.

Look up the financial record of your charge for last year and then set to work in earnest to better it this time unless it was 100 per cent.

Yours in the Master's service,

A. G. Dixon.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Text: "That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ: which in his time he shall show, who is the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords." 1 Tim. 6:14, 15.

St. Paul fully appreciated the fact that when our Lord Jesus appears in his glory all debate with reference to his Godhead, his power to save, and the honor and worship which are his due, will come to an abrupt and eternal end. The resurrection of Jesus Christ fully confirmed the faith of the apostles in his Godhead. It was a final and complete witness to his mastery over death, the last enemy. Their doubts all vanished; their questions were all answered. His resurrection was a final and sufficient credential of his deity, of his authority, of the trustworthiness of all his promises, and the power of his gospel to save a lost world.

When Jesus appears with the holy angels in his glory in the heavens, his enemies will be put to utter rout. That will be a final, positive proof of his pre-existence, his virgin birth, the fact of his miracles, of his resurrection, of his eternal Godhead, and right to reign and rule, King of kings and Lord of lords. We can think of nothing, in fact, there could be nothing, that would more completely overthrow and scatter forever all of the foes and opposers of our Master, the Lord Jesus Christ, than that he should appear, as foretold by himself and by the apostolic writers.

It will be recalled that when Jesus stood before the high priest with the scribes and elders after his arrest on that tragic night in the Garden of Gethsemane, and the high priest said to him, "I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus said unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven."

Jesus was giving the high priests, the scribes and the elders, faithful warning that they might do their worst, but after their worst was done, the time was coming when he would appear in his glory and they would be compelled to admit his deity and divine Sonship.

The Jews living during the period of our Lord's ministry among men failed to get any sort of proper conception of Christ's person and mission in the world. To the ordinary student of the Holy Scriptures, it seems quite remarkable that these Jews should have so misunderstood, hated, and persecuted the Lord Jesus. To us it seems that his personality, teachings, and life fitted so perfectly into the prophecies concerning him that any one at all acquainted with those prophecies would have identified him as the Messiah. How was it that the Jews failed to recognize Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ of prophecy?

First, they were in a fearful state of spiritual apostasy and blindness and spiritual things are spiritually discerned. Second, they did not understand that it was the plan of God that Christ, in accomplishing the great task assigned to him, was to come twice into the world. No one in ancient or modern times can correctly interpret the prophecies concerning the Christ who does not recognize this fact.

If we would get at anything approaching a correct and satisfactory comprehension of the true meaning of prophecy concerning Jesus Christ, we must divide these prophecies into at least two general groups. First, there is a group of prophecies that foretell Christ's coming, sufferings, humiliation and death, with the inauguration of the Gospel dispensation. Second, there is another group of prophecies that tell of Christ's coming in power to set up his kingdom and reign over his redeemed people, clearly indicating the glory and power of that kingdom and reign.

The Jews failed to understand this important fact and, as a consequence, could not rightly divide and properly group the prophecies concerning Christ. Eventually, they lost sight of all those prophecies foretelling the humiliation and sufferings of Jesus which must occur at his first coming, and fixed their minds only upon those prophecies which pointed to the restoration of Israel, the overthrow of their enemies and the triumphant rule and reign of their Messiah. They unwittingly cut out the Gospel, or Church Age, and put the Kingdom Age in its place. They had so misread the predictions and promises of the prophets that they were not looking for a Redeemer from sin to set up a kingdom of righteousness, peace and joy in the hearts of men. In their spiritual blindness they had no conception of, or desire for, a Redeemer from their sins. They were not hoping and praying for spiritual salvation. They wanted political deliverance and national glory. They were not looking for an Evangel preaching righteousness, but for a King breaking the yoke of Rome. Their minds were fixed on scriptures found in Isaiah: "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment. And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Isaiah 32: 1, 2. Jeremiah had said, "And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the Lord. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely." Jer. 23:4, 5. Daniel had given them a wonderful prophecy: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Daniel 2:44.

Many prophecies of this character might be quoted with which the Jews were perfectly familiar, and upon which they rested their hope for a coming Messiah and king to deliver them from their enemies and avenge them upon all those nations which had despoiled them. It never occurred to the Jews that while all these Scriptures were absolutely true, and had reference to the humble Nazarene standing in their midst, that the fulfillment of these promises belonged to a future dispensation in the history of the world and at a time far removed from that in which they were living. They were blinded by ambition and prejudice.

When the meek and lowly Christ appeared among them claiming to be the long promised Messiah, they could see nothing in him that met their conception of their coming king. They were disgusted and angered with his claims and with the rebukes he administered to them. They were startled as they saw the influence he had over the masses of the people, and determined to put him to death for fear that his followers would inaugurate a revolt against the authority of Rome, which they were quite sure would lead to severe vengeance and a more tyrannical administration of Roman authority.

They hated Jesus on general principles, and determined to take his life under the pretext of political necessity. In their blindness they had no conception of what they were doing. While suffering on the cross our Lord looked down upon the jeering mob and prayed. "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." What few spiritual Jews were then living recognized Jesus as the Messiah. Simeon knew him; Anna, the aged saint, recognized him. Joseph and Nicodemus knew that he was a man come from God, but the proud ecclesiastics and the dupes under their control, could not possibly understand the Christ or the prophecies concerning him, because they did not understand that in the great scheme or human salvation, and the restoration of all things, it was the plan of God that Christ must come twice into the world; the first time, he was to make his advent through the open door of a stable; the second time he was to make his advent through the open heaven. The first time he was to come in great humiliation; the second time he was to come in great glory. The first time he was to ride into Jerusalem on an ass's colt; the second time he was to ride into Jerusalem on the shekinah cloud. At his first coming, he was to hang upon the cross amidst the derision of the multitude; at his second coming he was to sit upon the throne of universal empire and reign over his redeemed peoples.

The Jews had so misread prophecy that they got their program at least two thousand years ahead of God's plan. Hence, their inability to understand what was transpiring before them. They wanted to place the Messiah on the throne when, according to the divine purpose, he was due on the cross. There are some Christians who, misreading prophecy are as completely out of harmony with the divine program as were the Jews. There are Christians who would keep Christ on the cross when he is almost due on the throne. The Jews wanted to crown a king when they ought to have been worshiping the Babe of Bethlehem. There is a class of Christians who insist on lingering about Bethlehem when they ought to be preparing to shout Hosanna to the coming King. The Jews who failed to rightly divide prophecy did not want a Redeemer from sin; they wanted to set up a universal empire in the world. There is a class of Christians who do not want to crown Christ King of kings and Lord of lords to rule the world in peace and belssedness. They want to set up a great world-wide ecclesiasticism. Not long since one of the leaders of that group of professed Christians who would have the Lord delay his coming said, with startled disgust, "Why, if Jesus should come now it would interfere with our program." He seemed to think that God has no program. He admitted at once that he and those who sympathized with him had a program, but it entirely left out the glorious appearing of our blessed Lord

The destructive critics can no more understand the program of God as revealed in prophecy and taught by the Lord Jesus and his disciples, which embraces both his first and his second coming, than those ancient Jews who crucified our Lord, and in their blindness they are "crucifying the Son of God afresh." Being spiritually blind, they cannot rightly divide the word of truth, and they are no more ready to crown Jesus at his second coming than the ancient Jews were to recognize and trust in him as their Mesiah and Savior at his first coming.

The Christian Church, although it has accomplished great good in the world, has largely failed in her mission to preach the Gospel to every living creature, because she has failed to understand the Word of God, and the plainly written predictions of the prophets and promises of Christ and the apostles with reference to his second appearing in glory. Having failed to understand the program of God, they have made many programs of their own which conflict with the divine plan and fail to accomplish the divine purpose. Hence, almost two thousand years after the death of our Redeemer, untold millions of people are living in midnight darkness in the midst of sin, disease, starvation and death because they have not had brought to them the glorious Gospel message of the Lord Jesus.

The program of Christ was that he come into the world meek and lowly, to live before men, to teach them the way of salvation, to die for them and to set on foot an aggressive evangelism, to make haste in carrying the Gospel to all the world. While this evangelism was going forward he was to go and prepare a place for his people. When the Gospel had been preached to all the world for witness, he was to return in clouds of glory and catch away his Bride—the Church. Then the wicked multitudes who had rejected the Gospel would bring upon themselves the "Great Tribulations"; a time of destruction would prevail in the world, not necessarily God-sent, but wicked men who had denied the pre-existence of Jesus, his virgin birth, his blood atonement and his second coming, having flung away the Bible and plunged into the black night of an awful infidelity, reaping the harvest that eventually must spring up and grow from the seed now being sown by the destructive critics. Thus men will bring upon themselves swift destruction. They are doing it now. They reached a fearful climax during the World War, but they are preparing for a darker day Finally, Christ will return with the bride which he has caught away, and bring order out of chaos, peace out of war, and then those prophecies and promises so glorious in the Holy Scriptures shall be fulfilled, and the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, and the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.—Dr. H. C. Morrison, in the Pentecostal Herald.

BOOTLEGGERS AND SMOKELEGGERS.

By Will H. Brown.

A reader of the Tobacco Record, apparently alarmed by the rapid growth of the anti-tobacco sentiment, draws a lesson from the reign of the bootleggers, following the adoption of the 18th amendment and urges lovers of tobacco to do all in their power to prevent legislation outlawing the whole tobacco business. for if this is brought about, he argues, we will have to add the word "Smokeleggers" to our language. Observe that he takes it for granted that friends of tobacco would defy the law, even as friends of liquor have defied the National Prohibition law against booze. And yet tobacco men continually protest against being classified with liquor dealers.

Here is another thing it would be well for tobacco men to explain: All over the country tobacco dealers, of high and low degree, are being arrested as bootleggers. A short time ago a millionaire liquor dealer in the east was found guilty of bootlegging, fined and given a jail sentence. About the same time Joe Silverstein, a Los Angeles cigar dealer, was fined $1,000 for the same offense. It was his second conviction on the same charge. His partner, John Cannich, also pleaded guilty and was given a like fine.

A reader signing himself "A Well-wisher of Tobacco," also writes the editor of the Record, saying: "If the tobacco industry permits cigar dealers to break law and encourages petty gambling, there is reason to believe that the tobacco industry will follow in the path of the liquor industry."

FOR GREAT OFFICIAL MEETINGS.

The late meeting at the College, on August 18, has been called "a great success," and truly. However, the way to have a success is to continue.

At one of the great educational popular meetings of a regular institution in the west, the order had a man to serve as a regular hand-shaker—and he served successfully shaking hands. His case was a great case. He would have been very much in service on the late 18th. But hand-shaking is very convenient, and so desirable for all that it should not be confined to one person.

Necessity calls for great assemblies, even at the College and at the Home. These institutions are depending on industry, and it now seems that there is reason for an annual assembly set for encouraging industry—and all may unite in an effort to push up the enterprise We can see plainly that the College is set for headquarters, the "powerhouse." and there will be excuse for more than one official meeting inside of a year.

This effort tries to suggest for an assembly to serve in shape to encourage industry. The inference is that hundreds of people wishing to be at the picnic were not able to be there. How about an annual assembly made to encourage industry. The needs and interests are such that there will not be too many popular gatherings. The thing to do, however, is to manage to persuade the people to see the need of the assemblies. The idea connected in the above is to stir up a united interest—and this mainly by having popular assemblies on the College grounds. At the meetings, as proposed, have men and women to speak on industry. Who will encourage?

That case of having an ordinary man to officially serve shaking hands showed up to be the thing to do; and the act turned an ordinary character over to that of a celebrity. However, well ordered popular social occasions, with due respect to the handshaking, will be in shape to serve a great part. It may be inferred that the clever old man, serving so well in the hand-shaking capacity, was well on in the way of setting a safe example. He practiced out a safe "industry" and all will do well by closely observing the same act.

We are now starting on a house-to-house canvass for funds. We have several who are going out in the interest of the college and will visit the churches that are yet behind in their quotas. We want to help you, so we will during this month and October try to present the college enterprise to you by some one who is very much interested and who should receive your cordial hearing.

I am spending several days on Vance, Granville and Greensville charges. And when these are completed will go elsewhere. Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, H. A. Garrett, B. M. Williams, T. M. Johnson, Mr. F. R. Williams, and Mr. F. R. Stout will also be in the field for the college from time to time. Hear them, then give them your subscription; the most liberal ones you can.

YOUNG PEOPLE FURNISH THE COLLEGE DINING ROOM.

The young people of North Carolina have promised to furnish the dining room at the college in honor of Dr. R. M. Andrews. In response to several hundred letters sent out pledges and money have been coming in daily. At the college August 18 several hundred dollars was pledged by the young people, Sunday schools, Bible classes, and Christian Endeavor societies. Though the entire thousand dollars had not come in at that time, nor yet, through faith in our young people we pledged a thouand dollars for them. Within the next thirty days, I am positive, we will reach the thousand dollar mark, or exceed it. Young people , if you have not sent in your pledge do so at once. The names of those who pledge or pay will be published in the Young People's Section each week. The entire list of pledges and contributions will appear in next week's issue of the Herald. N. M. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 16.

Christ, talking to his disciples as they were surrounded by a multitude seeking to be healed gave us the embodiment of manners when He said to them: ''And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them.'' (Luke 6:31). In this sixth chapter of Luke, Christ is very specific in what pertains to good manners. In consulting His words here, we would get at the heart of the matter quicker than by reading the present books on etiquette. We might not learn just how to properly unfold our napkin at dinner, or how to hold our fork, but the true spirit of courtesy would not be lacking in us if we followed Christ's teaching.

Really good manners are natural, that is, coming from an inner kindliness and good-will to our fellowmen. It is religion that puts heart into our manners and saves us from being stiff and cold in our relation to others.

Nations differ in manners, the same country varies through ages and even the different classes within the same town vary in their conventional forms of society, but the person who lives the Golden Rule has always the essential qualities of good manners. Haven't you seen individuals break some of the more importan custom-formed laws of etiquette and yet be very popular with even the most exacting people? You usually make the following excuse for such a person: ''He may break the laws of etiquette but he is pure gold.'' You realize the stamp of true courtesy in this individual, the unselfishness and thoughtfulness for others that enabled him to put self in the background and to consider the feelings of others first. Christ said: ''For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.'' (Luke 14:11.)

Religion creates in us a desire for only the best in companions. Of course we are all influenced by our companions one way or the other. If our companions are thoughtful of others and kind, then we are likely to be kind and thoughtful also. (1 Cor. 15:33) ''Be ye not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.''

Another essential characteristic of good manners is modesty. Religion more than anything teaches us modesty. The true Christian does not seek the praise of man, but the favor of Christ. Christ taught us by example, when He washed the feet of the disciples, that he who would be great must be servant of all.

In summing up the essential characteristics pertaining to good manners, namely, thoughtfulness for others, kindness, unselfishness and modesty, we find that religion is the inspiration for all of them. Flossie Stout.

DO ANIMALS REMEMBER?

Nelly has been, in her day, a family rat-terrier; but having grown old in honorable service, she is now upon the retired list, and only in her dreams does she achieve the heroic actions of her prime. Over a year ago she lost a tooth by hitting it against the edge of her plate while eating. This sign of coming age so chagrined her that she left her plate with the coveted bones, crept away under the sofa, and could not be induced to come out until the fallen member had been removed from sight; and even then she had a subdued manner all day. Soon after another tooth dropped out, and now, at this remote date, if my friend, pointing to his own teeth, says: ''Nelly, where are those teeth?'' she goes off to her hiding-place, covered with shame, and even tries to conceal the toothless portion of her mouth in a manner suggestively human.

A friend of mine owns a magnificent St. Bernard, by name of Bear, on account of a striking resemblance to the ursine family. For several years Bear had a great friend and comrade in a small white spitz which lived under the same roof as himself. When this gentle little creature, white as thistle-down, went the way of earth, Bear was inconsolable, and the name of Tot, his departed friend, could not be mentioned without clear signs of dejection in the surviving comrade.

A year had passed since Tot's death, and one morning Bear was taking a walk with his master in a quiet street. Suddenly the dog pricked up his ears, waved his bushy tail, and gave every evidence of delighted expectation —as at the near approach of a friend. There was no one visible in the street to the master's eye—nothing except a few rods ahead, a small shaggy spitz, none too white in color, none too aristocratic in breeding. This poor Bear—who thought he had got a glimpse of the lost Tot—soon perceiving, dropped his ears dejectedly, slackened his pace, and in other ways demonstrated that he had neither forgotten nor ceased to look for the return of his beloved friend.—Our Animal Friends.

It is not a lucky word, this same impossible; no good comes of those that have it so often in their mouth.—Carlyle.

I came from God, and I'm going back to God, and I won't have any gaps of death in the middle of my life.—George MacDonald.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

THE TWINS.

Dimple Duncan and her twin, Dollie, stood hand in hand beside the window of their comfortable home and gazed in silence on the cold world outside.

The wind was blowing a gale, and loose papers played like dirty children up and down the usually well-kept street before the Duncan home.

"Two more weeks till Christmas, Dollie," said Dimple softly, "and nary a gift in sight."

"Not only that," responded Dollie, "but I've an idea our Christmas dinner is going to be mighty short this year."

"I don't mind for myself," answered Dimple thoughtfully, "but those smaller than us—wouldn't they be disappointed if they found their little stockings empty on Christmas?"

"It mustn't be," responded Dollie quickly, "we must find a way to fill those stockings—they were never empty while father was able to work—and they mustn't be empty now."

Dollie glanced towards her sister as the sound of a crutch fell on the hallway floor, and moved swiftly towards the door.

"Father!" exclaimed the girls in one breath, "what are you doing down stairs?"

Father Duncan crossed the floor and sank wearily into a chair beside the open fire, then he looked at his children and smiled feebly.

"I just had to get up, girls," he said softly. "We have scarcely any money and it's almost Christmas—there must be gifts for the little ones at least—and we don't want to go in debt any more than we can help."

"That's true, father," answered Dimple, "but you aren't able to go back to work yet; it's up to Dollie and me to earn the needed cash."

"No, no," answered the man, "I don't want you girls to go out to work yet—you are too young to shoulder such responsibilities—besides that, you are inexperienced; your labor would bring so little for the time expended."

"I know we are inexperienced," interrupted Dimple, "but whatever we make will help some, and anything is better than your trying to go back to work until you are entirely well. Promise, father, you won't do it."

After a bit of coaxing and petting and loving the girls persuaded their father to forget Christmas and think only of himself—it was so much more necessary for him to get well than to have Christmas gifts—they would manage for the little children some way. But after they got him back to his room they faced each other with the great question—How?

"Put your thinking-cap on, Dimple," said Dollie thoughtfully, we've got to take father's place some way for a little while."

"We might offer our services at the Doorman department store," said Dimple presently. "They always take on extra sales people for the holiday season."

"Yes," admitted Dollie, "but what they pay wouldn't be enough to supply our wants. Let's think about it over night; maybe something will suggest itself to us."

A dull December sun was shining through the eastern window when Dollie Duncan opened her eyes again to the world. From the kitchen below she could hear the rattle of dishes which gave her to understand clearly that she had overslept and breakfast was in order, but she didn't spring out of bed as she usually did under such conditions, but drawing the covers closer about her shoulders she lay staring at the feeblbe sun rays.

Slowly she turned over and over in her mind the bare possibilities of what he and her twin might do to earn the needed money. The department store idea was set aside, the thought of fancy sewing taking its place. Both the girls could use a needle nicely, but that was hard on the eyes, and Dimple's eyes were still weak from measles; fancy sewing wouldn't do.

"I'll give it up," said Dollie, "doing any original stunts—guess we'll go to Doorman's after all for the extra work."

According to this decision, she slipped into a neat little plaid frock and made her way downstairs.

"Where are you going so early in the morning, my dear?" asked mother Duncan sweetly when Dollie made her appearance in the tiny kitchen.

Dollie had intended to keep her mission down town a secret until she obtained a position for herself and sister, but there was no way hiding things from mother Duncan, so she laid bare her plans.

Mother Duncan listened attentively, then, wiping away a tear from her eyes, she called Dollie a brave, good girl to so willingly shoulder her father's obligations and bade her Godspeed.

That mother had thought her act right made it so in Dollie's eyes, and presently she was moving down the avenue in long, regular strides towards Doorman's department store.

The clock in the town steeple was striking the hour of eight A. M. when Dollie entered the door in the store marked "Private."

Frankly, earnestly, she stated her mission to the kindly faced gentleman who admitted her—but before she had finished she realized that her request would not be granted.

"We don't need any more clerks," said the fine-faced gentleman; "we've already taken care of that, and I have no place in which I could use you—"

Suddenly the man paused and looked at the girl critically.

"I just thought—" he said slowly—"but, of course, it's impossible—you couldn't do it."

"Do what?" cried Dollie anxiously. "What is it you'd like to have done?"

The man smiled at her eagerness. "I was just thinking—" he said slowly, "about having cranberry sauce made and sold in the basement for the holiday trade—but that would take an expert hand."

"And who said I wasn't an expert at making cranberry sauce?" interrupted Dollie. "All I ask is but the chance for my sister and myself to demonstrate our ability."

"Can you really make cranberry sauce?" the man asked enthusiastically.

"You just bet I can," answered Dollie. "I learned last year at school, and just for fun made the sauce for everybody on our street."

The manager of Doorman's looking at the neat appearance of the girl before him, suddenly found himself wondering why she so wanted to work; he didn't want to do anything rash, and he didn't want to lose the opportunity of putting one of his pet schemes over, and this cranberry sauce idea was certainly a scheme of his own inventive mind.

"You have a motive for wanting to work just now?" he asked the girl presently.

"A very great one," answered Dollie. And then she told about the father's long illness and the little ones at home who were liable to find empty stockings on Christmas morning unless she and her sister could get something to do.

The manager was pleased with Dollie's straightforward manner and deciding to give her a chance, began to explain his proposition.

Two hours later a very much excited Dollie rushed into the Duncan home and told of the golden opportunity before them. And the next day the two girls went to work in the basement of Doorman's.

So pleasant were they to their customers and so delicious was their cranberry sauce that it was only a matter of a few days until the manager discovered it was necessary to call in extra help to take care of the orders.

From morning till night the twins toiled unceasingly—their pay was on the commission basis and it was up to them to make it worth while. So busy were they during the next ten days that they lost sight of their sales, and when at last Christmas Eve rolled 'round and the manager called them in for a settlement they could scarcely believe that the amount of money he laid in their hands was due them.—Selected.

IF WE ONLY UNDERSTODD.

If we knew the cares and trials,
  Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
  Understood the loss and gain—
Would the grim eternal roughness
  Seem—I wonder—just the same?
Should we help where now we hinder,
  Should we pity where we blame?

Ah, we judge each other harshly,
  Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
  Is less turbid at its source;
Seeing not amid the evil
  All the golden grains of good;
And we'd love each other better
  If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
  That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart spirit,
  Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better,
  Purer than we judge we should,
We should love each other better
  If we only understood.

—On the first Sunday in September J. R. Stricklen had the pleasure of having his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to the number of 31 to visit him all at one time. He is now visiting his daughter in Greensboro, Mrs. W. H. White.

—Rev. T. F. McCulloch continues ill, though his condition seems somewhat improved.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Saxapahaw Charge.—We have held successful revivals at Concord, Salem, and Orange Chapel. Brother Shelton was our pulpit help at Concord, Brother Lowdermilk at Salem, and Brother Bingham at Orange Chapel. These brethren came to us on Monday and stayed until the close, preaching the Gospel with power and demonstration, which resulted in 31 conversions. Twenty united with the church. Others will join later. Dr. J. F. McCulloch was with us on Sunday at Orange Chapel and preached an inspiring sermon in the afternoon. Brother William Loy preached for me once at Salem on Sunday. His message was helpful. All these brethren have my sincere thanks for their splendid services.

It was our good fortune to have Miss Annie L. Forrest with us at Saxapahaw and Concord the fourth Sunday in August. Her lectures were enjoyed by all the people. We organized missionary societies at both of the churches she visited. Rev. Lawrence Little also visited our Saxapahaw church on the night of the 18th of August. His address was fine, and we believe resulted in much good.

Brother J. S. Crutchfield, one of our faithful Salem members, was called to his reward August 17. A fuller account of his life will appear later.

Mrs. J. J. Crawford will represent Saxapahaw charge in the next Annual Conference.

H. L. Isley.

West Thomasville.—I guess the Herald thinks that West Thomasville is asleep, but we are not, we are wide-awake and working as always. Work is going on on our new church and we are hoping and praying that in the near future we may have a convenient place to worship.

There was a baptizing in the swimming pool at the Baptist Orphanage Sunday, August 26. A large crowd were present. Rev. M. L. Moose immersed six and sprinkled one. Eleven new members have been added to our church, which means that we have some more to help us in our work for a church.

Rev. M. L. Moose filled his appointment Sunday night and preached a splendid sermon.

Reporter.

Pageland Circuit.—Our meeting began at New Hope Sunday, August 19. Rev. A. B. Haywood preached for us on that day, at 11 A. M. and two P. M., the pastor preaching at night and through the following week, with Brother Haywood as help in two mornings' services. Brother Haywood is good help and we love him. Brother T. E. Martin came to us on Sunday night, August 26, and stayed until the close of the meeting, doing the preaching for us. He gave us good food for the soul. The people were pleased with his work. Many were saved and eleven united with the church. We raised a purse of $83.35 for Brother Martin. Also Brother Haywood and the pastor received free-will offerings. We as pastor love to see our people pay our help in revival meetings something for their service and show their appreciation and not expect a hundred-dollar blessing from a ten-cent consecration.

J. W. Quick, Pastor.

September 3.

Friendship, Fallston Circuit.—Everything is still progressing nicely at Fallston. A short while ago Mr. Cletus Wright was leader of a two weeks' singing school which caused our choir to double in numbers. Every one seems to be more anxious than ever before to sing.

The next step was the decision of having a community singing every two weeks, including members from the other two churches of Fallston.

The Children's Day services were good also because the children took such an active part, and were large in numbers.

A series of meetings began the third Sunday in August. The people appreciated the helpful sermons delivered by Rev. W. F. Kennett who assisted our pastor, Brother Hunter There were 54 professions and 33 members joined We were sorry for the fact that Brother Kennett could not be with us any longer than Friday of the first week's meeting but showed our appreciation by presenting him with a sum of $51. However, the meeting did not close until Monday night following. It seemed as if every night got more interesting, and souls confessed their sins until the close. The meeting was certainly a good one and our church is in a good Christianized condition.

The Woman' Foreign Missionary Society is still progressing because Mrs. Hunter is so enthusiastic about it. So we are now organizing a Woman's Home Missionary Society.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society has been organized. We are proud of the interest everyone is taking in church affairs and we can see great improvements in every way.

Reporter.

Graham.—We had a good attendance at Sunday school and preaching Sunday. Interest in the Sunday school is increasing and the work is going on nicely.

Our pastor was back with us Sunday. He had been away two weeks on vacation. We hope that he and his family enjoyed the rest they well deserved.

Miss Laura J. Reed will be with us on the evenings of the twelfth and thirteenth in the interest of foreign missions and young people's work. All are urged to come out to hear Miss Reed.

The third and fifth classes of the primary department enjoyed a picnic Saturday afternoon.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society are planning to give an ice-cream supper on the church lawn Saturday evening, the 15th

The Christian Endeavor Society cordially invites visitors to attend the meetings. Best wishes to the Herald.

Reporter.

Reidsville.—Our work is progressing very nicely. Yesterday morning our pastor preached an inspiring sermon on "Heaven," using as his text John 14: 2. We observed the communion service also.. We didn't have any evening service as our pastor is helping Brother Lowdermilk in a meeting at Brown Summit and he preached there.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was led by Miss Myra Count. Almost everybody present took part in the meeting.

Yesterday afternoon the county Christian Endeavor Union held a rally at Leaksville. Frank P. Wilson, field secretary, was present and made an interesting talk on Christian Endeavor work. Several from our society went over for the meeting.

Mrs. J. M. Weatherly, who is a Methodist Protestant, not of our church, but our congregation, is in ill health and is at Moore's Springs recuperating. We trust that she may soon be entirely well again.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Maynard and family of Greensboro spent Sunday at the parsonage and worshiped with us at the morning service.

Miss Lela Johnson will leave Tuesday to enter school at Elon College.

J. D. Williams, Jr., will leave soon to enter school at Western Maryland. These young people will be missed from our church.

September 3.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Our special meeting will begin at Midway the fifth Sunday in September. We are hoping for a good meeting. Will ask all Christians who read this to pray for us as a church that we may get right with God; then we know that sinners will be converted.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, though the attendance is not what it should be. There are so many in our community who will not attend Sunday school. Can some one suggest a plan to get them interested? Prof. A. M. Fentress has been teaching a singing class at this place and our closing exercises will be the third Sunday in this month Come, all who can, and let us have a joyful day praising the Lord in song. Our pastor has not been with us for some time on account of special meetings but we are hoping to have him with us next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

Mrs. G. W. Apple, Reporter.

Mt. Hermon Church, Creswell Circuit.—Rev. R. L. Hethcox filled his regular apopintments Sunday and Sunday night; he preached two very good sermons.

Since our last report we have had our regular revivaal meeting. Rev. Mr. Morgan did the preaching. Everybody liked him, I know, for I have heard him highly praised. I regret very much that I could not be here. We had one addition to the church.

Our Christian Endeavor is doing fine and we are very glad to see renewed interest among our young people. Some of our leading members will soon be leaving to go to their schools and we few that are left will have to work harder than ever to carry on the work.

Our Sunday school is getting along very nicely and the attendance is very good.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Calla Barnes.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—We were glad to have Brother Morgan and family in our home the third week in August. He did some good preaching at Wesley Chapel that week. Our meeting will begin next Sunday, hoping to have Brother Trorler and also Brother Morgan with us. We are looking forward for a great revival, and I want every child of God that reads this to pray that we may have a glorious meeting. Think if there has ever been a time we need one it is now. We can hardly get enough at church to have a Sunday school, but I am proud that we have some that come and are always ready to take a part in any good work, but it is such a few. I am sorry to say we have members in Philadelphia church that don't even come out to hear their pastor, much less to Sunday school and today their children are looking for worldly pleasure more than anything else. So mothers and fathers, let us wake up and get busy and try to save our boys and girls from that terrible place we call hell to which so many are going if something is not done. With best wishes to Herald, Mrs. L. R. Pearson.

Mt. Zion, Uwharrie Circuit.—Our special meeting began the fourth Sunday in August and continued till Saturday night. There was pretty good attendance day and night throughout the meeting. There were ten conversions and nine gave their names to join the church; they are to be taken into full membership at the next monthly meeting. Rev. M. L. Moose from Thomasville came on Monday night and did most of the preaching, and he did some as good preaching as any one need to want to hear. Mr. Rudd Newsome came on Monday night also to conduct the singing; he is a great help in a revival. We were glad to have him and his family with us in the meeting and in our homes also. We were also glad to have our pastor, Brother Riddle, and family spend one night in our home. Mr. Ed Kindley and wife of Jackson's Creek attended the meeting. They are good workers. Mr. and Mrs. C. H Hill of High Point worshiped with us on Sunday. Among the visitors were Mrs. Eugene Swain of Thomasville, Miss Eula Gaddis and others from High Point. Since my last report the church has been newly covered and now there is talk of painting it inside and out some time in the future, which it needs very badly The protracted meeting began at Mt. Pleasant Sunday. Rev. J. B. Trogdon is to help Brother Riddle there. Hope they will have a good meting. With best wishes to all the Herald readers. Nannie Briles, Reporter.

Glen Raven.—Our Sunday school had 103 present Sunday with $3.66 collection. We want to give an account of our Children's Day service given on the night of July 29. The program was extra fine; the collection by classes was as follows: class number 3, $1.60; no leader. Class number 4, $2.45, Oscar Morgan, leader. Class number 6, $8.11, Howard Glenn, leader. Class number 7, $3.54: Lois Vaughan, leader. Class number 8, $12.07: leader, Eleanor Walker. Total, $27.77.

Brother Morgan preached an extra fine sermon at the 11 o'clock service to a large congregation. Brother Morgan announced from the pulpit that on the third Sunday of this month the church and Sunday school would have a rally day service with two services, dinner on the ground. There will be a few local speakers present. Rev. Paul Kennett of Elon College will preach at the 11 o'clock service. On the following Monday night a series of meetings will be started continuing over a week or ten days.

Brother D. M. Loy is back in the village again. Brother Loy some time ago entered the evangelistic field, buying a large tent from Brother Morgan. Brother Loy held his first meeting in East Burlington near the Midway Store, on a vacant lot and had a very successful meeting with 25 conversions. His next meeting was at Carolina Mills where the M. P. church was destroyed by fire last fall. Brother Loy reports 23 conversions there with prospects of a new church being started soon. Brother Loy next went to Hillsboro and erected his tent and had five converts. But owing to the small amount of the collection being raised to pay running expenses Brother Loy felt compelled to discontinue the meeting or quit for the present. Brother Loy did not announce what his future plans were, only that he was going to eat bread by the sweat of the brow.

With best wishes to the Herald,

Reporter.

Clark's Chapel, Weaverville Charge.—Since our last report we are very much encouraged to see an increase in Sunday school and also in the church services. Mrs. W. D. Barker was the one that won the five-dollar gold piece offered by Mr. B. R. Watts to the one that would bring the most new members to Sunday school.

Brother B. M. Williams brought to us an interesting sermon yesterday, after which he administered the Lord's Supper.

As we feel unable to prepare a program for the Rally Day service, we do feel interested and the envelopes were distributed, and we hope the offering will be a liberal one when taken on next first Sunday.

Louise Cheek, Reporter.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit—We have been enjoying the revivals very much in our neighboring churches. And our church people are interested very much in their prayer meetings: these prayer services seem to create interest in the church. They also assist the pastor by different members conducting them. I trust they will continue to be more interesting each time.

It is only a short while till conference. We are hoping to get our same pastor back again if he is not too near worn out by helping in other meetings: this work he has been doing for the past six weeks. We trust he will be stronger than ever before.

Best wishes, Vina Harwood.

Bethel, Alamance Circuit.—Our special meeting was held at Bethel the third Sunday in August. Rev. Lawrence Little, secretary of young people's work, was with us on Sunday and gave us a splendid lecture on the young people of our churches and how to interest them and secure their services in church work. Rev. J. D. Williams came on Monday and remained throughout the meeting. He preached some excellent soul-stirring sermons. We hope they will live in our memory and make us more earnest and prayerful and better workers for the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom in our midst. We had about 13 converts and seven additions to the church. Our annual Thank-offering meeting will be held at Bethel the third Sunday in September. Every one cordially invited to come. One service only.

Miss Annie L. Forrest was a visitor in the Bethel and Saxapahaw neighborhood the fourth Saturday and Sunday in August, and with the chairman of Alamance District of Woman's Foreign Missionary Work, visited the churches of Saxapahaw and Concord at 11 A. M. and 2:30 P. M. She gave splendid lectures on the condition and needs in heathen lands; and we organized foreign missionary societies at both churches. We were very much encouraged by the interest taken and also by the number of young people who joined. May the Lord bless, guide and help them in the mission work.

Our Woman's Home Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Lon. McPherson the first Sunday in July. Subject—"Happiness." Our foreign mission society met with Mrs. A. L. Foust the first Sunday in August. Subject—"Here am I, send me."; and the first Sunday in September both home and foreign societies met with Mrs. Rev. G. W. Holmes. Subject—"Temperance." Our programs at all these meetings were both interesting and instructive and we enjoyed the hospitality shown us, especially the nice watermelon served by Mrs. Holmes. We feel that the mission work is growing among us and we feel like pressing on. Mrs. J. M. Foust,

Reporter.

Alamance.—We held four special meetings during August. At Sapling Ridge Brother S. W. Taylor came on Sunday and remained during the week, preaching ten times, which was greatly enjoyed by our people. There were several conversions and reclamations and two accessions.

At Center Brother A. O. Lindley preached once on Sunday. Brother Troxler came on Monday and did the preaching. He is a great worker, and we were pleased with his earnest efforts. Brother Troxler's brother came with him and was a great help in the music. Here also we had several who professed to be saved. There were two accessions.

At Bethel Brother J. D. Williams was our help. It is needless to say we had good preaching, for it is always so where Brother Williams does the preaching. There were a number of professions and seven accessions.

Brother Suits was our help at Rock Creek. We were much pleased with his excellent preaching and good work. There were four accessions and other conversions.

All the churches seemed greatly edified and much revived by the splendid preaching and excellent work of the brethren who assisted.

Brother W. H. Foust is delegate to Annual Conference.

Sapling Ridge recently pounded the pastor with $32 in cash. Again we say, thank you.

Our fourth quarterly conference will meet at Sapling Ridge Saturday before second Sunday in October. G. W. Holmes.

Alexander.—Brother Alfred Alexander was born May the 30th, 1842, died July the 30th, 1923, aged 81 years, two months. Brother Alexander joined the Methodist Protestant church in young manhood, and in which he lived a faithful Christian life, until death claimed him. He was married to Mrs. Rennie

Spruill when about forty years of age. To this union three children were born, W. T., Alfred, Jr., and Miss Mitalda. These with Mrs. Alexander and Miss Eva Spruill, a step-daughter, with a host of friends, mourn the loss of him they loved.

Brother Alexander was a man of great faith; he did not believe in compromising with those things which would have a tendency to weaken his hopes for eternity. But with all his heart he believed in God. This made him a strong man spiritually. His pastor feels the great loss the church has suffered. for as long as he was able to go, he was always found in his place, in the Sunday school, and church.

But while we feel so deeply our loss, we know it is his gain, therefore we say, "Thy will be done," and praying God's richest blessings upon those heart-broken loved ones. We follow on, preparing to meet him in God's good time, where we will never say goodby, but together live with Jesus evermore.

R. L. Hethcox.

OUR COLLEGE CHAIRMAN.

Have you thought of him, friends? thought seriously, at this hour when he stands on this eminence up to which the Highest has brought us, $200,000 up and laid down in cash and pledges? The strain, the anxious worry, the restless feverish impulses that would not be quelled, the importuning; have you thought of and in imagination numbered the miles of travel, the multi-million steps?

This is a prosperous year for the planters. Predictions are it will be the best since 1919. Friends, let us help him down this abrupt decline, $100,000 down, by letting our pledges and cash subscriptions just gently flow in a quiet, small, unbroken stream. Awake, O thou slumberer, awake, 'tis Zion's call: put on thine armor and gird thee for the fight: to build this temple of righteousness, in this era and age of unrighteousness. For sin in diabolic and godless contempt of sin's code is all about us. Daniel Webster's oracular production is profoundly and irrevocably true: "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples they will crumble into dust; but if we work on immortal souls, if we embue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellowmen, we engrave on their tablets something which will brighten to all eternity." This is the impress, the lessons, the engravings, which we hope to make, and teach, and carve upon every soul that passes her portals.

Dr. Andrews, in humility, in gentle entreaty, in magnanimity of soul and in tenderness, pleads for your mites, your larger and your magnificent gifts. He is begging for your highest interests and greatest good and that of your offspring forever. Hold him not at arm's length and off by silent indifference. But receive him with open doors and graciousness. And let the current of your hearts flow out in responsiveness to his God-commissioned appeals.

Let us sum up. Have you cast up his achievements lately? All these subscriptions, the thousand-, the hundred-, and three hundred-dollar clubs; the furnished auditorium; the dining hall—the former I with irrepressible longing want to see, and see and learn all the Hausers from the eldest representative to the tiniest tot. And in the evening shadows and waking night hours I can in vivid imagination see those dining chairs and table yet to be. All these came directly or indirectly from or through his earnest, incessant, irresistiblbe and invincible appeals. Are we immane to every sense of worth and is the highest within us forever deadened by the world, or annihilated? Awake! again we say, awake! 'Tis no menial at your door. From the first pulpits of our conference he comes. and the highest office in her power to grant. Hear him!

Discouraged in canvassing for pledges, we asked, "Shall we call on that lady?" "I think so, she said she wanted to give something." She met us timidly, and replied, "I thought I'd like to give $10. But I will bring it to church Sunday." Her husband handed me a $20-bill, ten for her and ten for him also. Friends, she was not rich, and three little ones to dress clung to her skirts. But she loves God, and He loves her and till time shall cease with me I'll ne'er forget nor cease to love her.

Oh, meet him thus responsively on the train, at station and church, unsolicited hand him ten or one hundred or one thousand. Oh, it cheers and enlarges his heart, and increases faith. And we will, and reward his labors in abundance with our compilations of gifts, money and pledges. For,

"Our years are in the sheaf, they come and they go
With the river's ebb and the river's flow."

And we'll pass these flowers now, first, of our responsiveness; second, our appreciation, and not wait till

"He rests still and deep
Where the edelweiss creep,
And the angels their holy vigils keep."

WHAT IS HAPPENING WITH THE BOLL WEEVIL.

"Undoubtedly much money has already been wasted in North Carolina this year in needless and ineffective attempts to combat the boll-weevil. Time and time again we warned against this," says Franklin Sherman, Chief in Entomology for the State College and Department of Agriculture.

"We advised against any extravagant outlay of money for machines or poisons of whatever kinds in the area where weevil-injury was due to be light, yet we are told of persons who have used 'remedies' and now because their injury is light doubtless some of them think they have controlled the weevil; whereas, in fact, the weevil is equally scarce in other fields where no expense was incurred to protect from weevil."

Mr. Sherman states that in the region where injury was due to be severe this season advice was given to prepare for using the standard dust-poison method and to follow the official advice, which is not to begin poisoning when the weevil first appears, but to wait until there is harmful damage in immediate prospect. A number of cotton farmers bought machines and poison and dusted by directions with good prospect of success. There are others likewise equipped who have not yet applied one pound of poison because they haven't needed to and their investment is still safe.

But there are many others who thought they would go one better on the official advisers, states Mr. Sherman. These determined to use other forms of poison and to begin when the first weevils appeared. They have applied their poisons repeatedly for two months or more, and certainly killed some weevils, especially before squares formed, but it is known today that in many such field there has been no real need of this expenditure, and that in other fields the weevil-injury is increasing in spite of their "treatments."

"Weevil injury is not equal and alike in all fields," says Mr. Sherman. "He who thinks that he must adopt a certain 'remedy' into his practice and use it whatever happens, stands every chance of wasting money and effort. He who follows the standard official advice will prepare, and will then apply the poison when it is needed and where it is needed. The one expends blindly on a yet questionable method; the other uses his judgment and knowledge in the timely application of a known method. There is a wide difference, and perhaps this difference will grow wider as we grow in our weevil experience."

—"The best paying job I ever had," said one farmer who selected his seed corn in the field. This man increased his acre yields the next year.

THE CHILDLESS.

From the calm, almost stern face, you would have mentally measured him as a man devoid of emotion. In the lines about his mouth; in the squareness of his jaw; in the way his eyelids narrowed at times, he showed poise. There was suggestion of gray about his temples and a promise of additional avoirdupois about his waist in the near future; but, somehow, I knew he would grow old with dignity. And when the time came for the last card to be played in the Great Game, he would accept either defeat or success as calmly as he turned homeward now.

A woman awaited his homecoming; a gentle, sweet-faced fatalist, with a constant longing in her eyes that hurt him ever to see. For many years they had gone the way together; the twain no more. At first, life had swung them further apart, through a mutual disappointment, and now, closer together by the same compelling force. (I doubt whether adversity's uses are really sweet enough to balance the pain; but there is no avoiding them and through her sorrow he had taught himself to hide, if he could not bury, his own.)

At the corner there came upon him, breathless, bubbling with health, a tiny ragamuffin, soiled face, hands and arms outstretched, head back, eyes almost closed, the child blew into the grave man's arms, like a wind-driven bird, athrob with life. The grave, immaculate man hesitated, stooped, picked up the tiny stranger from another strata of life, and suddenly kissed the sticky lips and cheeks and hair, hungrily—hungrily!

The baby, awake to his mistake kicked himself out of the arms that held him so awkwardly—and was gone. The grave man, his chin a bit lower, turned homeward.

Sometimes it seems as if Gate were blindfolded rather than consciously cruel. I wonder—I wonder.—Selected.

IN MEMORIAM.

Dowling.—A great cloud of gloom was cast over the hearts of many on August 4, when word went out from the Sarah Elizabeth Hospital that the spirit of Mr. John W. Dowling had gone to its reward.

Mr. Dowling had been suffering from a complication of diseases for about six weeks the last three being spent in the hospital, where every medical and kind, loving attention was given him, but these failed to subdue his malady.

He was widely known and numbered his friends by all that knew him, being a friend in need to every one. He was a man that loved his family and home above all else, and was ever striving to make it the most attractive for his children. He was a member of New Hope church, where he was an interested and regular attendant.

He leaves a devoted wife and five dear children to mourn their loss. He can not come again to us. And we would not have him back, to suffer death again, but we can go to him and there be a re-united family.

My little children near my heart,
And nature seems to bind;
It grieves me sorely to depart
And leave you all behind.
O Lord, a father to them be,
And keep them from all harm,
That they may love and worship Thee
And dwell upon thy charms.

My loving wife, my bosom friend,
The object of my love,
The time's been sweet I've spent with you
My sweet and helpful love.
My loving wife, don't grieve for me,
Neither lament nor mourn;
For I shall with my Jesus be
When you are left alone.
How often you have looked for me,
And ofttimes seen me come;
But now I have departed from thee,
And never more return;
For I can never come to thee;
Let this not grieve your heart:
For you will shortly come to me,
Where we shall never part.

The funeral service was in charge of his pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, and he was laid to rest beside others of his family at New Hope church. M. V. W.

Davis.—John D. Davis was born in Guilford county, N. C., October 9, 1850, and died August 18, 1923. His first marriage was to Miss Mary Ellen Trueblood in 1873. To this union were born seven children, four sons and three daughters. The sons are J. F., C. H., H. L., and V. R. Davis, and the daughters are Mmes. Martha Mendenhall, Effie Craver and Gerr Gray. Mrs. Davis departed this life in 1893. Brother Davis's second marriage was to Mrs. Lizzie V. Benson in 1895.

In young manhood he was converted and united with Sandy Ridge Methodist Protestant church near his birthplace and early home in Guilford county.

In 1888 he moved to Yadkin College in Davidson county and moved his church membership to the Methodist Protestant church at that place, where it was continued during his remaining life.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis were rearing some orphan children in their home and the home was a home for the pastor, when in the community. Mr. Davis had 32 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

About six years ago his health began to fail and it became noticeably worse three years ago. July 30, this year, he suffered a stroke of paralysis, from which he never recovered, and after much suffering his spirit quietly and peacefully passed from this world at 11:30 P. M., August 18.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor at Yadkin College Monday, August 20, at 2:30 P. M. He was assisted by Prof. W. T. Totten and Rev. R. F. Honeycutt. The burial was in the Yadkin College cemetery. The beautiful floral offerings and large number attending the service expressed the high esteem in which Brother Davis was held by his many friends.

In Memory of John Alexander Thompson.

July 18, 1923, the death angel entered our home, Rev. and Mrs. H. S. B. Thompson's, and called our darling baby, John, to come home and live with Jesus. He said, John, come unto me, you dear little child, you have lived with father and mother, brothers and sisters 21 months and 11 days. I know you are a sweet precious jewel in their sight, but I have need of you in my kingdom: come up higher, I have a place for you not made with hands, prepared for my children; so, John, suffer no more, come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of God.

John looked me in the face and breathed his last, and went home to live with my God and his Savior, where he is now resting; there is no pain, no sorrow, no anguish, no suffering, and no more death with him. All is peace and joy forever.

On July the 9th he was unusually well and lively. A few minutes before time for the six o'clock whistle to blow, he placed his little self on the front porch to see the mill people go to their homes as they passed. He did like so much to see some that he knew so well and would wave his hand and hail as they passed him by. This was a pleasure to him. I stood back and listened to his sweet little voice and to the voices which greeted him back, it was so sweet. I thought that evening his voice was unusually sweet. And no one can ever say "Mamma," "Papa," sweeter than John's sweet little lips spoke these words.

Little did I think his little life was so near an end on earth, right when it was such a pleasure to us all to hear his voice and the patter of his little feet. All now is hushed. His voice is silent, yet all is well with his soul. On July 10, Tuesday morning, he awoke full of glee as usual; it seemed it was a harder task for me to get up and leave him in the bed that morning than ever before. His little lips spoke lots of sweet words to mamma and papa that morning that will always be remembered; and the extra kisses he placed on my lips and cheeks that morning were placed there to say; they are so deep they will never fade away.

This was his last well morning. While I was out busy about my morning work, little sister and John walked to the store, where she bought him some little cakes; they were on their way home eating and enjoying their little lives so much seemingly. He came home; and oh, in one and one-half hours he had gone into high fever. This ended in meningitis. We had all done it seemed could be done but all was in vain. The voice came, Come higher, John, and we had to give him over, to the one who gave to us.

John, we miss you, oh, so much, mother misses you everywhere.
Dear John, we give you up,
Though shed we many a tear;
We little thought your time with us so short,
The parting was so near.
We try our tears to dry,
For we knew you were so sweet and true.

John faded as a gentle flower,
Friends saw that he must go home.
His aching little form returns to dust,
But his home is in the sky.

His earthly trials were but few,
No more he'll feel a pain.
No more can he be harmed,
But with Jesus he will forever reign.

One by one we're called away,
And our bodies return to clay.
One by one we shall see Jesus,
And live with Him forever.

Now, John, 'tis hard to give you up,
But we in meek submission bow before the great white throne;
And though we sadly miss thee now,
Yet we must say, "Thy will be done."

Now we have two little mounds at Cedar Cliff,
That picture the little forms of Bessie Lou and John.
But they are robed in spotless white
At the throne of God high up in heaven.

They are watching, they are waiting,
Soon we will meet them, we will greet them on the other shore;
There will be no parting, no goodbys
In that bright home above.

Mother.

Hodges—August 26, 1923, a brother known as Billy Hodges died in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Turner, in Weldon, N. C. His body was carried back to his home in Northampton county for burial, where many of his friends were gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to "Uncle Billy." He was 69 years of age, and had lived a quiet life in his community and was loved and honored by all who knew him.

During our pastorate on Spring Church circuit he was converted and joined Lebanon church. It was late in life, but he seemed to be very earnest and faithful in his new life. He was his pastor's friend. We know that he was our friend. He was true to us unto the end. He leaves behind two sons and two daughters and several grandchildren who loved him and will miss him much.

Funeral was held in his home, after which his body was laid to rest in his family burying ground nearby. We bow in humble submission to Him who knows all things, does all things well. J. B. O'Brian.

—A note from Rev. L. W. Gerringer reports the death of his father, aged 72 years. He was buried last Friday. We believe he lived in Alamance county, near Elon College.

One of the noblest ruins of Athens is the old temple of Jupiter, which has been turned over as a playground for Near East Relief orphans. In the background is the Acropolis, and a short distance to the west Mars Hill, where Paul preached.

AT THE FOOT OF THE ACROPOLIS.

"While we must now eat the bread of charity or perish, is is none the less humiliating," said an Armenian doctor to me as we worked together in a ward of the Near East Relief hospital at Aleppo, trying to save 180 wounded men and women, victims of a Turkish massacre the night before. "We have our pride," he continued, "yet when systematically disarmed and periodically attacked by overwhelming numbers, should any survive and be fed and sustained by American relief, there are those who say we are being pauperized."

Then pausing in an operation on a mutilated man, this Armenian graduate of Harvard Medical School, this surgeon whose fame extended from Arabis to the Caucasus, turned to me almost savagely and added, "All we ask is a chance to work out our own salvation without fear and trembling."

It is true; by a hundred tests I know the Armenians to be a proud and self-reliant people. Given a square deal and half a chance, they will gladly lift themselves to a place of honor and independence.

As I stood one afternoon on the Acropolis and looked down upon the plain where 90,000 Armenian and Greek refugees were camped, the words of the Armenian doctor came back to me, "without fear and trembling." These refugees before me had it at last. Would they now work out their own salvation?

Hardly had the great camp been established when some of the more enterprising pushed out and determined to make the best of even a desperate situation. Several hundred families refused to continue as objects of charity. These, banding themselves into a community, secured a barren piece of ground at the foot of the Acropolis. Not in bondage, as were the children of Israel, nor under compulsion, but in freedom and with gladness of heart these families, men, women, and little children, turned to making bricks without straw. The days were fortunately fair; the bricks made with bare hands (for they had no tools) were placed in long rows below the Parthenon. The bright October sun soon dried them. Then began the erection of a hundred or more queer little mud houses made from these sun-dried bricks. As I watched this busy scene it reminded me of an army of industrious ants I had seen in Australia, building their curious mud houses almost as large as these.

The present builders were hurrying to finish their homes before the winter rains set in. When the walls were completed we found the eager home workers in despair because they had no money wherewith to purchase roofing material. It is at just such a point as this that the Near East Relief is glad to render assistance. Each builder was provided with sufficient timber and tar-paper to crown his primitive walls with a roof, and add a door and shutter-window. Within a fortnight the village was completed. In visiting many of the homes I found the joy of possession almost pathetic. Never was a millionaire prouder of his palace than these Armenian refugees of their mud huts.

But the most amazing part remains to be told. American history records the proud fact that, reflecting the spirit and character of the founders of New England, Harvard College opened its doors seventeen years after the landing of the Pilgrims. In the same spirit, as soon as these refugees had completed their rude homes on the slopes of the Acropolis, or, to be exact, seventeen days after the landing of these latter-day-pilgrim-exiles, they too, men, women and children, turned eagerly to the making of more mud bricks with which to erect a school-house. Near East Relief again provided the roof. An Armenian schoolteacher, a College graduate, was found, and placed in charge of this new educational enterprise.

It was a large and prideful group of villagers that escorted me one day on a visit of inspection to their now school-house under the shadow of Mars Hill. One mother informed me with beaming countenance that her three children would now be able to continue their education which had been interrupted at the beginning of the war. After seven years of "fear and trembling" they could now begin again to work out their own future.

Through the goodness of Brother W. F. Grabs, King, N. C., we are permitted to put up canned apples this week. He gave us a full load last week.

If any person doubts the wisdom of spraying fruit trees he should visit Brother Grabs' orchard and see the difference in his and the neighbors who do not spray. If you are thinking of planting trees consult him and profit by his experience.

The dry weather ruined our vegetable crop and we will not have as many vegetables to can as we had planned for and now couldn't a number of the Home's friends put up a few extra cans for us? You would not miss the few and we would be helped much, as our family has greatly increased in the last few months. H. A. Garrett.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

To meet the unparalleled demands created by the terrible disaster in Japan, caused by typhoon, earthquake, fire and tidal wave, Rev. Dr. T. H. Lewis, President of the General Conference, called together representatives of the Executive Committee of the General Conference, of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and the Board of Foreign Missions, in the Baltimore Book Concern, September 17, 1923, to consider how best to meet the conditions which have arisen, and the following appeal was duly authorized.

We are overjoyed to announce that a wireless message from Nagoya states "Missionaries safe," and the pastors of all our churches are requested to offer a prayer of thanksgiving in next Sunday's services for the providence that has preserved our missionaries.

The largest financial investment of the society was in Yokohama, represented by the Girls' School and the Kindergarten, and the board had foreign style churches in Tokyo, Yokohama, Oyama, Hiratsuka, Ejiri and other points down the coast, besides the Yokohama Night School property.

At Hamamatsu the society had recently built a kindergarten building and had a missionary home and a missionary home and a kindergarten building in Nagoya, and the board has Nagoya College with six buildings, besides foreign style churches there and at other points. We are hoping that Nagoya properties have escaped, but are satisfied that all the property of the society and the board in Tokyo and Yokohama and some other points has been destroyed.

Prices of material and wages will be far in excess of original costs of those properties, and as to insurance there is no guarantee that the Japanese companies have survived, or that much, if anything, will be realized from that source.

We must not falter in the support of that work and to meet the demands which are coming speedily. The union meeting today decided that an appeal must now be made for one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000). and to make an effort to secure funds so that the work may be completed as soon as possible.

It was decided that all the funds sent in to the editors of the papers in response to Secretary Klein's appeal, and the funds already secured by the society, shall be placed in the Union Fund, and that all funds from now on should be sent to the church treasurer, Mr. H C. Staley, 1025 Calvert Bldg., Baltimore, Md

It was decided that the funds received shall be applied to the work of the society and the board in Japan, on the basis of property loss. This is an earnest appeal to the whole church for the whole missionary work of the denomination in Japan, so much of which we fear has been lost.

In full confidence of the willingness of our people to meet this sudden and extraordinary emergency; and anticipating prompt and liberal responses we make this appeal.

T. H. Lewis,
Mrs. S. W. Rosenberger,
Fred. C. Klein.

A PERSONAL TESTIMONY.

The brother whose letter appeared on the front page of last week's Herald is having an experience similar to my own, until at the age of twenty-two a reality came into my life which will always abide—the witness of the Spirit—and it was worth more than the whole world to me. It's true, I joined the church at the age of eight, but I stumbled on the very simplicity of salvation. "Him that cometh unto me. I will in no wise cast out." Finally, I saw that God was more anxious for me than I was for Him even, and I knew I must have Him without doubt, for peace, and ever since that time I would as quickly say, "I reckon E. C. Harris is my father," as to say: "I hope I am a Christian!" He surely made it plain to me.. There was nothing I could do but to lose confidence in myself absolutely and believe and trust His word, and I knew the "whosoever" meant me. The most spiritual person I ever saw, a former Episcopal preacher, said to me, "Yield yourself to God just as you would to a chair when you sit down"—and it's a daily yielding too. Paul said, "I die daily."

I'm glad the brother wrote, for as our editor said, "We believe there are many similarly troubled." It may help such as these to know that peace comes through yielding and acceptance.

This quotation from Romans 8:38, 39 expresses my feelings exactly: "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

OUR CHURCH COVENANT.

Thanking God for the light we have received, and for the revelation of Jesus which we now enjoy; and hoping that God, for Christ's sake, has pardoned our sins; and having been baptized on a profession of our faith in Christ Jesus into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, we do, this day, before God and the world, with deep joy and great solemnity, enter into covenant with one another, as one body in Christ.

We therefore covenant and agree that, by the aid of the Holy Spirit, we will walk together in love and Christian fellowship. We promise to labor for the advancement and final triumph of the church; to sustain her worship by attending the house of God and supporting the ministry; to guard her ordinances, enforce her discipline, and defend her doctrine.

We also pledge ourselves to walk circumspectly in the world; to be honest, just, and faithful in our business relations; and, as God may give us help, we promise to live righteous and holy lives.

We further promise to watch over each other in brotherly love; to visit the sick; to pray for each other and the world; to aid the poor and needy, and to perform such other kind offices as may be well pleasing in the sight of God.—Selected.

No. 10—Earth's Roughest Hill.

Contrasts make things sharper to the eye. Black looks blacker on white, and the white whiter. A dirty mongrel cur stands out uglier in a brood of well-kept thoroughbreds.

Contrasts never were sharper than in the one Man of the race. He was of the blood royal of earth, yet he lived in a white-washed stone cottage. He was a lineal aritocrat of the aristocrats, yet he earned bread as a carpenter. He came from a throne; he came to a dirty obscure Oriental village. He came for a world throne, but he lived among a people peculiarly provincial and clannish.

His hand had held a sceptre; it handled a hammer and saw. His brow had graced a crown; it was scarred by a crown of thorns. He came, he said, to reign over a race; he hung on a rude cross.

He was the purest of men by consent of those that hated him; he suffered as the vilest of outcast sinners. He came to bring in a new blessed order of things to this war-scarred, thorn-growing earth. But sin broke the plan. But the thing's not finished yet. The game isn't played out. The innings will turn. Wait a bit.

Those contrasts didn't just happen. That Man wasn't foiled. The thing was planned. The purpose of the Man's heart shaped the plan. The passion of his heart drove it through, even though his heart broke in the drive. Passion and purpose drove the Man steadily up the roughest, steepest, tallest hill on earth.

The geography of Jesus' life is fascinating. He was the Son of the Earth as well as the Son of Man. Every phase of human experience he knew, and every sort of the earth's surface he touched. He belongs to us down here, doubly.

He was born in a little village of the plains. In infancy he crossed the desert, and slept by the pyramids of Egypt, the cradle of history. He lived thirty out of thirty-three years in a common country village.

He was baptized in the muddy waters of the Jordan River. He was tempted in the Wilderness. He drew the crowds perilously thick by Galilee's pretty blue waters. He was transfigured on towering snow-clad Hermon. He went through the sorest strain of spirit in a garden under gnarled olive trees.

He was hurt to death on Calvary's hill. His body found a three days' resting place in a new-hewn tomb of the rock. He was Son of Man and Son of Earth. He touched both intimately at every point of contact.

But the highest hill he ever climbed, the steepest, the roughest, was Calvary. It was tallest. It lay on the top of another hill, Nazareth. Nazareth was the human life he lived. Nazareth was the underpinning of Calvary. It was the quality, the purity of the Nazareth life that gave the distinctive meaning to the Calvary death.

It was steepest. None other climbed it, nor could, nor can. And only he by giving his life clean out. It was roughest. Thorn-growing, sin-roughened, it took his very life out getting to its top. But he went.

Have you ever been on Calvary? It faces three ways.

It faces up—toward God. The condition of things on the earth is a scandalous blot of God's administration. Surely God can't be good. It can't be that he cares, to let things go as they do, suffering for the innocent, wrongs unrighted, selfishness riding roughshod over men, evil unpunished. Where is God? Does he know? Does he care? Why aren't things straightened out?

That roughest hill answers. It gives God's estimate of the wrongs that scandalize earth. They deserve the treatment His Son received. Does he feel? He himself suffered at Calvary when his Son suffered, to tell his estimate of sin, and hold judgment, sin's self-judgment, in abeyance till man has had fullest opportunity. God's embarrassment was to show his intense hatred of sin, and yet his intense love of man. He did both in that Calvary event.

Calvary faces down—towards Satan, that splendid foul spirit prince. Sin is obeying Satan. It enslaves man. The Calvary Man took on himself what was due us. We are set free. Satan is answered fully and defeated stingingly. His power is broken. Calvary makes slaves free men.

And that Hill faces out—toward men. It breaks our hearts with the love of it. For that Man didn't have to die, except the have-to of his love. Ten or eleven times they tried to do him to death. And they easily could so far as sheer force was concerned.

Each time he held them off with a power they couldn't understand, and couldn't resist. Then he yielded. The dying was voluntary. It means just what meaning the Man put into it. It had to be done, he said. He did it out of love for us. And the love of the thing, once it gets home, breaks a man's heart.

Sainted Bishop Whipple of Minnesota sat by the sick bedside of a cultured old judge in the southland, talking in his scholarly way. At last the judge politely said, “Pardon me; but you know I'm facing the real things. Won't you talk to me like you'd talk to my black boy Jim?”

And the Bishop said quietly, “You're a sinner, like me. Jesus died for our sins. Trust him as a little child.” And the judge said, “Thank you, Bishop, I can get hold of that. That gives me peace.”

When one faces the real things of life, or beyond, it's touch with the Man of the Calvary Hill that gives peace.

THE PERMANENCE OF LITERATURE.

By Wm. Thornton Whitsett.

The permanence of literature constitutes one of its strongest appeals. The story of mutation and transformation is written strongly on the face of all the earth. Nothing persists, nothing endures. Material things pass as the fabric of a dream. That which today is, tomorrow is not. Dust and dissolution are on every hand as reminders of the glory of a day that was, but that is no more forever.

Here literature steps to the front and says, “The things of time may wax and wane, but thought once expressed in fitting form may endure forever upon the tablets of eternity.” Marble and bronze may decay, but thought survives fresh in its eternal youth. Those who work in the fields of literary endeavor, and pour into their efforts the best and the highest of man's possibility, may do so with the full assurance that they are becoming linked with the only memorials that withstand the ravages of decay. The only human immortality that walks with enduring feet the utmost reaches of earth is the immortality that reveals itself in the expression of man's highest intellectual and spiritual dreams upon the pages of literature.

Come stroll for an hour in the shades of the cemetery that lies upon the rising hills of the city. Yonder blackened marble tells the tale of him who in your youth was the great merchant in control of the trade of all the region. Thousands stood at his counters, and poured their contributions to swell his profits of his great establishment. Now his great business enterprise is in the hands of strangers, and even the building which housed it has been razed to make way for the newer ideas of others. His name and influence have gone to the dust, and none preserve the ideas which once drove to success his vast undertakings. Here in this secluded spot near the cypress and the elm reposes the form of that brilliant youth who battled with you in college for the honors of scholastic attainment. He left no written records of his dreams, and he too is lost to the memories of today. That graceful shaft stands to mark the lowly grave of some queen of beauty, who living ruled by her fascinating arts, and who dying left nothing to tell the tale of her triumphs. Here we reach a granite block that simply carries the name of one of a generation now long since passed away; but here you feel a thrill; here the mind is flooded with thoughts; here you catch a glimpse of the immortal amid the scenes of mortality, and why? Because, here rests all that is mortal of one who left upon the glowing page of literature the thoughts that filled his days, and while he like all the others has passed to the dust from which he came, he walks with viewless feet but mighty tread amid the ways of men, and will live as long as time itself shall endure, for he gave his days to that which makes its permanent impress upon the things of time. His name today is better known than many of the names of the living, and at every turn we are dominated by the thought that once was formulated by his brain, and which he gave to us through the medium of the literature of his time. Men from all the ends of earth make pilgrimages to his grave, feeling that an immortal kinship exists between the best and highest in their lives, and that which once moved him to expression.

“Cold in the dust the perished heart may lie,
But that which warmed the heart can never die.”

Buoyant and youthful and perennial in strength, is the memory of him who has touched all time by his entrance into the circle of immortality by the power of thought transmitted through the printed page.

“'Tis immortality, 'tis that alone,
Amid life's pains, abasements, emptiness,
The soul can comfort, elevate and fill.”

“From this day on I mean to do the best I can. If I am right, time will prove it. If I am not right, ten legions of angels swearing I am right will not make it so.”—Abraham Lincoln.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Had the church properly interpreted prophecy, had she seen that Christ, in harmony with the divine program, was coming twice into the world, the first time to suffer and die and to set on foot a Gospel dispensation, to speedily offer repentance and salvation to the entire human race, and then to come again in glory and power to overthrow wickedness and reign in righteousness over those who had accepted him, what a different history she would have had.

With what remarkable zeal the disciples who saw and understood the gerat truth of our Lord's return carried forward the Gospel program. How rapidly, without railroads, steamships, automobiles, or any of the modern methods of rapid transit, they carried the Gospel to the various nations and peoples of their time. How quickly the churches of today with their untold millions of money, methods of travel, printing press, wireless telegraphy and the close touch with the ends of the earth could carry the Gospel to every creature if she could once gasp the great truth that the mission of Jesus Christ in the world was not to set up great ecclesiasticisms, but to set on foot a great evangelism; not to build up sectarian prejudices among men, but to offer a Gospel which has in it power to save men from sin, and to realize that her richest mission is to proclaim this Gospel to every human being beneath the sun.

There is not a hint in the teachings of Christ or his inspired apostles that during the Gospel Dispensation the entire population of the earth would be brought to repentance, saving faith and into harmony with God and peace among men. It is the duty of the church to give everyone an opportunity; to impress upon everyone the privilege and the necessity of receiving Christ; always and everywhere, there has been and will be those who will reject the gospel. The church is not responsible for those who reject, but it is her duty to give the Gospel to all men.

The Scriptures teach us that there will be opposition. Jesus said to his disciples, ''Behold I send you forth as sheep among wolves.'' He promised them crosses, reproaches, self-sacrifice and suffering, but in the midst of all this they were to have spiritual victory. He said to them, ''In this world ye shall have tribulations, but be of good cheer. I have overcome the world.'' In the parable of the tares and the wheat we are taught that this dispensation is to be one of mixed good and evil, and will be so until the harvest time when the separation shall take place.

Jesus teaches us that at his coming to catch away his bride, many will be unprepared. In the parable of the wise and foolish virgins this truth is brought out very clearly. We find one-half of those who were awaiting the Bridegroom were unprepared to go with him in to the wedding feast. They lacked one essential —they had no oil. They had the form of godliness without the power.

If the preaching of the gospel is to bring in a millennium of perfection and glory, all are to be saved, and if at the end of this golden age Jesus comes, how is it that this parable teaches that when he does come, a large per cent of those who are expecting his coming will be unprepared to meet him? If the postmillennial teaching be true the parable of the wise and foolish virgins is incapable of intelligent interpretation.

The postmillennial teaching of the Lord's coming no more harmonizes with the teachings of the New Testament than the Jewish notion of the Messiah's appearing as a king at his first coming harmonizes with the Old Testament teaching concerning the Messiah. Let us with reverence inquire of our Lord about this matter. Gracious Master, will the preaching of the gospel finally bring the world —everybody upon the earth—into a saved state and ready to meet thee at thy coming? The answer of Jesus:

''For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows.. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall arise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto the nations; and then shall the end come.'' Matt. 24: 7-14.

Lord, some people think there will be a millennium for a thousand years of warless peace and happiness on the earth just before thy coming. Please tell us about this. Jesus says, ''Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, and from one end of heaven to the other. Now learn a parable of the fig tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors.'' Matt. 24: 29-33.

But, Lord, will not the preachers so know and explain thy word to the people that they will all understand the divine plan, and be expecting thee, and ready to receive thee, joyfully at thy coming?

Christ answers: ''For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark. And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Then shall two be in the field: the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.'' Matt. 24: 38-42.

What are we to think of men in the light of these words of Jesus Christ, men who persist in telling us that our Lord delayeth his coming for twenty, fifty, or perhaps a hundred thousand years, and that the ecclesiastical forces in the world will bring all men into a state of perfect peace and righteousness before the Lord comes? Many of them assure us that he will not come at all. We have boastful men in the church who tell us that Jesus believed he was coming back, but that he was mistaken. Meanwhile we have representatives of the church who are cutting the Bible to pieces, denying the virgin birth and Deity of our Lord, excusing sin and sneering at the idea of holiness of heart and life. In the World War, almost all white soldiers had been baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. They were Roman Catholics in Southern Europe, they were Greek Catholics in Northern Europe, the English-speaking soldiers, a large per cent of them, had been baptized in their infancy, many others had been baptized of their own free will, and yet these great masses of church members fighting and killing each other, with their religious teachers and leaders, knew but little more of the great plan of God—the real gospel and the mission of Christ to save men from sin, and his second coming to reign over them than did the Jews who lived on the earth at the time of Christ's ministry among men.

We are by no means saying that the Gospel has not accomplished much, but we are saying it has not been preached at all to untold millions of men, and that it has not been taught properly to vast multitudes who have heard it. Had the German Kaiser, the Russian Czar, the King of Italy, the President of France, the King of Austria and the King of England been earnest premillennial Christians, ''loving the Lord's appearing,'' the World War would have been an impossibility. Men have forgotten that God has a program, that Jesus Christ is a King, and that he is coming to rule. In their blindness and ignorance of the Word of God, the will and plans of God, and the true character of the Son of God, they go about to set up their own kingdoms and have their own way. The results—war, bloodshed, death and desolation.

Our only hope for universal peace and a warless age is the coming of Christ and his church. Then, and not until then, will a true brotherhood be established among men of all nations, kindreds, tongues and tribes.

Let us ask St. Paul with reference to the condition of things when our Lord shall appear. Brother Paul, what will be the state of society and world conditions when Jesus comes? ''For when they shall say, peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.''

Notice the Apostle: ''Let us not sleep, as do others'' This scripture plainly teaches that the coming of the Lord shall find some in spiritual sleep, unpreparedness; that his coming will be to some ''sudden destruction'' This is the whole tenor of the teaching of Paul. He prophesies that in the last days perilous times shall come; that men will be selfish, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; that they will seek for false teachers; that they will give heed to doctrines of devils; that many will have their consciences seared as with a hot iron.

Beloved, can we read these prophecies of the Apostle, compare them with the teachings of Jesus, look upon the signs of the times about us and remain indifferent, follow after pleasure, seek to lay up useless treasures in this world, sit in silence and indifference to the false teachings and the vast number of people who are being deceived and led away from the saving gospel. Must we not arouse ourselves and do everything in our power to bring the people to repentance and saving faith in Jesus; to spread the gospel to all the world, to bring to the heathen who have so long sat in darkness the good news of salvation, and to keep our own spiritual lamps trimmed and burning, and our vessels filled with oil that we may be ready to meet the Master at his coming?

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

The work seems to be going fine throughout the conference. . All of us are in the midst of the very busiest season of the conference year, and every wide-awake worker has more to do than he can get done. The reports indicate that most of the charges are doing their best to meet their financial obligations.

The Need.

Brethren, the needs are great, so let us pray and strive to raise every cent of every assessment where it is at all possible. Our church extension work is suffering mcre than we can know because we are not raising more of the annual conference budget than we are. Some made application to us for help at the coming Conference session, and whether or not we can help in these promising places depends upon the amount raised on the budget.

Then, too, the need for raising our General Conference budget is intensified by the distressing condition of our work in Japan. All our boards need every cent of the budget, so again I say, pray and work to do your level best. God expects our best, and nothing short of our best is worthy to offer Him.

The Work.

Saturday and Sunday, September 1 and 2, Dr. R. M. Andrews and I were at Dunn's Chapel, near Columbia, S. C., with the brethren of the South Carolina Conference. We had a bit of fun getting located for the night when we first reached the community. Ask Dr. Andrews about it. But after we got to the church and met with the brethren and friends we had some splendid services, and I think we left the brethren a bit more encouraged than we found them.

That same Sunday Mrs. Dixon was with Rev. N. Brittain at Cross Anchor, S. C. They began a meeting that day, and I came back to him on Monday, and we were there with him through Sunday, September 9. There were four converts and some reclamations in the meeting, and three joined the church. There is a fine opportunity there for Kingdom service if it can be worked out properly. I also visited Harmony church and had two delightful services with those splendid people.

September 15 to 19.

Saturday, September 16, I was with Rev. [illegible] E. Phillips in Bessemer City. He was just closing a splendid series of meetings. There were two converts at the altar Saturday evening. Sunday morning I was with Rev. J. M. Ridenhour at Shelby and preached to a good congregation of earnest hearers. Here they have built a good parsonage during the year, and are talking new church. They have also purchased additional land for the parsonage. There are signs of life and progress here. Mrs. Dixon was with Brother Phillips at Lincolnton and Fairfield and spoke in both of these churches on Sunday.

They have greatly improved their church in Lincolnton by adding five new Sunday school rooms. Then on Sunday night both of us were with Brother Phillips in Cornelius, where he has recently held a tent meeting which resulted in a new Methodist Protestant organization with 23 charter members. Our people here have a splendid lot 100 by 200 feet which is well located, and on which they hope to build a church on. The lot is paid for and they have $60 in bank to put into the building. Brother Phillips is doing fine service in this part of the State.

This evening (Monday) we are to be in Caroleen, tomorrow evening in Forest City and Wednesday at Bess' Chapel for a quarterly conference.

Lexington.

On our way up here on Saturday we stopped in Lexington and talked over the situation there with Brother J. W. Lindsay. He is hopeful of the situation there, and says they are going to try to have their lot entirely paid for by conference, and they are going to ask that the Board of Church Extenion join them in putting a church building in Lexington during next year. We have a great opportunity here and we must meet it like Christians with faith and willingness.

Appointments Up to Conference.

This has been an exceedingly busy year with me, and with the rest of you I shall be constantly going till conference. My appointments run as follows:

September 23 at West End.
September 24 to 28 on Halifax charge.
September 29 to 30 on Creswell.
October 5 at Roanoke Rapids.
October 6 to 11 on Greensville charge.
October 12 on Spring Church charge.
October 13 and 14 on Roanoke.
Octobed 17 in Mebane.
October 18 on Orange.
October 19 on Forsyth.
October 20 and 21 on Kernersville charge.
October 25 on Saxapahaw charge.

In the meantime I shall meet committees and boards as may be necessary to get ready for Conference.

Once More.

Please let me say once more: Be sure to consult your records of last year, and then go to work to make those records better for this year unless your last year's record was 100 per cent. Pastors would like to go to conference with good reports, and if this is done both pastors and people must work for good reports.

Anything you wish me to put into my annual report must be in my hands not later than October 22.

Yours faithfully, A. G. Dixon.

—Last year the total value of poultry products in the United States was $884,000,000, about as much as the total value of the wheat crop.

PASTORS, THIS IS FOR YOU!

The Official Blanks were mailed out Tuesday of last week. You should, therefore, have got your envelope containing the blanks before you read this. If you have not received them, please drop me a card at once and I will send you another supply. Each envelope contains two Official Blanks, two Treasurer's Envelopes and one Personal Report Blank. There are certain things in the blanks I should like to call your attention to, and certain suggestions I should like to make. And I trust you will not think I am officious in making them. I am making the suggestions because, if they are followed, the Journal will be better; and my heart's desire is a perfect Journal. You can help make it that if you will. Now, get out those blanks, and let's look at them for a bit.

1. The Pastor's Personal Report. Note I have drawn a line through "How much of each Budget was paid," and have substituted the words "Paid on" . . . General Conference Budget $......; Annual Conference Budget $....... Please be sure and state the Amount Raised for the Children's Home.. As last year, a page will be given to this item, and each charge will be credited with the amount raised.. It has been taken out of the Financial Blank to avoid duplication. Please give me the names and addresses asked for. If you will do as the Discipline requires and hold the election of officers at the last meeting before Annual Conference the Sunday School Superintendents' list will be up-to-date. I want the names of the churches on your charge, also.

Please state the number of copies of the Journal your charge will use. They will, I suppose, be sold again, and the price will probably be fifteen cents. Figure on that basis, and don't order too many. I must make up my figures from the number of Journals you ask for. They cost too much to order more than we can well dispose of. A number of the brethren never say how many they want. It will help a great deal if you will state how many.

2. The Treasurer's Envelope. Observe the "Notes" at the bottom of the envelope, and do what they say. Under "Amount for Specials" put what you haven't turned in for Easter, Children's Day, Educational Day, Rally Day, or any other items outside of the membership assessment for Budget.. The Treasurer will then be able to forward the amount to its proper interest.

3. The Official Blanks. Some do's and don't's may help.

a. Don't write in the space where the two red ink lines are. Begin your figures in this column with the line, "Paid on Membership Assessment," or, if you have nothing to report for that item, begin where you do have something to report. No space is provided for Educational Day. Please write in that item, if you have money to report, under Rally Day.

b. Please do not report cents on your Financial Blank. In spite of the repeated request, about thirty-five of our pastors last year reported cents. The reason we ask this is that we can't put cents in the printed tables without making them twice as big as they are. (See the Tables in the Journal.) I have Minutes of a good many conferences and denominations. Not one of them reports cents. Put the odd cents on your Treasurer's Envelope, but nowhere else. If you will follow this rule your report will be practically correct as to totals: If you have less than fifty cents, don't count it; if you have more than fifty cents, make it a dollar. Please make your figures plain, and don't leave anything out that ought to be in the reports. It shows up when the Journal is printed. You must furnish us with all the information we get.

c. Please begin now to get your report ready for Conference. Find out how many members you have in the various organizations, how much money these organizations have raised, etc. And all the other things that ought to be reported, get them before Conference.

d. Let's make a mighty effort to bring to Conference the fullest and most accurate reports we have ever had. I promise, if it's my job, to try to get them into the best Journal yet.

C. W. Bates, Secretary.

MORE ABOUT THE JAPAN DISASTER.

I very much regret that at this writing, September 13, no further information as to the safety of the missionaries of the Board of Foreign Missions, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has reached me.

I communicated with the State Department at Washington again yesterday, and they reply that they have cabled the names of our church's missionaries to the American consul at Kobe, Japan, and on receipt of word will notify me. As already published in the church papers, and in the Baltimore papers, the Secretary of State telegraphed on Friday, 7th, that "American Community in Nagoya is reported safe," and the State Department 'phoned on Sunday to my home that Miss E. Dawson and Miss Alice Coates were safe in Kobe, and Rev. E. I. Obee was safe, but no intimation as to where he was. It has been most distressing to me that I have been unable to give definite information to the anxious parents, relatives and friends of Rev. J. C. Arman and wife, the board's missionaries at Nagoya, or to give to the society and the relatives and friends of their lady missionaries any word as to how Miss O. I. Hodges at Yokohama, Miss H. Barns of Yokohama. Miss E. Hempstead and Miss E Broeker, both at Nagoya, fared. The morning papers state that Miss J. Kyper, principal of Ferris Seminary—it was situated on the bluff at Yokohama—of the Reformed Board, had perished, word having reached that board through Washington.

Why we have not heard directly from our own missionaries may be explained by the fact that they may not have been in touch with local telegraph connections, or that they may be injured or worse, or the Government and large business interests have the right of way over the cables, or many cable messages being offered, they are dispatched in turn as received. The first messages came through by wireless to the Government, and that influenced me to seek the good offices of the Secretary of State and his efficient department, with the result that we have the above information, and hope soon to hear how all of our missionaries have fared.

I cabled on Monday, the 10th, to Rev. E. I. Obee at Nagoya, but the manager said it was at our risk as they could not guarantee delivery, and that the Japanese Government declines to accept messages in the code, but must be in plain English, so cabled "Report workers properties," but no reply has been received. We are all heartened and grateful to God for the safety of the missionaries named above, and are still hoping to hear that the others are also safe.

We are satisfied that much of the board's property, including schools, chapel and church buildings in a large part of the devastated region have been destroyed, and how many of our Japanese pastors and their families, and church members, etc., have perished, we do not know. We are also satisfied that the property of the society, the girls' school and kindergarten at Yokohama, is also gone

It is indeed gratifying to note that the responses to my appeal sent to the churches through the church papers, and the letter to pastors which was read at the services last Sunday.

Information is expected to be given to the church, in the paper in which this article is to appear, of the action of the meeting called for next Monday of members of the Executive Committee, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and the Board of Foreign Missions.

Fred. C. Klein.

THE SECRETTRY AT THE MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.

The Michigan Conference has secured a beautiful camp ground on Gull Lake, near Agusta, Mich., and for many years has held its annual sessions here. The annual conference is usually preceded by special meetings, at which speakers of note from abroad are heard.

During the assembly and camp-meeting period this year, Rev. Dr. J. W. Hawley, of Pittsburgh, was the preacher, and he delighted his audience with his splendid presentation of the subjects discussed.

Rev. George H. Miller, D.D., was the official General Conference representative at the Michigan Conference, and was given a fine opportunity to present the general program of the denomination.

Rev. Dr. T. H. Lewis, President of the General Conference, was in attendance, and discussed the state of the church, matters of church law, methods of procedure, and gave a forward look suggesting subjects for discussion at the aproaching General Conference.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Wilbur, editor of our Sunday school periodicals, was present, and presented the work of his own office, and of the Board of Publication of the Methodist Protestant Church. Dr. Wilbur called especial attention to the fact that the board is about to issue two new papers which are to circulate among the boys and girls of our Sunday schools. It is believed that these two papers will supply a long felt want for the years between the ages provided for by "Our Children" and "The New Guide."

Your secretary was also present. At various times the Board of Home Missions has given assistance to a number of the leading churches in the Michigan Conference, among them Adrian, Lansing, and Flint. Recently building appropriations were made to two churches in Detroit, the First Church, and the Harger Memorial Church. The First Church, of which Rev. J. L. Buckley is pastor, is meeting the salary of the pastor in full, and has recently purchased a parsonage. This church was fortunate in being able to secure the property adjoining the church for this purpose. The congregation is not large, but it is heroic, and is doing fine work.

Harger Memorial is in a newer part of the city, and the work is not so well developed but is giving considerablbe promise for the future. Here your Board of Home Missions assists in the support of the pastor. Rev. H. J. Hescott was re-appointed to this work for the second year, and definite plans were made for the development of the work. The first chapel, a small frame building on one of the church lots, will be rebuilt for parsonage purpose, and other definite work is being planned for the new year.

Fifty of the total number of sixty-two charges reported the budget paid in full for both the annual and general conferences. It would be greatly to the advantage of all the boards and institutions of the church if the other twelve charges could also be put into the one hundred per cent class.

THE SECRETARY AT THE INDIANA CONFERENCE.

The Board of Home Missions has invested more money in this conference in recent years than in any other one in the denomination. At the present time we assist in the support of the pastor at Victory Memorial church, Indianapolis; Grace church, Indianapolis; and the Main Street Church, Logansport. Rev. G. L. Farrow was returned to the Victory Memorial for the second year. Rev. F. W. Lineberry was assigned to the Grace church for the first year and Rev. C. H. Simons was assigned to the church at Logansport for the fourth year's service. Victory Memorial has had a very fine year. Finances are in the best shape they have been since the beginning of the building period. The church has had its largest numerical growth and is in the best condition, all things considered, that it has ever been. Brother Farrow is the right man in the right place and we shall expect greater accomplishments in the coming year. Grace church is a transfer from the Old Mansur Park location, It was moved some eight or nine squares, due to the influx of the Negro population in the old district and the problem now is one of interesting the new community in this new church. It is hoped that the coming year will see very marked advance along these lines. At Logansport our work is new, Brother Simons being the first resident pastor. Rev. J. W. Harmon served the church one year, but did not reside in Loganspot. The growth has not been rapid, but the congregation is rapidly taking on a maturity that promises well for its ultimate development.

The Indiana Conference is always courteous to those who come to present the program of the denomination and gives careful consideration to the matters presented. If the pastors and members of the churches in the conference could obtain a vision covering every phase of our denominational activity, it would greatly increase the financial support given to these missionary and educational enterprises.

We look forward to a good year for our work in Indiana. Charles H. Beck.

GOD'S HEALING.

There's healing by the waters,,
There's healing in the trees,
There's healing with the blossoms,
There's healing in the breeze.
There's healing on the mountain,
There's healing in the light,
There's healing 'neath the hemlock,
There's healing in the night.
There's healing in the city,
There's healing where 'tis still,
There's healing on the ocean,
There's healing by the rill.
There's healing in the desert,
There's healing in the rain,
There's healing by the fountain,
And in the rustling grain.
There's healing all about us,
In the sunshine and in storm,
God heals His weary children,
When they of strength are shorn.
Thank God for all His healings—
For the flutter of the trees—
Thank God for all His healings—
His winds, His flowers, His seas.

—Wm. C. Allen, in United Presbyterian.

VACATION.

One of the helpful lessons in the study of the Gospel of Mark and a sweet picture of our Lord is in Christ's invitation to His disciples to have a vacation with Him. He was mindful of their weariness and expressed His sympathy and thoughtfulness in the words, "Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile."

The twelve had gone out at Christ's command into the villages to preach repentance and to heal. Returning they gathered about their leader to report, "telling Him all things whatsoever they had done, and whatsoever they had taught." The compassionate Jesus, seeing that they were weary and worn with their journeys and work, said to them, "Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile," and together they crossed the lake in a boat.

Jesus invited them for a vacation with Him! How much good that day must have done those men. While their quiet was interrupted by the multitude who followed, and Christ was engaged in teaching, nevertheless they were brought closer to their Lord and learned to know Him as they had not before. And then it was that they saw Him perform the miracle of the loaves and fishes when five thousand were fed, and hear His discourse on the Bread of Life.

Are we being brought closer to Christ during our vacation season? Our best Friend, ever mindful of our needs, knows a vacation, a change and rest from the daily round of work, is needed by His disciples from time to time. But a worthwhile vacation will not be spent apart from Christ. On the other hand the best vacation will draw us close to Him, and we will return with renewed zeal and enthusiasm for work in His cause and Kingdom.

Let us who have that privilege make the most of our vacations, then take up the work of Christ in Central Church with renewed consecration in the fall.—Bulletin Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.

THE COMPENSATING VIEW.

"I used to dread the coming of winter," said a woman who had been an invalid for many years. "When the wind began to strip the boughs, leaving them cheerless and bare, I always felt a melancholy sadness stealing over me. I do not feel that way any more. I can see so much further, and my narrow world has enlarged so when the foliage is gone, that even the loss of the leaves has its compensations."

So God's child always discovers compensations in the very experiences from which he often shrinks. Many times it requires the chill winds of some bitter affliction—perhaps some severe bereavement—to widen our horizon and enlarge our world. After the blossoms and the leaves of material benefit fall, we catch visions of something finer and better, and God and His heaven become infinitely nearer and more precious.—The Christian (London).

HE NEEDS YOU.

It would be a great thing if every father might have the awakening which came to a great banker in one of our leading cities. He was the father of an only son on whom he spent money with a lavish hand, but to whom he gave little of his time and attention because of the pressure of business. One day his secretary surprised him by informing him that this son was waiting outside his office to see him. When the boy came into the wonderfully furnished room in which big business was daily transacted, the father had a quick and pleasurable vision of his possible successor in business. Involuntarily his hand reached for the drawer of his desk in which he kept his check book, and smilingly he inquired: "How much do you want, son?" But his smile was quickly changed to tears of remorse and regret as the boy with heart indicated in his eyes and voice stepped up close and, with his arm thrown over his father's shoulder, said: "Dad, I don't need anything but you! I do need you."

Millions of boys in our land need similar help. And some of the cases are getting desperate. Here is a chance for every man to render Christ-like service with the boy in his own household or with the lad who does not have a father as a possible source of help in his own home.—Selected.

SUMMERTIME RELIGION.

Whence comes it that we have one brand of religion for cool weather and another for hot? Whence comes it that we have one brand of religion for home and another for abroad? Whence comes it that we have one brand of religion for work days and another for holidays? Whence comes it that on our vacations we discontinue those spiritual exercises that strengthen our souls, and release many of the moral restraints that we have imposed on our conduct? Shall we charge it up to the devil? Or shall we blame our own selfish, sinful natures? Surely these things are not of God.

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5: 16.—Calendar of Westminster Church, Charlotte, N. C.

The short way to spell success is—"W-O-R-K."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVROR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 23.

Gems From Books We Have Read.

Prov. 25: 11; 1 Timothy 4: 13.

Daily Readings.

Mon. 2 Sam. 18: 19-23.
Tues. 2 Kings 4: 1-7.
Wed. Isaiah 40: 1-31.
Thurs. Luke 1: 46-56.
Fri. Luke 10: 25-37.
Sat. Acts 24: 1-27.

If we wish to keep our minds fresh and keen we must read—that is, listen to the wisdom of others. The most expert readers are constantly growing more efficient, and the crudest beginner may have hope, and I have hope.

Books are our best friends, they never force themselves upon us; they are modest and retiring; they come at our call.

Good books are real treasures. making them really our own is where the rub comes; it is easy to pay ten cents or a dollar and a half for a new book, but when the money leaves your purse the book does not enter your head. Before you can own the book, in some way or other the spirit of the book must become your spirit.

Books furnish a mirror in which we may see ourselves from new angles through experiences of the author.

The Bible furnishes another mirror in which we may see ourselves from new angles. As we read its searching pages we begin to see our faults very clearly; what it holds up as the ideal course of action we perceive to be very different from our daily lives. The purity which it recommends, the heroism it praises, seem very far from us. Every new book, every new chapter, shows us life from a new angle, and so shows us our lives from new angles. We see ourselves, not as others see us, but as God must see us; and that is the deepest self-revelation.

Does the crowd get hold of your heart as you elbow your way through them, or look down into their faces? Is it just a crowd to you? Or is it a great company of hungry hearts, half-starved lives, so needy for what only this Lord Jesus can give?—In "Quiet Talks on Following Christ," by S. D. Gordon.

It is very interesting to study different people in a crowd, the different expressions they have; some have a happy countenance like Paul had, and we find others whose countenance is sad or perhaps careless and they seldom smile.

In the morning when thou risest unwillingly, let this thought be present—I am rising to the work of a human being. Why then am I dissatisfied if I am going to do the things for which I exist and for which I was brought into the world?—In Meditations of Marcus Aurelius.)

"Mother," said the Harvester, "were you with me? Did I do it right? Did I tell them what you would have had me say for the boys? Are you glad now you held me to the narrow way? Do you want me to go before men if I am asked, as Doc says I will be, and tell them that the only way to abolish pain is for them to begin at the foundation by living clean lives? I do not know if I did any good but they listened. Anyway I did the best I knew. But that isn't strange; you ground it into me to do that every day, until it is almost instinct, mother, dear. Can you tell me about the blue-bird? Is that softest little rustle of all your voice? And does it say 'hope'? I think so, and I thank you for the word."—In "The Harvester," by Gene Stratton-Porter.

To live we need but a short life, but to act we need a long one.—Joubert's Thoughts.

Similarly, though we should go to church. take part in the prayer meetings, join in the church work, because we love Jesus Christ and love His service. it is well for those of us that do not feel that love to serve Christ at first merely from a sense of duty. In the early days of Christian Endeavor, before it had become an accepted agency of the Kingdom critics were busy with the Christian Endeavor pledge. "What!" they cried, "Speak in prayer meeting every week, whether one feels like it or not? That is to reduce religion to formalism and Pharisaism. That is to have an external piety instead of an inward affection for Christ and His church."

The criticism would be just if the prayer meeting testimony stopped with words, if it had no effect on the life of the speaker as well as the lives of the hearers. But it is forever true that the doing of any right act from a sense of duty, faithfully and persistently, soon gives birth to a love for that service, a joy and pride in it, so that we cease to do it from a sense of duty and do it now in the fullness of happy desire. The quickest way to attain any affection for what is noble is to live lives as near as possible to what they would be if we had that affection.—In "The Romance of Right Living," by Wells.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

ROBERT, THE EGG-HUNTER.

‘‘Robert!’’ exclaimed Grandmother Benson the morning after her grandson’s arrival to spend his summer vacation on the old farm, ‘‘how would you like to go into the chicken business with me? I’m not so young, nor so spry as I used to be, and I have been thinking that I need a youthful partner to take charge of one end of the business. Are you the boy to do it?’’

Robert’s eyes glistened.

‘‘Be your partner, Grandma?’’ he asked. ‘‘Oh—oh, what fun! What will my work be? When shall I begin? Will I earn some money?’’

Grandmother laughed.

‘‘One question at a time, honey!’’ she cautioned. ‘‘We’ll take them in order. The first thing you want to know is what your work will be. Now perhaps you know, Robert, that hens that aren’t confined in a yard like nothing better than to steal nests and lay their eggs where an old woman like me can’t find them. Eggs are worth this summer three cents apiece and I don’t want to lose any, so I’m going to appoint you egg-hunter. It will be your duty to follow up each biddy’s cackle and find where she has laid. For every egg you find not in the regular nests in the hen-pen I will give you a penny. That answers your last question, too; and as for the middle question, why, you can begin right now.’’

‘‘Put some straw in the bottom of this,’’ she said, ‘‘and keep it to put the eggs into.’’

Robert’s hand was shaking with excitement as he took the basket from her hand and darted out of the kitchen. Such fun as it was living on a farm! There was nothing like hunting eggs in the city!

All the rest of the morning Robert hunted stolen nests. He climbed high up on the fragrant hay—and almost stepped on a nest containing three clean white eggs. He searched the stable—and found two eggs in a box under the seat of a dilapidated, long-unused old buggy. He broke his way through weeds and tall grass and discovered two more in a fence corner. He was still hunting eggs when the dinner bell rang and he had to hurry to the house. He had earned seven cents! Never had be felt so rich before!

That afternoon he continued his egg-hunt, but only one nest could be located; it was under the back piazza and there was just one egg in it.

As the days went on and Robert became more and more familiar with the possible places where nests could be stolen, the number of eggs he found diminished. The hens, never having a chance to lay more than a single egg in any place, soon gave up the idea of stealing a nest and like self-respecting hens, laid in the nest-boxes Grandmother had provided for them in the pens.

Whenever Robert heard a hen cackle, though, he would drop whatever work he was doing and run with all speed in the direction of the sound. In that work he discovered the whereabouts of many new nests during the summer. But there was one hen, a small white Leghorn, who continually played a joke on Robert. Again and again he would hear her cackle and would run in the direction of her voice. Always he would find her walking proudly out of the barn, proclaiming to everyone that she had laid an egg, but though Robert had hunted high and low he had never been able to locate her eggs.

‘‘I think,’’ he had told his grandmother, ‘‘that she is just fooling me. I don’t think she has laid at all.’’

‘‘But it’s queer,’’ his grandmother replied. ‘‘I never knew a hen to come out of the barn cackling day after day unless she had laid somewhere.’’ Then she would say to Robert, with her eyes all twinkling, ‘‘I guess I’ll have to discharge my egg-hunter. One of these days he’ll find a nest full of rotten eggs.’’

There came a week when Robert didn’t find a single stolen nest. His little pile of pennies stopped growing and Robert grew discouraged over the prospect of ever earning enough money to buy the real football he had set his heart on getting.

‘‘If only’’, he thought, ‘‘I could find the nest of that little white Leghorn!’’ And then a discouraging thought came. He hadn’t seen that particular hen for days, yes, weeks even. She must have stopped laying in the barn—and even if he found her eggs, they would, of course, be rotten. Still, he mused, it would do no harm to make another hunt for them. There was nothing else to do; he might as well make another search of the barn.

Robert tiptoed hastily toward the barn. He wanted to see what that hen was making so much fuss about.

‘‘Cluck, cluck, cluck! Cluck, cluck, cluck, cluck!’’

In the middle of the barn floor, scratching frantically and looking up and then down nervously, was the little white Leghorn hen. She was very much excited, even Robert could see nothing to get excited about, but suddenly his eyes opened wide at a new sound. He listened intently. There was no denying it. Somewhere chickens were peeping.

Robert entered the barn. The white hen clucked more frantically than ever before, and the chickens peeped louder—right over his head! Robert looked up. About five feet from the floor a market basket hung from a long nail. It took but a jiffy to pull a box underneath, climb upon it and look into the basket. There he saw a lively mass of fluffy yellow. He counted—there were ten baby chicks.

Gently removing the basket from the nail, Robert ran with it to the house.

Grandmother hurried out. ‘‘Why, bless your heart, child!’’ she cried. ‘‘Baby chicks! And worth at least ten cents apiece! Ten chicks at ten cents apiece!’’ She went to the kitchen table drawer and took out a dollar bill.

‘‘For such a basket of eggs,’’ she said, as she thrust the bill into Robert’s hand, ‘‘I think my little eggman needs good pay. One doesn’t find such a nest every day!’’—Presbyterian Banner.

WHEN WORK WAS PLAY.

Mazie was sitting on a stool in front of an open fire. In her hand she held a little broom, as she had been sweeping up the hearth, and had sat down to consider whether she would take the corner of the dining room which was next to the parlor, or let Lucile have it when she came over to play paper dolls. This was the favorite corner as the parlor door opened into the dining room in such a way as to make that corner a little room.

As she sat there thinking the matter over, her mother came in with her wraps all on. ‘‘Oh,’’ she said, ‘‘you are brushing up. That’s good! When you finish you can dust, and then set the table. I’m going up street. I won’t be gone very long.’’

Mazie was a well-trained child, and did not argue with her mother. ‘‘Yes, mother,’’ she said, but there was a look of disappointment in her face that made her mother think: ‘‘I’ll stop at Kuntz’s and bring her some candy.’’ She kissed her daughter and hurried out.

Well, no paper dolls, that was clear, unless the work was finished before mother got back. For after she came, Mazie would have to help in the kitchen, and Lucile would have to go home to her dinner.

Just then a tap was heard on the window, and a face framed in a red cap looked in. Mazie jumped up and opened the side door.

‘‘Oh, Lucile!’’ she exclaimed, ‘‘I was just fixing up to play paper dolls, and mother came in and told me to dust the dining room and set the table. She’s gone out.’’

‘‘Let’s play a while first,’’ suggested Lucile.

‘‘I guess we’d better do the work first. Maybe there will be some time left if we hurry as fast as ever we can.’’

Tap, tap—another face at the window framed by two blue mittens and a fur cap. ‘‘There’s Maud!’’ exclaimed both children at once, as they rushed to open the side door.

Again the woeful tale was told—work instead of play.

‘‘Well,’’ said Maud, ‘‘I know what let’s do. There is a game I learned at Cousin Clara’s that you can do work by!’’

‘‘A game!’ said Mazie. ‘‘How can you play and work at the same time?’’

‘‘Just get me a sheet of paper and a pencil and I’ll show you.’’ She tore the paper into halves, quarters, eighths, sixteenths. On each piece she wrote the name of an article of furniture—mother’s chair, father’s chair, high chair, mantelpiece, sideboard, and so on. Then put these pieces into a box saying, ‘‘We’ll draw these first.’’ Mazie and Lucile watched with great interest. On other pieces she wrote the names of things to go on the table—asbestos cloth, white cloth, plates, knives, and so forth. These she put into a separate box.

Taking up the first box she held it out to Mazie and said, ‘‘Draw one.’’ Mazie put her hand in and pulled out a piece on which was written ‘‘side table.’’ ‘‘That means,’’ said Maud, ‘‘that you must dust the side table.’’

It was not long before all three were as busy as bees, running to the box, drawing the slips and dusting the furniture. Soon the first box was empty, and they started on the second. These slips told how to set the table. Everything was on but the carving knife and fork, and Lucile and Mazie were both hurrying back for the last slip when the door opened and there stood Mazie’s mother. They had been so lively they had not heard the front door open. What is this?'' she said. You haven't put your friends to work, have you, Mazie?''

‘‘Oh, it isn't work!'' they all cried. ‘‘It's play. We've had lots of fun!''

‘‘Perhaps, then, you don't want this?'' said her mother as she handed Mazie a box of marshmallows.

‘‘Yes, we do, too,'' said Mazie; ‘‘and we'll sit right down and toast them.''—Elizabeth Thompson, in Churchman.

THE LITTLE GIRL AND THE GARDEN.

The hollyhocks grew in an even row in the little garden that belonged to the vacant house. They stood so stiff and straight that their colored ruffles never got tossed by the ‘‘silly breezes,'' as they called the summer wind. When raindrops drenched the garden the hollyhocks lifted their heads high above the spattering mud and sand.

The hollyhocks were always reproving them for their shortcomings. The pansies were careless and untidy, they said.

It is true that the pansies' faces were often smudged. That was because they were too close to the ground to keep from being spattered by the mud and soiled by the dust. They could not help themselves, but the hollyhocks did not understand that.

Some of the other garden flowers thought the hollyhocks a little too hard on their small neighbors and said so. But the hollyhocks expected every one else to be as prim and particular as they were themselves.

The pansies tried hard to please their tall, dignified neighbors; but they would no sooner stand stiff and straight than down they would go once more. Then if a shower happened to come along, the hollyhocks were shocked all over again.

One day it was rumored in the garden that a family was about to move into the little brown house. The news got round somehow that in the family there was a little blue-eyed girl. The pansies fluttered with excitement when they heard that, and even the holly hocks looked interested.

On a golden afternoon in June there was a stir and a bustle in the small house.

‘‘The little girl will soon find her garden,'' all the flowers said to one another.

The hollyhocks drew themselves up and waited proudly.

‘‘Now, pansies,'' the tallest hollyhock said, ‘‘if you want the little girl to like you, have your face clean and hold up your heads as high as you can. Don't lean over and snuff the grass.''

The pansies promised to do their best. But when the day came they were in such a flutter and bobbed about at such a rate that they got their faces smudged with dust.

Every flower was ready. The pink roses by the gate were already nodding a welcome, blossomy bushes were ringing their golden bells, and the graceful lilies had practiced their manners perfectly. The little pansies nudged one another and tried to keep from laughing aloud.

Suddenly the gate was flung open, and a voice cried: ‘‘O, the garden, the dear, dear garden!''

There was a flutter of white skirts and apron strings, and down the garden walk a joyous little girl came running. The flowers knew by the look in her eyes that she was going to love them.

A group of bright nasturtiums peered anxiously from behind a snowball bush, and a row of frilly pinks ducked their heads and courtesied politely. The hollyhocks, straight as soldiers, glanced over toward the corner to see if the pansies were in order.

For the pansies, suddeny shy and timid, were hiding their faces in the grass. Already they loved the little girl, but in their hearts was the thought: ‘‘What if we should not please her!''

The child danced merrily up to the row of hollyhocks. ‘‘Hello, you nice old things!'' she said.

The proud flowers stiffened. They wondered whether she were treating them with the proper amount of respect.

She had a happy greeting for the graceful lilies, for the snowball bush, for the roses, the petunias, and the pinks. Then all at once she gave a little cry. Running to a corner of the garden, she clasped her hands and bent low.

‘‘O you darlings!'' she said. ‘‘You blessed little things! I hoped you would be here, and here you are!''

An instant later she was running toward the house. ‘‘Mother,'' the flowers heard her call, ‘‘didn't I say I knew there would be pansies?''

That night when the pansies had gone to sleep, each with a happy smile on its small face, the other flowers, wakeful, talked the matter over in the moonlight.

‘‘I wonder,'' said the proudest hollyhock of all, ‘‘Why she loved the pansies so when they didn't even hold up their heads to greet her?''

A pink rose nodded thoughtfully. ‘‘I think,'' was her answer, ‘‘our little girl understood why the pansies hung their heads.'' —Elizabeth Thornton Turner, in Presbyterian Standard.

THE RUNAWAY PUMPKINS.

When Miss Belinda planted her garden in the spring, she made her pumpkin-bed beside her back fence. ‘‘It will be away from the boys there,'' she declared, and then she frowned. You see, Miss Belinda didn't like boys, and that was one reason why boys didn't like Miss Belinda. Miss Belinda's garden was the best in town. Her roses were redder and sweeter than her neighbor's; her apples were juicier and rounder; her grapes hung thicker; and her pumpkins—never were there bigger or yellower or more wonderful pumpkins in all the world.

When Miss Belinda chose her pumpkin-planting place, Jack and Tess were away off in another state, and the little, battered and blackened house next door was empty and forlorn. They came to live in it just as Miss Belinda's pumpkin vines were beginning to blossom, and three of the great wellow buds peeped through the fence.

Jacky and Tess never spied them until they were pumpkins and had grown round and yellow.

‘‘We'll have a jack-o'lantern with great holes for eyes, an' a candle to light him!'' shouted Jacky.

‘‘An' maybe pumpkin pies, an' two little saucer ones with what's left over, for you an' me!'' said Tess, rapturously.

Just then Miss Belinda came softly down her walk—and Jack and Tess remembered.

‘‘I 'spect we can't have one of them,'' sobbed Tess.

‘‘No,'' said Jacky, ‘‘we can't 'less we break the Eighth Commandment an' steal.''

Tess shivered. ‘‘I 'spect,'' she said—and then she cried a real hard cry, it was so disappointing.

Jacky just sat on the steps, and kicked his heels together hard. His face was red, and his eyes were bright.

‘‘Why didn't Miss Belinda keep her old pumpkins!'' he declared loudly. ‘‘She has heaps of pumpkins, an' I don't believe she makes one single jack-o'-lantern; an' if the vines ran away an' grew pumpkins in our yard, don't you think they ought to be ours?''

But Tess shook her head, and sobbed again. ‘‘They didn't grow their roots here,'' she said. ‘‘There never would have been any pumpkins in our yard 'less Miss Belinda had planted them.''

‘‘We might find only one,'' argued Jacky. ‘‘It's hard to see everything that grows. Besides, what would it matter just one, when Miss Belinda's going to pick a whole shedful?''

Tess shook her head again sadly. ‘‘We must get the cart an' carry them home right now, 'less they'll be a temptation, Jacky. We must do it right now,'' she said.

And by and by Miss Belinda heard a funny creak, creak coming up her walk. She opened her door, and looked straight at Jacky.

‘‘It's your pumpkins,'' he explained soberly. ‘‘They ran away an' grew under our rhubarb plant. That's why we didn't see them an' bring them to you before.''

Miss Belinda smiled. She had a pleasant look in her wrinkled face when she did it. Jacky forgot that she was a ‘‘cross old thing.''

‘‘I hope you'll make a jack-o'-lantern out of the biggest pumpkin,'' he suggested politely, ‘‘'cause it's specially good for that!''

And then, I can't tell you how it happened, but the little cart went creak, creak down Miss Belinda's walk and Miss Belinda's pumpkins with it.

‘‘She said,'' declared jubilant Jacky, ‘‘‘You children seem to know just what pumpkins grow for'.''

‘‘‘An' she said,'' exclaimed Tess, with a smile, ‘‘‘If pumpkins grew to make children happy, I'm going to help by sharing and being happy.' ''—Exchange.

It is a great error, in my opinion, to believe that a government is more firm or assured when it is supported by force, than when founded on affection.—Terence.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

To Methodist Protestants in and around Lexington.

There will be a meeting at the home of Mr. John B. Leonard at 401 Seventh Ave., West, next Tuesday night, September 25, to organize a new church in Lexington.

We have a church near South Main street, and the new church has a lot on the corner of State street and Second Avenue. It is hoped that we can build on this lot later.

We desire the presence of all who will unite with the new church or who are interested in any way with the movement.

J. H. Abernethy, Pastor.

Haw River.—We held our first service in our new church last Sunday morning with a large crowd present. While our new seats have not yet been received, the M. E. people who are now remodeling their church loaned us their seats until ours come in. We hope every church-going member can visit us and see our new house of worship and worship with us.

Our door stands open and the right hand of fellowship will be extended and we cordially invite you. Those who have contributed to our edifice—we want to show them their money was spent to the best possible advantage. We want to extend our thanks to all who favored us with a donation both individually and collectively and may God's blessings be bestowed on you and may you reap many dividends in both spirituality and comfort in the future years.

Yours faithfully, T. S. Coble.

Received for Haw River Church.

I would like to thank those who have contributed to our cause since last report. Fairview school, $7. Siler City, $7.03. Stallings, $10. Pilot, $2.18. Mr. M. Brown, $5. Worthville, $15.20. Rehoboth, $11. Mt. Carmel, $3.25. Patrick, $1.87. Friendship, Stanly circuit, $32.58.

We cannot find words to express our appreciation. We can only say thank you.

Espa Bullard.

Yarbrough.—Just a few lines of interest from this charge. On September the 2d we held our protracted meeting.

A. G. Dixon and his good wife did the preaching. We were so glad to have them come our way. They gave us some of the most interesting messages I ever listened to; the congregations were large, especially at night. I hope their labor here will not be in vain. Four joined the church, two young girls from the Sunday school that we were so glad to see come into the church while they were young, and two men past middle life who we hope will prove a blessing to the church. May they consecrate the rest of their life to God's service and may the church not forget their covenant with them. Mr. Lawrence Poole relieved our organist, Miss Lily Yarbrough, much during the meeting. This was much appreciated. We were glad to have a number of the Harmony people with us on Friday and also a number from the Anderson circuit. I feel sure they enjoyed the fine message. A message like those was worth riding a long way to hear. Our pastor has been quite busy since our meeting closed assisting Rev. F. C. Owen of the M. E. church at this place in a meeting near Sedalia.

We have had in our midst today Rev. B. M. Williams, working for the College. May he do a great work. May God help us all to give freely for a good cause like this.

We ask the prayers of all Christians for our work at Yarbrough's. May we all be better Christians and do a nobler work than we have ever done before for our Master.

Dr. Dixon and his wife will ever hold a warm place in our hearts. God bless them.

A Member.

Piney Grove, Chatham Charge.—Our special meeting will begin at this place the fifth Sunday in this month. Our pastor, Brother Pike, will do the preaching, and we are expecting the singing class from Mt. Pleasant to be with us on Sunday. Come and hear some good singing. We ask the prayers of all Christian people for a glorious revival of religion at this place. Sallie E. Smith.

Sandy Ridge, West Thomasville Charge.—Did I hear some one say we were asleep? No, not at all, for, far from that, we are up and wide-awake. Everything is moving on fine. Our Sunday school is doing fine. We have good attendance. We have prayer meeting every Sunday and Thursday night. Much interest is being manifested. Our pastor, Brother M. L. Moose, came over Saturday night, September 7, and preached for us. He preached so many good sermons through our revival that I did not think he could do any better, but he came back as full of the Spirit as when he left. Those who attended the Children's Day at Spring Hill report a nice time and a good program. Best wishes to the Herald. Assistant Reporter.

High Point.—Relatives of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clyde Auman were much relieved to receive a message from Dr. F. C. Klein on Sunday that they are safe. Much anxiety had been felt for them by their sister, Mrs. J. W. Austin, and brother, E. L. Auman, both of High Point, besides a host of friends in this and other sections of the State.

Announcement was made last week of the engagement and approaching marriage of Mr. Alexander M. Rankin, Jr., and Miss Adele Wineskie. Mr. Rankin is the son of Capt. and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, and was born and reared in High Point, where he is greatly loved and esteemed by countless friends, who will learn of the happy event with great interest. The marriage will be solemnized October 18, and owing to the prominence and popularity of the young couple, it will be a social event of note and interest.

A number of boys of our congregation left yesterday and today for the University, among them being Brooks Reitzell, Roy Montgomery, and Rupert Pickens.

An important meeting of the Trustees of the College is called September 21 at the Sheraton Hotel to elect a president. Four names are being considered, but they are kept secret from the public.

The Home Missionary Society packed and shipped a large box of clothing to Pine Ridge, Ky., this week.

Miss Kathleen Welch leaves Friday for Walnut Cove, where she will teach this session. Reporter.

St. Paul.—We are glad to make a report for this week. Our Sunday school is in progress and is a great deal better than it has been during the summer.

The revival at St. Paul has just come to a close. We had a good meeting but yet the field is so large we were not exactly satisfied. There were seventeen additions to the church and a goodly number of conversions. The crowds during the revival were especially good. Brother Pierce brought to us a masterful message Sunday morning and evening. He emphasized the necessity of sowing good seed in good ground, for we shall reap what we sow. His text for the evening service was spelled with seven letters—''Wa-i-t-i-n-g.'' Brother Pierce stressed the fact so emphatically that they were made to think, What are you waiting for?

St. Paul has had its Sunday school picnic and it was a complete success.

Regular services will be held at St. Paul from now on. Brother Pierce has been away helping other brethren in their revival services and he told us Sunday he was going to try to be present from now on.

A cordial invitation is extended to every one who desires to attend the services of St. Paul. Mrs. W. L. Wade, Reporter.

Stanly Circuit.—Since our last report we are very much encouraged to see the people here at Friendship taking so much interest in the church, in Sunday school and also in the church services. And the prayer meetings are real good; large crowds come here for the prayer meetings.

We held our special meeting at Friendship the first Sunday in August. Brother J. B. Trogdon from Denton was our help. He did the preaching, which was greatly enjoyed by our people. There were several conversions and reclamations, and 25 accessions to the church.

Our special meeting was held at Porter the fourth Sunday in August. I did the preaching here and Brother C. E. Ridge from Denton led the singing. We had a good meeting here. Three accesions to the church.

We have received so many tokens of kindness from these good people we can not begin to report all. We would be glad to mention each gift and giver, but for fear we will leave some one out we will not attempt to call names. May the Lord abundantly bless each one.

To the members of Stanly Charge:

The fourth quarterly conference of this charge will convene at Friendship church on Saturday at two P. M. before the first Sunday in October, being the 6th. All officials should be present as there is much important business. Yours in His name,

A. Ridge, Pastor.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Carson, filled his appointment Sundday with two splendid sermons.

The conference year is drawing to a close, and we are badly behind with our finance, but we are hoping that we will come out. We have a good deal on our shoulders, as we are repairing our church; we have already covered it, and are counting on repairing the windows, painting the church, outside and inside, buying new carpet, etc. The dry weather and boll weevil have hit the farmers rather hard in this part of the country. Therefore money is and will be pretty scarce. But the Lord being our helper we will do the best we can. Dear readers, pray that we will be successful in our undertaking.

We were very glad to have quite a number of the good people from Stallings with us at our night's service. They were: Mr. and Mrs. Perry Garmon, Misses Ethel Furr and Myrtle Hargett, Messrs. Jesse Hartis, George Garmon, Earl Garmon. Come again, folks! We're always glad to have you with us.

The Ladies' Aid society and Ladies' Home Missionarry Society met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Atkinson the last Thursday in last month.. Had good meetings, and enjoyed it so much. They will meet this month at the home of Mrs. W. C. Hartis. Best wishes to all.

Bertha Hartis, Reporter.

September 18.

Welch Memorial Church.—We had a very good attendance at Sunday school and preaching last Sunday morning. But vacation time is about over and we hope to see a larger attendance. We are going to have rally day the fifth Sunday. Everybody come. We will try to make it as interesting as possible.

Brother Moton preached Sunday morning and night. He will be away helping in a meeting at Grays Chapel next Sunday, and Brother J. H. Stowe will preach for us at the 11 o'clock service and Mr. F. W. Easter at night. Brother Moton was away the second Sunday in this month helping Mr. N. M. Harrison at Greensboro and Mr. Harrison came over and preached for us at the 11 o'clock service. We all enjoyed his sermon and visit: hope he will come again.

Brother Easter gave us a good sermon at the night service, using as his subject, ''A Good Housekeeper.'' We feel proud to have such a man as Brother Easter who can just step in and fill his pastor's place when he is away.

Our special meeting begins the fifth Sunday in September. Mr. W. F. Ashburn will come on Monday following the fifth Sunday and remain until the close. We are praying and hoping for a great revival.

We all were pleased to see little Herbert Ridge out Sunday. He and his other brother were in the car with their uncle, Mr. Bert Delk and family, when the car was struck by the train on the night of September 3. All the occupants of the car were injured.. Mrs. Chrisco (mother of Mrs. Delk) died before reaching the hospital. The little 10-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delk only lived a few hours. All the rest were cut and bruised. Mrs. Delk's arm was broken and she had several cuts and bruises. Little Herbert's nose and face were hurt. All are getting on nicely and will soon be well. It was a miracle that all were not killed. Mr. and Mrs. Delk have our sympathy in the loss of their baby and Mrs. Delk's mother.

The Ladies' Aid will have a social in the Baraca rooms Thursday night.

Prayer meeting Wednesday night, led by Mr. Bulla. Choir practice Friday night.

Love to the Herald and readers.

Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, Reporter.

Successful Revival at West End.

The most successful revival ever conducted at West End, Greensboro, closed last Sunday night. The meeting commenced Sunday, September 2. Rev. J. H. Moton, High Point, did the preaching with the exception of the first and last Sundays, at which time the pastor preached.. In all there were 71 conversions and reclamations. Among this number were several men of years, some of them having lived out of the church and Christ for fifty and sixty years. Already there have been 25 accessions to the church, and a dozen or fifteen more are expected.

BIG AIRSHIP A SUCCESS.

The biggest airship in the world today, designed and built at Lakehurst, N. J., by the U. S. navy, made its initial flight of one hour to the entire satisfaction of all. This is the ZR-1, which was started early in 1922 and built at a cost of $1,500,000. It is slightly smaller than the ZR-2 which was built in England and sank in the river Humber while on a trial trip.

More than 15,000 people gathered to watch the leviathan of the air make its first flight. In the pilot room was Capt. Heinen, formerly pilot for the Zeppelin plant in Germany, who is credited with having led several raids over England during the war. With a crew of 11 men the big ship was dragged out of the hangar by about 400 sailors; it took tht air easily under the power of its six giant motors and soared away at a speed of 30 miles an hour. The ship flew just one hour, at an altitude of from 1000 to 1200 feet, and then returned and landed as smoothly as it had made the ascent.

Officers and crew pronounced the big ship more wonderful than they had hoped for, and Admiral Mocett, chief of aeronautics, exclaimed enthusiastically that ''this success of America today will cause tools to be picked up again in hangars all over the world.'' He said the ZR-1 would be used continuously, and that plans for a trip across the north pole would be speeded up. All agreed that ''a new day has dawned in the world of aeronautics.''

The ZR-1 is 680 feet long. Its greatest diameter is 78 feet and its greatest height 96 feet. Its total weight is about 75,000 pounds and its six motors are 300-horsepower each. Its gas bags contain about 2,000,000 cubic feet of helium—a non-inflammable gas. The big ship is housed in a hangar that cost $3,600,000.—The Pathfinder.

WILL YOU FAIL HIM?

He's counting on you—
He has need of your life.
In the thick of the strife
That weak one may fall,
If you fail at His call.
He's counting on you.
If you fail Him—
What then?

He's counting on you—
On that silver and gold—
On that treasure you hold—
On that treasure still kept,
Though a doubt o'er you swept
Saying, is it not all mine—all mine?
(Lord, I knew it was Thine).
He's counting on you.
If you fail Him—
What then?

He's counting on you—
On a love that will share.
In His burden of prayer
For the souls He has bought
With His life-blood, and sought
To win them home again,
He's counting on you.
If you fail Him—
What then?

He's counting on you—
On life, money and prayer;
And the day will declare
If you let Him have all,
In response to His call.
Or, if He on that day,
To your sorrow, shall say,
I had counted on you
And you failed me—
What then?

He's counting on you—
Oh, the wonder and grace!
To look Christ in the face
And not be ashamed—
For you gave what He claimed
And you laid down your all
For His sake—at His call.
He had counted on you
And—you—failed—not—
What then?

THE SENTINEL.

The morning is the gate of day,
But ere you enter there
See that you set, to guard it well,
The sentinel of prayer.

So shall God's grace your steps attend,
But nothing else pass through
Save what can give the countersign;
The Father's will for you.

When you have reached the end of day
Where night and sleep await,
Set there the sentinel again
To bar the evening's gate.

So shall no fear disturb your rest,
No danger and no care,
For only peace and pardon pass
The watchful guard of prayer.

New Hope, Vance Circuit.—On account of our reporter's going off to school, our report is somewhat late.

On the first Sunday morning Brother Neese filled his regular appointment. He preached a fine sermon and I'm sure all who heard him were greatly benefited. His theme was, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." He spoke mostly to the young folks.

On the second Sunday night our Christian Endeavor held its meeting. We had a splendid meeting as usual and we hope to continue to have these good meetings all through the fall and winter.

We had a good attendance at Sunday school Sunday, but we are praying that more interest will be taken in our Sunday school work and that we shall have a better attendance every Sunday.

A shadow has been cast over our church on account of the death of one of its oldest and best members. Our hearts were all grieved when we received the message that on August 17 Brother R. J. Paschall had passed to the great beyond. Brother Paschall had been a member of New Hope for about fifty years and we all hated to give him up, although we know he is "asleep in the arms of Jesus."

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Lucy E. Paschall,
Reporter.

Lebanon Church. — Our special meeting closed last night. Rev. J. D. Williams and our pastor both presented the truth so earnestly and so clearly that the church was revived and edified. Sinners were converted. There were fourteen accessions to the church. We feel exceedingly grateful to our heavenly Father for this shower of blessings and we trust that the seed of the Word sown in this community may continue to bring forth until we realize a bountiful harvest of souls for the kingdom of our Lord.

The Christian Endeavor society has recently secured a pretty and substantial book case. Now we need the books, good books which are invaluable companions for us all and especially for the young people who at this season of life are making decisions which will decide probably how they shall spend eternity. We hope to have a book shower in the church at some early date at which time any who wish to do so may have the opportunity to present one or more good books. Any one wishing to give a book will please consult our pastor or a member of the book committee about the matter in order that only the best books will get into the library.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held for this charge on Saturday before the second Sunday in October at two o'clock. There is important business to attend to, so it is hoped that every official member will be present. Mrs. J. W. Thacker.

Asheboro.—The Teacher-Training Class is progressing nicely with Rev. H. F. Fogleman as director. The class has been meeting at the church, parsonage and at different homes of the members. Misses Iola and Nan Lowdermilk entertained the teachers at their home in South Asheboro last Monday evening. After the discussion of the lesson cream and cake were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Wray and children, Frances and Mary, of Reidsville, were the guests of Mr. Fogleman at the parsonage last Sunday.

About thirty new members have been added to the church roll since the revival in August, when Dr. Broomfield, of West Virginia, assisted the pastor in the meeting.

Misses Maude and Ruth Jones, of Grace M. P. church, Greensboro, were the guests of friends in town last week.

A number of the Methodist Protestants young people of the town have entered the different colleges of the State for this year. Among them were: Misses Kate Bulia, Julia Ross and Mabel Cox,, N. C. C. W., Greensboro; Nan Lewis, Converse, Spartanburg, S. C.; June Phillips, Trinity College; Hal Rich, Oak Ridge; Miss Lucy Leigh Lovette is a member of the faculty in the Asheboro school, and Miss Cleta Rich is teaching in the Franklinville high school.

The monthly and social meeting of the senior Christian Endeavor society was held in the basement of the church last Friday evening with Rev. H. F. Fogleman and Miss Nan Lewis as host and hostess. Lacy S. Lewis, the president, had charge of the business meeting, at which many important matters were discussed pertaining to the society. A membership contest has been on during August with the four captains of the different divisions working for prizes. Several names were added during this contest. The two winning teams were announced at this meeting and the two losing teams will entertain the winners at a social this month. After the business meeting a very pleasant social hour was spent playing games and in a contest. Miss Mattie Russel excelled, winning a box of candy. Cream and cake were served to the sixty people present.

The pastors of the different churches in town exchanged pulpits at the morning services last Sunday. The congregations did not know who would preach for them until arriving at the church. Mr. Fogleman went to the Baptist church and the M. E. pastor, Mr. Willis, came to the M. P. church. Large crowds were present at all churches. A Reporter.

Hobbs' Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—We were delighted to have Dr. Andrews with us yesterday; he preached for us, and made a brief talk in interest of the college.

Brother Trolinger expects to be away next Sunday, and Brother M. P. Chambless will fill his appointment here. Brother Chambliss will leave that afternoon for Westminster Seminary, Maryland, so we invite you to attend and hear him.

On the fifth Sunday we will have all-day service—consecration service in the morning and preaching in the afternoon. You are cordially invited. Come! Dora Pair.

September 17.

Roanoke Circuit. — Since our last report from this charge, we have built a bathroom and installed water in the parsonage. Streets have been paved and sidewalks made, in front of parsonage and church. We are very thankful for these improvements; for a long time our streets have been so bad people could hardly get to church. We are glad to have B. B. Kimball, Sr., and Mrs. Ida Keeter unite with our Enfield church. J. R. Powers of the Enfield church will represent us as delegate at the next Annual Conference.

Our special meeting at Whitakers Chapel closed last Thursday night. Brother Burgess did all the preaching after Sunday and all that heard him enjoyed every service. Many expressed themselves as having never listened to better true gospel preaching. Brother Burgess will always be welcome at Whitakers Chapel. We were so glad to have Brother Walter Beavins with us during this meeting; he was not able to attend last year. It is an inspiration to have him in the congregation.

Our special meeting begins at Enfield the second Sunday in October. Brother A. G. Dixon, president, will be with us both services on Sunday and Whitakers Chapel in the afternoon. Rev. J. R. Hutton of Greensboro is to come to us Monday and remain over the third Sunday.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held in the Enfield church 22d of October at 3:30. D. R. Williams.

September 17.

Henderson.—While it has been some weeks since you heard from us we have not been idle. Congregations have held up well for the summer and many who used to be here but who have gone off to make their home elsewhere have been back on a visit to friends and loved ones and have not forgotten the old church.

Our special meeting will begin next Sunday and we are asking that you remember us in your prayers. Rev. G. G. Shurtz of Tiffin, O., will arrive Monday to do the preaching for about twelve days. We are holding cottage prayer meetings of evenings trying to get ourselves in readiness for the meeting.

Work on our new Sunday school building is progressing rapidly. The roof is being put on this week. This new building is 38 x 48 feet; the outer walls are of red brick trimmed in gray stone and the inner walls are of reinforced tiling. There will be two floors, one in the basement and the other above. When this building is finished our floor space will be almost completely doubled The new building stands at right angles to the present Sunday school building and is so arranged that the Sunday school can go right out of the old into the new.

Since my last letter we have been favored with visits by Rev. L. C. Little and Rev. Dr. Andrews. The addresses of both of these men were helpful to our people. Dr. Andrews was here getting additional pledges to the college. The amount of pledges here now stands close to the $15,000 mark.

J. E. Pritchard.

West End Greensboro.—The special revival services of West End closed Sunday night with the best record of any of these services. There were something like seventy reclamations and conversions.

All denominations reside in our community, and there being a fine spirit of co-operation among the Christian workers, representatives of these denominations have shared in the joy of this meeting. It has been the greatest meeting we have had in that there were old men and women among the converted, as well as young men and women of a promising high type of manhood and womanhood. There were also a few children. Added to West End's membership were 25, with others considering membership later.

Rev. J. H. Moton of Welch Memorial, High Point, conducted the meeting, whose sermons are described by the large ingathering of souls.

The postponed monthly business session of the church will be held Wednesday night of this week.

The dedicatory service will be held next Sunday morning and all the chosen speakers will be present.

Miss Lena Martin, who is preparing for foreign mission work, at this writing is critically ill at her home with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith on Bruce street, this city. She had expected to return to Western Maryland College next week to continue her college course. She also renders stenographic service to the college. Church Reporter.

Halifax Officials, Attention!—The fourth quarterly conference for this charge will convene at Bethesda October the 19th, which is Friday before the third Sunday. Meeting in afternoon at 1:30.

There is much to be done. There are necessarily some changes to be made in the apportionment for each church, so every official should be present.

Your delegate will want to know what you have to say about pastoral supply for next year and what you are going to pay pastor, etc. Many important matters. Come.

Halifax.—Brother Spencer did excellent work at Ringwood. We had 15 professions in all and a good revival in the church; four to join our church, some for the other churches in the community. We are all thankful for the good work done. Brother Spencer will be welcome here anytime.

Our next effort was at Bethesda. Brother Millaway did the preaching. He seems to have regained his old-time vigor in the pulpit. The best preaching I have heard him do in years, and it had effect, too. Here we had 25 renewals and professions. Eight joined our church and some will join the Baptist.

Our meeting is in progress at Harmony at this writing. We have no pulpit help here from the human side. Pray for us.

The fourth Sunday we begin at Hollister with Mrs. Dixon in charge. We are praying for a revival here. Will you help us? Quite a change here since the new management has taken charge. Numbers of people who have no interest in the church. The faithful little band that are left need your sympathy and prayers as you read. This meeting will run over the fifth Sunday, at which time there will be four services. In the afternoon a special service for ladies at the church and at the same hour for men in the school building. Then services at 7:30 P. M. All who are in reach are invited. This will wind up our revival campaign. A full report later.

Sincerely, N. G. Bethea.

The official members of Richland circuit: We wish to give timely notice that the fourth and last quarterly conference for the year 1923 is to meet in Charlotte church on Saturday before the first Sunday in October. Preaching at 11 o'clock. Dinner on the ground. Conference will open promptly at 1:30 P. M. A full attendance of official members is desired and expected. Don't forget the time and place and remember that our Annual Conference meets October 31. Only a little more than one month left in which to close up the year's work.

Special Meetings.

We are now in the midst of revival meetings on Richland. The meeting at Charlotte first Sunday was successful. Eight professions and five accessions. Rev. C. L. Spencer came on Monday and did the preaching. It was a real pleasure to have him with us and to hear him preach.

Yesterday we began at Giles Chapel. A large congregation and a fine offering to be applied on Budget. The spirit of the Lord was with us and there was rejoicing and earnest prayer.. Rev. R. C. Stubbins is to come today and preach during the meeting.

On the fifth Sunday in this month we are to begin at Browers. Our people are praying for revivals. May the Lord answer our prayers and give us times of refreshing from His presence.

Asheboro, September 17.

Fairview, S. C.—We are always glad to welcome our good preachers to Fairview.

Rev. B. M. Williams, who is working on the college campaign, preached us a very interesting sermon Sunday morning. After service he made a very short talk on his work.

We were glad to have with us Sunday night one of our former pastors, Rev. Mr. T. E. Martin; he preached a very interesting sermon which appealed to all church members.

Annie E. Watson.

Mecklenburg Charge.—Our meeting closed at Stallings church with 35 conversions and 20 additions to the church. Old timers said that it was the best meeting that had been here either at the old church or the new.

Brother A. Ridge was the pulpit help and he did some good preaching. Many thanks to him for laboring so faithfully among us.

The pastor was wonderfully delighted on ariving at Zoar church yesterday to find that they had covered the church. This looks like they are on the live wire.

We are greatly delighted with our success in the revivals this year as there have been 146 conversions and about 40 additions to the church. The reason that we got no more members is because we are surrounded by Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians who get our converts.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene at Stallings church on Saturday before the first Sunday in October at two o'clock.

W. L. Carson.

Cid.—The fourth quarterly conference will convene at Cid church on Saturday before the first Sunday in October. I hope there will be good attendance of the official members, as this is a very important meeting.

We believe it is the general sentiment of the people that we want Brother J. S. Riddle to return to us again. Now, dear people, if we want a man to work for us we must pay him up. I can only speak for one place and that is Cid. He will be paid up here; don't lack much of being out now. We have learned to love Brother Riddle and family as they have been so faithful in the work. And I believe it will be justice to this work for him to return.

The Uwharrie people are expecting to be well represented at conference as some of us have never had the opportunity of attending one. The Thomasville people, as far as I know, are very kind-hearted people, and I believe will do their part in taking care of the visitors.

The special meeting began at Jerusalem on yesterday. Attendance real good, spiritual interest real good. The gospel was expounded in a most forcible manner, conducted by Rev. J. S. Riddle. Hope for a good meeting.

The special meeting closed at Mt. Pleasant last Tuesday night; had 25 converts and will open the doors of the church later, as Brother Riddle got sick and had to leave before the last sermon. Rev. J. B. Trogdon of Denton assisted him in this meeting and delivered some soul-stirring sermons, as he always sees fit to bring to the people.

I am glad to see in the Herald such good reports from the different churches. This has been a great year in most of the denominations of saving precious souls.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Lanier and Mr. C. O. Leonard were glad to have the opportunity of attending a service at Mt. Pleasant meeting.

The Sunday school at Cid is doing real well; attendance keeps increasing. We have started the Cross and Crown System, which we believe will be a great help to our school.

We are glad to hear in and through the Herald that Brother Braswell is improving so much. May the Lord restore him to health again to do lots more spiritual work. His steps at Cid are still remembered. Also our sympathy goes to him and family in the loss of his son some time ago. Reporter.

IN MEMORIAM.

Roberta.

Roberta, that's what we called you,
  Just beginning life's short day,
Smiling sweetly, bearing sunshine,
  To everyone alone your way.

You were like a lovely rosebud,
  Pure and sweet in heaven's dew;
We loved you, how we loved you,
  Far better than you ever knew.

The hand of death has claimed you,
  Our Savior willed it so;
"Come unto me," he softly called
  And you couldn't help but go.

You must be very happy there,
  At play in sweet Elysian fields,
With many children pure and fair,
  For of such," he says, "my kingdom is."

We hope to meet you over there
  In that fair paradise above,
And dwell together then forever
  In that life of light and love.

Mrs. J. W. Thacker.

Prospectus for 1923-24 on application

—Coming into our office from dinner, we were surprised to see a fifty-pound bag of flour standing near the door. It bore the brand of the Liberty Milling Co. and was declared to be their best product. What could it mean? We could not guess but later came the explanation that it was a gift to the Herald office prompted by the kind heart of our life-time friend, Brother C. H. Hardin, of Julian, N. C. We thank him, and expect to find that the bread made from this flour has a flavor of excellence that few millers know how to give.

—The Burlington Aid society is having work done on the parsonage this week. The bed room on the lower floor is being papered, and the bath room and kitchen walls worked over. This will make quite an improvement in the exterior appearance. The parsonage family is very grateful.

We are all greatly grieved over the death of Bennett, the only on of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spoon, and our hearts are tender in sympathy for the bereaved family. The body was brought Sunday from Winton, where the family resides, for interment in Pineview cemetery. The funeral service was held from the Burlington church Monday morning at ten o'clock in the presence of a large congregation of sympathizing friends. Brother Hunter of the Winston church and Brother Buck of the Baptist church of this city assisted the pastor in the service. The body was laid to rest under a mound of flowers. May the God of all comfort be with the bereaved family.

RECOVERS $35,000,000 FROM SUNKEN SHIP.

After four years of work, divers have recovered the $30,000,000 worth of gold bullion and $5,000,000 worth of silver specie which went down with the Laurentic when that steamship was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off Donegal, Ireland, in the World War. Their labors were carried on 90 feet below the surface. Each diver received one thirty-second part of the treasure he brought up.

The salvage company used a kind of "galvanometer" to locate the gold. A clock-like dial aboard the salvage ship was connected with a rod in the hands of the divers. When the rod was prodded against iron, copper, or other base metal the hand on the dial moved to the left of a certain mark, which we will call the "zero mark," but when it touched gold the hand swung to the right and the divers were signaled accordingly. It is said to have veered further when it came in contact with an 18-carat bar than when it touched one of nine carats.—The Pathfinder.

—Aerial travel in Europe is more popular than in this country. It is said that seventy planes are in operation between France and the northern coast towns of Africa. GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY

buteros” in the infallible book—that decided them for the Presbyterian system. Another group found “episcopos” in the same infallible book—so the Episcopal system is divinely sanctioned. In the same way Baptists, Disciples, Christians, Brethren, Nazarenes, and many others, are New Testament churches by divine authority. Because of the scandal of division and the need for efficiency, the followers of Jesus are praying today as never before the prayer of their Lord, “That they all may be one,” and holding on like grim death to their scripturally sanctioned sectarian names and systems.

It is a proverb now, “You can prove anything from the Bible”—witchcraft, polygamy, slavery, the degradation of women, the right to drink intoxicating liquors, Arminianism, Calvinism, Universalism—and a thousand other isms, good, bad and indifferent. Surely there must be something wrong either with the Bible itself or with popular conceptions of it and the average method of using it. I prefer to stand with the Bible itself and join with others in the endeavor to get a rational understanding of it and its authority.

Biblical writers were accustomed to use the literary devices common to all times, and modern readers should not forget the fact. People are most impressed by direct, positive statements. Doubts, surmises, and peradventures neither carry conviction nor arm for action. And so the leader puts his statements in authoritative form, though both he and his followers know that many of them are to taken with a grain of salt. Biblical writers understood this. They spoke their convictions: they believed they were giving expression to God's truth; they said, “Thus said the Lord”—by such means seeking to invest their deep personal convictions with divine authority. This method has substantial value—if only we maintain our guard against literalism—and Biblical writers do not mislead us any more than does the fervid oratory of the preacher, the reformer, or the statesman, who believes that he is speaking the truth of God. The event must decide to what extent the speaker, Biblical or modern, is moved by the Holy Spirit. Time and reflection sift all matters, casting aside the chaff of error and retaining the grain of truth.

Revelation in the Bible is progressive and in order to get at the measure of authority in any particular portion, one must take into consideration the place of that portion in the whole system of teaching. Notice two topics:

First. There has been progress in the revelation of God's personality and character. In early times he was conceived of as one among many Gods. His territory was limited, and escape from his domain meant freedom from his dominion. He was often thought of as jealous, changeable, vengeful. But he came to be known, even in Old Testament times, as the God of the whole earth, the maker and ruler of the universe, the Father of his people, compassionate and the gracious helper of all who put their trust in him—even penitent heathen, as the Ninevites, finding in him a deliverer. He was limited in his self-revelation by the capacities and the wills of those to whom he showed himself, else he would have been known perfectly as he is, for he is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

In the New Testament he comes near in the person of Jesus—Immanuel, God with us—Spirit, and pleased only with Spiritual worship. He is the Father of all men, loves all his children, and watches longingly for the wayward son to come home. He is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. No Biblical representation of God that presents his character, actions, or requirements as in any way out of harmony with what Jesus has told us concerning him has any authority over our minds and consciences. When I think of the progress made in Old Testament times, in the apprehension of the character of God I am not so much impressed with the limitations of the writers as with the evidence of God's spirit and power in their hearts and the revelation of himself which he vouchsafed to them. This does not, however, lessen my gratitude that in Jesus we have the authoritative standard for judging every other representation of what God is like.

In the second place, there has been progress in the conception of the Messiah, his work, and the method of his kingdom. When Jesus came the Jews were looking for a ruling Messiah who would take charge of his people, break the hated Roman yoke, and establish a kingdom—making of them a great nation. In spite of his non-political plans Jesus won a following because of his personality, power and evident union with the Father whose character he so fully revealed. The crucifixion was a great shock to their faith. They recovered during the forty days following the Resurrection. As he went with them to the Mount of Olives, feeling that something was about to take place they asked, “Lord dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?” When he was gone out of their sight they seem to have taken account of stock and found these convictions: He is the Messiah, he came to found a Kingdom, he did not finish the work, the [illegible] interfered, he is alive, he will come again in power, the consummation of all things will be brought about—this to come to pass within the lifetime of persons then living. Millerites, Adventists, Fundamentalists—these all [illegible] abundance of proof-texts from the [illegible] and epistles to bolster up their beliefs.

But this does not tell the whole story. Jesus never had indicated that he was planning an earthly Kingdom over which he would rule in person, though his disciples were sure that was his purpose. “My kingdom is not of this world,” he said. The commission: “Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world,” is a great plan, and it contemplates extensive operations and a vast reach of time. On the Mount of Olives his words were in a similar vein: “Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.”

In his early ministry Paul was dominated by the common Jewish Messianic teaching. His first letters are full of it. But he had also the mind of Christ. As time went on he said less and less concerning the early return of the Lord, and was more and more concerned with the present [illegible] of Christ in the [illegible] affairs of men. His vision of Christ and his kingdom grew. Some good people seem to find pleasure in working out ways of reconciling Paul's various statements with each other. My own mind is better satisfied to accept the reasonable explanation that he increased in wisdom as well as in years, arriving in the course of time at a more and fuller understanding of the teaching of Jesus. Some also are well satisfied with various explanations as to why the Master did not return, as he is reported to have said he would, during the lifetime of some then living. I prefer to think that we have his big idea in the great commission and in his words on the Mount of Olives together with the parables of the Grain of Mustard Seed and the Leaven—and to conclude that the disciples were so obsessed with current Messianic ideas that they could not well do otherwise than attribute some of them to their Master in connection with his, to them and to us, obscure, references to the coming destruction of Jerusalem.

If this interpretation is correct the church has authority from the Bible and is under obligation to give the Gospel of Christ for the conquest of the world, and is not warranted in waiting for a cataclysm connected with the Lord's return to set all things right.

Pastor John Robinson in his farewell address to the Pilgrims as they were about to sail for the new world expressed his conviction that God had still new light to break forth from his Holy Word. The spiritual descendants of the Pilgrims have always diligently studied the Word—changing their interpretation from time to time as new light came, but always [illegible] quote Dr. George A. Gordon, for [illegible] years pastor of the Old South [illegible] Church, Boston:

“We have passed from the letter to the spirit in the mode of viewing the Bible. The result is no doubt that the smaller Bible has gone, but the immeasurably greater Bible has come. And this result could not be foreseen [illegible] few years ago. To set aside the authority [illegible] imprecatory psalms seemed [illegible] for a second del- [illegible] the Old Testament into history [illegible] and legend, to see in the history [illegible] homiletical purpose, and [illegible] by another; to [illegible] prophetic ideas and to [illegible] their availability for the modern world; [illegible] that the apostles were not always in complete agreement with one another; to intimate that Paul becomes deeper and [illegible] in his views as he grows [illegible] suspicion of a possible [illegible] in thought between some of the New Testament writers and Jesus Christ, appeared to [illegible] the signal of doom for the Bible as the Word of God. That the Bible has [illegible] this [illegible] trial a greater book is [illegible] its own intrinsic worth. [illegible] does not constitute the gold [illegible] removal of the alloy only adds to the [illegible] worth of the precious metal. [illegible] that [illegible] the weakness [illegible] that has divided the sheep from the goats in it, has been the [illegible] of the Bible. The intrinsic worth of the Bible has brought it forth from the fiery furnace of criticism a more glorious book, but it is due to those who have managed the furnace that we recognize their faith, their courage and their toil. The issue of this ordeal has been to set Christ on high as never before, to make the Bible into a witness for the Master, to turn attention from even the highest literary record to divine life, to force the appeal from the Book to the transcendent Person from whom it obtains its imperishable meaning.''

(The third article in this series will be on the subject, ''Jesus, Savior.'')

AN S. O. S. CALL.

The treasurer of the conference has never regarded himself a collector; however, it is his duty to give information, from time to time, of the status of the treasury.

Just now the situation is embarrassing. We are due on salaries, $350; Summer Conference, $200; Young People's Convention, $200; making a total of $750. The amount of A. C. funds on hand is $65.15. A small remittance from all charges would relieve this strain, and it would mean a great deal to those to whom it is due. Who'll set us going?

It was almost filled Sunday afternoon and night and about half filled on Tuesday night. (Monday is his rest day.) His voice has reach though it does not seem very loud. He makes his announcements deliberately and prays rather deliberately, but when he begins to preach he speaks with vehemence and keeps it up most of the [illegible] He has learned the art of piling up adjectives to denounce what he dislikes. He has certain combinations that seem to be stereotyped, though he prays to be delivered from stereotyped forms. He has a sense of humor that helps much. He told mothers with babies present to grab them and run out like the tent was on fire the instant they begin to cry. He knows how to show up sins and follies in their true colors and by doing so we believe he helps many to see themselves as they had not seen themselves before. His faith and the personal experience he has had help him to impress others with the reality of Christ's salvation. We hope he will help many to better lives—to the only true life, the Christian life—before he ends his work six weeks from now.

—Thousands of people gathered at Greenville, Tenn., to dedicate a brick building erected by the state of Tennessee to preserve the little tailor shop where Andrew Johnson, once president of the United States, worked as a tailor in his early years. The little tailor shop is expected to become, like Lincoln's cabin, a shrine for American patriots and a symbol of every boy's opportunity in spite of poverty.

THE EDUCATIONAL RALLY.

You will be interested to know that the Educational Rally was a success. While we did not have an overflow audience Hauser Auditorium was comfortably filled and we had a most excellent program. We had the pleasure of President Harper's presence with us and those present voted it a most eventful occasion in the history of our church. There was plenty of dinner for all pesent; it was all good and everybody enjoyed the picnic.

THE AUGUST PICNIC.

We are now planning for a get-together picnic occasion on Saturday, August 18th. At this time we are planning to have at least one thousand people present. The long table which has been erected will remain as an invitation to all who desire to use it as it was designed to be used. But on the 18th of August it is our expectation to make this table longer and to fill it with the picnic dinners brought there by our people. Make your plans now to be with us.

A QUESTION.

How much better are you than a postage stamp? The stamp sticks unto the end of the journey; are you with us in this canvass unto the end? We know that many will be with us unto the end of their days, but how about you faint-hearted ones?

SHALL WE LOSE THE $100,000?

While there are yet many weeks until the first of January there certainly are not too many weeks for us who are working this campaign. We shall need to be mighty busy and very faithful during these days. Let no church that is behind in the raising of its quota be content to remain there, for unless you get your quota the campaign will fail. We must not fail.

Very truly yours, R. M. Andrews.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

Is the small Christian college worthy of support today? Is it doing a work that merits equal support with tax-sustained institutions? Perhaps no fairer or more unbiased answer could be given to the question raised than by officials and teachers from these institutions. A state university president said, some time ago: "I am in no way untrue to the state institutions when I say that in our day a boy might become a bachelor or master in most of the best of them and still be as ignorant of the Bible, the greatest literature which it contains, the moral and spiritual truth which it represents, and the fundamental principles of religion, the facts and methods by which they are defended, and their nature and value to society, as if he had been educated in a non-Christian country. Who is to supply this lack, if not the church college?"

The dean of the law school of a leading state university said recently: "Since coming here, I have observed that the strongest men in our department are men who have come from the smaller colleges in the state. I can say frankly that if a young man desiring both the A. B. and LL.B. degrees should advise with me before registering, I would recommend that he secure his degree at a well-equipped small college."

A teacher in a state university writes: "The atmosphere of the small college is, I believe, on the whole more favorable for general education than the atmosphere of the great university."

The dean of agriculture in a state university says: "We need both the state institution and the small college, and each will sacrifice itself by attempting to imitate the other."

Another university dean writes: "It seems to me that the prospect for the small college is much brighter now than it ever has been, and that, important as has been the educational function which it has fulfilled in the past, its opportunities in the future are much greater. In my estimation, it is not so much what the small college can do that the university cannot do as it is what the small college can do to relieve the state university."

These state university men certainly make cut a strong case for the small college, and it could hardly be supposed that they are pleading a prejudiced case.

The following incident is recorded in the Educational Jubilee volume of the Methodist Episcopal Church, from which some of the quotations given above were taken. A retired missionary, who had spent almost a lifetime in the foreign field, while walking across the campus of Boston Uuiversity with President Murlin, said:

"Do you know what I would do if I had a million dollars?"

The president replied: "I suppose you would establish missions all over the world."

"No," he replied, "I'd found and endow a Christian college for the education and training of missionaries and teachers for the mission field, for this is the vital point in world evangelism."—Methodist Recorder.

—We were able to hold a session of the Summer Conference in the college by reason of the large liberality of the Hauser family in furnishing the auditorium. The chairs are both handsome and comfortable. Brother R. N. Hauser was the only member of the family present to receive the expression of appreciation tendered by those present. But appreciation of what they have so well and promptly done will continue to express itself as the years pass. A legion of cheers for the Hauser family.

—Brother R. N. Hauser thinks he has a good joke on the editor of the Herald which he never tires of telling. One day during the world war the editor had an engagement to preach in Kernersville at 11 o'clock and started on a train out of Greensboro to meet the appointment. On the way he became so much absorbed in reading an article concerning the war that he passed Kernersville without knowing it. When he came to realize his situation he was approaching Winston. The problem was to get back to Kernersville in time for the appointment.. Brother Hauser with his auto solved the problem and he took his pay out in laughing at us. We have never ceased to thank him and we can't predict when he will cease telling folks about it.

WORLD-WIDE PROHIBITION.

A great Eastern daily published recently under the headlines "Movement Towards Prohibition Permeates All Civilization" the following London dispatch:

"London, April 17.—Reports coming from many countries show that all over the world people are gradually awakening to the importance of temperance to the welfare of all nations.

"There have been big demonstrations in favor of prohibition in Sofia where the third anniversary of American prohibition was celebrated. In all the public schools the morning was spent in listening to leading doctors and others on the bad effects of alcohol, and this was followed by a general holiday for the students. In the evening an imposing demonstration was held, attended by government officials and diplomatic corps. Dr. Neitcheff, leader of Bulgarian temperance movement, made an impressive speech in which he lauded the United States for making 'The greatest decision ever reached on behalf of suffering humanity.'

"Germany reports that the movement is making good headway.

"In Holland the local option bill which was defeated last year by a majority of only one has every prospect of being passed.

"From Spain comes the news that the wave of temperance is sweeping the country from end to end, and is worrying the wine growers."

LAST CALL THIS YEAR.

Every day we are receiving orders for Children's day supplies from various parts of the country, and already we have received more orders than during any former year, but there are still more than one-half of the reported Sunday schools that have not sent us any order.

This ought not to be. If your Sunday school has not yet arranged to hold a service, now is the time to send in your order to me at 316 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. The Board of Young People's Work must not be interfered with in carrying forward their plans. Hurry up, please, and let me hear from you at once with your order for free supplies for holding a Children's Day Service.

Evangelistic Tours in India.

We regret delay in publishing an account of Mrs. F. W. Theophilus's evangelistic tours through the large district in which our work is carried on.

The touring party had the tent provided by the board, and the work started at [illegible] where the people for the most part were glad to have us back again, and in many instances would weep, and tell about loved ones who had departed since our last tour.

"God has wonderfully blessed throughout the district. In no place have we found a trace of bubonic plague, or cholera, or any other epidemic.

"After preaching in all the surrounding villages we moved the camp to Khed, instead of stopping at Kasumbe as we generally do—on account of the water difficulty—and worked the Kasumbe villages from Khed.

"This part [illegible] district, hills, terrible roads [illegible] almost breaking [illegible] villages, but [illegible] cost night [illegible] to do [illegible].

"Our mission [illegible] beyond the hills [illegible] and [illegible], even to the [illegible].

"The Wanzaris are a most difficult people to reach on account of [illegible] and the fewest number have ever become Christians.

"In our district there are a few Thandas as their particular villages are called, but we have not been able to reach them on account of the terrible [illegible] of their women folk. Once I did get an opportunity to speak to some, but not until I had [illegible] my pith hat, to prove to them that I was [illegible] women, then I was [illegible].

"But 'God works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform.'

"The Wanzaris in Pudale's Thanda were in trouble—a murder had been committed [illegible] came to us for help. God enabled us to be a help to them, and since that time we have been repeatedly invited to visit them in their own Thanda. We [illegible] selves of this [illegible] soon as our tent [illegible].

"We pitched our tents at Khed on our own land and opened [illegible] His Kingdom. On the 19th [illegible] started [illegible] to make that promised visit. We went prepared to remain over night, knowing that we would [illegible] both men and women.

"So we loaded up our things, a cot, a small tent, cooking utensils, a water bucket, a lantern, and food supplies, and started up and across the hills, over the worst roads imaginable.

"My Bible woman and I rode in a small springless two-wheeled bullock conveyance and it took all our strength to hold on as we bounced over the rocks from side to side. Up and on the bullocks were urged by the strong hand of Jayaram (the new Kunbi convert, a treasure) till the grass-covered huts of the Thanda came into view.

"We received a grand welcome, according to the customs of these people. The head man came to meet us, soon we were surrounded by a crowd of men all ready to do something for us.

"The ground was swept, our tents put up, water and wood brought, then we were told to wait for food to be cooked. In due time a great abundance of food was served us, all the time taking care that their brass vessels did not come into contact with ours. We partook of the food not doubting, and praised the Lord for fresh hot milk." To be continued.

BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS

Rev. C H. Beck, Sec.

"IN JOURNEYS OFT." II.

Last week in this column I gave something of the story of my recent visit to Seattle, Wash., in the interests of the work of the Board of Home Missions. This week I will continue the story of my journey.

I left Seattle on Monday morning, June 4, arriving at Kansas City, Kans., Thursday evening, June 7. Thursday evening, and parts of the day on Friday and Saturday were given to discussions concerning the building operations at Westheight.

On Friday evening, accompanied by Dr. Ledbetter and Dr. Garrison, two members of the board residing in Kansas City, Kans., I visited our new organization in the southern part of Kansas City, Mo., known as "The Church of the Woods." This church was organized by Dr. Ledbetter on May 10, with [illegible] members. It is in a very new part of the city, in a community of about fifty families. The people seem to be in comfortable circumstances though the most of them are just buying lots and building homes. It would seem to your secretary that there is a real call for service here, and the proper assistance and supervision should be given to this work. Reports of the visit are being given to other members of the board, and further announcement will be made concerning this when such announcement would seem to be timely.

A considerable part of the day on Saturday was given to conferences with leading members of the Gordon Place and University churches. At Gordon Place, it is proposed to erect a new church on a new site, the building to cost from $30,000 to $35,000, and to be complete. The lots were purchased a little less than one year ago, and a fund is being raised for building purposes. We think we have the finest church site in that part of the city, and it is not too far from the old location to carry all of our people from Gordon Place with us. This church is not large, but has some of our finest people in its leadership, and they seem to be disposed to do the heroic in order to carry this enterprise through to successful completion. It is expected that plans for building will be matured and that contracts will be let in the late fall or early spring.

On Sunday morning your secretary attended the Children's Day services at Gordon Place. In the afternoon, the Westheight church was solemnly dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, your secretary preaching the dedicatory sermon. At night I worshiped with the congregation at the University Church, and preached the sermon.

Our work in Kansas City has never been in so fine a condition during my term as secretary of the board. The results being secured justify the investments being made both in time and money. With the erection of the third church here, we will have comfortably housed all of our congregations in Kansas City, and we think will have placed them all in a fair way to succeed. Our work here has been sadly hindered throughout the years by lack of a proper equipment. With the new building we expect success in every field.

Charles H. Beck.

PINE RIDGE, KENTUCKY.

A fine account of the Board Meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society held here in May recently appeared in our papers. We feel the meeting did us much good in many respects. We thank God for the splendid spirit of that meeting and the fine assurance of co-operation and support indicated in so many ways.

During June, we have been busy with Children's Day service at four schools—at least one more yet to be held. Our farming and gardening is being done on a larger scale this year than ever before and we are doing considerable repair and remodeling work on our buildings.

The first Sunday in July our County Sunday School Convention will be held and we are giving our best attention and support to that.

On the Fourth of July we will have our usual patriotic celebration coupled with our Sunday school rally and picnic.

Beginning on the last Sunday in July and continuing at least two weeks, we hope to hold a revival meeting that will mean much to this community and to the work we are trying to do. For this meeting, we are building a tabernacle 36x60, which will be useful for various purposes after the meeting. Rev. S. Heininger of Elkhart, Indiana, has kindly consented to come to our help. Miss Georgia Dunn, who has represented Kentucky Christian Endeavor work among prisoners for thirteen years and is now field secretary for the State Union, will also spend a week with us. We are hoping for others to join us in making this a great meeting. We will gladly welcome any of the Lord's servants who feel an interest and want to come and help. Those who cannot come can help by making these meetings a very definite subject of prayer. We will appreciate your co-operation.

Sincerely, Thos. R. Woodford.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The writer, accompanied zy Brother Helms, left Weaverville at five A. M. Monday, 25th, arrived at High at five P. M. same day.

The whole trip was enjoyed; but our greatest joy was, when we beheld our splendid College building. Wish all our people could have this pleasure. This building is certainly a thing of beauty and is a credit to any city or denomination.

The conference was the best yet, both in attendance and interest. Many thanks to President Pritchard and his assistants for arranging such a splendid program. The speakers all brought inspiring messages.

Drs. Forlines and Thompson gave us food for thought, for many days to come.

Dr. McCulloch's address on "Seeing the Dream Come True" was or should be an inspiration to all to "be not weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." This address was delivered at the Educational Rally, in the new College chapel, June 29. We hope to see it published in the Herald.

The return trip was made via Ford June 29, one P. M., to 11:30 P. M., June 29.

We are glad the same ones who made this conference possible will have the right of way for another year. The old officers were all elected to serve another year.

NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH, W. F. M. S.

The first quarterly meeting of the executive officers of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met at the Children's Home, High Point, N. C., Thursday, June 28.

The devotional service was led by the presiding officer, Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, and Dr. Harris-Glascock.

The following members responded to the roll call: Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Dr. Harris-Glascock, Mrs. W. P. Pickett. In the absence of the Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. M. Millikan, the corresponding secretary was appointed secretary pro tem. The resignation of Dr. Harris-Glascock, general chairman of district managers, was read and accepted. Miss Esther Ross, of Asheboro, was elected to fill this office.

The Corresponding Secretary read a list of auxiliaries that have no young people's work. Won't each of these auxiliaries try to organize their young people and children for work in the interest of Foreign Missions? Won't you try to train them that when they are ready they can take the places of those who are now working? Won't you pray for the young people of our church that "Service" may be their aim in life?

A list of weak and inactive societies was also read. On motion the district chairmen were asked to co-operate with these weak societies and give them all the assistance possible. A motion was made and carried to give $5.00 to Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, Secretary of Literature, with which to purchase the new study books.

Miss Reid, the state organizer employed by the Woman's Home Missionary Society, was presented.

After some discussion a motion prevailed that the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society defer the employment of Miss Reid as their organizer until the next Executive Meeting.

The Treasurer reported balance in bank April 1, 1923, $2,750.08. Disbursements, $2,481.74. Balance on hand June 28, 1923, $268.29. The meeting adjourned with a prayer by Mrs. Geo. R. Brown.

Mrs. M. P. Harrell. Cor. Secy.

A CARD OF THANKS.

I am deeply grateful to all friends who remembered me during my recent illness. Beautiful flowers, generous deeds, kind words and expressions of sympathy made my stay in the hospital and my convalescent days a great deal more pleasant than they would have otherwise been. These favors will never be forgotten.

Yours in His service, Fred W. Paschall.

MISS LAURA REED WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ORGANIZER IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Miss Laura Reed, who has been employed as organizer by the Woman's Home Missionary Society, is now in the North Carolina Branch organizing and stimulating missionary societies. Miss Reed is the daughter of a Methodist Protestant preacher of New York and has always shown a keen interest in missions. She attended the meeting of the Young People's Conference at Weaverville and the Pastors' Conference at High Point and has met the people throughout the state.

This is the first time the Home Missionary Society has ever put an organizer in the field in North Carolina and it is the wish that the doors of the Methodist Protestant churches be opened to her and that the people co-operate with her in organizing.

J. H. Snotherly, Friendship, Stanley Ct., brought a valuable lot of spices and extracts; from High Point, Mrs. W. L. Kivett, a fine lot of apples; O'Brien's Baking Co., bread; Ladies Aid, First church, beef roast and bread.

A delightful visitor was Miss Sallie Barnhill who once taught in the Home to the satisfaction of all. Miss Laura Reed of the Onondaga Conference is among us in the interest of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. She has spent several days with us and we want to commend her to our people. Any courtesy shown her will be appreciated by the Home.

It was a genuine pleasure to have so near all our ministers and preachers with us at the Summer Conference last week. Those who could not come missed a great treat. We have never had a better conference. We want to make the next one a greater conference. It is encouraging to see how fast loyalty is developing among our people.

Space forbids giving the names of the great number of visitors who were astonished at the growth of the Home and the College.

—We have had a serious interruption in the Herald office this week. One of our motors (the one that drives the linotype machine) after years of faithful, uncomplaining service, suddenly gave notice on Monday with a terrific clatter and crash that it would take a vacation for a time. The electricians of the city found it hard to persuade it to do otherwise, but after a day of coaxing it was prevailed upon to resume labor for awhile during which time we hope to receive from the factory in St. Louis, Mo., some parts to replace those out of commission. This interruption explains the absence of some things that otherwise would have appeared in this issue.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Lincolnton Christian Endeavor Society.

Guess some of our readers are thinking we are dead or gone to sleep. We are still moving along nicely. Our topic for June 24 was, "How Can We Win Friends and Keep Them?" Our enthusiastic leader in the discussion of this topic was Mr. R. G. Wood. The subject was very interesting and we derived much pleasure and instruction from the discussion.

Mr. Wood is also president of the society. We appreciate the splendid way in which he has stood by us since the time of our organization. Mr. Wood is a young man of splendid Christian character, a great worker among the young people.

We are planning to do greater work in the future. We desire your prayers that we may be true Christian Endeavorers. Best wishes to all. Hattie Johnson, Reporter.

From President and Mrs. Norton, Weaverville.

We wish to acknowledge the receipt of many letters and cards (too numerous to answer personally) expressing appreciation of the entertainment of the Young People's Conference at Weaver College.

We desire to express to the Conference and the Methodist Protestant Church of North Carolina our appreciation of the kind expressions and courtesies extended to us while they were with us. It was indeed a privilege to have the Conference with us and we have never been associated with a more splendid group of young people.

We have missed you and we shall always remember with pleasure the ten days you were with us—they passed only too quickly away. Permit us to say that we shared with you the delightfulness of the occasion. We fully enjoyed the inspirational addresses at the evening hour, the vesper services, and the spirit of good fellowship that prevailed during the entire ten days.

We sincerely thank you for every kindness and courtesy shown us while here, for expressions of appreciation and for the many kind letters and cards received since you have gone.

We hope to meet with you again. Sincerely,

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Norton.

SERMON TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Resurrection of Youth.

Text: "And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." Luke 7: 14.

A poor widow of Nain had lost her only son. The body was being carried to the place of burial. A large crowd of sympathizers was following the bier. Jesus and His disciples met this funeral procession. The distress of the widowed mother appealed to the tender pity of the Christ. He touched the coffin and the procession halted. To the corpse He spoke the life-giving words, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." He immediately sat up, and went to the embrace of his mother.

Many a young man, even in our day, is in the grip of a worse death than that which was bearing this young man to his last resting place. So many are dead in trespasses and sins. So many are unmindful and indifferent to every call of duty. And so many are asleep in the bewitching arms of sinful pleasure.

There is a strong demand for the exercise of a threefold resurrection. And Jesus alone has the power to impart this much-needed raising from the dead. Let us ask Him to do this for the young people of our land. Let us first consider that Jesus is able and willing to impart the Resurrection from the Death of Sin.

Death, physical and spiritual, is the awful penalty for sin. "The wages of sin is death." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." This death is something more than ceasing to exist under present-day conditions. It is existence under conditions of entire separation from God. It is the death of lost opportunity. It is the death to which the voice of mercy no longer appeals. The spiritual death becomes eternal when the days of probation are ended.

But there is hope even for the dead soul. Jesus has said, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." What a glorious hope this is! Every dead soul may hope in a crucified and risen Redeemer. "Whosoever will let him take the water of life freely." This hope is based first of all upon the omnipotent power of Jesus to save to the uttermost all who come to Him. It is based secondly upon the blessed fact that He died upon the cross that you and I might live in glory. And this hope is based in the third place upon the power of Christ's resurrection from the tomb. In His rising from the dead there is the pledge of assurance that we might rise from the death of sin to the life of righteousness. "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is your life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

And this same adorable Christ is also able to impart the Resurrection from Indifference to Duty.

How quickly some weak believers lapse into indifference to God's call to service! They turn the deaf ear to the wail of the widow, the cry of the orphan, the agony of the distressed, and the appeal of the perishing. They may have a faint care for their immediate family circle, and pray like the Dutchman, "God bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four, and no more!" Little care they that the unenlightened heathen by the millions sink into Christless graves and into a Christless hell. They manifest little or no concern for the lost neighbor right at their doors. And by such shameful indifference to others they are jeopardizing their own immortal souls. "Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion!" exclaims the prophet of God.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" spoke the angry Cain. And many spiritual descendants of Cain are repeating the same words today. Many a modern priest and Levite is passing by on the other side, and leaving poor, perishing souls to sink into everlasting perdition. The harvest of wilful neglect will be an enormous one.

These weak and indifferent believers need a touch of the risen Christ to enlist their energies for the needy of mankind. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power," says the Psalmist; and truer words were never spoken. The eleven apostles were not deeply interested in souls before Pentecost. They were more anxious for a visible kingdom. But Jesus said to them, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

Get the endument of power from the Holy Spirit and you will become very much alive to the needs of others. You will become co-workers with Christ. You will be glad to heed the Mecedonian cry, "Come over into Macedonia and help us," You will be ready and anxious to rescue the perishing and snatch precious brands as it were from the everlasting flames.

In the last place let us note that Jesus is just as able to impart

Resurrection from the Sleep of Pleasure.

There have always been those who were "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," that delighted more in that which pleased the senses than in that which pleased the immortal soul. Young people especially are much given to the pursuit of pleasure. They want to have a good time from a worldly point of view. Theatricals, circuses, and moving picture shows are patronized to an amazing extent. These usually prepare the way for more questionable pursuits of pleasure.

These manifestations of "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" are revelations of a sad lack of spiritual life. The wise man uttered a startling truth in these words, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." And Jesus mentioned "the pleasures of this life" along with "the cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things," as the unfortunate means of choking the word and making it unfruitful.

Nothing short of the resurrection power of Jesus can turn the bent of the soul from the pleasures of the world to the more excellent pleasures of religion. Men and women usually seek after what they want, and when they begin to "hunger and thirst after righteousness," then they will earnestly seek "the joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Let me exhort all the young people to yield themselves to Christ in deep penitence and full consecration. Let Jesus become their all in all. Let them turn their backs upon the world, the flesh. and the devil. Then Jesus Christ will give them peace, joy, life, and love. He will then say, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." —The Word of Life.

MOTHER.

Nobody knows of the work it makes
To keep the home together;
Nobody knows of the steps it takes,
Nobody knows—but mother.

Nobody listens to childish woes,
Which kisses only smother;
Nobody's pained by naughty blows—
Nobody's hurt like mother!

Nobody knows of the sleepless care
Bestowed on baby brother;
Nobody knows of the tender prayer,
Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the lessons taught
Of loving one another;
Nobody knows of the patience sought,
Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the anxious fears,
Lest darlings may not weather
The storm of life in after years,
Nobody knows—but mother.

Come, let us kneel at the throne above
To thank the heavenly Father
For that sweetest gift—a mother's love—
The love of our own dear mother!
—The Fireside.

That day with Jesus! Who can guess
All that it meant of blessedness.
I sigh, "Oh, that I had been there
To hear his words, his voice in prayer;
To see the shining of his face
And feel his touch of heavenly grace—
To wear in memory for aye
The halo-crown of that one day!"

"Oh, eyes so holden, not to see,"
The Master seems to say to me,
'Your heart is now my dwelling-place
Where you may look upon my face
And feel my Spirit's life and light,
Closer than touch, clearer than sight.
Lo, I abide with you alway,—
Not only one, but every day."
—Sunday School Times.

IMPARTIAL JUSTICE.

Those of us who believe that Justice should be blind and know no difference between the black and white man, between the poor and the rich, have never been able to reconcile the varying sentences given, nor to preserve a proper respect for the majesty and impartiality of the law in prohibition cases. All of us, however, are greatly encouraged by the recent decision of the Federal Judge in New York, before whom three aristocratic bootleggers were recently arraigned.

The La Montague Brothers in the past was a firm with an aristocratic name who furnished the high society of New York with the best of wines and liquors. When prohibition came, they still continued this business, though in secret. Recently they were apprehended and were brought before the Federal Judge. The high society people had their best lawyers to defend them, but the evidence was so conclusive that they threw themselves upon the mercy of the court. Their lawyers pleaded for mercy on the ground that they were of high social standing, and that therefore their disgrace, if punished as any common transgressor, would be out of all proportion to their offense. The judge failed to be impressed by this argument, and he imposed upon them a heavy fine and sent them to jail.

One such decision is worth a great deal to the cause, and will serve to inspire respect for the law on the part of the transgressor and for the judge on the part of the public. We need many such judges and also Governors who will not turn such men loose after the courts have sentenced them.—Selected.

THE EXTRA STITCHES.

Two young girls were engaged in stitching flannel dresses for the poor.

"Our work is finished for this season, at least," said one of the two girls, with a sigh of relief.

"No, no, wait a moment; just a few moments more," replied the other; and, going into an inner room, she returned with some skeins of crimson silk, and a few knots of ribbon and lace.

"Why, what are you doing?" asked her companion, with surprise, as her deft fingers swiftly fashioned a dainty edging of crimson silk, frilled in the soft lace at neck and sleeves, and fastened on the bright ribbons here and there.

"These extra stitches take just a moment," was the answer given with a blush, "and I want to make the dress pretty for some mother's baby."

As the great pile of dresses was distributed to the needy, that cold winter, one hard-visaged woman burst into tears and hid her face in the folds of a little dress trimmed with lace and ribbons. "Oh, to think of someone doing this for my poor baby! I didn't think anybody cared!" she sobbed.

"God cares for you and your baby," said the reverent voice of a pastor, who had long sought an opportunity to reach this hardened heart. And for the first time, the woman was willing to listen to the sweet, old story. Does this not teach us that there is something more for us to perform beyond the rigid call of simple duty? The extra stitches are surely the threads of gold that beautify and enrich the dull, dark fabric of our too often careless and indifferent charity.—Exchange.

A LITTLE BOY'S OPINION.

A small mission band was assembled. Some old people were there: some young people, too, were there. Among the latter was a small boy, who was much interested in the subject. He had written a little article with his own pen, to which he had given the title, "How the Bible Got Made." This he read to the meeting, and as he finished reading he said. "And it's my opinion that all the folks what has the Bible orght to give it to them what hasn't." A simple, child-like thought, but of far-reaching import. If one who has got the gospel would do something in the way of giving it to others, it would not be very long before all the world would get it. And is not this the very injunction of Jesus, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."—Selected.

THE BANNER GOES TO GREENSBORO.

One of the finest reports from a Christian Endeavor society I have ever heard was read recently at the city union meeting in Greensboro, N. C., by the Senior society in the West End Methodist Protestant Church, a mission church supported by the home mission board.

Among other things reported, the members of this society did the following during a three months' period: variety in plan of meeting at least every two weeks; Dixie Endeavor Day observed and offering taken; three missionary meetings held; course in mission-study conducted; two packages of magazines delivered to convicts in the prison camp; furnished special program for prisoners in camp; gave contributions to two mission causes in denomination; held rummage sale from which $22.50 was realized; made three trips twenty miles from the city to organize a new society and get it on its feet; gave Juniors an Easter-egg hunt and held Easter sunrise prayer meeting; sent Easter cards to inmates of three hospitals; sent Easter baskets to every child in one hospital; gave a total of forty-three hours of stenographic work to pastor and Sunday school officers; made thirty visits to hospitals; furnished a trained nurse for a needy woman in the community; held a social for the older folks of the church.

More than half of the society are tithers. Ninety per cent are subscribers to The Christian Endeavor World, and a hundred per cent take The Dixie Endeavorer. A thorough canvass was made of the entire church for denominational papers, and a club of ten copies of The Dixie Endeavorer was sent to the training-school.

These young people do all the work in issuing the church bulletin. They furnish four teachers for the Sunday school, two assistant teachers, the church pianist, church treasurer, and superintendent for the Junior Christian Endeavor society.

They had secured a hundred-per-cent registration for the annual denominational Young People's Conference two months ahead of time. They gave $25 to the Sunday school for needed improvements, and increased their budget to State and county Christian Endeavor work $15.

Their membership increased forty per cent during the three months.

It is needless to say that this society won the city union banner for the best work done during the quarter.—Lawrence Little, in The Christian Endeavor World.

—Sir Conan Doyle's famous detective stories of Sherlock Holmes have been barred from the libraries of Inverness, Scotland, by the authorities who have charge of the county education. They say the stories have a corrupting influence on youth.

—Fossil remains of a dinosaur found near Ehrlien, Mongolia, by American explorers, prove that the animal was carnivorous. Evidence of this is indicated by the teeth and the structure of the skeleton. The creature stood on legs ten feet high and its body was about 90 feet long. It weighed almost 90,000 pounds and is regarded as intermediate between a lizard and a bird and of the same common stock as the present-day alligator.

THE BETTER WAY.

In her girlhood days Mrs. Alliston had been active in church work, a loyal member of the young people's society in the pretty New England village where her parents resided, and always ready to do her part in every good work. She had been spoken of a "a promising young Christian." But gradually she had seemed to lose interest, and after her marriage she became merely a nominal Christion. John Alliston, though an upright, honest man and a good citizen, took little interest in matters pertaining to the kingdom. He never spoke against the religion of Christ or its followers, but it never seemed to him necessary to identify himself with God's people. Then business reverses came, and he decided to go West.

In the little settlement called Happy Corner, Mrs. Alliston was thoroughly miserable. There was no church, no library, and the people were rough and uncultured, though for the most part kind-hearted. Mrs. Alliston made no friendly advances and lived by herself, lamenting over the days that had gone by, and often declaring to herself that fate had been unkind to her. She read her Bible occasionally, and sometimes tried to pray, but it was only a lip service.

"It is so different here," she said to Miss Harmon, the teacher of the little school, who was making her a call one Saturday afternoon. "If I thought I should be obliged to pass the remainder of my life at Happy Corner, I should be completely discouraged."

"Yes," agreed Miss Harmon, with a thoughtful expression on her face. "It would not be pleasant to pass one's life here, I admit. But has it never occurred to you, Mrs. Alliston, that God may have placed us here for a season for some good purpose?"

Mrs. Alliston's surprise showed in her face. "Why, no, it certainly has not. What purpose could He have in placing us here?"

"There is no religious interest here. I think that you and I are the only professing Christians in the place. I have been thinking that we might try to start a Sunday school."

"A Sunday school! What would we do for teachers?"

"That I hardly know myself. But at first we could do little more than have singing, a prayer, and a brief talk. You are a musician. I thought that perhaps you would play the organ and lead the singing. We have a small organ in the schoolhouse."

"I doubt if we could succeed in anything of the kind," said Mrs. Alliston gloomily. "The children would not be likely to come, and the parents certainly would not."

"Some of them might," hopefully replied Miss Harmon. "I have talked with several of the women, and they have given me some encouragement. I intend to see others, and I thought we might make our first trial tomorrow at two o'clock. They would be more likely to come in the afternoon, I think."

Mrs. Alliston considered. "I will be there," she said reluctantly. "But I cannot promise to do anything except help with the music."

"That will do," said Miss Harmon brightly, as she rose to go. Then she added impulsively, "There is a better way, even for these rough people, and with God's help we may lead them."

That evening, Mrs. Alliston spoke of the proposed Sunday school to her husband. Much to her surprise, he seemed interested at once.

"I have been thinking that something of the kind was needed here," he said. "Of course, Edith, you will help all you can."

Mrs. Alliston looked at her husband. She had not expected that he would evince the least interest in the affair. "I promised to attend," she replied briefly.

The next afternoon, about twenty men, women, and children gathered in the schoolhouse. Several hymns were sung, Mrs. Alliston leading in her clear, sweet voice. She was a little disappointed, after what her husband had said, that he had not offered to accompany her to the Sunday school, and had even thought of asking him to go, but had refrained. Just as they finished singing, however, he came in.

But little could be done the first day. Miss Harmon was chosen superintendent. Mrs. Alliston was to have charge of the music, and finally consented to be secretary. Then came the question of teachers.

From his seat in the corner Mr. Alliston rose. "Friends," he said, "I have always believed in the Christian religion, and have long thought that religious meetings of some kind were needed in our community. I thought of offering to accompany my wife here today, but pride said 'No.' After she left the house, I could not content myself, and so I am here. I have resolved to live in such a way that people will know that I have a reverence for God. And I offer my services as teacher, hoping that they will be accepted. I know little about the Bible, but I am willing to study."

Mrs. Alliston listened, while tears dimmed her eyes, and her heart throbbed with joy such as it had not known in a long time.

The next day when school was out, Mrs. Alliston was waiting for Miss Harmon.

"I am going to walk with you to your boarding-place," she said. "And, oh, Miss Harmon, I want to tell you what a happy woman I am! My husband conducted family worship this morning."

"I am so glad for you, Mrs. Alliston!" said the little teacher warmly.

"I have been cold and indifferent," confessed Mrs. Alliston. "But God has not rewarded me according to my life. I have been very unhappy in this town, but now I feel that my Heavenly Father had a purpose in sending me here. And I am sure that our Sunday school will be a success."

"I think so, too. Your husband's stand yesterday has had its effect. I saw Mrs. French this morning. She is one of the few educated women at Happy Corner, as you doubtless know. She did not come to our school yesterday, but she will come next Sunday and bring her little girls. And I feel sure that others will become interested."

Five years later. It was a pleasant Sabbath morning in June, and Mr. and Mrs. Alliston sat in the pretty chapel which had been built at Happy Corner, and listened to the words of the young minister, as he endeavored to unfold God's truths. Bright, interested faces were all about, and at the close of the service the ordinance of baptism was administered to several persons.

"This is a happy day to me," said Mrs. Alliston to her husband, when they were on their way home. "What a change has been wrought here. But, oh, if Miss Harmon could have lived to see this day!"

"She has gone to her reward," said Mr. Alliston gravely.

"Yes," agreed his wife, wiping tears from her eyes. "She was the means of winning many souls to Christ. I had become a grumbler, God's promises meant little to me, and I was dissatisfied with my life. But now I am happy at Happy Corner. I, with others, have found the better way."

"Amen!" said Mr. Alliston reverently.—Willard N. Jenkins, in Zion's Herald.

THE ALL-SEEING EYE.

"Thou God seest me" is a truth that reveals the unceasing interest of the heavenly Father in all the affairs of men. It expresses the fact that God knows all things, past, present, and to come. "All things are naked and open unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do." There is no escaping the all-seeing eye of omniscience.

Since our Lord and Judge sees even the thoughts and desires of the soul, how careful ought we to be in all our thought, speech and conduct! What courage and determination ought this fact impart to us to resist the least approach of sin! What joy should we have in all obedient and faithful service when we are assured that the God of mercies is looking on with smiling approval!

It is so plain that we live, move, and have our being in the light of God's countenance. He is not far from each one of us. The Infinite comes so near to us in the exercise of His omniscience and in the declaration of His love not in order to find fault, but that He might inspire and encourage us to live lives worthy of the high Christian calling.

No loyal son or daughter would dare to grieve a loving mother by profane speech or disagreeable conduct in her presence. How much less can any of us afford to grieve the Father of mercies by doing the least evil in His sight!

Let us therefore so order our daily conduct that we may receive His loving approval, rich blessing, and everlasting reward.—The Word of Life.

—The attendance at Summer Conference this year was the best yet—69 being registered. This includes a few laymen. The interest also probably reached high tide, judging from comments. Prof. Forlines was well known, and much was expected from him, and he did not disappoint. The addresses of Prof. Thompson, of Drew Theological Seminary, gave special pleasure. The papers and talks by members of our own conference revealed earnestness and intelligent preparation, we understand. It is not our good fortune to hear many of the addresses—only a few samples. The satisfaction with the management was shown in the election of the same officers. Brother Pritchard makes a good presiding officer. He talks neither too much nor too little.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Fairview.—We have not sent in a report for some time. So will try to tell you some of the things our Sunday school and church are doing.

Mothers' Day, the second Sunday in May, was observed at our church. The church was beautifully decorated in wild flowers, and the colors, lavender and white. Ways were provided for all the old people to ride to church who were not able to walk. At eleven o'clock a special service was held in their honor. Flowers were passed to the congregation and the beautiful custom of wearing flowers in honor of the mothers was kept.

Brother C. J. Edwards, our pastor, made a most impressive talk about the privilege of keeping Mothers' Day. After this Mr. Fletcher Williams made a short talk about the Methodist Protestant College. There were no services held that evening because the lights were out of commission.

Mr. Edwards filled his regular appointment here the second Sunday in June; he also preached again the same Sunday evening.

As last Sunday was the last in the quarter, also Sunday for review, we did not have the regular lesson, but had a debate during the Sunday school hour. The query was—"Resolved: That Queen Esther did more for the people than Jeremiah." This debate being a departure from the usual routine, was much enjoyed. The decision of the judges was in favor of the negative.

The Baraca class has been holding a contest to increase their membership. This was done by dividing the class into two teams, and each working for the greatest number of new members. The contest was a great success. It closed the past Sunday.

The Baraca class entertains the Philathea class at a banquet Saturday evening, 30th of June.

The entire Sunday school is alive and growing under the splendid leadership of Mr. Amos Shepherd as superintendent and improvements for the church building are being contemplated.

The people of our church and Sunday school have been made sad by the death of one of our number. Annie Skims Westbrooks died May 31, 1923. She was a faithful member, and a good woman. She is mourned by the whole community. Her husband and small son have our deepest sympathy. Reporter.

Elon College, R 1.

New Hope, Why Not Ct.—We held our children's service the 3rd Sunday in June. The children rendered their parts well. Mr. Hulin was present and gave a good missionary talk. Collection, $13.00.

Union Township S. S. Convention will be held at this church next Sunday.

Mrs. W. R. Williams has been sick, but is convalescent.

Howard, little son of Jasper Vuncannon, has been ill, but is much improved, we are glad to note. Nettie Allen.

July 2.

Pageland.—Our Sunday school met Sunday morning with 83 present. Song service was enjoyed for 30 minutes. On Sunday night our pastor preached a soul-thrilling sermon. The attendance was small on account of the rain. We are very sorry that one of our faithful members is in the hospital. We trust that it is God's will that he will soon be restored to health.

Since the organization of our young people's Christian Endeavor Society we have rendered several good programs; the young people seem to be interested in this society, and we trust that good may be accomplished.

We were very sorry to learn that our revival meeting will not begin next Sunday. There was some misunderstanding as to the time; but we hope to have our meeting some time in the near future.

Leo Sowell, Reporter.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—We are doing business at the same old stand, though there has not been much mention of us in the columns of the Herald of late, the pastor being too busy to write, and for some reason the reporter has not made any report. I wonder if other pastors are confronted with the same problem that I am, that is, to get the members to attend the services of the church. During the winter months it is too cold and too rainy to go to church, and in the summer the weather is too pretty to have to stay in church, and besides we have a dear old aunt or uncle, or somebody whom we have not seen for several days, we must go see them today. So we go and have such an enjoyable time that we do not get to leave until late in the evening, and therefore do not get home in time to go to church for the evening service. I guess the church will get along all right anyway. I'll be there when the weather is too bad for me to go off, providing I'm not feeling too bad, and so it goes. And then we wonder why it is that our church does not prosper, and why our congregations are not larger. Church members, your church is just what you make it. I am saying this, not only for the members of St. Paul, but for the members of all other churches whose members are in the same boat. Friends, if God dealt with us as some of us deal with Him, I do not know where we would be.

I am proud to say that I have a good number who do stand by their pastor and the church. Our good Ladies' Aid society has been on the job, and has made several dollars this summer, and has paid off all indebtedness and has some money in treasury.

When we first came here we organized the young ladies into a society known as the Young Church Workers. They have been going ahead, and have raised several dollars. The same young ladies are also members of the Junior Philathea class. This class and the society came together and presented to the pastor money enough to buy his automobile license, both state and city license, which amounted to $14.50. We surely did appreciate the gift.

We held our third quarterly conference last Friday evening; most of the official members were present. Brother Willard H. Wade was elected as delegate to the next Annual Conference.

While our Sunday school is not what it ought to be, yet it is very good, and the outlook for the future is encouraging. The young men's Bible class is increasing in attendance, and the young ladies' class is also improving. Other classes are about holding their own. The Christian Endeavor societies are also encouraging. The midweek prayer meetings are interesting and inspiring.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is to meet on Tuesday evening of this week with Brother and Sister J. S. Wade. We are hoping for a full attendance.

We ask an interest in the prayers of all the readers of the Herald.

T. E. Pierce, Pastor.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit.—Our Children's Day last Sunday proved to be a great success. We owe much to Mrs. Snotherly for training the children as she did. Each child carried out its part with great care. After this Rev. Mr. Braswell made us an interesting speech.

Our pastor was about ten minutes raising money for a singing school Sunday. In this limited amount of time he succeeded in getting about $47. This singing school will begin the 23d of July and will continue ten days.

The revival meeting will begin the first night of August, and no day services will be held until the first Sunday, all-day service and dinner on the ground. Rev. Mr. Trogdon from Denton will help in this meeting and Mr. Edward Ridge will have charge of the choir.

The next quarterly meeting will be held Saturday at Porter church. Reporter.

Mecklenburg Charge.—Some preachers started out to make their sermons with a pencil and walk to church to preach them, but they found that they could not make any headway; so they bought a typewriter and purchased a Tin Lizzie and still they are lacking. If those poor preachers ever bring these dancing, card-playing, frizzly-top society dames to the Lamb of God they will have to have a Rotospeed and an airplane. For the pastor says, "Head them!" Class Leader says, "They are already headed." The preacher says, "Stop them." The Sunday school superintendent says, "I haven't any stopper!" Minister says, "Turn them!" The Official Board says, "They are already turned inside out!"

Brother J. W. Quick will be the pulpit help at Antioch church, and Brother J. T. Sisk at Beulah church, Brother A. Ridge at Stallings church, Brother J. S. Riddle at Zoar church. The meeting will begin at Zoar church the fifth Sunday in July.

I am glad to say that Dr. A. G. Dixon will be with us at Antioch Camp meeting the second Sunday in August.

The third quarterly conference will convene at Beulah church on Saturday before the fifth Sunday at two o'clock, July 28.

Bellemont, Mt. Hermon Circuit.—I guess the readers of the Herald think we are dead or sleeping, but we are not. Our reporter, Miss May Thomas, married and moved away and no one had been appointed to take her place. Brother Lindley asked me if I would serve as reporter during my summer vacation. I said yes, first, because it seems like going to an old home where someone is always waiting to welcome you. Second, our church is as wide awake as an average Methodist Protestant church, and you should know what we are doing.

Our Children's Day exercise was given last Sunday night. The children performed their part splendidly. Mrs. W. J. Smith and Mrs. Charlie Sharpe deserve the honor for training them. There were two features in the program which deserve special mention: they were an address on "American Ideals," by Mr. Giles Nicholson, one of our Sunday school boys, and a pageant representing the need of missionary work in foreign fields. The offering amounted to $25.30.

Mr. Fletcher Williams, of Burlington, spoke to us Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour in behalf of the College campaign. We were glad to have him and feel sure that his talk will arouse the interest of our people.

"A little child shall lead them." This is a true statement and you would realize it, too, if you could see how much the appearance of our church has been improved by a beautiful carpet which was bought and paid for by the Junior Christian Endeavor society. If all the church members were as willing to lend a helping hand as the children we would never have any trouble in securing church funds.

Our community has been made sad by the death of Mr. Isaac Sharpe's wife, one of our faithful members, and Mr. Henry Buckner Mrs. Sharpe was a good woman and always loyal to her God and church. She attended church services as long as her health would permit. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and children. Mr. Buckner was not a member of our church, but he was as loyal to our church as any of our members. He too will be missed.

Rockingham Circuit.—Sunday morning we opend our new church doors for Sunday school, and also held our Junior Christian Endeavor in it Sunday afternoon. The building is fine and when completed will meet the needs of the people in every way. The church has made wonderful progress. The best of all, we have paid our bills as we built. However, we expect to fall short about $400. We had last Sunday 118 for Sunday school, and 225 for preaching services in the wing.

Since we have begun housekeeping the people have not forgotten their pastor and his wife. We have not had a pounding, because they don't ever stop here; every day we have received some gift for our table. We thank Mrs. Sam Covington for butter and honey almost daily; Mrs. D. E. McKinzie for snaps; Mrs. Dunn for potatoes; Mr. D. E. McKenzie, potatoes; Mr. J. W. Russell, ironing board, medicine cabinet and clothes cabinet. He about started us to housekeeping. Miss Annie Martin for a table; Mrs. Lassiter, $1 in cash; Mr. J. D. Jenkins, two chickens; Miss Pauline Phillips, one chicken. Mr. J. H. Collins, beans and cucumbers. Left at the parsonage—potatoes, beans, onions and jelly. At our country church we are indebted to Mrs. Ellen Ingold for eggs and butter. We sincerely thank you good people, and pray the Lord to bless you.

Now we just dare anyone to say Rockingham is the calf pasture any longer. Grazing is too good down here to be a calf always. We are growing daily.

We are pleased to report a splendid quarterly conference held at New Union last Saturday. We had preaching at 11 o'clock, after which the ladies of New Union served a most palatable dinner, not on the ground, but in the church. The quality of the dinner was fine and there was an abundance of it.

At one o'clock the conference opened for business. All the churches were represented except one. All reports were encouraging. Every church has a good Sunday school and reports on payment on pastor's salary, while not up to date by any means, were said to be good, with Charlotte leading in amount paid to date. On budget we are woefully behind. On canvassing the vote for delegate to Annual Conference Brother J. W. Rich was declared elected over Dr. Redding by a very small majority—a change of one vote would have resulted in a tie. Brother George A. Loflin delivered a truly eloquent address in making his report as a local preacher. His description of a marriage at which he officiated at his home on Deep River late one evening while a mocking bird sang sweetly in a tree nearby and with a whip-poor-will pronouncing the benediction was beautiful. We asked him to write it up for publication, but we don't believe Brother Loflin can ever say it again as he did at Union Grove. Rev. W. F. McDowell made an interesting and inspirational talk on the appearance of new life in Union Grove church and Brother John M. Trogdon encouraged us by a report from Browers in which he said that Browers was stronger financially than in the past. Altogether the conference was very pleasant and encouraging. The good women of Union Grove enjoyed serving the dinner just as much as we enjoyed eating it and that is saying enough, we are sure.

Asheboro, July 2.

First Church, Thomasville.—It is a great pleasure to us to read the different reports from the churches all over the land. These reports are like letters from home; you know we love to hear from home.

Our Sunday school was rather small today; only 193 present, but splendid interest shown. Brother Troxler preached an able sermon, after which communion service was administered.

Christian Endeavor society met at seven o'clock with much interest shown. Preaching service at eight o'clock from the text, Judges 16:2; subject, "Samson's Strength and How He Lost It." His besetting sin was his moral weakness. The saddest of all things is that too many church members are caught with their heads in Delila's lap. Pray for the church that we may get away from this moral weakness and rise to a higher plane of Christian living, so that God can use us to win sinners and lead them into the fold, and keep them there with the necessary spiritual food.

Yours for Christ, Reporter.

Fairfield, Guilford Circuit.—Our Sunday school has improved somewhat for the last few months. When the second quarter's report was read there was an average attendance of 62, there being 97 on roll. There were 72 present last Sunday at Sunday school.

Collection was taken up for the Children's Home which amounted to $1.21. Bro. Bowman filled his regular appointment at the regular hour. His text was Gal. 6:7—"Be not deceived: God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Mrs. Dixon of Greensboro will be at our church next Sunday to lecture on missionary work which we believe will prove interesting and profitable.

Our revival meeting begins the 3rd Sunday in this month. We are holding special prayer services for this meeting and much interest is being taken in these services.

May we hope that the people of this community will be much benefited by the coming revival.

Ethel Modlin, Reporter.

High Point.—With appropriate and impressive ceremonies the corner-stone of the new church was laid last Thursday afternoon, June 28, and that day will mark an epoch in the history of the church in High Point. A large number of the ministers attending Summer Conference, several friends from Asheboro, Greensboro and other nearby towns, were present, besides members of our own congregation. It is very unfortunate that the event was not more widely advertised and more generally known by our own members and the people of the city generally.

The exercises were held at 4:30 o'clock P. M. with the pastor, Dr. Brown, presiding. The ritual for the ceremonies was read by Dr. Brown assisted by Dr. C. L. Whitaker of Lexington, a former pastor, Dr. T. M. Johnson and Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, a brother of Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, the founder of this church, who has been translated to the better land. A very impressive prayer was made by Dr. R. M. Andrews, and a beautiful address was fittingly delivered by President A. G. Dixon, who was pastor of the church for a period of nine years. He laid special emphasis on the potent influence for good which the church of the living God wields on a community, and stressed the power of this particular church in the upbuilding and advancement of our fair city. When Dr. Braxton Craven, the beloved and lamented president of old Trinity College, wrote the charter of High Point in 1859, he had the great good sense and wise foresight to embody in that charter that the saloon shall be forever illegal, and praise God, our city has never been disgraced and besmirched by the presence of a legalized barroom from that day to the present.

The corner-stone is of white marble, and was placed in the northwest corner of the building, bearing this inscription:

"First Methodist Protestant Church,
"Established 1895
"Erected 1923."

In this stone were placed the following documents: a copy of the Methodist Protestant by Captain A. M. Rankin, Methodist Recorder by Miss Lou Pickett, a charter member; Methodist Protestant Herald, by Mrs. R. T. Pickens, who is reporter for it; High Point Enterprise by Mr. Geo. T. Penny; Woman's Missionary Record, by Mrs. Minnie Pickett Hardell; Church Discipline, by Dr. Dixon; Minutes of the last Annual Conference, by Rev. C. W. Bates; and the Bible by Dr. Brown; lists of the names of the 14 charter members of the church, all present members of the church, all officers and members of the Sunday school, including the Cradle Roll, the names of the officers of the different organizations of the church, Ladies' Aid society, trustees, stewards, class-leaders, Christian Endeavor society, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Woman's Home Missionary Society, Mission Band and Sunshine Circle, were also deposited in the corner-stone. A short sketch of the Sunday school, which was organized October 20, 1895, was also included and it is very interesting to note that there have been only four superintendents in its history, Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, Mr. June Gray, Mr. A. M. Idol, who held the post 15 years, and the present capable and efficient superintendent, Mr. R. H. Shaw, Jr.

During this period the church has enjoyed the ministry of seven pastors, Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk, Rev. W. R. Porter, Rev. J. S. Williams, Dr. C. L. Whitaker, Rev. J. D. Williams, Dr. A. G. Dixon, and Dr. Geo. R. Brown.

It is hoped that the new building will be completed about December 1.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.—Our pastor missed preaching at Piney Grove the third Sunday on account of holding a tent-meeting near Cid where much good was accomplished. There were 41 conversions.

Brother Riddle preached for us Sunday evening and delivered us another one of his good sermons. Several of the Cid people were to worship with us Sunday; very glad indeed to have them with us, for they seemed to be enjoying religion. All come again.

Our special meeting at Piney Grove will begin the first Sunday in August. We ask all the Christian people to pray for us that we may have an out-pouring of the Holy Spirit.

Our president, Brother A. G. Dixon, is to preach for us at Piney Grove the third Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Hope there will be a good attendance.

There will be prayer meeting at Piney Grove next Sunday night. Hope people, young and old, will take an interest and come out.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers, Reporter.

PETER VISITS THE LAND OF LOST PLAYTHINGS.

‘‘Mamma,’’ called Peter, pressing his stubby little nose against the meshes of the screen door, ‘‘have you seen my rake?’’

‘‘Why, no, Peter,’’ answered his mother, looking up from her ironing, ‘‘not since you had it in the garden yesterday.’’

‘‘I looked in the garden, but it isn't there,’’ said Peter, wrinkling his eyes as he searched the grass in the back yard.

‘‘Perhaps you had better look again,’’ suggested his mother. ‘‘Little eyes don't always find things the first time they look. But oh, Peter,’’ she begged, ‘‘if only you would take care of your playthings you would know sometimes where to look for them!’’

Peter pretended not to listen. He went whistling—or making a brave attempt at whistling—down the path to the garden. For a moment or two he hunted diligently among the squashes and rows of corn for the lost rake, but the sun was hot, and the bees were droning lazily, and a soft little breeze was sleepily moving the leaves on the climbing beans. along the fence grew a row of hollyhocks, with flaming blossoms. Beneath them there was shade, and the ground looked cool and inviting. Peter forgot how much he had wanted to rake the grass around the soldier tent his grandma had sent him. He just dropped down in the shade and forgot everything. Suddenly he started up and clutched at the air with both hands. ‘‘Here! Come back here!’’ he cried. Then he stared in open-eyed open-mouthed wonder. He had seen his rake pass through the air right before his very face—pass and be gone! He rubbed his eyes in bewilderment. Surely he was dreaming, but—he never completed his thought, for coming toward him from the direction of the onion bed was his new hoe. It was traveling at a rapid rate, but Peter crouched and waited till it was passing over him. Then he gave a spring. He caught the hoe by the handle, but, to his utter surprise, instead of falling with it to the ground, he felt himself being lifted gently, very gently, through the air.

Peter was frightened, but he dared not let go his hold on the hoe handle. He wondered where in the world he was going and how he would ever get home. Finally he began to cry, very softly so no one would know, for Peter was a boy and, of course, shouldn't cry. But, though Peter was sure the only noise was the ripple of tears over his eyelids, some one did hear. A tiny silver thread of a voice spoke in his ear: ‘‘Don't cry, Peter, you will not be harmed; we are merely taking you to the Land of Lost Playthings.’’

Peter looked all around, but he could see no one, only a bright-faced hollyhock which had been broken off by his flight. Still the tiny voice had reassured him. He stopped his crying and waited breathless for the journey to end. The wind began to blow. His eyes filled with sand. Peter forgot and let go the hoe handle to which he had clung so desperately. He just had to rub his eyes! When he opened them at last, free from dust, he found himself in an immense house, make up of tiny rooms. each one labeled with a child's name. He read Emily Huston—that was the little girl who sat opposite him at school—Jolly Wakefield—Jolly lived next door to him—Kathryn Green—she was his cousin—and ever and ever so many more.

Peter walked up one hallway and down another, reading the names on the doors. Finally he stopped before the name, ‘‘Peter Hanes.’’ Since that was evidently his room he boldly pushed open the door and went in. And what do you suppose he saw? Why, there, ranged around the room, talking together, were all the playthings he ever had lost! The hoe, which had evidently just arrived, was talking with the rake. The top he had lost the day before was dancing with the ball of twine that had slipped through a hole in his pocket that very morning. Three jackknives were jumping up and down in the soft earth, playing some sort of a game. Several books were fanning themselves with their leaves. All seemed very happy and contented. They never noticed Peter at all.

For several minutes Peter stood watching his lost playthings, talking together, playing so happily with each other. It made him angry to see them thus enjoying themselves. He stood it as long as he could. Then he stepped forward, right into their midst. ‘‘Stop!’’ he cried excitedly. ‘‘You bad, naughty playthings! What right have you to run away off here and have a good time without me? Come here with me this instant!’’

There was a sudden rush, and Peter was shoved and pushed out of the room, down the hallway, and out the door. A dozen voices shouted in his ears: ‘‘Leave us alone, you careless, thoughtless, forgetful boy! You didn't take care of us! You let us get torn and rusty and water-soaked! You didn't treat us right! Now you can get along without us! We're happy here!’’

Peter felt that he was falling. He threw out an arm and caught whatever his hand touched. It proved to be the rake handle. Down, down, down he fell—thump!

Peter sat up and rubbed his eyes. He was sitting on the rake handle in the dry ditch. ‘‘Huh!’’ he said, ‘‘I must have gone to sleep under the hollyhocks and rolled down the bank into the ditch—and right on top of my rake. Oh, I remember, I had it here yesterday cleaning the leaves out so the water would run well when daddy turned it in.’’ He eyed the rake dubiously. ‘‘That was a funny adventure I had,’’ he said half aloud. ‘‘I wonder if the rake came back from the land of lost playthings to remind me to take better care of my toys and books hereafter. I think I'll try, anyway. I don't like to feel that the things given me to make me happy are only happy when I'm not around. Come on, rake,’’ he said, starting for the shed, ‘‘I'm going to make a rack for you tools right now so I can put you there and you won't get lost. I'm not going to let any more things go to the Land of Lost Playthings.’’—Margaret A. Bartlett, in The Baptist.

Routh.

Miss lsie Routh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Routh, of Randleman, was laid to rest today in the cemetery at Bethany church. Elsie joined the church in August, 1912, under the ministry of Rev. J. B. O'Brian, and has lived a Christian life. She told her people to meet her in that good land and went home singing.

Miss Elsie would have been in a few days a bride. I am sorry for the young man who had looked forward to the time when he should be her happy husband. It just seemed that he could not give her up. Oh, how sad!

There was a large congregation, more than the house would hold, to pay their respects to this noble Christian woman. She had lived about 23 years and lived them so well that we regret her going, but we shall see her again.

ANNUAL SPAINHOUR REUNION.

The first Sunday in August is set for the reunion to be at Pinnacle, and in the M. E. Church. We hope that the members of the church, choosing to have it there, will send out a formal invitation to all to come.

The urging is to have it in the church where there is an organ and a large, well shaded grove to serve. I have word from some of those interested, and all urge to try to manage as I think best. This will reach the Pinnacle relatives and friends before I will get to see them in person.

I suggest that the secretary B. A. Spainhour serve for the coming occasion, and he has suggested that I make this first move. Also, he agrees with me to suggest that our relative, Rev. John R. Spainhour, who is now a traveling preacher, come and serve in the opening exercises—to begin at about 11 o'clock. We ask for the full basket service, a "table dinner", soon after 12 o'clock.

We hope for many of the relatives at a distance to come, and that numbers of them will have some good things to tell us.

W. F. Grabs.

THE UNEXPECTED.

I stood on the porch at midday,
"As the clock was striking the hour,"
And old Sol had climbed to the nineties
In the cool and shady bower.

And up there drove an auto,
From the land of the rising sun;
And out they began to tumble,
And in they began to run.

There was flour and lard and sugar,
And cereal goods galore;
And "things too numerous to mention",
From mil land shop and store.

You ask me where it came from—
It came from the land of Vance,
With Henderson its city,
And the pastor's name perchance—

It's sometimes written Pritchard—
And so it is to-day—
And he and his good people
Have "pounded" a "vet"—Hurrah!

But seriously, we wish to thank Bro. Pritchard and his people, and a few others from about Asheboro, for quite a generous "pounding." So we make our politest bow, and most grateful acknowledgment to all concerned.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON—JULY 8.

Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

Lesson Text: Luke 2:41-52.

Golden Text: Matt. 1:21.

The Central Truth: To have been the mother of Jesus was a great honor; to be a true disciple of Jesus is a still greater honor.

Scriptural Points.

1. The entire biography of Mary, the mother of Jesus, comprises the following facts: 1. She was the subject of prophecy. See Isa. 7:14, 2. The angel Gabriel informed her that she would become the mother of the promised Messiah; 3. She paid a visit to her cousin Elizabeth; 4. She spoke a beautiful poem of praise called the Magnificat; 5. She gave birth to the infant Jesus in a manger at Bethlehem; 6. She received the wise men and the shepherds who came to do homage to the new-born Savior; 7. She presented the Child to the priests in the temple, where Simon and Anna spoke words of prophecy concerning Him; 8. With Joseph she fled with the Child into Egypt and after some time returned to Nazareth; 9. She took Jesus at twelve years of age to the Passover at Jerusalem when He was left behind in the hasty return; 10. She attended with Jesus a marriage at Cana of Galilee; 11. She visited Jesus and asked for an interview during one of his discourses; 12. She was assigned by Jesus to make her home with John the beloved disciple; and 13. She met with the disciples in the large upper room to pray for Pentecost.

2. All men and boys above twelve years of age were required to attend the Passover. The women might attend if they chose to do so. The fact that Mary attended of her own free will was evidence that she was a deeply pious woman. This was no doubt Jesus' first visit to Jerusalem and the temple worship. It was a great event in His life.

3. His being left behind was more or less an unavoidable accident. It cannot be said that it was due to disobedience on His part. Nor were the parents to be blamed for wilful neglect. In the rush of preparations to get away it was supposed that Jesus was in the company from Nazareth, when in fact He had already gone to the temple.

4. At the close of the first day's journey the parents were greatly distressed to learn that the boy Jesus was not in the company. It was the third day before He was found in the temple; likely the last place they would expect to find Him.

5. There is a tone of complaint and rebuke in the mother's question, "Why hast thou thus dealt with us?" In His reply He assured her that she need not to have worried about Him. She might always expect to find Him at His Father's house, or attending to His Father's business. Nor could He be lost or face the least harm, under His Father's watchful care. The parents' anxiety and distress were plainly due to a lack of trust in God.

6. At this early age the great Teacher was laying the foundations of His Gospel ministry He was storing up in His mind and heart the precious truths that afterward fell from His lips. He had made such progress that even the doctors of the law were astonished at His knowledge of the Holy Scriptures.

7. The recorded fact that Jesus was a model of obedience to His parents is sufficient proof that He was not the least to blame for staying behind. He at once went back with them to Nazareth, however much He might have desired to spend the rest of His boyhood days in the temple, as Samuel did.

8. The development of Jesus was normal. The growth of mind and soul kept pace with that of the body. His was a strong healthy body, a well-informed mind, and a pure, upright soul.

Practical Thoughts.

1. The habit of church attendance will prevent the formation of many other habits that might be more or less hurtful. Besides it is a habit that is indispensable to the building of the strongest and best character.

2. The church is the divinely appointed sphere for the dissemination of the truth of God. "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Every one is expected to be either a teacher or a learner of truth at the house of God.

3. To lose Jesus out of your heart and life is a stupendous calamity. Many do lose Him, however, by neglect of the means of grace, by forgetfulness of privilege and duty, and by the commission of secret and open sins.

4. The presence of the Master in daily walk and life is the guarantee of safety, progress, happiness, and highest usefulness. To attempt the pilgrim's life without Jesus will result in failure every time.

5. To find the lost Savior demands the diligent search of earnest prayer and the exercise of the genuine sorrow of repentance. If you seek Him sorrowing, you will surely find Him.

6. The heavenly Father's business of holy living and Christian service is the only business worthy the name. There is one vocation, that of the Christian life! all other callings or occupations are avocations.

7. Jesus is subject to the exercise of an overcoming faith. He is never apart from those who trust and love Him. In His abiding presence there is "joy unspeakable and full of glory."—The Word of Life.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON—JULY 15.

Simon Peter.

Golden Text: John 21:17.

The Central Truth: Lip-service is good, but heart-service is better. He loves most and loves best, who tenderly cares for the lambs of Jesus.

Scriptural Points.

1. For nearly three years the twelve had been under the training of the wisest and best of teachers. Jesus had spared no pains to instill into their minds the great principles of the kingdom, and to set forth the majesty, the authority, the power, and the kindliness of His own personality. The time had arrived for the first examination in the best school of theology the world ever saw. Just two questions in this examination.

2. To the first question, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" there was —The movement of population out of Turkey brings to mind the movement of the Acadians by the English in 1775 because they would not take the oath of allegiance to England. Nearly 7,000 people were forced to move out. That was about half the population of the entire peninsula of Acadia (now Nova Scotia). The French Acadians were allowed one last chance to take the oath of allegiance to the English. Inspired by their priests, they once more deliberately refused. Their houses, land and cattle were confiscated. They then were packed aboard transports and unloaded as paupers at various English settlements along the coast. It was of this exile that Longfellow wrote in "Evangeline." The exiles suffered great hardships. Some found their way to Louisiana. Later a small number returned to Acadia.

A SHOCKING DEATH.

Last week we printed from the Thomasville Times a note concerning Brother R. Otho Stone, a ministerial student in Western Maryland College. He would soon have been graduated with honor, and many in North Carolina were looking forward with bright hope to his work in the ministry as a member of our Conference.

But this (Tuesday) morning's paper brings the sad and shocking intelligence that Brother Stone has been suddenly taken by the hand of death. How very sad this is! And how mysterious! After years of earnest preparation for the great work of a Christian minister, just as he is on the point of entering upon that work, to which he felt God had called him. the summons comes and he is transferred to the future life. But who can say that his years of preparation were wasted? Surely they were not wasted. He begins life there better prepared because he labored to prepare for life here.

We have been in his home, and can imagine the depressing effect of the strange sad news as it falls upon the ears of father and mother. May God sustain them in this trying hour!

LINCOLN MEMORIAL UNIVERSITY.

This unique memorial to Lincoln is located in the mountains at Harrogate, near Cumberland Gap, Tennessee. The school was founded twenty-five years ago to help the mountain people of the South to get an education. It is co-educational and non-sectarian. The first building was christened Grant-Lee Hall, and the colors adopted were blue and gray. From this small beginning a fairly large college has grown. Last year there were 700 students. More than half of them earned all or part of their expenses. This can be done by working on the farm, or in the laundry, or in other industries connected with the school. The expenses of a student for a year are only about $250, but even that is hard for some of the mountaineers to raise. Since 1911 the university has been open nearly all the time. The school year has four terms of twelve weeks each, thus making it possible to complete four years' work in three. Some of the students are middle-aged persons who seek the education denied them when they were boys and girls. Some have such a struggle to make ends meet that they go for months at a time without any spending money. Most of them are living examples of "Where there's a will there's a way."—Current Events.

QUESTIONS ON RECENT SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS.

1. In lesson for fourth Sunday in February, ten servants received ten pounds, but only three are spoken of as giving account. What about the other seven?

It is to be inferred that all rendered accounts. Three are selected to teach the lesson to be gained from the parable.

2. Luke in describing the crucifixion of our Savior says one of the malefactors crucified with him railed on him. Matthew says "the thieves which were crucified with him cast the same in his teeth."

A common way of reconciling the accounts is to say that both thieves at first reviled Jesus, but later one of them changed his attitude and became a respectful petitioner. But it seems probable that both Matthew and Luke reported what they had heard said by creditable eye-witnesses who differed in this one detail in their accounts of what happened.

Courts of justice find that honest witnesses of the same occurrence often differ about some details. Indeed when witnesses coincide in every detail, there is suspicion of collusion and dishonesty. The variations in the Gospel narratives, rightly considered, add to rather than detract from the force of their combined testimony.

3. How was Jesus three days and three nights in the heart of the earth if He was buried on Friday and rose on Sunday?

The common explanation is that a then current expression for any length of time added one day to the true number. The hearer, knowing the rule, subtracted the added day and reached the true number. Thus, three days and nights meant two, ten meant nine, etc. There seems to have been a lack of uniformity in stating the length of intervals of time. Matthew and Mark in referring to the transfiguration of Jesus said it ocurrred six days after a certain discourse whereas Luke says it occurred about eight days after that discourse. These variations, while a little puzzling, should not disturb any one's faith in the correctness of the narrative on essential points. They show that the witnesses are independent of each other and thus give us the advantage of two or three witnesses instead of one only.

CHURCH UNION: REMARKS IN CLOSING.

By Rev. L. K. Long.

A prominent church-man has recently said: "Almost every individual Christian leader is now ready to admit that our system of competing denominations is entirely out of harmony with the spirit of Jesus and the spirit of recent progress and is daily becoming more intolerable. We all magnify the spirit of co-operation and write singularly beautiful resolutions about the unity and the union of the churches, but when it comes to action we are not willing to lose our denominational identity nor to let our little denominational rush lights be swallowed up in the glory of the united church of Jesus Christ."

Evidently the church is in a state of disturbance and transition. There is bound to be some distress with the inevitable changes, but I am hopeful that a stronger, purer and more effective church will emerge. It is our privilege and obligation to assist in the adjustments that are to be made. We want to see the banner of the united church take the place of the now almost meaningless denominational banners, and to that end I am making a few suggestions.

In the first place everyone should gladly cherish all the fine feelings of fellowship which have been developing in recent years. Christians everywhere are brethren. Let brotherly love continue and increase. Christians in the main like to work together. Let the co-operative enterprises in which the churches are engaged go on and multiply more and more.

It is well to keep in mind the expensiveness of unnecessary denominational duplications—church buildings, schools and universities, publishing houses, missionary societies—all of which require much extra expenditure of men and money. Will the people of Christ be permanently reconciled to these conditions in the face of so many unanswered calls for needed service at home and abroad?

The delightful and broadening experiences of the larger and finer fellowship need to be emphasized frequently. Those of us who remember the earlier times of the Christian Endeavor movement, when the young people of all the denominations were together in the soul-inspiring local and international conventions, will always sacredly cherish the memories of those days. Our hearts were enlarged, and we saw thousands of others made into broader and sweeter-spirited followers of our common Lord.

It will not be out of place to keep an eye on the General Staff. Denominational officials, however good and well-intentioned they may be, are under a very real temptation to administer affairs with some reference to keeping themselves in office, and to magnify the importance—not to say the indispensableness—of their services to the churches and the kingdom. It is possible for them to thwart the real desires of the people.

Reforms and the beginnings of progress are apt to originate near the ground. God has always had much to do with the common people. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast thou perfected praise." The desires and aspirations of the rank and file of Christians should be taken into consideration. Can any one doubt their dissatisfaction with the present situation and their hope for something better? Let each one aid in voicing the will of the people.

Thoughtful men everywhere are realizing that in order to save civilization there must be developed a human brotherhood which will overleap the boundaries of nationality and race. The church of Christ must have an important part in this work. Shall the churches go at it slowly and half-heartedly? Peace and union among Christ's people will be the forerunners of universal peace and good-will among men.

We are not contemplating the unifying of the church into a great world organization which shall dictate policies and order uniformity of belief and practice, with power to enforce obedience. This system has been tried with disastrous results—"Never again." It is not necessary that each state or nation express its church and Christian life by the same method. Variety and freedom are both desirable and possible.

Inclusiveness rather than exclusiveness, co-operation instead of competition, freedom of investigation and thought in the place of uniformity and repression—these will insure the right measure of personal liberty and leave the way open for the new light God is continually causing to break forth from His holy Word, and for the change and progress that are the manifestations of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit in the church.

I can not keep out of my mind the fact that there are many communities in the sparsely settled regions of our country which have never had, and see no prospects of ever having anything like adequate religious services. Churches have been started in some of them and given up. Erratic preachers without education have held forth for a time. Eccentricities of teaching and practice have been indulged in. The children have had no religious training worthy of the name. These are purely missionary opportunities. If we attacked such a proposition in India or China we would send educated people to found a school, to develop material for a church and to train native workers. In our own land if a responsible denomination sends a trained worker to such a field expecting to stand by him while he establishes a work he encounters not only the prejudices and divisions on the ground but also the possibility that a rival work may be started from the outside at any time. There are hundreds and hundreds of such communities all over the country—east, west, north and south. The development of these fields waits the arrival of the united church with a broadminded program of religious work in rural and frontier America.

Let us not be discouraged even if objections are made to such suggestions as the fore-going, or when we do not accomplish at once the thing we are seeking to do. "This kind goeth not out but by fasting and prayer." Union with the mind of Christ, a good spirit toward our fellow-Christians, confidence in the readiness and ability of God's people to learn and to do His will—possession of these dispositions and qualities will enable us to help speed the day when there shall be "one fold, one shepherd."

A RESOLUTION.

On page 58 of the minutes of the North Carolina Annual Conference, held in Greensboro in 1918, appears the following resolution:

Resolved: That this Conference goes on record as believing in the inerrancy of the teachings of the Bible, and that it condemns the publication in our church papers of any of those things which conflict with the same.

Will some one be so kind as to tell us whether this resolution applies to the controversy now being carried on in the columns of The Herald, and, if it does, who has the authority to enforce it? George R. Brown.

Last week we reported two quilts from Mrs. J. W. Cartner, Bethel, Mocksville charge. It should have been reported from the Ladies' Aid.

A quantity of bread and cake from the O'Brien Bakery, High Point, was most acceptable last week.

Our Rally for the Seventh District was held in Pleasant Grove church last Saturday and Sunday. The principal speakers were Rev. A. G. Dixon, president of the North Carolina Conference; Rev. C. L. Whitaker, a former president; and Rev. Lawrence Little, our secretary for the young people's work. Those absent on Saturday missed a great treat, as the program discussed was of vital importance to our people. Each speaker handled his subject in a most pleasing and convincing manner.

Dr. Dixon filled the pulpit Sunday morning and the afternon was devoted to the interest of our College. After a number had spoken Dr. Dixon closed the discussion with a strong appeal.

This church has already accepted its quota but is going over the top.

We have had the assurance that English Street will go over its quota.

We are going to hear a good report from North Davidson. Let our people in the Seventh District get busy and raise the full quota and much more. We can do it if we will. Will we? H. A. Garrett.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

OUR SLOGAN:—As Faithful in Service for Christ as for Self.

OUR AIM:—1. A Family Altar in Every Methodist Protestant Home.

2. The Church Paper in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
3. A Revival in Every Church With a Worthy Increase in Members.
4. Every Member a Contributing Member.
5. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
6. The Full $300,000 Subscribed for the College by June 1, 1923.

OUR MOTTO:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all our workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

Saturday and Sunday, April 14 and 15, were spent in the district meeting at Friendship church, Haw River charge.

Saturday was a cold, rainy day, but the people came out well, and the services were very helpful. This proved to be one of the very best rallies we have held so far. All the charges in the district were represented in the meetings except Flat Rock and St. Paul. Reidsville, West End, every church on Haw River, and Draper were well represented.

Rev. R. C. Stubbins and Rev. N. M. Harrison and Mr. F. R. Stout made very helpful addresses on Saturday. Then on Sunday afternoon Rev. J. D. Williams made one of the strongest and most striking addresses I have ever heard on the subject, "The Proper Placement of the Accent." I wish our people of the entire conference could hear it. Rev. L. C. Little and I were on hand to speak when necessary and to backstand the others. Several interesting talks were made on our College, and Brother Lowdermilk thought these would be very helpful to him in raising the quota on his charge.

That Test.

Through an error somewhere question No. 7 was omitted from last week's Herald. So I have decided to repeat the questions this week, and to ask each pastor to note very carefully and report on Monday, April 30, or within the next two days.

Pastor's Report for Second Quarter.

1. Have you held a revival this year and with what results?
2. How many members have you received since conference?
3. What are the prospects for a revival at each of your churches?
4. How many pastoral visits have you made since conference? (If you have not kept a record, give estimate.)
5. Where there is a Ladies' Aid society please give name and address of the president?
6. What percentage has been paid on pastor's salary to April 30?
7. What percentage has been paid on the annual conference budget to April 30?
8. What percentage has been paid on the General Conference budget to April 30?

Please answer the last three questions as nearly exact as possible; for I wish to use the figures in preparing a chart for the Pastors' Summer Conference. Please make this report on April 30 if possible; if not then just as early as possible thereafter.

Our Rallies.

These Rallies are reaching and helping a great many of our people. We are anxious for all the pastors, official members, and Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers to be in them.

April 28 and 29 Dr. R. M. Andrews, Rev. C. W. Bates, Rev. L. C. Little and I will be at Democrat to meet the people of Asheville, Weaverville and Democrat charges, and we are expecting a large number of them to meet in the Democrat church at 10:30 A. M. on Saturday, April 28.

May 5 and 6.

The first Saturday and Sunday in May we meet the people of Asheboro, Richland, Why Not, Randleman, Davidson, Denton and Uwharrie charges in the Asheboro church. We are expecting a great meeting here.

Other Rallies.

May 12 and 13 will be given to the Tenth District, embracing Charlotte, Concord, Midland, Mecklenburg, Roberta, Rockingham and Pageland. I am asking Brother Curry to announce place of meeting.

Yours in His service, A. G. Dixon.

A CREED OF LOYALTY.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go up into the house of the Lord."

1. It is my church. I wish to acknowledge obligation. There are other churches, bigger and better equipped, with better preachers, perhaps; but this is my church, either by a priceless inheritance, or by voluntary choice: this is my church. I would not endure mean and unkind criticism of my friends or family, neither will I countenance cynical criticism of my church. Loyalty is the first word in my church creed.

2. It is my church. I believe in it. There are people who assert with pious pretense that all churches are good, and that they are not particular which one they attend, for all are aiming at the same blessed Heaven. All churches are good, usually; however, such talk is just talk. The man who says one church is as good as another attends and supports no church. While I love all churches, and all Christians, and will fellowship with them, still I believe in and love my church.

3. It is my church. It needs my money. I intend to support it. You can not run a flour mill without wheat; neither can you operate a church without money. The Gospel, like the water of the great rivers beside which I live, is free, but it takes money to bring it to the people that need it. I would be ashamed to have others support my home or my family, or to deny them the best I can give; and I would be ashamed to give less than the best I have to my church.

4. It is my church. It needs me; it needs me more than it needs my money. I would not think of allowing my family, without explanation, to miss me from my table; neither will I allow my church to miss me from my appointed place. The church can not live and thrive and hold its head if I neglect the regular services for worship. To absent myself from my church is to prove a traitor to my own trust, and to strike the church I love the most unkind blow I can strike.

5. It is my church. I must pray and work for its success. I would be untrue to my business interests if I stood off to see what others would do, or waited to see if they would succeed. The church can not build upon dreams, or idleness, or on the past. The church needs new life.

INTERESTING FACTS IN BRIEF CONCERNING DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS.

Fifty percent of the pupils enrolled in daily vacation Bible schools last year were brought into contact with the spirit and teachings of Jesus for the first time through their attendance upon a D. V. B. S.

The average cost of the daily vacation Bible schools which reported this figure to the headquarters of the International Association was $143.41. Generally two hundred and fifty dollars is the minimum cost of a school where all teachers are paid.

The cost per pupil in an average daily vacation Bible school last season was $1.12.

The First Christian Church of Oklahoma City has a fine equipment for religious education. Its director says his daily vacation Bible school is the "only real school I have in my church," and his methods for this school are as thorough as those of the public schools.

The Colorado Sunday School Council of Religious Education has a most progressive program for daily vacation Bible schools. The denominations are very active, schools will also be organized in some of the mining camps.

"The Christian Center" at Pueblo, Colorado, which is now a mission church and Sunday school (Baptist) was started about five years ago as a daily vacation Bible school. The work at this center is in Spanish and several hundred people have been won to the Christian life through its activities. More and more the denominations are using the daily vacation Bible schools as an effective missionary agency.

Plans are being made for extensive promotion of daily vacation Bible schools throughout the Southern states.

Half a million children, of the twenty million in the United States who are of school age, were enrolled in daily vacation Bible schools, last season.

Kansas City, Missouri, has had several daily vacation Bible schools which were among the best ever conducted. Those in charge of the local work are now making plans for a larger extension of schools into the churches of the various denominations. All the churches and religious education forces are united in this new extension program.

Training classes for daily vacation Bible school teachers are now being conducted in territories as widely separated as New York City and Little Rock, Ark. In New York, the class is under the auspices of the Metropolitan Federation of Daily Vacation Bible schools which last year conducted 227 schools in and around the city. It is held during ten

Saturday mornings and will be followed by an intensive three-day conference preliminary to the opening of the schools. In Little Rock the training school is conducted at a Presbyterian mission church during the winter, followed by a special institute in April.

Texas is just organizing for aggressive promotion of daily vacation Bible schools. Dallas has formed a new committee and the other large cities will soon have the work under way.

One minister in commenting upon the value of the daily vacation Bible school, said that half of these received into his congregation Bible school.

In New Jersey the number of daily vacation Bible schools and week-day schools of religion has increased so greatly, that the State Sunday School Association and the International Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools have organized a joint committee for the promotion of week-day schools and daily vacation Bible schools and hired a full-time worker in the person of Rev. Herbert W. Blashfield.

In one city, the daily vacation Bible school proved to be the means for keeping alive a church which seemed doomed. Its people had moved away. The neighborhood was largely foreign and could not be induced to come into the church. Then a daily vacation Bible school was organized, solely on faith, since no one had the money to pay for it. The children came into the church. Their parents followed. They were delighted with the work and wanted to pay for it, and in addition to providing for the expenses of their own school, they sent to the International Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools in charge of the work in the area, a substantial contribution, so that there might be another school some place else where it was needed. Since then the church has grown and flourished. The daily vacation Bible school opened the way.

READING THE BIBLE.

In the columns of "The British Weekly" some time ago, Professor David Smith replied to a young local preacher of the Methodist Church in England, who sought advice on the reading of the Bible.

The young man explained that he had read the Bible three times recently; that he had started with the first verse of Genesis and had methodically worked his way to the closing chapter of the Revelation of St. John. But in the end he found that he had gained very little either in intellectual or in spiritual values, and asked Professor Smith for his advice.

Professor Smith replied that the young man's "methodical" reading of the Bible was founded on a wrong premise; viz., that the Bible is one book. It is not. We often use the phrase, "The Book of books," to denote its supremacy, but we might also use the phrase in its literal sense. The Bible is indeed a book of "books"; various books, written at various times, by varying writers. Each book of the Bible must be studied as an entity, and in conjunction with this study, great help and inspiration will come if the student will gather up all possible material bearing on the life of the writer and the history of the time at which the book appeared.

So much for the method—of help only to those who read the Bible.

But is the Bible read? A more recent article in "The British Weekly" bears the title, "The Neglect of the Bible." A statement quoted from the report of a committee of educationalists on the teaching of English in England might well be applied to our own people and books: "At the present time the Bible is probably less widely read and less directly influential in our life and literature than it has been at any time since the Reformation."

The same report, in the section on "The Study of Literature," says: "Especially, the greatest translation in English, perhaps in any language, should be universally read, far more read than it is at present both in universities and schools. We refer, of course, to the Authorized Version of the Bible, which is among the greatest of English classics and has been the most influential of them all as well on English literature as on English life."

Can it be denied that the reading of the Bible has greatly influenced life and letters? And can it be denied that the reading of it has declined? The men on the committee from whose report the preceding passages are quoted were speaking of the Bible as a part of English literature—not as the Word of God. If educationalists find it necessary to emphasize the need for a greater use of the Bible in schools and colleges, and if they, from the literary point of view, regard is as an essential book, should we not follow this lead, and insist that the Bible should be given its legitimate place in the literature of this land, in our schools and in our homes?

There is no doubt of the need for a revival of Bible reading, and in an examination of causes or correctives Sir W. Robertson Nicoll makes three valuable suggestions.

First, he suggests that we need a "more attractive and readable" publication. Not only he, but many of us fail to see the attractiveness achieved by attempts to place the Bible in the smallest possible compass. He dislikes, it would appear, "thin paper, small type, double narrow columns, and the narrative chopped into chapters and verses." Those who disregard the fact that our Bible is a translation find it hard to believe that "chapter and verse" were unknown in the original Scriptures. The popularity of certain versions of the New Testament can be partly acounted for by their readable form. Why should the King James Version, which, after all, is the classic text, not be issued in a similar way?

Secondly, it is suggested that the most valuable books of the Bible might serve better if placed in young hands unencumbered by those portions of the Bible infrequently read. There are portions of the Scriptures almost unknown to many people, and portions which some read as a duty. Greater spiritual experience might result if the best spiritual value was included in a readable and attractive volume.

Finally, the editor gives advice similar to that which Professor Smith gave to the young local preacher. "What is needed," he says, "is more intelligent methods of teaching and reading it." The young preacher's method of reading the Bible was the way in which John Ruskin was forced to read it, when, as a boy, he read it, with assistance from his mother, from cover to cover.

There is one point that might be made. Our present Bible is too easily recognizable as "the Bible"! Would it not be an advantage if we had a Bible which was more like a book, in that strangers to the Word of God might unwittingly become interested in "The Life and Letters of St. Paul"? A book like any other book, good paper, good print; untruthful and misleading divisions entirely omitted; a good stout cover—why should a book like that not lie on our table, or on the library table, or in the waiting room? Many a book-lover would unconsciously become a Bible-lover—and the end would justify the means.

But, after all, the Bible is to be studied. One studies with diligence and care only the books one loves. Sir W. Robertson Nicoll strikes the fundamental chord when he concludes: "Until Christian people realize that they must give to God the service of their minds as well as of their hearts, and that a book like the Bible demands trouble-taking readers, they will never make their own the treasures which lie there and which only he who seeks finds."—Rev. Chares Parkin, in Zion's Herald.

Asheville.—Miss Annie L. Forrest spent last Sunday in Asheville and Weaverville. She was present at Bro. B. M. Williams' services in Weaverville at 11 A. M. She presented the work of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. She visited Bethel Home.

In the evening she addressed our congregation in Asheville. Everyone was deeply impressed by her message. Twelve new members were secureed for our local Woman's Missionary Society. We were all very glad to have her with us.

There was a good attendance at all services Sunday.

We are looking forward with much pleasure to the visits of Brothers Andrews, Dixon and Little for this week-end. A number of our people will attend the District Rally at Democrat next Saturday.

Yarborough.

Mrs. Evelina Rebecca Yarborough died at her home near Cross Anchor, S. C., early Monday morning, April 16, 1923. She was the wife of the late Daniel Yarborough and is survived by the following children: one daughter, Miss Lily Yarborough and five sons, John Yarborough, Hiram Yarborough, Lafayette Yarborough, Charles Yarborough and Lewis Yarborough; and several grandchildren, all of Cross Anchor; also one sister, Eliza A. Snead, of Davenport, Iowa.

She was a sincere Christian, having joined the church in her early girlhood.

She had been a great sufferer for a number of years, but through all her afflictions she was patient and cheerful, so appreciative of everything that was done for her.

Funeral services were held at the home, after which interment followed in the Yarborough Chapel cemetery, she having been a faithful member of Yarborough Chapel Methodist Protestant church for almost fifty years.

CHURCHES WHICH HAVE SUBSCRIBED QUOTAS.

Lebanon, Mt. Carmel and Yadkin College churches, Julian and Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson charge.

I have visited recently Henderson church, Midland charge, Charlotte, three churches on Chatham charge.

There is some strong college sentiment on all these charges. A young man on Midland remarked to me about our college, "We must have a college as good as the best." That remark greatly heartened me.

Another brother said to me at another place, "I am not able to give much but I am going to canvass some men who are able to give. I will do that much for the college." That encouraged me.

WE MUST NOT FAIL.

Sometimes a doubting Thomas says to me, "But suppose we shall fail;" I answer him, "We must not fail." It would be a great calamity to the kingdom of God in North Carolina for us to fail. Have you thought about the results? Twenty-five thousand people in North Carolina discouraged about the work of the church. Yes, forty or fifty thousand would be affected by our failure. There might be a few sons of belial who would be saying, "I told you so." But those in the kingdom of every name would feel the shock of this failure.

I therefore appeal to you to come out boldly for the college. Make your greatest gift, offer your supreme sacrifice to the cause. It is God's work; none of his people can therefore be indifferent.

Whether you are educated or uneducated; whether you have children to educate or not; whether you believe in education or disbelieve in it; if you belong to the kingdom, if you have consecrated your life to Him, I implore you in the name of the King of kings and the Lord of lords, be one of us. Give yourself to the cause; give of your means to the college.

Give it now. Do not wait to see who else will give, or how little you can get-by giving. Give as God has prospered you through all these years. He has given you health, He has given you a home in a good land, He has given you a church and He has made it possible for you to do an unselfish thing; now, therefore, prove to Him that you are grateful, that your heart is on the right side, that you of all men will not receive all these gifts in vain. Resolve now that your heart shall not be calloused by such kindnesses until there shall come from it no responses to His calls for service. I beseech you, brethren, I implore you, do your part in this hour of our supremest need.

HELPERS.

We have real helpers in this campaign. It has been a great joy to me to discover many of these, men, women, girls and boys. They are not confined to any age or sex, and I have found them in other sects. They talk for the college. And talk is most valuable. They work for the college, and that is even more valuable; they give of their time and of their means to the college. They withhold nothing from it that they count valuable. It is fine to see them work, to hear them talk, and to receive their gifts.

And, beloved, these are they who are getting ting the greatest blessing out of this campaign. There may be some who are pulling back, there are many who are indifferent, and we will build this college without them. But think of their losses. They will have their dimes and dollars, it may be they may not lose them. But I have known many instances where people have withheld from the cause of God that they might enjoy their gains in the joy of possessing them, but at the very hour when they expected to enjoy them most, they found that riches have wings, that wealth may turn into ashes, that sickness can steal from one all the power to enjoy wealth, and so although they kept in their clutches that which would have given joy and brought joy, they could not enjoy it, and their money perished with them.

EVERY OPPORTUNITY BRINGS REGRET.

No opportunity for service, for worship, for giving ever comes to us without a regret in her left hand. Receive her, use her, make the most of her, she blesses, she thrills, she makes the heart lighter all the while; but neglected, spurned, she leaves a sting whose bitterness is bitter as gall and as abiding as the eternal years. Which shall be your portion? Will you rejoice with those that do rejoice in the next three years? When the college buildings are dedicated and the hearts of God's people all over North Carolina are thrilled at the accomplishment of a few of his heroic sons and daughters, will you be among those who rejoice? Or will you be skulking about home, ashamed to go to the dedicatory services?

It is not yet too late to be a laborer in the vineyard. We welcome you. We will rejoice to have you come, we will share with you in every way in the honors of this work. Now come along, kind friend. Let's put this thing in fine shape and we may have no regrets after it is too late to change the issues.

Mt. Pleasant church, North Davidson charge, joins our ranks of churches subscribing the quota this week. This was done last Sunday before the time set for taking the pledges. Brothers E. S. Welborn and J. R. Stone are ardent suporters of the college enterprise. Two men at every church in the conference like them would absolutely assure us of the funds needed to get the Wills gift.

There has been appointed a chairman at every church to make the canvass for funds. Do your part, fellow chairman, and fellow members of the church, do your part in helping them secure funds. Let none pull back. A willing mind to work will be accepted as the proper qualification for services in this cause. Bring that qualification with you and do your part like a man.

R. M. Andrews, Chairman.

PLANTING THE TREE.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the ship which will cross the sea;
We plant the mast to carry the sails;
We plant the plank to withstand the gales;
The keel, the keelson, the beam, the knee;
We plant the ship when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the houses for you and me;
We plant the rafters, the shingles, the floors;
We plant the studding, lath, the doors,
The beams, the siding, all parts that be;
We plant the house when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
A thousand things that we daily see;
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag;
We plant the staff for our country's flag;
We plant the shade from the hot sun free—
We plant all these when we plant the tree.

THE TWO METHODISMS SPEAK.

A Joint Statement of Vital Concern to North Carolina Methodism.

The Joint Commission of the conferences of the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, appointed to cultivate more intimate and cordial relations between the two churches, at the meeting in Greensboro, January 18, 1923, caused the following address to be sent to the Methodists of North Carolina:

We are duly mindful of the common origin of our separate Methodisms, which are one in spirit, life and doctrine; and always have been a unit in the effort to spread scriptural holiness over the land. Moreover, the increasing complexity of the social order, with its problems and the readjustments going on about us, admonish us that our Methodist people must gather their forces for a more vigorous church life and unite for a mutual advance. Under the blessings of heaven, our two Methodist churches must become a still greater force for righteousness and spiritual advance in North Carolina. Every atom of energy must be mobilized against a common foe; loss of power and effectiveness, due to unnecessary friction, must cease. What can Methodists do to contribute to this end? We would suggest:

1. That our preachers and people come to know the efforts and aspirations of each by cultivating more cordial and intimate relations one with the other. Interchange of pulpits and union of efforts in revival campaigns may prove helpful to this end.

2. That wherever the two churches are working side by side in a community careful attention and serious thought be given by both churches to see that some way be found to prevent antagonisms and waste of energy in doing the work that Methodism as a whole should do. These local issues must be worked out by the good men and women who are on the ground and have been brought to see the sin of depleted strength that ought to be united against the enemies of righteousness.

3. That due attention be given to co-ordinating undertakings and to readjustments of churches in certain sections where both must continue a useless struggle until the best and wises will be convinced of the folly of present methods. Why not move to have the conferences involved in this venture in North Carolina to establish a permanent Board of Mediation?

4. That we plan and pray that our two Methodisms may this good year of our Lord be one in spirit and aim and effort in doing the work to which we are called in North Carolina.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev F C Klein, Sec.

THIS IS FOR YOU.

Whether you are a parent, or a Sunday school teacher, or a superintendent you are under a definite obligation to your children, to your Sunday school class, to your Sunday school to do more than personally impart, and see that ample provision is made to impart such religious instruction as will tend to lead them to accept Christ and unite with the church.

That objective is an important, essential starting place, but if the largest possible outcome to them and to the Kingdom is to be secured they must receive distinct missionary instruction so that the church's true mission may be fully understood, and that their thinking, planning, giving and service may be always influenced by Christ's great commission—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

To have your children, your scholars become Christians is most desirable, but the kind of Christians they will become, their atitude to the gospel and its power, to the church and its enterprises in accord with God's will, and to their membership vow which embraces what they are to do are paramount considerations.

People are saved not merely to get rid of sin's penalties, and enter heaven.

Jesus Christ established His church to make a conquest of the world, to destroy the works of the devil, and have the reign of love and righteousness spread over the earth.

He started his church with a few disciples, and they increased rapidly, but they did not stay in Jerusalem, or even in Judea, but went out into foreign lands in the very formative stages of the church, as Christ taught them to do; and we ourselves have been brought into the Kingdom through that continued plan, for our ancestors were pagans brought out of heathenism by the work of foreign missionaries.

Our church from its very beginning recognized that it had to follow God's plan, or cease to call itself a church, and, after getting organized and equipped, work for the heathen was begun.

The Board of Foreign Missions was earnestly sought to share with parents, teachers and superintendents in imparting missionary instruction, and for thirty-eight years it has sent out to the Sunday schools, free of cost, its Children's Day Service for foreign missions, inaugurated by Rev. F. T. Tagg, its corresponding secretary in 1885.

Annually the Service itself has given information of the work abroad, and, in recent years, pictures showing phases of the work and also workers, and large illustrated posters have ben added. while the recitations. exercises, etc., which make up the program have inculcated missionary principles, and tended to instil missionary spirit among the young of the church.

This year's Service is the equal of the best the board has ever issued and retains those features which make it the very best service for our Methodist Protestant schools, because nowhere else can be found what is therein presented for our own people.

Samples have been sent to all Sunday school superintendents and pastors whose name and address we could secure, and if you did not get one, please send a card to Rev. Fred. C. Klein, 316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. We direct special attention to the attractive mite boxes which we are sending out this year in place of the envelopes.

Send me your order now, do not delay, please. Fred. C. Klein.

HEY, BARACAS! SIT UP AND TAKE NOTICE!

(Imaginary conversation in a Baraca business meeting.)

The President. "Boys, are there any items of business this morning?"

John Smith. "Mr. President, I've been reading the Herald pretty carefully for the last few weeks, and every once in a while I see something in it from that feller Bates about the Minnis Fund. I don't know what it's all about, but it seems to me it's up to us to do the square thing and help him put it across. If I were off in India trying to keep cool and sweet with the thermometer 120 in the shade, and no shade, just for the pleasure of getting ready to preach the gospel to the natives, I think I'd be mighty glad to have somebody back home digging at the folks to show their appreciation of the sacrifice I was making by coming across with a little gift. I've been thinking of sending Bates a dollar just by myself, but it would be a whole lot better for us all to chip in and send a little more. Some of the folks who don't put any too much stock in us fellers might believe that we mean it when we say 'Standing . . . by the Church.' And, boys, we've got it to do. With Bates preaching at us, and J. Norman Wills hitting us from the other side, there's no escape. So come on, let's go! I move we take an offering." (Bill Jones seconds the motion.)

The President. "You have heard the motion that the class take an offering for Brother Minnis, our missionary to India. All in favor will please say 'Aye.' (A unanimous vote in favor.) It is carried. The ushers will take the offering and report the result."

Ushers. "The offering, Mr. President, is $10.23.

The President. "That's fine! The treasurer will please send a check for the amount to Rev. C. W. Bates, Henderson, N. C., at once."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

ONE HUNDRED FIVE IN A WEEK—THE BABY DELEGATE—GRACE ENDEAVORERS OVER 100 PER CENT!

We have made a record in our Registration Campaign that perhaps no other young people's conference or convention in the entire South can equal. During the last week 105 registrations were received for the Weaverville Young People's Conference! That is an extraordinary record and we are mighty proud of it! Judging by that record, one might think that our young people are interested!

Danford E. Cutchin, of Whitakers, holds the distinction of being the "Baby Delegate." He is only six months of age and will chaperon his mother and see that she enjoys the conference. We are mighty happy to have you, Danford, and we trust that your example will interest others to come along and bring their mothers. The Field Secretary reserves the right to take the first hike with Danford and to share his first ice cream cone with him!

Grace church senior Endeavorers surely "went and done it" this week! Inspired by the record that West End made two weeks ago, when that society registered 100 per cent, Grace decided to go one better and have sent in over 100 per cent! Their society has 43 members and they have secured 50 registrations from their own members and from members of the church. Grace, that's great! We wonder if any other Christian Endeavor society wants to equal their record.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, MAY 6.

Lessons from the Psalms. V. A Prayer Psalm. Psalm 86:1-17.

(Consecration Meeting.)

Daily Readings.

Mon. Prayer of petition. Isa. 38:1-22.
Tues. Intercession. Gen. 18:23-33.
Wed. Thanksgiving. Ps. 8:1-6.
Thurs. Communion. Matt. 17:1-8.
Fri. United prayer. Matt. 18:19, 20.
Sat. Unanswered prayer. Deut. 3:23-29.

1. One of the most evident lessons from the Psalm is the lesson of prayer. The Psalms, many of them, are really prayers. They give expression to the deep longings of the human heart. The Psalms constitute perhaps the best devotional literature either in the Bible or out of it. The Comrades of the Quiet Hour, and all other young people, will find the Psalms most valuable for their times of devotions.

2. What is prayer? It is more than simply asking our Heavenly Father for what we think we need. In real prayer will be found the elements of confession, supplication, praise, thanksgiving, communion. An examination of the Psalms will show us that all these elements find expression in the Psalms of David and of the other Psalm writers.

3. When should we pray? At any time that we so desire. But there should be an appointed time for communion with God. The record is that some of the old Bible characters began the day with God. It was true of Moses. David said, "Evening, and morning, and noon will I pray." If we would take time every morning before going to the duties of the new day to read from our Bibles and to pray to our Heavenly Father, asking Him to guide us during the day, doubtless our duties would be less burdensome and we would be saved from many mistakes. We need Him to guide our thoughts, our words, our acts, and to lead us in safe places where we can be of most service to Him.

When, then, should we pray? Every day. It is a mistake to wait until we are sick or in distress or have committed sin to pray. In sickness or distress prayer will be a greater source of comfort if prayer has been our habit when well. Constant, daily prayer will save us from many a sin for which we will never have to repent and ask forgiveness.

Mrs. L. W. Gerringer.

DID YOU KNOW?

Does this mean anything to you and me? Only one man in a dozen in non-Christian lands can read and write, and only one woman in twenty-five is literate. This is not because they do not desire an education or that they are feeble-minded. It does mean that they have never had the chance—the chance which we can give them for what we spend on cool drinks, etc.—the chance which so many of the young people even in our own state and towns carelessly throw aside.

Did you know—that women in non-Christian lands are nothing more than slaves and toys to be sold to the highest bidder? that girls in China are sold as slaves when babies? that thirteen is the average marriage age in India? that the non-Christian world will rise, stand or fall with its woman and that her position is changed as soon as they accept Christ and His teachings? Are we not willing to sacrifice a little that the women of other lands may enjoy the privileges which are ours?

The United States can take the world for Christ by studying the needs of the world, by giving money to send preachers, teachers and doctors where the need is so great; by prayer and by the life service of those who are willing to serve.

Since this was the time for the election of officers, the following were elected: President, Mr. Lacy S. Lewis; vice president, Mr. Tyson Ferrell; recording secretary, Miss Exie Callicutt; corresponding secretary, Miss Lollie Jones; treasurer, Miss Ara Ridge; reporter, Nan Lowdermilk.

Our society is getting up a play, "The Old Fashion Woman," which we hope to give in the near future.

The senior society is glad to report the organization of a Junior society with Mr. Robert S. Lloyd and Miss Treva Beck superintendents.

We appreciate the nice attractive banner awarded last week at the meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies in Greensboro. The awarding of the banner to Thomasville was somewhat of a surprise to us,—we did not really work for the banner, but it encourages us to greater work this year. We will work this year to keep the banner next year.

EINSTEIN THEORY UPHELD.

The Einstein theory of relativity is correct, says Prof. W. W. Campbell, noted astronomer and director of the Lick Observatory in California

Last September the Lick observatory sent a party of astronomers to Australia to observe a total eclipse of the sun. These scientists took many pictures of the eclipse. Prof. Campbell and other astronomers have been studying these photographic plates for several months. Their measurements show that light rays from stars do not always travel in a straight line, but are bent by the sun. That proves that the theory of relativity is accurate, the astronomers say.—Current Events.

—The Smithsonian Institution, at Washington, will send astronomers to Mexico next September to view a total eclipse of the sun.

—Dr. Adolph Lorenz, famous "bloodless surgeon" will sail for his home in Vienna, Austria, May 12. He held a public clinic in New York last week, his last before sailing. He examined and treated 60 crippled children without charge. Dr. Lorenz expects to return to this country in October to continue his unselfish work for humanity.

—Governor A. J. Groesbeck, of Michigan, has vetoed a bill passed by the Michigan Legislature placing a tax of 2 cents a gallon on gasoline. The bill is unjust because it taxes not only automobile owners but all users of gasoline, the Governor says.

WHAT ARE YOU READING?

A bright, beautiful boy, a minister's son, a student in a college in Pennsylvania, smoked cigarettes, read novels, and tales of murder and suicide, and one day after threatening another student with a pistol took a dose of strychnine and died in a few moments.

"The arrest of several boys for an attempt to rob a Burlington passenger train in August, 1898, and the verdict of ten years in the penitentiary as a result, should arouse people to the fact that the depravity of human nature is liable to show itself at a very early age, if the surroundings are favorable. These boys belonged to well-to-do families. They had the privilege of buying and reading the corrupt literature that tells of robbers and daring wickedness.. It was a natural result that they should admire the adventure and daring attributed to the heroes of their vicious novels; and, in due time, this seed-sowing brings this result.. It would have been infinitely better for the parents of these children to have furnished them some of the good books of the day to read, where they could have learned of heroic deeds of goodness that have been done to relieve and benefit humanity: and let them pattern after the good, rather than the bad."

Good reading tends to make good boys, good men, and good women. Bad reading tends to sin and death and perdition. What are you reading?—Selected.

BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS
Rev. C. H. Beck, Sec.

EMMANUEL CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA, AND BIBB STREET, MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA.

We are still talking about ourselves. We are doing so because we are sure you want to know us better. This board is ''the better America'' agency of the Methodist Protestant Church. We are proud of the work accomplished with the funds placed at our disposal. We want you to know what we have done with your money. Questions and criticisms are welcomed.

Emmanuel.

This is the third of our group of four churches in Philadelphia. St. Luke's is the oldest of the group. Taylor Memorial has been developed into a fine church during the present administration. And Emmanuel bids fair to outstrip both of the older churches. Tioga Heights is a new organization, and our board has not been called upon to render any assistance, but we have been vitally interested in the development of the other three. At Emmanuel we have 151 members, with many interested persons who will probably soon identify themselves with this church. There is a Sunday school numbering a little more than 200, which is not only self-suporting but contributes regularly to the denominational benevolences and to the building fund of the local church. There is a Christia Endeavor society of 30 members which is doing fine work among the young people of the congregation. There is a Ladies' Aid society of 70 members, and a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society which is very aggressive and helpful in every department of the society's work. This is a real church. The board purchased the lots, and assisted largely in the erection of the basement unit of the church which was completed something more than a year ago. The building should be completed at an early date, and plans are already under way looking to this end. We have also been assisting in the support of the pastor, but our pledge was completed with the close of the Maryland Conference year. The conference is making a small appropriation, but this will probably be discontinued after the current year. More than 2,000 new homes have been erected in that district, and building is still being pushed with vigor. Emmanuel church gives great promise of future development and growth.

Bibb Street.

Montgomery is in the center of our denominational life in Alabama, more than half the Methodist Protestant churches in the state being within a radius of sixty miles of this city. This church has had a checkered history, and may mistakes have been made in administration. The most serious error of course was in the decision to remain as a down-town church at a time when it was apparent to all that the future was in the suburban sections. The church has done a great work, and is still a potent moral force in the city. But the membership has been reduced until it was unable to meet the demands being made upon it. Within the last five years this historic church has taken on new life, and fine work is being done. But a new location and a new building are imperative if the work is to be permanently successful. A new work is in prospect in one of the most rapidly growing sections of the city. Of this we shall have more to say in a short time.

We have never had finer opportunities nor more insistent demands than are now being made upon us. Charles H. Beck.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

The best and most largely attended annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society was held in West End Church April 17, 18.

The meeting commenced with a very impressive devotional service conducted by Mrs. S. R. Harris.

Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., extended hearty greetings and Mrs. C. W. Bates responded in a very happy manner. The various officers then gave their reports, showing that much good work had been done during the year. The treasurer's report showed that we had gone over the top, exceeding our budget of $2600. The representatives of the different auxiliaries present gave the ''best methods'' used in their societies this year.

Tuesday evening Miss Laura Hill Coit of N. C. C. W. gave a very enjoyable address on the life and customs of the people in foreign lands.

Wednesday morning Dr. George R. Brown conducted the devotional, and addresses were made by Mrs. A. G. Dixon on Pine Ridge and Pittsburgh Mission and Mr. H. A. Garrett on our Children's Home. After listening to the needs of these interests we were made to feel that they are all most worthy causes. The following officers were elected for next year: Mrs. W. C. Hammer, president; Mrs. R. M. Andrews, vice president; Mrs. Major Smith, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. A. Garrett, treasurer; Ms. H. C. Nicholson, recording secretary.

The banner for best work by Young People's societies was awarded to the Young People's Home Missionary Society of Thomasville.

Wednesday afternoon.—This was a joint session of Home and Foreign societies. Devotional was conducted by the two treasurers, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker and Mrs. H. A. Garrett.

Reports were made by district chairmen, telling of the good results of district meetings. ''Welfare Work in Local Community'' was told very interestingly by Miss Josephine Evans, welfare worker for Grace church.

''Best Methods in Missionary Work'' was very splendidly presented by Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

Wednesday evening Rev. A. G. Dixon conducted the devotional service, and Rev. Homer Casto told of the work of the Bethel Home.

A very enjoyable, as well as an unusually good moving picture, ''A Maker of Men,'' was presented by Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr.

The meeting adjourned to meet at Asheboro next April.

Thursday was devoted to the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society.

GOD UNDERSTANDS CHINESE.

A little Chinese girl about six years old was an inmate of a mission home. One evening, after, her evening prayer, she got off her knees and turned with a very disturbed air, saying, ''Mrs. Field, do you think God understands Chinese?''

''Oh, yes,'' said Mrs. Field. ''But why do you ask?''

''Because sometimes when I feel very unhappy, I like to pray to God in Chinese; of course I always say my prayers at night in English, but sometimes I like to pray in my own language.''

She was assured that her heavenly father understood all languages, and she could relieve her overburdened heart in her own language in perfect safety.

It is a blessed thought that the language of prayer needs no translation, no interpreter. Out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people goes up the voice of prayer and praise, and the Father of all understands all. Let us use the mighty privilege of prayer, and gain rich blessings at the hand of God.—Selected.

''Point thy tongue on the anvil of truth.''

MISS GRAY'S DESK POST-OFFICE.

‘‘Jimsy, that's nonsense. You know they haven't forgotten you just because you haven't seen them for two weeks. You have friends and friends—I don't know how many friends.’’ Mother sat on the edge of Jimsy's bed and patted the back of a tousled brown head that burrowed into a pillow.

‘‘Everybody's forgotten me,’’ came a muffled voice. ‘‘Every single body.’’

‘‘Jimsy! How your chums would feel if they could hear you! Just as if you weren't a big boy; as if you didn't understand that we have a sign on our door to keep people out of the house for four whole weeks more. Prisoners we are, you and I, in a castle, seeing a siege through. It's see it through with flags flying—shall we?’’

Jimsy turned his head half-way and opened the one freed eye. ‘‘I can hear them when they get out of school, and they run right by on the other side of the street—you said so—and they don't even ring the bell to ask if I'm sicker or weller, and not anybody writes me a post-card or a letter, and they coast down this hill the whole afternoon, whiz right past, and if I were out I could pass them all,’’ and the face again sought the comfort of the soft, fat pillow.

‘‘Their mothers wouldn't let them come even to the door, dear. I know, because in their places I wouldn't let you. And their mothers have told them to scamper by on the other side of the street. Trust me—I know it's the mothers. And Daddy comes every afternoon as soon as the train comes in and I tell him all about you through the window, and you can hear him shout to you even if you can't see him, and there's nice Dr. Benton—and I'd like to know if he isn't a pretty good friend, slipping two tiny barley-sugar fish under your pillow every single day!’’

‘‘I belong to daddy, and Dr. Benton has to come because you and daddy tell him to,’’ was Jimsy's gloomy answer.

‘‘He doesn't have to hide candy under your pillow—me disapproving of candy!’’ Mother pretended great indignation. ‘‘There's his ring now, he's late. Come, Jimsy, turn right side up before he comes in,’’ and mother ran downstairs.

That's what happened indoors. Outdoors, it happened that Miss Gray, Jimsy's teacher, strolling past in the noon hour, met the postman just opposite Jimsy's house. ‘‘He's better, isn't he? I'm so glad. I met Dr. Benton and asked,’’ and with a friendly nod indicating Jimsy's house, Miss Gray paused.

‘‘Poor little chap, and he always running and whooping.’’ The postman's voice was all sympathy. ‘‘Six weeks is six years to him. I expect, away from all his pals.’’ Shifting his leather bag, he looked searchingly and regretfully into its depths. ‘‘Never pass the house I don't wish I had a dozen letters and a few packages to cheer him up. Can't write 'em myself, though. Yes, he's better: I've asked Dr. Benton, too. Guess a good many of his friends have asked Dr. Benton about Jimsy Friendliest little chap in town.’’

‘‘Oh!’’ Miss Gray said slowly. ‘‘Does he ever get any—letters and packages, I men?’’

The kindly postman shook his head. ‘‘Every morning I hope there'll be one, anyway, but there never is. Youngsters set store by 'em—I know, nobody better.’’

‘‘How unfriendly we've been,’’ Miss Gray said. ‘‘And Jimsy such a friend, just as you say, to every living thing. You just look in your pouch tomorrow, Mr. Brown! Isn't it lucky composition is the first lesson after lunch hour! Trust my children!’’ She almost ran on her way, stopped and ran back. ‘‘Promise you'll never tell how it came about,’’ she begged. ‘‘Results will warrant the conspiracy!’’ And this time she was off.

The school children of room E, trooping in after luncheon, found an animated Miss Gray. ‘‘We're going to do something different today for composition,’’ she said briskly, ‘‘something you'll like. It's time, I've decided, that you have frequent practice in letter-writing—real letters these will be, which we'll drop in the post-box at the corner. I have the envelopes and stamps all ready, and till Jimsy comes back to us, my desk will be a real post-office. A letter mail we'll have twice a week, and if any of you have little things you'd like to send him in packages, I'll conduct a parcel-post department. And I'll furnish all stamps—glad to. Now to work.’’

No labored composition lesson this. Brown heads and bright heads bent sideways over desks; tongues protruded sightly to aid toiling hands, and letters spelled themselves out. ‘‘About things here in school or what you play outside. Try to make him feel we miss him and want him back and are saving his own place for him,’’ Miss Gray had said. And as forty pens toiled over forty sheets of white paper, Miss Gray wrote a letter too, making forty-one!

‘‘Whew!’’ Whistled Mr. Brown next morning as he sorted his mail into packets at the post-office. ‘‘Thirty-seven, eight, nine, forty, forty-one! Who on earth ever before got forty-one letters all in one mail! I wish his house was first on my route; He'll be kicking up his heels, cured, tomorrow!’’ And chuckling happily, Mr. Brown hurried on his way.

‘‘Postman, I s'pose,’’ remarked Jimsy, an hour later, at the familiar two rings.

‘‘Maybe this morning’’—began mother, hopefully.

‘‘No, there won't be,’’ answered Jimsy, reading her thought. ‘‘There never is, not one.’’

Calls from mother in the lower hall failed to interest him. Such a time as it was taking her to collect whatever Mr. Brown had poked through the slot!

‘‘I know a little boy who says his friends have all forgotten him,’’ said mother, beaming, and holding her hands behind her back. ‘‘A little boy who says he never gets a letter, not one.’’ And on Jimsy's white spread she laid six letters.

‘‘For me?’’ Jimsy's eyes were alight. ‘‘Six letters for me?’’

‘‘Six plus nobody knows how many more!’’ And mother held two hands filled with envelopes toward him.

‘‘Came by mail? All for me?’’ Jimsy was aghast. ‘‘Oh, mother, count 'em—let's count 'em!’’ Rapturously mounting upward of thirty, his voice suddenly stopped short. ‘‘Mother, did you tell anybody? If you asked anybody to write, I don't want the letters!’’ Jimsy's eyes held accusation.

‘‘Jimsy, as if I would! Though I wanted to, I admit. No, dear, it's as big a surprise and mystery to me as to you. Do hurry and count so we can read. Here's the paper-cutter if you want to slit them, shipshape.’’

Together they read them, one by one, Jimsy utterly absorbed in each. Tommy Burns said:

Dear Jimsy—We're going to write you letters, and it's better than themes. Nobody sits in your seat. Miss Gray says nobody is going to sit in your seat. It's for you when you come back. Your friend, Tommy Burns.

P. S. Jack has a new sled. He beat us with it. We think you can beat Jack with Whizzer.

‘‘Oh, mother, the snow won't be gone in a mouth?’’ asked Jimsy, anxiously. They read on:

Dear Jimsy — [wrote Margaret Reed] — Miss Gray says her desk is going to be a post-office till you come back. We began the Third Reader today. It's easy. We'll help you when you come back. And we are reviewing Arithmetic. Your friend, Margaret Reed.

P. S. I have two new pets. Their names are Nip and Nap. Guess what kind of animals they are.

‘‘I like the postscripts best,’’ said mother, laughing.

‘‘She says a post-office till I come back! Oh, mother, then maybe there'll be more, other days!’’ Jimsy's eyes looked far from sick. ‘‘This is from John Carter,’’ he said, looking at the next.

Dear Jimmy—Miss Gray lets me pass the pens while you're away, but you're going to again as soon as you come back. And my mother says I can wait till you get well to have my birthday party. I don't think it would be much fun without you. Your friend, John Carter.

P. S. There is another department to Miss Gray's post-office.

‘‘Now what does he mean’’ puzzled Jimsy, nor did he find out till next day, when in answer to Mr. Brown's ring, mother found six packages on the steps. What was in them? As Jimsy's busy fingers untied the strings, he found a picture-puzzle in one, a bird's nest to add to his collection in another—all manner of interesting things.

Such a busy post-office as Miss Gray's desk proved to be! And there was no happier boy than Jimsy, for whom the letters and packages poured in. ‘‘Mother,’’ he fretted after the second batch of letters, ‘‘mother, how'll I let them know how much I like to get them? The doctor won't let letters go out of the house, and if they don't hear from me’’—

‘‘They know that,’’ mother reassured him, then added teasingly, ‘‘Perhaps not all little boys and girls think their friends have forgotten them forever if they don't hear from them for six weeks even! But we don't believe in ‘Out of sight, out of mind,’ any more, do we?’’

‘‘Mother!’’ Jimsy looked uncomfortable. ‘‘Well, I was the sickest then, anyway.’’

‘‘And now you're better every day. Never did I know a small boy who had to have mail carried daily to his bed in a market-basket. As for your little friends knowing how happy they have made you, you see, I'm not forbidden to telephone.’’

‘‘Oh, mother, will you?’’

‘‘Will I? I have, goose of mine, the very evening after your first swamping mail came. You were asleep. I knew you wouldn't mind that.’’

"Mind? I should say not! How'd you think of it?" And in Jimsy's voice was high approval. A pause. "Mother, what was that thing you said—'Out of mind'?"

"'Out of sight, out of mind.'"

"Oh, yes," sighed Jimmy, comfortably. I'm glad it isn't."—Rose Brooks, in Zion's Herald.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Sunday was a good day for us preople at Zoar again, Pastor Carson filling his regular appointment, with two services, one in the morning at 11 o'clock and one in the evening at 7:30. As usual he delivered us two splendid sermons and I am sure every one present enjoyed them. His theme Sunday night was, "The Exalted Vision." Oh, what a glorious sermon he preached on this subject! Do wish more could have heard it than did.

We are having prayer meeting every Sunday night at our church now, and we think and hope that much good is and will be accomplishehd through our prayer meeting.

We are glad to note also that our Sunday school seems to be increasing in attendance somewhat. We hope it will continue to increase, as there is yet room for improvement.

We were glad to have Mr. Perry Garmon from Stallings with us Sunday. Come again!

Our pastor announced that there would be preaching at our church on the fifth Sunday in this month, so all come that can do so.

Best wishes. Bertha Hartis, Reporter.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.—Our pastor filled his regular apointment the third Sunday, and as usual preached for us another good sermon. There was a right good congregation, and all listened attentively unto the word preached, but hope the people will take more interest in coming out to preaching and Sunday school, and all work together in the service of the Lord.

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Greenway of High Point to worship with us Sunday.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, but not what we would like for it to be. Hope more will come out and help our new superintendent.

Brother Riddle has been having cottage prayer meetings, and having very good attendance, and very much success. Hope this good work will continue. Will close by asking all the readers of the Herald to pray for us.

Reporter.

New Hope, Pageland Circuit—I have been so busy lately with school work and missionary program for church that I have failed to report. The day school and Sunday school gave an interesting program the second Sunday in this month. We hope the work that was done in the day school and Sunday school may so impress some of our pupils that they will heed the great call of God and be persuaded to go out as ministers and missionaries. The need is so great and the laborers so few. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest that He may send forth laborers into the harvest-field.

If our own hearts are right in the sight of God we will get the answer, but if we regard iniquity in our hearts He will not hear our prayers. Let us get our hearts cleansed and begin praying for a sweeping revival of religion. People are hungering and thirsting today for the bread of life. Let us find out why we are not moving more rapidly for God.

I am going to quote a few things I read today:

"If thou does not well, sin lieth at the door." Gen. 4:7. "This is the revised version: Sin crouches at thy door. The picture is a wild beast crouching at the door, a menace to all who dwell within. Sin is a wild beast with power of Hercules, with a cunning that is satanic.

"1. Sin is the only thing that can cut us off from God. If we have not been able to pray through let us look for sin.

"2. If we do not have a keen delight in His service, let us look for sin.

"3. Sin means slavery. No foreign nation can enslave America. Were it attempted every creek, every river would run red to the sea, but that we would expel the invaders.

"4. But slavery exists under Old Glory, (a) slavery to fashion, (b) slavery to habit—swearing, drinking, tobacco, etc.—(c) slavery that we call 'white slavery.'

"A wild beast croucheth at the door—God's picture of a sinner's life. Every man under his own vine and fig-tree—God's picture of a Christian's life." Julia St. Clair,

Reporter.

Davidson Circuit.—There will be a singing convention at Chapel Hill church, near Handy, N. C., the fifth Sunday in April, beginning at ten o'clock.

This meeting gives promise of being of special interest to all who love to hear good singing. There are to be four choirs to entertain you, separately; besides, there will be congregational singing, so all may take part. But you will have the privilege to keep guessing which choir is doing the best singing. Since there will be four choirs, there will be constant singing for about five hours. Besides what you may enjoy from the choirs, there will be male quartets throughout the day.

We have secured Mr. Ira Ridge, of High Point, and Mr. Edmund Ridge, his brother, to bring a quartet. If you have not heard them sing, don't let this time pass, for they know how to sing to thrill your soul and gladden your heart.

Come to spend the day, bring your lunch, meet your friends, talk of the days gone by, when mother and father knelt together, sang God's praises, and baptized this old camp-ground with the "sweat of their souls," wrestling with God, and now are, or soon will be, singing with the angels in the paradise of God. Young man, that dear mother might come, if you would tell her that she has stayed at home long enough, and you want her to go with you, it would do her good. Will you do that? Thanks. I thought you would, if you just thought of it. Bring your best girl, too.

Yours very truly, Robert Short, Pastor.

First Church, Concord.—Rev. D. A. Braswell preached for us at both services Sunday, in the absence of our pastor, who was away in the interest of the College. Brother Braswell was weak physically but preached splendid sermons.

Our work here is moving along nicely. The finances are in fine shape.

The second quarterly conference was held April 10 and Messrs. R. C. Brown and T. F. Newton are the nominees for delegate to annual conference.

We are looking forward with a great deal of interest to our special meeting which begins next Sunday with Dr. George R. Brown of High Point as help.

The Southern District Christian Endeavor Convention was held in the First Presbyterian Church here on April 14-15 with 100 delegates registered. We were glad to have several of the delegates visit our Sunday school.

The Tenth District Rally will be held in our church on May 12-13. Concord Methodist Protestant homes will be thrown open to all visitors and delegates, and we are hoping to have a large attendance. Will every pastor in this district please see that his churches are well represented? Send names of all who expect to attend to Mrs. D. A. McLaurin, 230 N. Kerr street, and homes will be provided for you. Dr. Dixon, Rev. Lawrence C. Little, Rev. G. L. Curry and maybe others will be present, and a treat is in store for all who attend. We want you. Come. Reporter.

Henderson.—The attendance at Sunday school yesterday was 173; the auditorium was practically full at the morning preaching hour and one new member, Brother James P. Hicks, was received into church membership, coming to us from Antioch church on Granville circuit.

Our second quarterly conference was held two weeks ago. Brothers B. Frank Harris and Thomas J. Evans are the nominees for delegate to the next annual conference.

Well, the architect has promised to have the plans for our new Sunday school building ready for the contractors by Wednesday of this week. We made the canvass some time ago for funds and received in pledges $5,333, and so it was thought wise to proceed with the work.

Our church very greatly appreciates the banner for the best foreign missionary work among the young people. Perhaps it will encourage us to work harder this year in order to hold it.

Brother R. R. Satterwhite is critically ill and the end is thought to be near. He has borne his affliction with great patience.

J. E. Pritchard.

Bethel, Alamance Circuit.—Easter service was held at Bethel on Easter Sunday. The children did well and Prof. J. A. W. Thompson gave us a good talk on Easter and what it means to us. Collection over $5. As the weather was unfavorable, our congregation was small.

Easter Monday Mr. Herbert Foust took his Sunday school class, the Young People's Bible Class, on a picnic to Mt. Vernon Springs. They enjoyed the day, the dinner, the mineral water, the beautiful play grounds, and automobile ride going and coming. In all the class enjoyed and appreciated their teacher's interest in them.

Our Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies met with Mrs. J. A. Foust the second Sunday in April. Our subject, ''Influence,'' was freely discussed by members and a splendid paper read by a visitor to our meeting, Mrs. J. A. W. Thompson, which was especially enjoyed because of her sweet Christian influence upon all who pass her way. Lesson was given from our study book by Mrs. W. A. Foust. Next meeting to be held with Mrs. O. C. Braxton the first Sunday in May at 2:30 P. M.; subject, ''A Friend to God.'' Our foreign society, including the young people's collection of $34.05, have collected in all $128.60 this year from April, 1922, to April, 1923, and our home society, including Busy Bee's collection of $8.50, have collected in all $48 since last April to this. Misses Marcia and Alma Foust attended the North Carolina Branch meeting of home and foreign mission work held at West End, Greensboro, N. C. They report a splendid meeting and a good time. They visited relatives who kindly took them to visit the Children's Home at High Point, and also the Methodist Protestant College, all of which they enjoyed very much.

Brother Holmes gave us a splendid sermon last Sunday on the life of Joseph.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Lindley are rejoicing over the advent of twin boys into their family.

Since our last report, Bethel people have been made sad over the death of Mr. Junius Braxton and Mr. Duncan Cooper. The bereaved have our sincere sympathy.

We have sick among us: Mrs. R. W. Lindley, Mrs. J. H. Allen, Miss Jewel Stafford, Mr. Annie Foust, and Mrs. F. R. McPherson.

Bethel school has closed for this term. We appreciate the interest of our teachers, Prof. J. A. W. Thompson and Miss Marcia Foust. None can estimate the influence of good Christian teachers. In after years we often find that seed has been sown where perhaps we least expected, which has grown and brought forth fruit. We many times faithfully do our work and leave the result with God. The farmers are very busy now getting ready for corn planting. May God abundantly bless and prosper us this year and may we love and serve Him more. Mrs. J. M. Foust,

Reporter.

Thomasville.—If I should report all the good things you would not give me space in your valuable paper, for the Lord has been good to the Thomasville people today. Our Sunday school numbered 219, offering $8.40. We have a good Sunday school. Miss Flora Davis, the able assistant of State Sunday School Association, was present and gave us some valuable information in the form of a story. We are glad for her presence. After Sunday school we had preaching service; text, ''I know in whom I have believed.'' Brother Troxler was favored in delivering a plain and practical sermon.

At three o'clock we attended the Township Sunday School Convention at the Main Street M. E. Church, and we were all taught by splendid teachers, Miss Davis and Mr. Sims, both whole-time State Sunday school workers. We think the seed sown will bring abundant harvest for all the churches of our township, as there are other sessions to attend. We pray the Lord's blessings on these workers and the work. Reporter.

Oak Grove, Cleveland Circuit.—Our Sunday school is very good at this writing; as the weather is getting warmer we are having a large attendance every Sunday.

On Sunday, April 22, Brother Morris preached to us a fine sermon on Sacrifice. We find that we can not sacrifice without doing our duty in all kinds of work. Neither can we expect to be blessed and not do our part toward helping others.

We were also accompanied Sunday by the Hebron quartet; they sang some beautiful songs, and after the singing Mr. Boyles gave a splendid speech on the love of money.

On Easter Sunday night the children and young people rendered a good program, the offering amounting to $5.81. We are also expecting to train the children for another program before long.

In our last report we reported that the quarterly conference would meet at this place the fifth Sunday in April, but it is postponed until the first Saturday and Sunday in June. There will be services each day and night.

We are in hopes that we can pay the $4,000 that we are asked to pay to the College this year, and hope to get a pledge from every member. May God help us to do what He wants us to do.

Best wishes to Herald and readers.

Willie Pendleton, Reporter.

Browers Chapel, Richland Circuit.—Our second quarterly conference was held at Browers Chapel on Saturday before the fourth Sunday. Our pastor, Brother W. F. Kennett, preached an able sermon at 11 o'clock. There were only a few people present to enjoy it. If people who stay at home could only realize how much they miss by not being present to hear such inspiring sermons, I am sure there would be better attendance. The business of the quarterly meeting was transacted in the usual way. All the churches on the circuit were represented except New Union. The next quarterly conference will be held at New Union.

The work on our parsonage is moving along slowly; however, we hope to have it finished soon.

Brother Kennett filled his regular appointment the fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock with another inspiring sermon. His sermons are so much enjoyed by the people at Browers that we wish we could have at least two appointments a month instead of one.

Our Sunday school is still alive and now spring has come we hope it will increase both in number and interest. Pray for us, Christian people, that our work on this charge may go forward as never before. Best wishes to all the readers of the Herald.

Mrs. M. C. Henley.

High Point.—President Dixon occupied the pulpit Sunday evening, and our people here are always delighted to hear him. He was pastor here for nine years, and is quite popular with all classes in High Point. He has many friends outside of the denomination.

The supper, which was planned to be given this week by the Ladies' Aid society, has been postponed until a later date. The last one was so remunerative, the sum of $150 having been realized, that it was decided to repeat it.

Great grief is being expressed here by the shocking news today of the sudden and untimely death of Mr. R. Otho Stone of Thomasville, a senior at Western Maryland College. He was known and admired by many of our young people, for he was a most talented, consecrated and promising young man. He would have received his diploma in a few weeks, and it was his intention to enter the Seminary next fall, and complete the theological course, thus preparing for the ministry. This is a sad loss to the church and Conference, for we need many such young men as Otho Stone. This is a strange and puzzling dispensation of Providence, and there arises the old perplexing question—why was he taken instead of some other? We must feel always that ''His ways are just, His counsels wise.'' God will raise up another to take the work which he has laid down. Much sympathy is expressed for the fond and bereaved parents, for their loss is indeed grievous. May the God of all comfort be very near them, soothe and sustain with the Everlasting Arms in their loneliness and sadness.

Mrs. George Armacost of Tenaffly, N. J., and her three small children arrived Thursday evening to be guests of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George R. Brown.

Mrs. C. W. Bates, of Henderson, accompanied Mrs. George R. Brown home from the branch meeting at West End. She was joined here Monday by Rev. C. W. Bates and the children, and together they went to Asheville to visit relatives.

Miss Emily Galt of Southport, N. C., was the guest for last week-end of Miss Margaret Rankin.

Miss Lucille Pickens has gone to Toccoa and Atlanta, Ga., to visit friends and attend grand opera.

The condition of Mr. A. M. Idol remains about the same. Mrs. Sallie Wilburn has also been quite ill.

Mrs. L. J. Diffee has returned from a visit to friends and relatives in Richmond, Va.

Mr. R. L. Evans of Kansas City, Mo., is the guest of his sister, Mrs. J. E. Wagner, on West Broad street.

Weaverville Charge Announcements.

The vote for delegate will be taken at each church as follows:

First Sunday in May, 11 A. M., Clarke's Chapel.
Second Sunday in May, 11 A. M., Weaverville.
Third Sunday in May, 11 A. M., Mt. Zion.

Fred P. Edwards of Weaverville church and E. E. Roberts of Mt. Zion church are the candidates. Come and vote for your favorite.

B. M. Williams, Pastor.

Greensville Circuit.—With the coming of spring all our Sunday schools are running again; the roads are better, our congregations are increasing. We are hopeful of a good year.

Since our last report we have received two members, Brother Norman Pearson at Philadelphia and Mrs. W. W. Pair at Hobb's Chapel. We are glad to welcome these young people into our church and pray God's blessing upon them.

During the month of May we are planning to hold all-day services at Philadelphia the first Sunday, Matthews Chapel third Sunday, and Hobbs the fourth Sunday. We are hopeful of these services' meaning much to our church and Sunday school.

James H. Trolinger.

Triplet, Va., April 24.

Weaverville Charge.—We were delighted to have Miss Annie L. Forrest speak to us yesterday, 11 A. M., at Weaverville church. She brought us a splendid message, which was well received. Congregations were good at each of our churches yesterday. The weather is fine here now. It looks like we are to have some real spring days now.

The people are much interested in our coming District Rally, also the Young People's Summer Conference, Weaverville. Am sending Brother Little check for $31 to register 62 of our people. Check goes forward by today's mail. Hope to register more later.

Come on, Asheville and Democrat, let's register 150 from Twelfth District by next week.

Our College drive has been on for the past week. Weaverville charge is going ''over the top'' on this. Am confident pledges will be in my hands to turn over to Dr. Andrews when he comes next Saturday to cover our quota. One church over-subscribed now, another nearly out, the remaining one must go over.

Come on, you good people nearer the College, and let us put the thing across so every one can rejoice with Dr. Andrews and Dr. McCulloch.

Perhaps some time we will tell you how Weaverville charge went over. Success to Dr. Andrews and all his co-workers in the College drive. Sincerely, B. M. Williams.

West Forsyth Circuit.—We feel enough of encouragement which makes us bold enough to write a few words and I suppose now is the time.

Every church is now planning to do something that will bring the rich blessings of God upon them. The beautiful warm weather and good solid roads are a blessing to our charge. We have come out and have become accustomed to seeing our shadow and I think we will stay out until winter and bad roads come again.

We had Rev. W. D. Reed with us at our second quarterly conference. Brother Reed preached to us in such earnestness that we will not forget his message. I think we all have been trying to do better since he preached to us. We thank him very much. Come again, Brother Reed. God bless you and your work, is our prayer.

Brother R. N. Hauser, who is chairman of the Eighth District, made a visit to Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle on the third Sunday. Brother Hauser spoke at each church in the interest of our College. Since he came and spoke to our people I have noticed that every little crowd seems to be talking about the Methodist Protestant Children's Home and the Methodist Protestant College. Now I like that just fine. I have no doubt about our circuit. I feel certain that we will raise our part of the funds which we have been asked to raise.

We thank Brother Hauser for his valuable service. Now we are going to try to line up and help do this great work for our Lord because we believe that he is calling for us to do our part while the work is going on. Let us go out somewhere alone with God and talk it over with Him. Lord, what wilt thou have me do? How much ought I to give? I want to know thy will. Ask the Lord to guide you. May the Lord bless and lead us to do His will.

Yours in His name, A. M. Hamilton,
Pastor.

Revival to Begin at Winston-Salem Next Sunday.

Our spring revival will begin next Sunday, the 29th, and continue for ten days or two weeks. Rev. L. W. Gerringer, of Asheville, will come to us on Monday and do the preaching throughout the meeting. We are holding prayer services this week in preparation for the meeting and are hoping for large results. The church seems to be in good working condition and each one is anxious for a successful campaign. We ask the people who read this notice to pray that our efforts may be richly rewarded through the ingathering of many souls. R. A. Hunter, Pastor.

Welch Memorial. — Our second quarterly meeting was held on Friday night, the 23d of March. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not as large as usual. However, the meeting was encouraging. Brothers C. R. Ward and C. C. Southern were nominated for delegate to conference.

Our Easter service this year was quite different from heretofore, owing to rough weather and so much sickness in the community and among the children. The choir prepared several selections and Mr. Fred N. Tate of this city came down and made us a splendid talk on Missions. Everybody seemed to enjoy it. The collection amounted to $21.34.

At the evening service our pastor, Brother Moton, gave us a wonderful sermon on the Resurrection. The collection amounted to $17.76. This goes in the general funds.

Last Sunday we were delighted to have Mr. and Mrs. Little, the field secretary of the young people's work, with us. At the 11 o'clock service Mr. Little gave us a splendid address on the young people's work, and it was enjoyed hugely by a large crowd. We hope to have them come again.

At two o'clock the largest crowd that has ever assembled at Welch church met to pay their last tribute of respect to J. D. Taylor, who died suddenly last Friday morning. Mr. Taylor was one of our oldest members, was a good man and will be greatly missed at his church as well as in the home. The family have our sympathy. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Brother Moton. After the funeral he was taken to Fairfield church and a short service held for the benefit of his friends where he used to hold his membership, and that could not attend the funeral at Welch, after which his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

At the evening service Brother Riddle preached a good sermon, which was greatly enjoyed. At the close of the service four or five young men came forward and asked to be remembered in prayer by the Christian people. Come again, Brother Riddle.

The first Sunday in May is when our special meeting begins and all indications are pointing to a good meeting. We are expecting Brother Pierce from St. Paul church to do most of the preaching.

The Christian Endeavor society held a social in the basement of the Sunday school rooms last Saturday night.

We have an interesting Sunday school and good attendance, but we hope to see a much larger attendance, as there are lots of children and grown folks as well that never think of going to Sunday school anywhere. We give them a hearty invitation to come to our church.

Prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

The health of the community is very good at this writing. Much love to Herald and readers. Mrs. J. W. M., Reporter.

Reidsville. — Yesterday we had five new members in our Sunday school. We have recently organized a Baraca, Philathea and Junior Philathea class, and each seems to be doing well.

Our pastor used ''Net Mending'' as his subject at the eleven o'clock service. He compared our lives to nets, telling how first a net that needs mending must be cleaned before it can be mended, and it must be mended before the fisherman can catch fish; just so with our lives, we must have the sins blotted out and accept Christ as our personal Savior before we can accomplish anything worth while.

Five members were taken into the church at the close of the service: Mrs. Ellen Crawford, Irene Taylor, Adrian Thompson, Harry Allen and Paul Bondurant. We cordially welcome them into our church.

At the evening service we had a good sermon, the text being Mark 12:34, ''Thou art not far from the kingdom of God.''

Miss Annie Forrest came over last Friday and organized the Sunshine Circle, a missionary society for the children; they seem to be taking great interest in it. Mrs. J. D. Johnson is the efficient superintendent.

The Christian Endeavor society is doing very nicely. The prayer meeting committee has appointed leaders for two omnths ahead.

Miss Mabel Williams of the Bonlee high school faculty spent the week-end with her parents. Madge T. Dixon, Press Reporter.

April 23.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Whitaker, was here last Sunday, but owing to the College campaign did not preach in the morning. Mr. Idol of High Point and Mr. R. L. Leonard of Shiloh gave us a splendid talk in the interest of the College. Our church was the first to go over the top in our College campaign.

Our Sunday school is growing as spring comes on. Offering was taken Sunday for our Children's Home. Amount, $5.38; 84 present. Best wishes. Reporter.

DIED.

Miss Bertha Barrow.

With hundreds of others I have heard with profound sorrow of the passing of Miss Bertha Barrow at her home near Kernersville. In her life there was much as an example to others. She was a woman of most estimable qualities. If there was anything in her life omitted which she believed to be her duty, those closest to her never knew it. Her loyalty to her church was beautiful. She was always present at every service unless providentally hindered.

Miss Barrow was born October 17, 1882, and died March 30, 1923. In early life she professed faith and united with Pine Grove Methodist Protestant church, where she remained a faithful member until death. Her going has brought a sense of loneliness in the home, which was made up of two brothers and two sisters. May grace be multiplied to those who feel the loss most keenly and may God keep for His own service those who still remain. It was her request that the writer conduct the funeral service, but the message did not reach him in time.

She now rests peacefully in Pine Grove cemetery, within the shadow of Pine Grove church, the church she loved so much.

H. L. Isley, a Former Pastor.

In Memory of Edwyn Troxler.

Sleep on, little Edwyn, and rest your tired limbs, you have made so many steps and gladly done so many things to help me with my earthly cares, so many times you put your little arms around my neck and said, "Don't cry," as you said to me in the hour you left me. Always with the light touch, kind and sympathizing words, you lightened my burden; but today my heart is sad, for I cannot hear that sweet voice that I loved so well, or feel the little arms around my neck, or hear the little skip that I was so accustomed to hear.

When I think of you, little darling, gone from my sight, my heart aches and tears flow unbidden; but when I think of you with Jesus, how happy you must be, free from all pain and suffering, with Jesus whom you said you wanted to go live with when he had your place ready, oh, how blest, supremely blest!

Your stay with me, darling, was such a short one; yet, oh, how sweet! Little did I think when you told us that you had finished your work, that it was so true; but the many sweet things you said about that beautiful home you were going to occupy some day make me believe that you knew your work was finished. How short was the life, yet so complete.

I loved you, little darling, more than words can express; but Jesus said he must have you to make heaven more complete, and some day, I know not when, I will meet you at that beautiful gate.

"One family we dwell in Him,
One church above, beneath,
Though now divided by the stream—
The narrow stream of death."

One less at home, the family circle broken, one more in heaven. Mother.

Williams.

Mary Elizabeth Williams was born October 23, 1834, and departed this life March 23, 1923, age 88 years and five months. Before her marriage she was a Miss Clark. She was married three times: first, to W. A. Mitchell, second to J. L. Williams and third to B. T. Williams, all having departed this life before her.

For the last few years she has made her home with her niece, Mrs C. L. Pearson. She had suffered much for the past two years from the misfortunes of a broken limb, from which she never fully recovered.

In his early life when but a girl she professed faith in Christ and united with Philadelphia Methodist Protestant church, where she remained a loyal member until death and was the oldest member of her church when called up higher. She attended church as long as she was able and one of her great desires during her sickness was to be able to go to Philadelphia again. Her body was laid to rest in the Clark burying ground at her father's old homestead in Brunswick county, Virginia, to await the resurrection.

James H. Trolinger.

Dodson.

Mr. William P. Dodson, born August 27, 1859, departed this life Thursday afternoon, April 12, 1923. In his death we have lost a true neighbor, his church a devout Christian, his family a devoted husband and loving father. Mr. Dodson had been in declining health for almost a year; all that skilled physicians and loving hands could do was done, but God saw fit to call him to his eternal home. And we fully trust that he was prepared to go when the summons came.

He was married to Miss Mary Lizzer Howard and unto this union were born six children, one of whom preceded him to the heavenly home several years ago. Funeral services were conducted in the home by his pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, Friday P. M., April 13, after which he was laid to rest in Chestnut Ridge cemetery.

He is survived by his devoted widow, four sons, one daughter, several grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends who grieve that he has gone from us. We extend to the family our most sincere and heartfelt sympathy.

The blow was hard, the shock severe
To part with one we loved so dear;
God loved him too and thought it best,
So took him to his heavenly rest.

We cannot, Lord, Thy purpose see,
But all is well that's done by Thee.
The trial was hard, but we will not complain,
But trust in God to meet again.

A Friend.

In Memory of Hilda.

Our hearts were made sad Tuesday, April 10, when death took away little Hilda Josephine Bayne. She was born February 21, 1923. She stayed only a short time with us, but we will miss her. We will meet her on the golden shore where parting comes no more. The little form was laid to rest in Fort Mill cemetery. She leaves father and mother, little sister, and many other relatives. The funeral was preached by Mr. Keaton of Ft. Mill, S. C.

Weep not, loved ones, for Hilda: she is not dead but only sleeps. She is resting in the burying ground with a lily in her hand. I pray God to keep us safe till we meet in that happy land.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

We the members of Bethel foreign missionary society, wish to express our sympathy and love to one of our sister members, Mrs. Oscar Braxton, who together with her husband and son are mourning a beloved son and brother, June Braxton, aged 16 years, who was a noble Christian, beloved by all who knew him.

Whereas, God has bound the members of our society together in the bonds of unity and love, when one of our members suffers, we all suffer with her, especially those of us who have been called upon to give up those who are nearest and dearest to us. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in their great sorrow, and commend them to our father's care. He alone can heal their broken hearts.

Resolved, That we bow humbly to His will, knowing that He doeth all things well;

That somewhere in His vast kingdom He had a place it was necessary for June to fill.

Resolved, That we follow the example June set for us all. He who, in sixteen years, lived such an upright, obedient Christian life at home and school, that, as his teacher expressed it, "His influence has been shed abroad and made better the lives of all his associates. We know his influence yet lives and many will live a better life because of him."

Dear parents and brother, we would not tell you not to weep, we would rather weep with you. Oh, how our hearts go out to you. We know how you feel, for we, too, have loved and given to God our dearest and best. God always wants those best prepared for the work He has for them to do. A lamb without blemish. We thank Him that He does. We are loth to give them up, but God knows just when they are ripe for heaven. As we weep with you, so do we also rejoice with you, that God has considered you worthy to give to Him a son to fill a glorious place of honor in His kingdom. "Oh, blessed parents indeed, who deserve a son at school in heaven, whose teachers are God and the angels. A son fitted and prepared for God's own holy work." June is not dead. He has just begun to live. Oh, glorious immortal life where he can never die. A son you can not lose, for God keeps Him for you, and you can go to him.

terested enough to present it to the school or the class. They'll do the rest.

We lack—I am including ten dollars reported as raised but not yet received, from Burlington—less than ninety dollars on this $450. Let's raise that this week, and quit talking about it. I'm as tired of it as you are. But as long as the editor will give me space, I propose to keep on talking about it until the whole amount is raised. So if you want me to shut up—shell out! C. W. NOTES.

—The Turkish Nationalist Assembly at Angora has approved the so-called "Chester concession." This grant gives American business men the right to build two thousand miles of railroads in Turkey, rebuild the city of Angora, open up mines and oil fields, and develop other industries. In payment for this work the Americans are to receive valuable mining and oil rights in Turkey.

—The Chester concession gets its name from Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester, now retired. In 1908 he was sent to Turkey by American business interests, with the aproval of President Roosevelt, and succeeded in getting the concession from Abdul Hamid, then Sultan. Shortly afterward Abdul Hamid was dethroned. The Young Turk party which took over the government, accepted the Chester concession. Then came the war between Turkey and Italy (1911), followed by the Turkish-Balkan wars of 1912-13. The World War held the matter up again from 1914 to 1918, and the Greek-Turkish war has prevented action since. In the meantime the concession was never ratified by the Turkish parliament, although approved by each Turkish government. Now the Nationalist Assembly, the parliament, has ratified it.

—The Chester concession may be the cause of international complications. Great Britain, France and Russia tried to persuade the Nationalists not to ratify it. These nations do not like the idea of American business men having so much to do with the development of Turkey. They are seeking concessions there for themselves.

—The Chester concession includes rights in Turkey as it was before the war. Much territory was taken from Turkey as a result of the war. Some of this territory the Nationalists still claim. For example, the Mosul oil fields. The Chester concession gives Americans the right to develop a part of these fields.

—After the war Mosul was taken from Turkey and made a part of the Kingdom of Irak (Mesopotamia), under mandate of Great Britain. The Turks claim Mosul, while Great Britain insists that it is not and shall not be a part of Turkey. That was the chief cause of the break-up of the Lausanne Conference.

—The work under the Chester concession will be done by an American corporation called the American Development Company. Many prominent Americans are interested in this company. Among these, besides Admiral Chester, are General George W. Goethals, who built the Panama Canal, and Kermit Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt.

—Mrs. Olive Crawford, of Hartford, Conn., died at Trebizond, in Asia Minor, recently. She was seized with the deadly typhus while working for the Near East Relief. She is the fourth American N. E. R. worker to die since the Smyrna disaster last September.

—Stuyvesant Fish, of New York, dropped dead last week. He was a well known railroad executive and financier. At one time he was president of the Illinois Central railroad. He was seventy-one years old.

—Motor car manufacturers in the United States turned out 346,383 passenger automobiles and trucks during March. That is the record production for a single month. For January, February and March the total was nearly 900,000. The production for 1923 will reach three million, it it predicted.

—The Minimum Wage law, passed by Congress for the District of Columbia, is unconstitutional. That is the decision of the United States Supreme Court, announced last week. The law is unconstitutional, the majority opinion says, because it interferes with the right to make contracts. That right is guaranteed by the Constitution. Moreover, it gives women greater protection than men. Now that the Nineteenth Amendment is a part of the Constitution, men and women must be treated alike. Chief Justice Taft, in a dissenting opinion, objected to the decision of the majority. Congress and Legislatures, he declared, pass minimum wage laws because employers have the advantage in making contracts with their employees. Unless the law steps in, selfish employers will always pay lower wages than the services of their employees are worth. Low wages and long hours injure the health of employees. Laws to limit the hours of work have been held constitutional. There is no real difference, Justice Taft thinks, between limiting hours of work and fixing a minimum wage. Both protect the health, safety and welfare of the people. Therefore such laws come under what is known as the "police power" and are constitutional. That is the opinion of the minority.

—Henry Ford says he will not run for President. He is too busy making automobiles. Moreover, Mrs. Ford has no longings in that direction. She told reporters: "If Henry really went to the White House to live he would have to go without me!"

—Harvard University and its dormitories are open alike to all races and religions. This has just been decided by the Board of Overseers. President Lowell had at first ruled that negro students must live outside of the dormitories.

—During 1923 the railroads will haul more freight than ever before in the history of the United States. That is the prediction of officials of the American Railway Association.

—A Detroit multimillionaire who owns two large automobiles and employs a chauffeur thinks he has an excuse for not using them. "I like to ride back and forth in a street car," he says. "It is friendly, and you get into pleasant talks with people. It is no fun riding in a limousine with a chauffeur out in front and you sitting there stiff and alone. It's kind of pathetic."

—For more than a hundred years the Chinese people have drunk no milk because a Chinese empress who was tender-hearted and thought it a mean trick to deprive calves of their nourishment issued an edict against drinking milk. The Chinese have now begun to use it again, but it will be a long time before there are cows enough in China to supply milk for all the people.

—Monday's Greensboro News had on its front page a picture of Lieutenant Byron L. Reed who was a student in Adrian College, contemporary with the editor of the Herald.

—The editor of the Herald is wearing a black eye. A bar of iron used as a lever slipped and struck him on the right cheek bone. Instantly a lump as large as a partridge egg swelled out on the spot.

PROF. "HAPPY" GIVES HEALTH RULES.

Professor Cliff Goldsmith, of the Child Health Association of New York, tells school children how to have good health. His nickname is Professor "Happy." Last week he lectured in several Philadelphia schools. Here are some health rules that he gave the students:

"Eat green vegetables and reach the pink of condition.

"There is no pot of gold at the end of the rainbow—it's a pail of milk.

"Let your family tree be a fruit tree. By the way, there should be a cow at the foot of your family tree.

"Have horse sense and eat oatmeal.

"Run your engine on four cylinders of water per day.

"Just because you take a bath in private don't think the public can't tell whether you've had one.

"He who cleans his teeth has good taste.

"See that your two feet make a mile a day.

"The best way to improve your memory and keep wide awake is not to forget to go to sleep."

To high school girls Professor "Happy" gave this advice:

"Use a silver spoonful of red beets for a lip stick, let your rouge be concocted of creamed carrots, and get your vanishing cream from a cow—that's the way to be beautiful."

IN MEMORIAM.

Norman.

William H. Norman died March 4, 1923, aged 75 years, seven months and 20 days. He was married to Sarah Elizabeth Hartman June 6, 1869. To this union were born eight children, five boys and three girls, five of whom are still living, John and Frank Norman, Mrs. Guy Wright, Mrs. Claud Bridges, Mrs. Giddie Sweezie.

He professed faith in Christ in his early life and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Kistler's, and later moved his membership to Friendship, of which he remained a faithful member until death. A good man indeed is gone from amongst us, and one who was noted for his joviality, in a good, innocent manner, making all feel good to be in his presence; and being a sufferer for his past few years, he always bore all his sufferings with Christian patience. The interests of his church always seemed to take the first place in his heart, and he loved to attend all its services, as long as health would permit, and even after he was unable to hear well enough to understand a sermon he enjoyed being one to fill his place in the church he so much loved.

He will be greatly missed in his home, church and community. While we miss him greatly and mourn our loss, it is his eternal gain. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved widow, children, relatives and friends. A. L. Hunter.

MARRIED.

Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Winston-Salem, officiated at the marriage of two members of his choir last week, as follows:

On Thursday afternoon Miss Marjorie Johnson to Mr. J. S. Lineberry, of near Asheboro, the ceremony taking place in the pastor's study at Grace church, Greensboro.

On Saturday evening at eight o'clock Miss Clara Pegram to Mr. C. R. Simmons, of Winston-Salem, the ceremony being performed at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. C. V. Pegram, on Sprague street, Winston-Salem.

The very best wishes of pastor and friends are extended to these splendid young people, who are far above the average.

Yarbrough Chapel.—Our revival began Monday night, April 16, and continued through Sunday night, April 22, with Rev. L. W. Gerringer, of Asheville, as our pulpit help, although he did not get here until Tuesday night, April 17. I am sure much good has been accomplished by his coming. Rev. L. W. Gerringer, we enjoyed your excellent sermons very much, I am sure that the messages will bring good results, and we invite you to visit our church again. Our people at Yarbrough Chapel think that the Methodist Protestants of Asheville, N. C., have a pastor to be proud of.

I am sorry that I did not get to attend all the services, but my absence from part of the services was due to the fact that I had been appointed by the Sunday school to attend a young people's conference in Spartanburg, S. C., before the meeting had been announced, and as I had already been appointed I felt it my duty to go, although I regretted very much to be absent from a part of the services, which I am sure were very helpful.

Our pastor failed to announce the meeting until Sunday, April 15, before it began on Monday night, April 16; this perhaps was one cause of our people's not attending the services as they should, although some did not attend as often as they could. The attendance at church service Sunday night was very good indeed, and I am also told that there was a good congregation for the service Sunday morning. I hope that the people are going to take a greater interest in their work of the church in the future, than they have in the past.

Our church has lost a good member in the death of Mrs. D. Yarbough, of which an obituary will appear later.

I wish to thank the people of our Sunday school who made it possible for me to attend the Young People's Conference, held in Spartanburg, S. C., April 20, 21, 22. I enjoyed it very much, and will give the Sunday school some points that I have received, which I hope will be helpful.

Some have asked why I do not report as often as I did; this is due to the fact that we have not elected a reporter for this year, although I think that some member of the church should send in a report ocasionally of the work of the church. So you may readily see that I am not reporter of this church, although I think the members should feel free to report anything from their church that is worth while. Hattie Lou Bishop.

Cross Anchor, S. C., April 23.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. M. L. Moose, was with us Sunday, April 15, but did not preach, as we had some speakers with us that day. Mr. C. E. Cashatt and Mr. H. A. Moffitt made splendid talks in the interest of the College.

Since our last report we have been progressing nicely with our Sunday school and church work. Our church services are increasing in interest and attendance, we are glad to say. Pray for us to have the best year in the history of Spring Hill.

I am determined, God helping me, that no man shall rob me of my faith. I won't hide it away. I'll keep it right around with me, if I can. I will see that it gets exercise. I will feed it all I can, so that it shall not starve. I won't force it if I can avoid it, and make it weedy and weakling. It shall say no things it does not believe. When in real danger, if I can, I will go to some one stronger than I to help to keep it safe.. But when that necessity arises to whom shall I look for help? Surely, directly to him who I believe gave it to me. For I know whom I have trusted, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep it against that day.—W. T. [illegible]tell.

STANDING IN GOD'S SMILE.

A little boy, about two years of age, was in a room with his mother, when a bright ray of sunshine streamed in through the window on the floor. He went and stood in it, saying, "Me standing in God's smile, mamma." His mother said, "God grant that my darling boy may so live as to be always standing in his smile."

Many years passed away, the mother fell asleep, and the little boy grew to be a man. He grew in favor with the king, and tried to please him, and forgot to put God first. How to please the king was his great wish now; but God's smile was gone. One day he was looking over some old things in a drawer, and a parcel caught his eye. He opened it, and inside was a tiny pair of blue shoes, with this letter in his mother's hand-writing:

"These shoes were worn by my darling boy when he was two years of age. He stood in a ray of sunlight, saying, 'Me standing in God's smile, mamma.' God grant that he may so live as always to stand in his smile."

When the gentleman saw the little shoes and his dear mother's words, God spoke to him through them to show him how, instead of always standing in God's smile, he had stood in the king's smile and lost God's smile; and, asking God to forgive him, he turned to him with all his heart, and again stood in God's smile.

"God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all. If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:5-7.—Selected.

"Vain is the world, but only to the vain."

STORY OF EVANGELIST MACLENDON'S CONVERSION.

Rev. Baxter MacLendon—"Cyclone Mack"—has an entrancingly interesting story to tell when told as he tells it. We will give you some parts of it.

When he was fourteen years old, living in the country 12 miles from Bennettsville, S. C., where his father was a tenant farmer, a distinguished preacher came to Bennettsville. His father took him to hear the great preacher. The boy was much impressed by the sermon and near the conclusion of it he felt that God had called him to be a preacher, had set him apart to be a preacher even before he was born. The prospect of being a preacher profoundly agitated him. He turned pale and trembled so that his father noticed it and asked him whether he were cold or what was the matter. But the son kept his impressions as to the call to himself. He shrank from the thought of being a minister. He didn't want to preach. His aversion to the thought of preaching drove him to a wild life. He had a brother five years younger who used to protest against the kind of language Baxter used and threaten to tell their father. This brother became a preacher and died a few years ago when the "flu" was raging. Baxter passed from bad to worse, resisting or avoiding all good influences and associating with the worst class of men. He studied the gambler's art, gathered together all of the gambler's equipment, had books and wrote one on the subject, and became a most successful expert at the business. He had numerous cases in court, but often avoided conviction by packing the jury. He knew how to manage the police by bribery, browbeating or intimidation, all except one. the chief of police, and him he hated with a perfect hatred. He constantly carried a concealed revolver and used it on slight provocation. One day he deliberately shot a man with intent to kill. He shot him twice in quick succession, thought he had killed him, then fled to the swamps. He was in hiding there for a day or two; he learned from a friend that the man he had shot might possibly recover. When he heard that, he fell upon his knees and prayed God to keep the man from dying, saying, "If he dies, I can never preach." He thought of surrendering to the authorities but was advised by his friend to flee from the state. He went to Ohio and became a coal miner. In that occupation he narrowly escaped death several time. One time a great mass of stone fell and crushed the wheelbarrow he was pushing and left him uninjured. He heard the voice of God say, "I will give you one more chance to preach."

From the mines he went to Florida and opened up a most disreputable joint. Later he returned to Bennettsville to continue the same kind of disreputable business; pretending to run a barber shop, he was running a gambling joint.

During these years he had been tippling and had become a drunkard, blear-eyed, bloated, with will-power almost gone.

At this juncture an evangelist was announced as coming to Bennettsville to hold a tent meeting.

His aged mother, heart-broken by the wayward course he was pursuing, one day called in his business manager and asked how Baxter was doing. When told, "About as usual," the tears burst from her eyes and ran down her pale withered cheeks, and she said: "I have almost given up all hope for Baxter. If he is not reached by the tent meeting that is coming, I fear he will never be reached." And she wrung her thin hands in anguish. The business manager took MacLendon into a private room and told him about the interview with his mother and urged him to pull himself together and try to do better. The reply was: "You quit talking with my folks about me. I have troubles enough of my own."

The tent meeting came. He saw the preparations for it but took no interest in it. He had no thought of going. When the opening night came he went to his place of business, expecting some of his gambling pals. But no one came. From sheer lonesomeness he decided he would walk over to the tent and see what was going on, and perhaps gather up a crowd to come to his place and do business after the tent meeting was over. He stood far back in the crowd of onlookers. After the sermon was ended and an appeal was made to the unsaved, a man named Robinson whom he described as having a most gentle manner and a face most like that of Jesus Christ that he had ever seen, walked back through the congregation, came near to where he stood and looking him straight in the face, said: "Young man, a man that looks like you do, that has the appearance that you have, the devil is doing with him a lot of dirt in this country." The words pierced his mind and he could not get them out. Like a bearded hook, the more he pulled at them, the deeper they pierced. Instead of going back to his place of business he went home. His wife was surprised that he was home so early. That night he could not sleep. He tossed upon his bed, changed his position, and moved his pillow; but still he could not sleep. That man's words were ringing in his ears. His wife noticed his restlessness and inquired what was the matter, but he gave an evasive answer. The next morning he went back to the tent meeting and when the call for seekers was made, he went forward, scarcely knowing why or how. He fell at the mourner's bench. Preachers talked to him, but he found no peace. He went home to supper and while waiting for his meal slyly drew some loaded dice from his pocket and threw them away. That, he says, was his first step toward God. His wife learned from a neighbor that he had been at the mourner's bench in the tent meeting and proposed to go with him to the night meeting. She took him up to the front, and the sermon seemed to be directed especially to him. For days he continued in a state of uncertainty. He was making progress, however, for one by one he was sloughing off his evil habits. Having given up gambling, his next step was to give up carrying weapons. He took out his guns and laid them away to be worn no more. He had been addicted to chicken-fighting. After a struggle he consented to give that up. Then came bull-dog fighting. That too required a struggle, but he triumphed over it, he gave it up forever. But still he did not find peace. The last meeting of the series had come in the tent, and he was not saved. He arose and started home resolved to give the matter up when a woman met him and urged him to consider well, saying that he was probably deciding his fate for all eternity in what he did in that hour. He paused and considered further. His duty to preach appeared to him. He said, "Lord, I will preach," and instantly peace came and he knew he had passed from death unto life. He cried out, "I am saved!" His old mother heard him, and though she was an unemotional Presbyterian, she shouted her bonnet off and her hair down, and there was also joy in heaven over this sinner returned to God.

Mr. MacLendon stood upon the top of the pulpit and said, "If you want to see a man that God called to preach, look at me. I am as much called to preach as John or Peter or Paul or Savonarola or John Wesley or Spurgeon or Moody." And many of the people expressed their approval.

—Rev. R. S. Troxler conducted a good meeting in our Randleman church last week. Brother Thompson, the pastor, was kept at home much of the time by sickness in his family.

—Rev. J. D. Williams was among the attendants at the MacLendon Tent Tuesday night.

QUIET TALKS ON THE SIMPLE ESSENTIALS.

By Mr. S. D. Gordon.

No. 2—The Big Five.

Shelter of roof, warmth of fire, shoes for little feet and bigger, bread and bed,—these, and the like, take our strength. The circle of loved ones, where one's very life centers, this must be cared for, and well cared for.

Yet our thoughts go insistently toward the real things, the essentials. The spirit life is the real life, of course. I live in my body. I think through my mind. I, myself, am a spirit. We long to understand clearly, and so to be at rest inside. We can't all be experts. The day's too short. And cross-currents run so strong. How shall the earnest man know?

Well, there are Five Simple Essentials for a strong pure true life. There is a Book of God. The outstanding thing in the morals of life is there, there is an outstanding Book. The outstanding Book of all books is this Book. This Book gives the true moral standard of life.

It states simply and clearly the moral principles that fit into every circumstance, and difficulty, and problem. Then there's more. It tells of the power that helps a man pull steadily toward that standard. And it tells of the Friend that meets your sore need, answers your perplexing questions, and solves your knotty problems. This old Book of God is utterly dependable.

Then, there is a Man. The outstanding thing about the Book is this: There is a Man. That Man lived the moral standard of life as no other has, actually lived it. He is our Brother Man, our fellow, the one solitary God-Man. In him God came to us men, and comes to us.

He was as really God as though only God, and nothing else. He was as truly a man, a really human man, as though he was only a man, and nothing more. All there is of the human was and is in him.

And all there is of God was in him as he worked in that Nazareth carpenter-shop amid the odor of the pine shavings, and then taught, and healed, and loved, and fed, and mingled freely amongst men. The outstanding thing about this Book of God is this God-Man.

Then the Man—died. The biggest thing about his life is the way his life was snuffed out. The knot on the end of that thread catches your eye at once, and holds it. There is a thread. What a thread! What a life!

Then the thread knots, a toughly knotted knot. That knot has caught the eye, aye, the heart of the race. It's been discussed and discussed. But the thing that stands out biggest is the fact of it. There is the knot. He did die, as no one else has, or could, or can.

And there's the Fourth Thing that stands out, ugly and gaunt, dirty and odorous. But it's there. That's the fact of a Break, man's break away from the Father-God. The common word is sin. The root of the thing is simply that, a break, a bad break, away from the mother-hearted Father's desire and request.

And, ''and''—the striking thing to mark just now is this, that Man tied up in an unravelable knot these two things, his Dying and that Break. He himself said that Break made the Death necessary. The more you think into it the less fully the explanations seem to explain. You feel there is always a something more. But the explanations are secondary. The fact is the thing. The Death is the out-standing fact.

And the Fifth Essential comes crowding quickly in. And shows up at once what a princely brood and breed we men are of. Every man is a king in his right to choose. The man that knows about this Man must take sides. Choice of the Man who Died covers all moral choices. And choice makes character. It is an essential that a man makes personal choice.

The oustanding thing in the morals of life is this: there is a Book. The outstanding thing of that Book is this: there is a Man. The thing that stands out about the man is this: he died.

And that Man said the oustanding thing about his death is this: it had to be. The thing called sin caused it. And the thing standing sheer out about the Man, and the Dying, and the Break of sin is this: every man that knows must choose. And every such man does choose.

And it is a striking fact, that looseness of thinking about the Book leads to looseness about the distinctive personality of the Man. Looseness there leads to loose ideas as to the distinctive meaning of his Death. That in turn breeds decidely loose ideas about sin, the Break with God.

Then follow loose ideas about the need of choosing Him in whom centers all moral source. And when moral choise loosens the moral fiber of character begins unraveling, straight away, and not slowly. Look around you today.

A London astronomical expert superintending the erection of a huge telescope in Cairo, noted the noon gun fired daily at military headquarters, and found their time-piece was regulated by the watchmaker's chronometer in the city. Inquiring there he was astonished to find the chronometer regulated by the noon gun! Does that sort of dog-chasing-his-tail standard get into the serious things, sometimes?

SOME HYMNS I LOVE.

By Luther Kendall.

Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life.

This is one of the newer hymns that has already won recognition. In it Dr. North, the author, proceeds on the conviction that Christianity is a social gospel—that Jesus is deeply concerned with the condition and aspirations of all sorts of people. He remembers that Jesus came down from the Mount of Transfiguration and healed the lunatic boy. Also, he expects that the City of God, heavenly ideals, will become a reality here on the earth.

Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear thy voice, O Son of Man.

From tender childhood's helplessness,
From woman's grief, man's burdened toil,
From famished souls, from sorrow's stress,
Thy heart has never known recoil.

The cup of water given for thee
Still holds the freshness of thy grace;
Yet long these multitudes to see
The sweet compassion of thy face.

O Master, from the mountain side,
Make haste to heal these hearts of pain;
Among these restless throngs abide,
O tread the city's streets again;

Till sons of men shall learn thy love,
And follow where thy feet have trod;
Till glorious from thy heaven above,
Shall come the City of our God.

BRICKBATS AND BOUQUETS IN LITERATURE.

By William Thornton Whitsett.

Throwing brickbats is a pastime that grows by what it feeds upon. It may be cultivated until it becomes a mania. One may become so practiced in the art that he can score many a skillful hit. There will never be a time when there are not choice objects of attack. One may be making ever so wild and unskillful flings, yet if he but assume a daring and pugnacious attitude it is easy to attract the attention of the injudicious and thoughtless. Humanity in all its various phases offers so many vulnerable points that many attacks may be warranted by a certain sense of misdirected justice. All of which comes to mind as one looks over the literary fields.. If one has once allowed himself to yield to frenzy and furor, he can find long indulgence along many lines. The cleaver and meat axe are tools that once made familiar instruments are very difficult to lay down. The revels and ravings that attend attempted destruction may drive away utterly the finer and sweeter harmonies. The jury may be all unanimous save for one obstreperous individual, yet he alone often feels that wisdom will die with him, and that all others have gone astray. The objector throws for the moment his own individuality into the limelight, and this gives him a greater satisfaction than he could possibly get from calling attention to some hitherto undiscovered merit and truth. Others may or may not get the space they deserve, but we may be sure that the kicker even at the kickshaws will have a heavy box-type headline.

We would be far from granting a general amnesty for all literary sins. Healthful sane criticism is all right; but any just critic will spend so much of his time in praise that he will soon be looked upon as a just and fair arbiter, and not as an ogre longing to pounce upon some luckless soul. The budding genius needs sunshine; he needs sympathy; he needs appreciation and honest suggestion; he needs charitable consideration. Grant that he does promising work, then it may be that encouragement will lead to a development of his powers, and a ripening of his talent, but little dreamed of in his earliest efforts. If William Wordsworth had stopped in his early days when some regarded him only as a poetaster, and a very poor one at that, English poetry would be lacking some of its masterpieces. There are those who hold that true genius in any field will finally come into its own despite any and all rebuffs, but this is a fallacy. The sensitive temperament, the artistic creature, capable of the best and highest work in the mental and spiritual realm, may not be expected to always survive "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune." We cannot agree with that teacher of moral philosophy who once argued that the proper way to develop great spiritual leaders was to throw all inquiring souls out into seas of doubt and uncertainty, trusting that those worthy of survival would be able to swim to the shore. Some of the best would undoubtedly be drowned by this method.

When Odysseus set out for Troy he was careful to choose carefully the mentor for Telemachus, and the guardian of his household; so one setting out for the Troy of literary attainment may well long for some mentor and faithful counselor in whom he may place implicit confidence. Alas, that he must be so frequently set upon by brigands.

When critics disparage, and raise their raucous cries of disapproval it often springs this question, "By whose verdict have they become so high and mighty, and who has clothed them with the power of life and death?" By what measure shall they themselves be measured? Why clanks the armor of Saul so loudly upon their shrivelled shanks? If the average author were to indulge in half the conceit displayed by many critics he would soon be callous to all criticism whatever. As Allah the Beneficent said,—"There are two kinds of good critics: those that are dead, and those that are kind in heart in encouraging all honest attempts of sincere work."

For all practical purposes of any good to be derived, it is hardly necessary to lose time trying to combat the destructive school of criticism; the time may be spent to much better advantage in engaging all possible force in constructive efforts. Light finally triumphs over darkness whether we dispute and argue about it or not.

DENY THYSELF.

We find in 2 Chronicles, 31st chapter, about the great work of Hezekiah. He first destroyed idolatry, which must be done before anyone can worship the true God. Second, he caused the people to distribute and bring in the tithes to the Lord. So when we get rid of all our selfish desires we too will do likewise. We hope all will read this chapter and see what we can do, if we only will. We have come to believe that we can have an idol set up in the heart and hardly recognize the fact because self is so anxious to believe it should have a little privilege. We might have some appetite which if we gratify we certainly think more of that than our Lord and Master. We know if we indulge in too much food and in some kind that will prevent our being at our very best, self comes first. In other words which do we think most of—our own selfish desire or the Lord? We say we will gratify self when we say it is so much satisfaction to me that I just will use tobacco, and we might gratify that appetite and please self and also might weaken our bodies and spend a large sum of money. Which do we love most—tobacco or God? Thou shalt have no other God beside me.

"The dearest idol I have known,
Whate'er that idol be,
Help me to tear it from Thy throne,
And worship only Thee."

Are we to give account of what we spend? What will we answer at the last about the money we have chewed and smoked up all for self? This is something we feel is worth our consideration. We older people especially should see to it that we show to the world that God's grace is sufficient and if we desire to overcome we shall have the victory. We must deny ourselves of everything that does not strengthen us spiritually. If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off. The dearest idol I have known, help me to tear it from thy throne and worship only thee. I have almost come to the conclusion that it is a sin for me to pay any preacher the means God has put into my hands if he uses some of that money for such a selfish and needless purpose as to please the flesh by using tobacco. How can he preach the Gospel of the Son of God and leave that part out of it that says (Gal. 5:24) "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." Is it not the flesh crying out to be gratified when we partake of these things? We can not be honest and deny it. (1 Peter 2:11) "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul." (Matt. 16:24) "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." We can not be any more justified in using tobacco than strong drink, for it all costs us money and we are just only doing the things to gratify the flesh, satisfy our appetites; six of one and half-dozen of the other. that's all; and yet we condemn the man that spends his money for drink and does not feed and clothe his children as he should. (Prov. 23:2) "And put a knife to thy throat if thou be a man given to appetite." We would not use tobacco if we did not have the appetite. So it's all about the same: we are pleasing self and the Word teaches us we must deny ourselves daily. So we see when we give over to our desires and appetites we have not left all but are partially following the Lord. We read a story once about the things that we allow to remain in our lives after that we have decided for Christ; this story said that we could do lots of good things, but we were crippled Christians, not free but were hindered by these desires and appetites. So we could not do and be our very best for God. Some one asked Mr. Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, the secret of his greatness; he said, "I told God he could have all my life to use for himself." "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, and be not conformed to this world. but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable will of God."

EVANGELISM.

(Paper Read at Summer Conference.)

I realize very keenly that my subject is not confined within narrow limits. When I have revealed all that I may, within the time allotted me, there will still remain a vast array of truth unrevealed. In the presentation of this theme, I propose to emphasize, in a practical way, a few thoughts that merit our consideration.

I. Reaffirmation of Our Faith. As a starting point toward successful evangelism, we would do well to re-affirm our faith in the divine program. An intimation here of the possibility of a lack of the essential grace of faith, may gender an unpardonable protest; but the tendency of the world today is to cut loose from the moorings to which our fathers clung with tenacious grip, and to grasp only the problems of life that are not dependent upon faith for solution. The Scripture is replete with evidence that in the remote beginnings of time, Jehovah wrought out a universal program, and assigned to each member of the race a definite part for execution. The ultimate results of either harmony or discord on man's part, will reveal how nearly each individual has acted his particular role. To the minister of the gospel, God has committed a trust that is tremendously significant. The interests of His kingdom are either retarded by skepticism and doubt, or augmented by a living faith.

It occurs to me that the divine program for a successful evangelism is rooted and grounded in faith. The Evangelists of the apostolic days adhered unwaveringly to the doctrines which they preached, for they knew that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe. The secret of the success obtained by evangels like John, Peter, Paul, Philip, the Wesleys, Moody, Sankey and others, was their unflinching faith in the God of the gospel which they preached. No greater challenge has ever faced the ministry than the challenge facing us today. The priests and prophets of Baal have erected their altars, placed their sacrifices thereon, and are now challenging us to prove by our faith, and by our loyalty, and by our lives, that our God is greater than theirs. Fellow ministers, are we equal to the task? It is not primarily a question of ability, since all the divine resources of both heaven and earth are at our command. It means a willingness on our part to accept it. It also means faith. If carried to the extreme test, it means a faith that subsists only in martyr's blood. Today marks the beginning of a new period in evangelism. Tomorrow, and each succeeding day marks the beginning of new and untried experiences. To the end that the victory may be ours for God, let us each day renew our faith in Him, as we rally our forces around the cross. Then will we rejoice in His salvation, and in His name will we set up our banners.

II. Doctrines Emphasized. I now call attention to some of the cardinal doctrines that should be emphasized in evangelism.

First, the doctrine of sin. No doctrine in the Bible is treated more extensively than that dealing with sin. If it were eliminated from the Book, the fact of the existence of sin and the depravity of the human heart, with their consequent out-growths, would eternally declare that all have sinned, and come short of God's glory. While sin may be viewed from many angles, it does not in any case offer a pleasing theme. In these modern days the world is asking for a palliative gospel, and there is a tendency to present a gospel that pleases, rather than a gospel that purges. No exponent of evangelism dare to speak with uncertain sound regarding sin, since the progress of the Kingdom is retarded only by such hindrances as are rooted and nurtured in it.. Sin killed the prophets, drove the martyrs to the stake and the Savior to the cross. In our day sin is robbing the heart of its purest joys; it is scattering shattered fragments of once happy homes that crumbled and fell; it is piercing the heart of the world with its venomous sting, leaving it bruised and bleeding and sad. The dethronement of sin, and the hastening of everlasting peace is the goal to be sought by every divinely sent exponent of eternal truth. The command to us is no less emphatic and impelling than the command to Jonah: ''Arise and go to Nineveh, and cry against it; for their wickedness is come up before me.''

The advent of sin into the world necessitated the coming of a mediator to set man aright, who, by his sin, was wholly at variance with God. With the restoration of the race in view, the angel appeared unto Joseph, announcing the coming of the divine Incarnation, saying: ''Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for He shall save his people from their sins.'' The divine and unalterable decree had long before gone out that ''the soul that sinneth shall die.'' Thus the penalty of death passed upon all men, and all men alike must share in paying the price. But, happily for the race, the divine incarnation of the Son of God provided a remedy for man's chosen state of sin and depravity, by which man might not eternally die, but by which he might eternally live.. Now, unhappily for the race there springs forth a class of disbelievers, who boldly attempt to question the veracity of the Bible, particularly that portion relating to the divinity of Jesus Christ. Scientific men are delving into the intricate forces of nature, in search of a scientific formula by which they may solve the problem of Jesus' divinity. Failing to find a formula that will harmonize with scientific reasoning, and the teachings of faith, many are ignoring the doctrine of faith and clinging for support to the findings of science. Let us concede for a moment that the extreme modernist is true. Then what have we? A church without foundation, a gospel without the cross, and an evangelism shorn of every enduring hope, and the world without a Savior. Brethren, shall we renounce a fundamental doctrine of our faith, and bow to the unholy dictates of a disbelieving world? I answer, No! a thousand times. No! In the doctrine of the divinity of Jesus, clings the sweetest, the purest, and the most ennobling emotions of the human soul. Our fathers and mothers have wended their way to the valley of the shadow, praising God in the sunlight of its influence, its inspiration and its power. The old ship of Zion, piloted by the once incarnate Christ, has carried her millions, and is destined to carry millions more has been rocked by adverse winds of criticism and doubt. Today we feel a slight jar; the horizon is somewhat beclouded, and the haven of safety seems far away; but the old ship has never missed port, nor lost a soul. By and by, the sky will be dismantled of her clouds; the sun of righteousnes will shine in all his glory, Jesus will rebuke the winds and the waves will cease; then the mists will rise, and all on board shall see the harbor, and shall anchor their souls to the eternal Rock of Ages Unless the Divinity of Jesus is emphasized in evangelism, our ministry will lose its power and the cross its charm.

Another vital doctrine needing added emphasis is repentance. Every minister knows too well that this doctrine is becoming too unpopular with the sinner; he knows also that many professors of Jesus in the church are too dignified and proud to repent. The forerunner of Jesus who blazed the trail for the coming of Him whose doctrine we profess to follow, began the preparatory work by preaching repentance. Later, Jesus began his ministry preaching and emphasizing the same doctrine. Still later, when the twelve were divinely commissioned as evangels, ''They went out and preached that men should repent.'' So far as I know, the doctrine of repentance has never been repealed by divine sanction. In the earlier days of our ministry, the aged veterans of the cross who grace us with their presence today, were not only emphatic in their denunciation of sin, but repentance was a common theme, inspiring unmatched oratory that drove conviction to the hearts of men. Under their voice, sinners trembled and strong men wept. We have undergone a change, and men are neither trembling nor weeping today. Are we better than our fathers who needed to repent, and repented? Or, do we belong to a higher order of men, that need no repentance? We may think that we have found a better way, and emphasize something else. A few days ago I tried to recount the number of sermons that I have preached during my ministry dealing exclusively with this vital subject. Then I tried to recount the number of sermons that I have heard by others dealing with this same theme. I must confess that my review has revealed a situation that is alarming. A vital doctrine of our faith is being passed over without due emphasis, and souls by thousands are being admitted, perhaps on terms easier than the terms of repentance. I am not a stickler for the Methodist mourner's bench, so much so as to recommend it as being the only open gateway to glory, but I am determined to cling till death to the eternal realities for which it stands. It is immaterial which way our recruits come. Whether they come by way of the mourner's bench, or by way of the extended hand, or by way of the signed card, makes little if any difference, provided they come by way of repentance and the cross.

I wish to call attention to one other doctrine that is vitally related to repentance, that should be emphasized in evangelism, namely: restitution. While there may not be an abundance of scripture setting forth a sepecific command that restitution in kind must be made for all offenses against our fellowman, we do have scripture telling by whom it was carried out, in principle at least, if not in fact. I refer here to Zaccheus. In his position he had unusual opportunity to appropriate the money belonging to others, to his own personal use, and may have been accused of doing so. When Jesus came into his home and touched his heart, Zaccheus said: ''Lord, half of my goods I will give to the poor; and if I have taken anything by false accusation, I will restore fourfold.'' It was not until the sinner was bent on making restitution that Jesus said, ''This day hath salvation come to thy house.'' As previously intimated it is difficult to persuade men to accept Christ these days. There are bad debts, crooked accounts, offended neighbors, family grievances, together with a long list of sins of varying shades that must be uprooted, and in some way perfect satisfaction made with the sufferer. On easy terms and broad propositions, scores may land in the church, paying a low fare without any reference to the past. It is easy to stimulate a soul to start a new day aright, and weave a perfect pattern; but few there are who are willing to gather up all the broken threads in the fabric of life, and readjust them so as to make a perfect pattern.

Men are not in harmony with men, nor with God. There are many broken harps in our world, and some are badly out of tune, filling the world with discordant music that grates upon the ear. It would be a great task to gather up and repair these broken harps. It would be a greater task to transform all the music that has been vibrated, and is being vibrated by lax strings, so as to harmonize with all the vibrations of all the instruments that are in perfect tune. Restitution will help repair and retune the broken human harp. It should by all means be emphasized.

In recent years there has arisen a tendency to shift the emphasis from the fundamentals of our faith to the less essential. We emphasize social activities, and we magnify the spirit of generosity; we glory in numerical gain, while cold and lifeless formality in many instances is royally displayed. Excepting the last indictment, each has its proper place, and I would not minimize their importance; but we can never carry on a program of effective evangelism, unless we stand firm and united on the basic principles of God's eternal Truth.

IV. Compensation and Results. In the next place I shall notice the compensation and results of evangelism. As before intimated, those who would be citizens in the kingdom of God's ministry, must not only adhere unwaveringly by example and by precept to the fundamental principles of our faith, but be regulated and attuned, so as to triumph in suffering, and for Christ's sake glory in tribulation. It is natural to ask, what shall we have therefore? Will the end justify the effort?

If there is a note in evangelism that sounds sweeter than any other, save the note that proclaims God's love, it is that of the inner consciousness attesting divine approval. We may wear our lives away working, planning, and praying for those we serve; we may cry against sin, and emphasize the fundamentals of our faith, and eloquently magnify God's love,—and then be excluded by the world and disowned. But all this is compensated for by the Spirit's gentle whispering: ''Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'' No experience in Paul's life was sweeter than that consciousness which inspired the immortal sentiments of his message near the close of his life: ''I am ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand; I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith.'' It is worth all it costs to minister in Jesus' name, and having done so to know that God approves.

As a result of an effective evangelism, sectarian prejudice will be eliminated. I am not saying that denominational lines will be abolished, and all come under one creed and government. That may never happen. There are witnesses here today to the fact that in some instances, the power and influence of a given church are being crippled by others, whose only object is to make numerical gain. Thus the plan and purpose of God to unify the world is defeated. When the heart of Jesus burst forth in a plea for unity, He was not craving union that would fuse, for example, the Methodists and Baptists, or Presbyterians and Disciples into one ecclesiastical body, but was craving unity of purpose, unity of spirit, unity of effort, and harmonious co-operation by all churches, in one great combine to save the world. This is to be one result of effective and efficient evangelism. I cannot tell when that good day will come, further than to say, it is your task and mine to hasten its approach.

IV. An Electrified Evangelism. Under the next general head, I urge the necessity for an electrified evangelism. What do I mean by an electrified evangelism? I mean an evangelism whose ministry is on fire for God. The great need of the ministry is contact with the spirit of the Divine. May we become so permeated, and so filled, and so electrified with the divine spirit of the master, that when we come in contact with men, a spark of the divine spirit will set men's souls on fire for God. When the captain of the hosts of Israel descended from the mount upon whose peak his soul was charged with the Spirit of God, he was so electrified with pity, compassion, and love for the sinning hosts of Israel, that he besought God to blot his name from the book of remembrance, rather than witness the destruction of the people whom he was chosen to deliver. Whenever the ministry of Jesus Christ awakens fully to the consciousness of the tremendous responsibility resting upon it, and travails under the weight of that consciousness, then and not until then, will souls be born into the Kingdom of God.

In tracing the life of Jesus from the cradle to the cross, and from the cross to the ascension, we notice that His supreme passion centered around souls that were lost in sin. Sometimes there is a marked contrast in the impelling motive of men, and the supreme motive of Jesus. Once a minister who had an unusual affinity for chasing game, rather than chasing men, was assigned to a certain charge. One day when the minister and several friends were out hunting, he was called to conduct a funeral. He accepted the call, though reluctantly. Just as soon as the last sad rite was over, he mounted his horse and rode rapidly in pursuit of his comrades. On his way he met an aged woman, of whom he asked information regarding the whereabouts of his friends. She very pointedly replied: "Follow this road to the top of yonder hill; there you will see a minister. Take the right hand road, and you will likely overtake them soon." "But why," asked the minister, "do you call a sign post a minister?" She replied: "Before you came into this community, we called them sign-posts, but now we call them ministers; because though they point others the way, they never go themselves." Brethren, the Kingdom will never be taken by men who merely point the way to Jesus. It is reserved for those only who lead the lost to Gethsemane, and with them, bathe their souls in Gethsemane's tears. The Kingdom is reserved for those also who resign themselves to the humiliation and pains of Calvary.

According to an old legend, a traveler was walking a street in a city, and stopped to gaze upon a magnificent marble edifice that was nearing completion. Hearing a voice nearby he went a few steps further and stopped again, this time to look upon a huge block of marble that was partially covered in dust and debris. A voice from within the marble was saying "Glory! Glory!" The passerby asked: "What is there about your unsightly environment to inspire you to ascribe glory?" The voice replied: "A few moments ago Michael Angelo passed by, and I heard him say: 'I see an angel in that stone!' He has gone now to get his chisels and mallets to carve out the angel. Glory! Glory!" Two thousand years ago the master artist came to earth. As he walked among men, realizing their lost and dying condition, and seeing only a remnant of the original image of God stamped upon the race, the Master was heard to say: "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." An unconscious, but instinctive cry of "Gory!" is finding expression today in the heart of the race lost in sin. Like the imaginary soul in the unsightly dust-covered stone, lost men and lost women are exultant in hope, that the final strokes of the Master's hand will transform them into real living personalities of matchless purity, and charming grace. The Holy Spirit is the directing and impelling power; the minister is the instrument in God's hand that he would use to transform the race. God forbid we should prove unfaithful, and thus make the joyous cry of the hope of the lost to be in vain.

Despite the discouraging elements in the field of evangelism, today is an inopportune time for pessimism. The Kingdom is at stake, but victory is ahead. For centuries men have died for the faith, praying meanwhile that the hour of victory might come.

During Napoleon's eventful career, he was sent with an army of men on a tour of conquest to Egypt. When they landed on Egyptian soil, the men became disheartened, and their spirits sank within them. But Napoleon who has been characterized as the man of destiny and the scourge of God, looked across the blue with his penetrating eyes, and gazed upon the great pyramids pointing their peaks toward the zenith. Impressed with the spirit and the indomitable courage of the personalities back of those enduring landmarks, he exclaimed, "Men! forty centuries are looking down upon us." These words inspired Napoleon's men; they went to battle, and won the victory.

The call to Napoleon to battle was far less significant than the call to us. The incentive to fight till death is more inspiring. Our goal in the conquest is not victory over world kingdoms, but victory over the forces of sin. From the birth of Jesus unto now, heroes and heroines of the cross have died in the fight. The history of Jesus, and the martyrs of our faith, as written and sealed in their own blood, is an eternal vindication of the power, and the personality, and the eternity of the gospel which we preach. Twenty centuries of sacrifices and martyrdoms for the faith are looking upon us today! May we imbibe that faith, which our fathers died to secure, that uncounted generations yet to come may triumph gloriously in the goodly heritage that we in turn hand down to them. Wm. H. Neese.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev F C Klein, Sec.

Last week we began reporting Rev. Mrs. F. W. Theophilus's evangelistic tours. She is the board's missionary at Dhulia. This continues it.

“Soon the men began to gather at our tent to hear what we had to say. We sat until late, and thanked God for such an opportunity. The women, of course, were nowhere to be seen—a stranger might think it was a womanless village—but they were there, many too, and all had no doubt looked at us well.

“Then the old Nyak, headman, told me that I could talk with the women-folk early the next morning, when all men would have to leave the Thanda—village. For this I was happy, and retired for the night.

“Soon after our arrival in the village we heard drums sounding, and were told that it was the gods-evening worship. I had also noticed a light burning in a new temple a short distance from our camp. A few years ago plague was raging here, and the villagers got together and built this temple that the plague might be stopped.

“Overcome by fatigue we were soon sound asleep, but not for long. Perfect quiet prevailed, even the huge dogs that had been hanging around us were quiet, when suddenly from the temple the mournful voice of a worshiper broke the stillness of the night singing praises to the gods and goddesses of Hinduism. Over and over in this mournful strain he repeated the names of Tukaram, Sita, Ram, and many others, praising them and their deeds, and giving them the victory.

“The friendly stars looked down upon that lone, hopeless, mournful worshiper as he tried to relieve his soul of a terrible burden, and those same stars looked down upon others in that same village whose hearts were filled with peace and happiness with a knowledge of sins forgiven, a Savior found.

“Early in the morning, according to promise, all the men disappeared, and the women were free to come out in a body. At first they were very timid, and looked as if the slightest movement would cause a general stampede. So my Bible woman and I were very cautious.

“First we talked about the babies, then schools for boys, gave them out-of-date Sunday school cards, and gradually they grew less nervous and came closer.

“We told them about the wonderful Christ, the Savior of the world, and how He could help and bless Hindu women who had so little in their lives. They were pleased, fascinated, and two old gray-headed grandmothers came and fell at our feet.

“As I looked upon those eager, upturned faces I felt that it was not what the lone worshiper had cried out in the night, Tukuram-Ki-Jaia, but that it was Christ-Ki-Jai—Victory for Christ.

“The dress of this caste is most peculiar. The women wear from ten to twenty yards of cloth gathered into a skirt, the jacket, which is all embroidered in beautiful blended colors, extends to the sides and arms leaving the whole back exposed. Heavy bell-shaped jewelry hangs all about the face, fastened to the hair at the sides of the forehead, while at the back fastened to the coil of hair, is a tapering wooden peg about one foot long, which stands up forming a center pole for the head-dress that hangs like a tent over face and upper part of the body, covering the jacketless back. This wooden peg affair is not put on until the day of marriage, and then must be worn until the woman becomes a widow or grandmother.

“It was with hearts full of praise and gratitude that we left the Thanda at Palad, and we believe that seed was sown, a wedge driven in, and we also believe that you will again hear about these dear Wanzaris.”

THE JAPANESE BANNERS.

The two beautifully embroidered Japanese banners will be awarded again this year: one to the Sunday school sending in the largest amount for foreign missions, the other to the Sunday schol sending in the largest amount in proportion to membership.

Be sure to send in the total membership of your school, when you send the offering to your conference treasurer. If you have sent in your offering, please drop him a card stating what is your school's membership, if you omitted that.

THE HOLY SPIRIT AND THE SECOND COMING.

It is surprising how few people think of the Holy Spirit as the third person of the Trinity. As the Father and Son are real persons, so must the Holy Spirit be also. We are baptized into the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, three equally distinct persons. The same distinct personality appears in numerous instances. “Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers” Acts 28:25. He teaches: “He the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say” Luke 12:12. “He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment” John 16:8. “He helpeth our infirmities and maketh intercessions for us” Rom. 8:26. “He may be grieved” Eph. 4:30. “The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them” Acts 13:2. “He shall testify of me” John 15:26. He guides. “He will guide you into all truth” John 16:13.

For several years I have had free access to all kinds of literature on the second coming of Christ and have heard and read several sermons on the subject by different evangelists, all of which and whom seem to me to convey the wrong idea with the exception of one recently by our beloved pastor which to my mind is more in accord with the teaching of the Word than anything I have heard or read on the subject. It seems to me most of those discussions on this subject forget the fact that there is such a person as the Holy Ghost, the third person of the Trinity, and that when the Son finished his work and ascended to the Father leaving his disciples dumfounded. They stood gazing up into heaven and there they must stand watching and waiting for his return perhops thousands of years. But not so, two men stood by in white apparel which also said (this implies that the son had said it before), Why stand gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go; go up to Jerusalem and tarry until you be endued with power from on high (and I take it from heaven). So they went and assembled in an upper room all of one accord in one place and after ten days, suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a mighty rushing wind and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, the third person of the Trinity, and “He is to abide forever,” John 14:16. “Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world” Matt. 28:20. His mission, the Son came to redeem the world and make it possible for all men everywhere to be saved. The Holy Spirit to “convince the world (mankind) of sin and of righteousness and of judgment” John 16:8. “He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you” John 14:26. “He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God” Rom. 8:27. He is to cast out devils. Matt. 12:28. We through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body. He will guide you into all truth. He fills us with power to be witnesses at home and abroad. Acts 1:8. He bestows gifts to profit withal. 1 Cor. 12:4, 7. We are commanded to be “filled with the Spirit and grieve not the holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.” “Quench not the Spirit.”

The Holy Spirit associated in the creation (Genesis 1:2, 26), in redemption (Mark 1:9, 10, 11), and is now in the world building the church together for an habitation of God Eph. 2:22). The church guided by Him (Acts 20:28) is to send the gospel of the blessed Son of God to the uttermost parts of the earth. “Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. Make full proof of thy ministry.” “Thus hasting the coming of the day of God” 2 Peter 3:12, 13, 14.

I must confess I am not as much interested when this day will be as I am that I may as one of God's humble servants do my full part in hasting it as I pass through this life.

E. C. Harris.

“BOUGHT WITH A PRICE.”

One of the profound truths of God's Word is that Christians are not their own, but are bought with a price, and that they are bound to glorify God in their bodies and in their spirits which are His. Arthur Detmers has put the thought into verse:

To know that what I have is not my own,
To feel that I am never quite alone;
This world I pray from day to day.
For then I know my life will flow
In peace until it be God's will
I go.

BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS

Rev. C. H. Beck, Sec.

"IN JOURNEYS OFT."

Southfields Church, Chicago, Illinois.

This new church was featured in the Methodist Recorder of July 7, and the story of the dedication was told by Dr. Davis editorially. Dr. Davis was the preacher of the morning. This is the third of our denominational enterprises in the city of Chicago and this new church is the best of the three. It has been under construction for some time, it having been deemed wiser to begin the erection of the permanent building, than to spend any part of the available funds on a temporary building. The day set for dedication was June 24, and the program for the day was fully carried out. The Board of Home Missions is making some investment in this enterprise, but the credit for the development is due to the aggressive leadership of the organizer, Rev. C. O. Harvey, D.D., and the loyal support of the North Illinois Conference. Friends in other sections of the church have also contributed to the support of this work. Your secretary was present during the day, and was glad to be a participant in the program of dedication.

Berwick, Pennsylvania.

On Sunday, July 1, I was to preach at Berwick. This has been one of our most difficult fields. The population is almost static, and the attitude of the American Car & Foundry Company, the one dominating industry of the city, toward other proposed additions to the industries of the city make it very difficult to secure other factories. The work has been in the hands of one of our best men, Rev. A. C. Struthers, and he has been working day and night to bring the work up to a high standard. However, it is hard to build up a church membership from a decreasing population. We shall have more to report concerning this church at a later date.

Trinity Church, Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Sunday, July 8, was spent in this city. The church is in what has become almost entirely a Negro district, and the only thing that seemed to be possible was to sell the old property to the colored people and secure a new location for our work. Contracts of sale have been signed and initial payments made. The transfer will be completed in the early fall.

A new location has been purchased in Ventnor City, corner Ventnor and Melbourne Avenues. A temporary chapel has been erected and services were formally opened on July 8. The day was ideal, and the services were a pleasure and a delight. This church gives fine promise of success in this wide-open field. The pastor, Rev. Geo. D. Jones, has been untiring in his efforts here. Services will be continued at the old Ohio Avenue location until the final transfers are made.

There is a field too in Venice Park, where several of our people live, which is well worthy of consideration. The one limitation set for our work is financial. If this can be overcome, we can organize churches more rapidly than we could find men to take charge of the new fields. To us it seems almost a crime that the church should fail to make the largest development possible in the homeland. Our Heavenly Father will hold us responsiblbe for our every oportunity. Charles H. Beck.

THE BOY MARTYR.

In the earliest ages of Christianity the wrath of the heathen world was directed against the apostles and preachers of the gospel. It was, however, found that if preachers were scattered or slain, there was still a power remaining in the Gospels, the Epistles, and the sacred books of the Christians, and that Christianity could never be uprooted till the Scriptures were destroyed.

Accordingly, in the year 303, the Roman Emperor Diocletian signed a decree to tear down the places of worship and destroy the copies of the sacred Scriptures, hoping thus to blot out Christianity from the earth.

The scheme failed. Some timid traitors delivered up the sacred books for destruction, and thus brought on themselves the censure of the church. Others secreted and preserved them to the peril of their lives, while some handed over certain worthless books, and kept the treasured volumes which they loved.

The Scriptures could not thus be destroyed. Probably sixty thousand copies of them were then in existence, all copied out beforehand, and scattered throughout the Roman Empire; and all the power of Rome could not hunt them up and burn them. Besides, these books were copied into other writings, so that to this day two-thirds of the New Testament can be picked out of the writings of one single ancient writer, the learned Origen, who wrote about A. D. 200, or a hundred years after the death of the Apostle John. There are not a dozen sentences in the New Testament that cannot be found quoted in the writings of those Christians who wrote within three hundred years of the time when our Savior died. So it was impossible then for a heathen emperor like Diocletian, to root out the Holy Scriptures. A few years later, his successor, Constantine, publicly favored the Christian religion. About A. D. 331 he caused fifty copies of the Scriptures to be beautifully written out by careful penmen, that they might be placed in the churches of Constantinople, his capital, and there read publicly every Lord's day. So the Scriptures are still preserved by various names and we may read them daily.

But this was not the last effort that was made to destroy the sacred Word. When wicked priests and governors have ruled, they have often hated God's Word, and have labored to destroy it.

There are men today who would burn the Scriptures if they could lay their hands upon them. And when a man is opposed to the Scriptures, it is usually because the Scriptures are opposed to him.

One day when the persecutors were trying to drive the Bible out of Scotland, a party of soldiers who were riding along the road met a lad carying a book.

"What book is that?" said they.

"The Bible," said the little hero, with a fearless glance.

"Throw it into the ditch!" shouted the commander.

"Na," said the Scotch laddie, "it is God's Word."

"Throw it into the ditch!" repeated the captain; but the lad grasped the book more firmly.

"Then pull your cap over your eyes," said the cruel officer. "Soldiers, prepare to fire!"

For a moment the soldiers hesitated, but their leader's face was stern.

The lad did not flinch or waver. He knew what was before him, but the Lord was his strength.

"I will not cover my eyes," said he, firmly. "I will look you in the face, as you must look me in the face at the great judgment day."

Another moment, and the faithful boy lay upon the ground, shot through the heart by the cowardly persecutors.

It was by such heroes as this that the Scriptures were preserved and handed down to us. Do you wonder that Scotchmen love the Bible? Do you wonder that all Christians prize it as a precious treasure? Do you wonder that they want their children to read it, and learn it, and love it? Let us cling to the blessed word, and we shall hear the Master say to us, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth. Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." Rev. 3:10, 11.—The Little Christian.

"God never would send you the darkness,
  If He felt you could bear the light;
But you would not cling to His guiding hand,
  If the way was always bright;
And you would not care to walk by faith,
  Could you always walk by sight."

"'Tis true He has many an anguish
  For your sorrowful heart to bear,
And many a cruel thorn-crown
  For your tired head to wear.
He knows how few could reach heaven at all,
  If pain did not guide them there.

"So He sends you blinding darkness
  And the furnace of sevenfold heat;
'Tis the only way—believe me—
  To keep you close to His feet;
For 'tis always so easy to wander
  When our lives are glad and sweet.

"Then nestle your hand in your Father's
  And sing if you can you go;
Your song may cheer some one behind you
  Whose courage is sinking low;
And well—if your lips do quiver,
  God will love you better so."

DETERMINED BY THOUGHT.

A man's thought determines the moral climate of his life, and will settle the question whether his conduct is to be poisonous marsh or fertile meadow, fragrant garden or barren sand. The post of the mind determines the disposition, and will settle whether a man shall soar with angels in the heavenlies or wallow with swine in the mire. What we think about the things that are greatest will determine how we do the things that are least. What are your primary thoughts about God? The prints of those thoughts will be found in your courtesies, in your intercouse, in the common relationship of life, in the government of commerce, in the control of the body, and in all the affairs of home and market and field.—J. H. Jowett, D.D.

Thomasville Baraca Class.

One of the largest and livest organizations of Thomasville church ns the Senior Baraca class. The class recently elected officers for the last half of this year. They are as follows: W. J. Loftin, president; J. W. Clodfelter, vice president; J. T. Beatty, secretary; S. R. Westmoreland, assistant secretary; E. Teague, treasurer; J. W. Boyles, teacher; J. E. Templeton, assistant teacher; C. B. Way, press reporter.

Last Sunday morning a contest which had been on for several weeks came to a close. The class was divided into two groups, the Blues and Reds. The contest was in the form of a race around the world. Each new member counted for a certain number of miles. The Reds were victorious, winning the race by 3,500 miles. The Blues made 20,950 miles, while the Reds made 24,450. The losing group will entertain at a social to be held some time soon.

The class has 92 members on roll, and there were 40 members present last Sunday morning. J. W. Boyles, the teacher, is a very able teacher, and has a well prepared lesson each Sunday morning.

SERMON TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Sin of Indifference.

"And Gallio cared for none of those things." Acts 18:17.

Gallio was the deputy, or civil magistrate at Corinth. A mob of Jews had seized Paul and brought him before this deputy for judgment and punishment. Gallio refused to pass judgment on matters of religion. He had no convictions on that score. The Greeks, who were friendly to Paul, took the ringleader of this Jewish mob, and beat him in the very presence of the deputy, who did not interfere in the least. He was perfectly indifferent as to whether the right or wrong triumphed. "And Gallio cared for none of those things."

He was a type of a large class in our day. Thousands appear to be entirely unconcerned about the great conflict of the ages. They are neutrals in the battle of life. They stand off and let others fight it out. They don't care whether Christ or Satan is the victor in this struggle. They don't care whether people go to heaven or to hell. And they don't care where they themselves are going to spend eternity. In a word they are indifferent to the interests of the immortal soul, the welfare of the race, and the issues of eternal destiny.

Let us first note their Indifference to the Immortal Soul.

Jesus said: "What is a man profited, if he should gain the whole world and lose his own soul? "The undying soul is worth more than all the world of riches, honors, and pleasures. No material price can be placed upon the human spirit. The sacrifice of Jesus Christ upon the cross is God's measure of the soul's value. "Ye are bought with a price." Jesus "loved me and gave himself for me." It was a big price to pay, but God loved man so much that He was willing to pay this big price.

"What is the thing of greatest price,
The whole creation round,
That which was lost in paradise,
That which in Christ is found?

"The soul of man, Jehovah's breath,
That keeps two worlds at srife;
Hell moves beneath to work its death,
Heaven stoops to give it life."

To be indifferent to such a priceless heritage is a great crime against humanity and a great sin against God. To reject the only plan devised to save the soul is a most damnable iniquity. To say no to the gospel, to the Holy Spirit, and to conscience is to say yes to the fallen nature, to Satan, and to all the horrors of hell. To take it easy and drift with the tide of worldly conformity is to slide on the toboggan of unbelief into "the lake that burns with fire and brimstone."

Let us note next the Indifference to the Welfare of Mankind.

Personal unconcern is bad enough, but indifference to others is even worse, because there are so many more of them. "Am I may brother's keeper?" exclaimed the angry Cain. Paul replies to this question of the first murderer, when he wrote: "None of us liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself." We must live for others if we live at all to any worthy purpose. There is so much sin and misery and need in the world that call for sympathy, relief and uplift.

Besides what God has done for each individual by way of nature, providence, and redemption puts him under obligation to those for whom Christ died. Paul gives expression to this obligation in these words, "I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise."

But so many are like the priest and Levite who see their brothers in need and distress and pass by on the other side. The wail of the

THE WILLING WORKERS CLASS.

We want to commend to other Sunday schools the plan of the Willing Workers class of Mt. Carmel church, Forsyth charge. This band of workers has agreed upon a definite amount for the college and has gone to work to get it. They have a quilt, the squares of which are sold to those willing to help the cause along, for so much. The quilt remains the property of the class and may be donated to the college later on. Already a nice sum has been realized by them and they are just beginning to work it.

In sending check for instalment for his little folks Brother Curry tells us that they made their money selling bread, ice cream, etc. It reveals a well known fact that when people want to do a thing bad enough they are sure to find the way to do it.. These are fine little girls and I commend their zeal and good works to others. One fact is becoming quite plain as this campaign moves on, many children are deeply interested in the college, more so than their parents. And this cheers us as the days go by.

We have started the list of subscribers who want to pay the cost of furnishing a room in the dormitories. Already two are taken and we believe these rooms will be quite popular It will cost about $150 to furnish them. The money will be called for within six or eight months; it is not payable in three years as the regular subscriptions, as we will want to furnish these rooms before the school shall begin in the fall of 1924. We are willing to allow July, next, as the final date for payment of this subscription.

ARE YOU COMING?

It is to the August picnic, Saturday, August 18. We are expecting a big crowd, a good dinner, and great time. Put this date on your calendar and be sure to be present.

SIX GOOD "I WILLS."

I will respect my body and care for it.

I will keep good natured, cheerful and responsive.

I will take pride in work and in thrift.

I will show courage and self-control.

I will be dependable and do my duty.

I will each day turn to my Heavenly Father for strength and forgiveness.

SEND ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS TO ME.

Please to send all subscriptions to the college direct to me; it saves time and the possibility of losing them. All pledges are handled in this office, all subscriptions are listed here and credits are given by us on these subscriptions, and it saves others of having to be troubled with them.

Brother J. G. Rogers, having increased his subscription goes into the Hauser $1,000 class, and Brother J. W. Shaw into the F. R. Stout $500 class.

We are again reminding you of our need of funds. It is impossible for us to go forward any faster than our subscribers send us. If those of you who are in arrears would send in the amounts due it would greatly aid us at this time. Please to respond to this appeal without delay.

Very truly yours, R. M. Andrews.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit. — Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday with a splendid sermon. I am sure every one present enjoyed it very much. His sermon was along the line of "Prayer." He preached only one sermon Sunday, as he had other arrangements. We were sorry of this; but it could not be helped this time. As we did not have preaching Sunday night we had our regular Sunday night prayer meeting.

Our special meeting will begin at Zoar the fifth Sunday in this month, the pulpit help being Rev. Mr. Riddle. There will be two services on this day, with dinner on the ground.

So, dear friends, let us all pray for this meeting. Let us pray that there may be many souls saved.

Since my last report, I am sorry to say that we have lost one of our members, Mrs. M. A. Greene. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Best wishes to all.
Bertha Hartis,
Reporter.

There is an old story of a hero who, when an overwhelming force of the enemy was in full pursuit, coolly dismounted and repaired a broken buckle on his saddle girth. Then, at the very moment the prancing hoofs and eager spears seemed about to dash upon him, he leaped again to his steed, and, like a swooping falcon, vanished from their view.

Many Christians have yet to learn that in their daily life there is a precipitancy that is ruinous, a delay that is highly profitable. The man who, never pausing for prayer or communion with God, rushes madly into the business of the day, might seem at first thought to be gaining an advantage over the man who pauses to lift up his heart in prayer to God. But how often do we find that the one who has rushed impetuously into the thick of the day's conflict, finds himself left ingloriously in the dust of defeat before the day is over!

THE BOY WHO DARED.

Boys are boys the world around, no matter whether their skin is white or black or yellow. You might as well try to hold a tiger when he is after a goat as to keep a boy from going to see the circus parade as it goes through the street.

When the strange white face of a missionary appears in a village in the interior of China, it certainly is a whole show. Many a boy then turns out to see the "circus."

"I dare you to touch him," said Lien Hung to Li Ching. "I dare you," two or three others chimed in. Li Ching made up his mind he would show the boys that he dared to touch the white-faced foreigner. Slowly he edged up to the missionary, stopping now and then to screw up his nerves a little more. Eventually he got near enough to me. Reaching out his hand, he touched my arm—and then ran as fast as he could back to the group standing some distance away. "Good for you, Li Ching, you surely are brave!" Yes, he dared touch me and escaped without the least hurt! He was the hero of the day.

But why was he considered a hero? What danger is there in touching a white-faced missionary? I must tell you a story to answer your question.

A lady missionary had started a Sunday school for non-Christian boys and girls. After some months she had quite a number of them present every Sunday afternoon. She rejoiced over her success and thanked God for the many boys and girls she was reaching.

One Sunday afternoon as she was on her way to Sunday school she was thinking of those Chinese boys and girls whom she would soon see again. Generally she found some of them waiting for her in front of the little chapel. This day as she approached the chapel, she did not see a single boy or girl. She wondered if she was late. She looked at her watch. "Why, it's still fiften minutes before time to start," she said to herself. As she got to the door and looked in, her face was blank with surprise, for the room was entirely empty! Not a single voice greeted her with the usual "Bing-ang" ("Peace be with you"). She wondered if something was wrong with her watch, but as she looked at the chapel clock, she found it agreed with her watch. "Maybe something prevented them from coming early today," she said to herself. So patiently she waited. Two o'clock came and went, but not a boy or girl appeared. She waited until half-past two and then decided to visit the homes of those boys and girls, to find out what had happened.

Now, these children lived on sampans. Their ancestors for centuries past had lived on such boats. Yes, even pigs and chickens live on these small boats. These children were, as their ancestors, all born on these boats. When the child is still young, the mother ties a rope around him and then if he falls overboard, which happens at times, she just pulls on the rope and brings him back to safety.

In order to visit these homes the lady had to engage a sampan and row from boat to boat. This she had often done before. She knew just about where the little boat of each boy and girl in her Sunday school was anchored. Their mothers always met her with a smiling face and held out their hands to help her over into the boat. Then hurriedly a cup of tea and some watermelon seeds were brought to the foreign guest, after which they had a delightful chat with her.

But how different today! As she drew near to the boat where lived one of her Sunday school scholars, she noticed how the children hurried under cover, and how the mother dropped the bamboo shutter and would not come out, even when the sweet voice of the lady missionary called. That voice had always been welcomed before. The missionary could not understand what had happened. She had the boatman row her to one boat and then another, but the same reception awaited her at each one. At last she got desperate. She had herself rowed to the home of one of her best friends, and without waiting for an invitation or an outreached hand, she stepped over on to the little boat, lifted the bamboo shutter and looked in. There she saw the frightened mother and her frightened children sitting close together.

"Mother, please tell me what is wrong today. Why are you all so afraid of me? You never were afraid of me before. Why did none of the boys and girls come to Sunday school today?"

The kind face and sweet voice of the missionary lady soon gave the Chinese mother courage enough to talk. "Oh, have you not heard the terrible news?" she said.

"Why, no, what do you mean?"

And now that frightened mother told the missionary lady how last night a little boat came down the river with two white-faced foreigners in it. They caught two Chinese boys and carried them away. Then they took out their eyes and made medicine of them! "Of course, when we heard that, we would not let our children go to Sunday school, for fear they might be caught also."

The missionary then asked what boat the children were taken from. When told what boat she at once rowed to it, but the mother there said, "Oh, not mine, but Mrs. Li's." So she rowed to Mrs. Li's. But Mrs. Li said, "No, not mine, but Mrs. Dang's." All the afternoon the missionary rowed from boat to boat, but nowhere could she find the family whose children had been stolen. It was one of those strange stories, started by some one, which spread like wild-fire, everybody believing the tale to be true.

As a boy I used to hear the words, "If you are not good, the bogy man will catch you!" Well, in China the naughty boy will hear mother say, "If you are not good, the white man will catch you."

But you must not think that the boys in China are cowards. Even though they hear strange stories about the white-faced foreigner, they dare to touch him, as you have already seen. Yes, even better than that, thousands of boys have grown to know and love the white-faced missionary.

I want to introduce you to Liao Guoh In, another boy who "dared." I came to know him a few years ago while itinerating in the interior of China. As I entered a little chapel I met the boy. "Little brother, how old are you?" "Eleven years old." "Can you read?" "A little." "How many years have you studied?" "About five years." Thus I began my conversation with the lad in that melodious Chinese language.

I soon found out that he was a bright chap. He had been taught mostly in Chinese classics. He knew very little about modern science and modern history. The longer I talked with him, the more I realized that in him was the possibility of a coming leader in China. My heart burned with a desire to get him to go to our Boys' Boarding-School. I found he was anxious to go, so I asked his father. He said, "Yes, I'm willing, but you'll have to ask grandpa." "Well, what's grandpa got to do about it?" you may ask. In China, grandpa is highly respected, and as long as he is alive, his advice is asked and generally followed. So there was nothing else for the white-faced missionary to do but to go to see grandpa.

As I looked around that Chinese house I saw many idols. I soon realized that they had a powerful influence over grandpa. He worshiped them daily. When I talked to him about his little grandson's going away to school, I got a decided "No!" There were two things that caused grandpa to speak thus. In the first place, he did not want to offend the idols by sending his grandson to a Christian school, and then he did not want him to go so far away. No telling what might happen to the rat-boat while it shot down the rapids, and especially down the Ladder. He did not want his grandson, whom he dearly loved, to be drowned.

While in the house I looked into another room and saw a number of Chinese instruments hanging on the wall. "Who plays these?" I asked. "Why, little Guoh In can play every one of them!" I now wanted the boy more than ever, but I had to go away rather discouraged. Before leaving I told the Chinese pastor to try his best to get the boy to go to our school.

The next term, when school opened, I was happily surprised to see little Guoh In among the new students. He proved to be the bright student I knew he would be. He became the leader in his class.

About a year later, I again went up the Ladder in my rat-boat. My trip included a day's stop in the village where Guoh In lived. I was there only a little while when I received an invitation to a Chinese feast. It was not the invitation to the feast that made me happy (Chinese food is good if you like it, but it does not always agree with me), but because the feast came from grandpa!

The first thing I noticed on entering the house was that there were no idols to be seen. As we were sitting around the table, all eating out of the same dish, with our chopsticks, the pastor said to me: "Teacher, do you know that grandpa is the most hot-hearted [meaning most earnest] Christian we have?" "What do you mean?" I said,—for only a year ago he would have nothing to do with Christianity and refused to let his grandson go to our school. He then told me that after Guoh In got to school, he wrote letters home to grandpa, teling him about the school, about the missionaries, about his studies, and at the close of his letters urged grandpa to go to the little chapel. Grandpa loved Guoh In so much that he could not refuse his request. So he went to the little chapel, and soon became a most earnest Christian.

Take notice, boys, that the white-faced missionary could not get grandpa to go to church, neither could the Chinese pastor, but the little boy got him to go! Yes, that whole family became Christian. Here was a coming leader.

Now, Guoh In was a boy who dared leave home; he dared shoot down the Ladder in a rat-boat; he dared to go where the strange, white-faced missionaries lived. What has become of him? Well, after graduating from the Boys' School he taught school for a year; then preached for another year; after that he went to another school, from which he was graduated. He is now a teacher, helping train young men who shall have a vital part in shaping new China.—Rev. Frederick Bankhardt, in Zion's Herald.

We thank "J. W. C.," Asheville, for three work bags and 14 wash cloths. We don't know your name but we appreciate your gift.

There are many fine Philathea classes among our Sunday schools and we are fortunate to have one of those classes near us as they visit us sometimes. Last week the Lebanon class and some of its friends came and showered us with a sheet, a center-piece and a number of pillow cases, towels and wash cloths. A class like this one is an inspiration to any Sunday school.

Brother Marshall Byerly, superintendent of Friendship Sunday school, North Davidson charge, and about 100 men, women and children came on a picnic one day last week and had their dinner on the picnic table at the College. After a sumptuous dinner all inspected the College and then visited our Home for inspection.

They were so pleased with both College and Home that they returned to their homes feeling that from that time on the Methodist Protestant Church would mean more to them than ever before. They rejoiced because of what they have done and feel it will be so much easier to do their duty in the future.

We were favored with a visit from Mr. Millsaps, who has charge of the Thomasville Baptist orphanage farm, and a group of jolly girls from that home last week. They were so complimentary of our Home and seemed to enjoy their visit so much we have promised our girls to return the visit.

Look at the contributions. Have you done your part? Our number is increasing and we must increase our monthly offering.

A good rain has helped our crops wonderfully.

Don't forget the picnic on the College campus Saturday, August 18. The table is ready and water near. People more than a hundred miles away are planning to be there. It will afford you a splendid opportunity to see the College and the Home. H. A. Garrett.

BILLIONS FOR AUTOMOBILES, HOW MUCH FOR CHRIST THE KING?

The American people spend seven billion dollars a year on automobiles. This includes the yearly cost of the motor cars, the cost of up-keep and the cost of operation. Probably it does not cover the fines assessed upon motorists for violation of traffic laws nor does it include the loss of work and wages of men who are sent to prison for murder by motor.

But seven billion dollars is nearly one-third of the annual income of the people of the United States; also it is nearly one-third of our national debt.

Probably the pleasure, luxury, convenience and help to mankind afforded by the motor car—these are worth the seven billion dollars. But any nation which can afford such an expenditure can certainly give more to the finer works of righteousness. Benevolences need more money. Missions need more money. Religious education needs financial assistance. —Christian Statesman.

DEFINITENESS IN PRAYER.

Much prayer is wasted breath because there is no definite aim or purpose. So much so-called supplication is formal and insincere. The following of such a good custom as praying will amount to little unless the heart is in it. Wandering thoughts at the throne of grace will make our petitions altogether in vain. To stay the mind on the Father of all mercies is indispensable to successful supplication. For "prayers without thought never to heaven go."

The teaching and practice of Jesus lay peculiar emphasis upon definiteness in prayer. He promptly responded to all such appeals. To the leper's direct entreaty, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," He replied, "I will, be thou clean." The indirect request of Bartimeus, "Thou Son of David, have mercy on me," met with no response. But when Jesus asked him, "What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?" and he replied, "Lord, that I might receive my sight," he got what he wanted.

It is a mistake to pray for everybody in general. Such praying usually benefits no one. But to pray for one or more persons by name is most likely to bring results. It is also unwise to invoke all the blessings of redemption in one general supplication. Those who do this don't really want anything from God. It is the definite longing of the soul, definitely expressed, that God graciously answers. "We are not heard for our much speaking." It is the short, direct, and definite petitions that prevail with God.—The Word of Life.

—Brother Stubbins was preaching in the western part of the state last Sunday and for days after. His pulpit was filled very acceptably by Rev. Claude C. Jones, pastor of Elm Street Christian Church, whose place was taken by Brother J. Norman Wills. Brother Stubbins is expected home by next Sunday.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Henderson.—Yesterday was a day with a variety of experiences. Late Saturday afternoon Rev. J. R. Anderson, President of the Georgia Conference, drove up to the parsonage and after being invited to spend Sunday with us he accepted the invitation and preached a splendid sermon at the morning church service. Immediately after dinner the pastor was called to the hospital on account of the death of Walter Lambert, a young man from out in the country a few miles and brother of Mrs. J. J. Taylor and Mrs. Pearl Sprouse of our church here. He had been hanging between life and death for several days. When the writer visited this young man in the hospital last Wednesday he said that his greatest regret was that he had neglected the spiritual side of life. After quoting the promises to him he accepted Christ as his Savior and seemed to be happy in his new experiences. Just before he died yesterday he told his sisters he was dying and asked them to meet him in that better land. The funeral will be held at Mt. Auburn Christian church this afternoon.

Then at three o'clock yesterday the funeral of Mrs. Samuel Currin who died in Winston-Salem Friday afternoon, was held in the church. Mrs. Currin was 73 years of age and had been a member of our church here since 1881. Before her last marriage a few years ago she was Mrs. Wm. A. Hart. Some time after Mr. Hart's death in 1912 she was united in marriage to Mr. Currin. Mrs. Currin had not lived here since the writer became pastor of this church, she having lived in Durham and Winston-Salem. She was well known and highly respected by those who knew her best. It seems that many are going from us to the glory world these days.

At eight o'clock last evening there was a union service of all the churches in our city held in our church. These union services will be held during July and August.

The usual hot weather and vacation slump has hit us right hard but we are trying to keep our courage up. J. E. Pritchard.

Monday morning.

Thomasville.—The reporter for the Thomasville church and Sunday school requested me to report for the Herald this week, and I gladly consented to do so. It is a pleasure to write for the Herald, and since I have been writing reports for the past several years, I could not refrain from complying with the request.

There were 220 in Sunday school last Sunday. This was an increase of 55 over the previous Sunday, there being 165 on that day. The singing class that was conducted on Thursday nights at the church for the benefit of the young people of the church has closed. A prize, a gold wrist watch, was offered to the person making the highest grade in the singing school. Miss /Grace Hankins won the prize, which was presented by C. B. Way at the close of Sunday school last Sunday. The second highest place was won by Edith Myers, and she will be presented with a prize later.

The morning church service last Sunday was attended by the usual sized congregation. Brother Troxler delivered one of the best sermons this writer has ever heard from him. The scripture text of the sermon was Rom. 6: 15-23. The discourse dealt with servants of sin and unrighteousness and servants of God and righteousness. The pastor declared that every individual has a crowned king in his life; a king that dominates his life, either for righteousness or for sin and unrighteousness People were declared to be servants of money. fashion, ambition, pleasure, home and sin. The application of the sermon was that Christ, the King of kings and Lord of lords, should be crowned king of our lives and we should be servants of God only.

At the evening service the pastor delivered another good sermon on the texts, John 1:29 and Heb. 13:8. The congregation was composed largely of young people. The singing of the choir was excellent. The Christian Endeavor met at seven o'clock with a good attendance and a helpful service was held. About 25 persons were present.

The Sunday school will have its annual picnic Thursday evening of this week at the Children's Home. A report of the picnic will be given later. The Sunday school has held its picnic at the Children's Home in former years, and it is a very popular picnicing place for the school.

All of the regular services will be held next Sunday. C. B. Way.

Weaverville.—The series of revival services began here July 8. Rev. R. C. Stubbins came to us in time for the service Monday night, July 9, and remained with us until the closing service last night, July 15. He preached for us 12 times. His sermons were of a high order and were well received.

The visible results were not what we had hoped for. Still we feel much good was accomplished.

Am certain Weaverville will be glad to have Brother Stubbins any time he can come this way again. B. M. Williams.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit.—Last Sunday at 11 o'clock our pastor filled his appointment here. He certainly did preach a wonderful sermon. Mr. Ridge has been on this circuit for nearly two years, and he brings us a new message each time.

Singing school begins July 23. We are also looking forward to the first night of August for our revival meeting to start. Reporter.

Rockingham Charge. We held all-day service in our new church on the second Sunday in July with a large crowd present. We had Mr. B. F. Reynolds to make an address at 10:30 Sunday morning, his subject being. "The Business of the Church in the Community." We also had Dr. Dixon to preach for us at 11 o'clock, with dinner at 12:30 and preaching again at two by Dr. Dixon. We were very glad indeed to have Mr. Reynolds and Dr. Dixon with us; we also thank the good people of Pee Dee for their co-operation in helping serve dinner.

Our Sunday school is improving rapidly since we moved in our new church. We had 116 at Sunday school and practically everybody remained for church service at eleven o'clock.

We held our Children's Day program Sunday night. The children rendered a very fine program. The collection was also good, which was approximately $22, which will be sent to Mr. J. F. Minnis, the foreign missionary. We thank Mr. and Mrs. Hardy for the way in which they helped the children to get up such a fine program. Myrtle Baldwin.

July 15.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—Rev. A. G. Dixon filled his apopintment at Cid Saturday night and delivered a very able and interesting sermon to a large congregation of attentive hearers. He also gave out some good business facts on the church line. A general interest collection was taken and was real good.

We are planning to remodel Cid church to some extent; a part of the money has been made up.

Our Sunday school is increasing. We had the largest attendance on yesterday that we have had in a long time; had 21 new scholars; not boasting, but just watch Cid grow.

Brother Riddle did not fill his appointment at Cid on yesterday, owing to the fact that he had to be with Dr. Dixon at Piney Grove and then go to Mt. Zion in the evening. May Dr. Dixon's words sink into many hearts and may many be made fishers of men.

The special meeting will begin at Piney Grove the first Sunday in August. The special meeting begins at Walters' Grove next Sunday at 11 o'clock (Baptist) conducted by Rev. Mr. Hough of Denton. The community prayer meetings are still in progress around Cid. The prayer service at Walter Hunt's was largely attended. It is to be at Mr. Ben Parrish's next Saturday night. Also prayer meetings are being held at Piney Grove church on Sunday nights.

A Bible class was started up at Cid on yesterday. We sure did miss Mrs. J. S. Riddle at Cid yesterday as she is our organist and has been so faithful to serve us. May the Lord reward according as He said He would.

A well wisher to the Herald and its many readers, a worker in His vineyard,

Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Uwharrie Circuit.—Yesterday afternoon President Dixon was with us and delivered an excellent sermon to a small but attentive congregation of hearers. There was a singing near by that caused our crowd to be smaller than it would have been. As it seems. folks would rather go to a singing than to preaching. And another thing, we did not know of our president's coming in time to get the news around very much.

Our Sunday school is moving along with the faithful few attending. We do not know just when our protracted meeting will be but let us be praying and hoping for a good meeting whenever it may be. Reporter.

Lebanon, Lebanon Charge.—Brother Suits filled both of his appointments on the second Sunday with most helpful sermons. Those that are missing Brother Suits' sermons are certainly missing great treats. Come out the fourth Sunday and see for yourself.

These hot summer days find the Christian Endeavorers rather drowsy. But we are not fast asleep. We meet every Sunday evening at 6:30. On the fourth of July you would have thought we were wide awake if you had seen us gathered around the picnic table at Carolina Lake, Oak Ridge. Even Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Suits seemed to be active. Monday night, July 16, the Christian Endeaver executive committee met at the church. There was a good attendance. Plans, too numerous to mention, were discussed and some adopted which we hope will bring results that may be reported later.

Tuesday night, July 17, the Vera Philathea Class met at the church. Our attendance was the best we have had in months. The class is to give an entertainment in this month. Watch for the date and come.

After the adjournment of the Philathea class, the Christian Endeavor society, with the help of our pastor, organized a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society with 18 charter members. Officers were elected, committee appointed to bring in constitution and by-laws, and a time decided on for our meetings, after which we adjourned to meet again July 25. He felt as we went on our way home that it had been an evening well spent in the Master's service.

Wednesday evening, July 18, the Philathea class, with some of the Baracas visited the Children's Home, carying them a few gifts for the Boys' Dormitory.

Mrs. E. A. Hammer's grandchildren from Raeford, N. C., are paying her a visit and we are glad to have them in our Sunday school.

Miss Allie Stadler, Burlington, N. C., was the guest of Ida Guyer the first week in July.

We are very glad to have Mrs. J. W. Thacker back in her regular place in our Sunday school.

We are very glad to report that Mrs. Joe Harvey, who has been ill some time, is recovering and we hope that her health will be speedily restored.

Mrs. Troy Coltrane and children from Newport News are visiting Mrs. Coltrane's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Cook.

Best wishes to the Herald and all the readers. Assistant Reporter.

Charlotte Tidings.—The fourth of July was a great day for the Charlotte church in that we participated in a grand union picnic joining with the people of Mecklenburg circuit at the old Antioch camp ground. There were perhaps as many as 500 people on the ground. A great table had been prepared and it was loaded with good things to eat. Every one was able to eat to his own satisfaction and then there was lots left. Almost enough for another picnic dinner. It was a great day and a great success. The Weddington band furnished music which was very much enjoyed and these gentlemen have the hearty thanks of the many who heard and enjoyed the music.

Some time ago Miss Lola Ezell, one of the finest spirited young ladies and one of the best workers this church has ever had, left the city of Charlotte. Miss Ezell will never again return to us, for since she has become Mrs. W. E. Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Lee were married in the city of Norfolk, the home town of Mr. Lee, and where Mrs. Lee was employed in the U. S. Navy during the World War. This happy couple are now making their home in Syracuse, N. Y., where Mr. Lee is a railroad employee. Our congratulations and best wishes follow these fine young people whom we have learned to so much appreciate as we have learned to know them. Miss Ezell will ever be remembered by our people because of her many fine graces and the fine work she did in our church during the past three years. Her going was a great loss to our church but we could not expect to keep her always when another who dwells in a far-off land had won her heart and hand. O Cupid, thou art a grand old robber.

Wedding bells have again been ringing in our midst. In this case Miss Jessie Searboro. one of our very finest young ladies, became the bride of Mr. Roy Barbee, a fine young gentleman of our city. These happy young people were married in our parsonage. The pastor conducted the marriage ceremony while Mrs. George L. Curry rendered Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Miss Ethel Ward and Mr. L. L. Turner were attendants. Mrs. Barbee is a fine Christian young lady with many charms. She has all the while been one of the faithful members of the Charlotte church. Mr. Barbee is a Methodist Protestant but his membership is in one of our country churches. Now that their home is to be quite near our church we are hoping that Mr. Barbee will see his way clear to become a member in the same church with his good wife. To these happy young people we extend our best wishes and congratulations.

We are to have our Children's Day service next Sunday night. We are a little late with this service, but for good reasons it has been found necessary to render it at this time.

"My Little Children."

Yesterday was Children's Day at Giles Chapel, Richland charge. Brother Ermin Trogdon, son of Rev. Joel B. Trogdon, is the interested superintendent of the Sunday school. He, together with his faithful helpers, had been preparing for this service for some time. The day was propitious and by 10:30 A. M. the house was about full of people and still they came. The exercise reflected favorably on those who trained the children and upon the children themselves. A quartette of singers came over from Denton composed of three Ridge brothers and a Mr. Wilborn. These men delighted the audience with their singing. Rev. Joel B. Trogdon and family honored us with their presence, this being their home church. Brother Trogdon spoke briefly at both the morning and afternoon services, as did the pastor also. The offering amounted to $25, a check for which will be forwarded to Treasurer Taylor. Just before closing an offering was taken for the singers from Denton which amounted to something over $10. The attendance was large. The service was splendid. The order was fine. The offering was good and the dinner was abundant and palatable. Giles Chapel had a good day. We congratulate all who helped to make it a success.

Shelby Station.—As there has not been a report from Shelby church for some time, the readers of the Herald may think that we are asleep or out of working order, but we are not.

We have had our third quarterly conference, with good reports, with nearly $500 paid on pastor's salary. Building and Loan dues are being paid every week on our new parsonage. Brother Amos Ledford was elected delegate to the annual conference. Good Sunday school every Sunday and collection usually double of that last year. But still we have not done our best, and are hoping to do better still.

On the fourth Sunday night in June we did not get to complete our Children's Day service on account of a heavy cloud, but are planning to have it next Sunday night if the weather permits.

Rev. R. M. Andrews was with us last Sunday night and gave us a helpful message, after which $196 was pledged and equipped two rooms in the dormitories.

Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Ridenhour, brings us a helpful message every appointment, which is twice every Sunday unless some other service interferes. Our choir is doing some good singing now and is still improving all the time. Also very good attendance at prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Have organized a junior choir that will do some good singing when trained. Best wishes to Herald and its readers.

F. H. Glenn.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—We are still living and doing the best we can to upbuild our church and Sunday school. Sunday school attendance has been very good for the past two Sundays, although there are some whose attendance has been quite irregular. We hope that they will overcome that irregularity and help us out in all our church services.

Last night, July 15, our pastor delivered a very helpful sermon. I certainly was sorry that we did not have a large crowd out to hear him.

We are planning to have Children's Day service here the fifth Sunday in July, children's service in the morning; and we are expecting to have preaching in the afternoon. We are going to try to make this program the best we've ever had.

Our Sunday school will give a lawn party at this church next Saturday night for the benefit of the church. Everybody come. Now don't forget the date, Saturday night, July 21.

Several of our members are planning to attend the conference which will be held at Spring Church. Everybody go that can, for I'm sure you'll be greatly benefited by attending.

The revival meetings on this circuit will soon begin. Pray for us, for this whole circuit is in great need of a revival.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

Dora Pearson, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Circuit.—The Green Township Sunday School Convention was held here last Sunday and was attended by a large number of people from various places. The speakers of the day were: Rev. Lawrence Little, E. F. Craven, J. Rom Smith, S. A. Alexander, Miss Miriam Spoon, Rev. W. C. Shaw, Mrs. R. C. Causey, Rev. W. A. Bowman, and Rev. D. I. Offman, and devotional exercises were held by Rev. G. F. Millaway.

We were indeed glad to have with us Mr. David Lashley and a part of the choir from Pleasant Hill. They helped to make the singing a success.

Our Christian Endeavor was held Sunday evening at seven o'clock, with Miss Trixie Amick as leader. After a rather interesting program Rev. L. Little preached a very helpful sermon. His text was: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I will strive to do whatever he would have me do."

On Saturday evening before the fifth Sunday in this month ice cream will be sold at the parsonage for the benefit of the ladies' societies of the church. Everyone is cordially invited to be present.

The third quarterly conference will convent at Pleasant Union church next Saturday afternoon at 2:30. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

July 17.

Pageland Circuit.—Our revival meeting will begin at Bethesda the fourth Sunday, July 22. Brother T. E. Martin will be our pulpit help. We ask all Christian people to pray for the success of this meeting. Our third quarterly conference will be held at Bethesda on Thursday, July 26, at 12 M. Official members please take notice.

J. W. Quick, Pastor.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Circuit.—There will be all-day service next Sunday, July 23 in honor of the fathers and mothers. We expect Brother T. F. McCulloch to occupy the pulpit in the morning and Brother J. H. Stowe in the afternoon: both of them are former pastors. We are planning to sing old songs that our fathers and mothers sang and we extend a cordial invitation to all. Come and bring your lunch and enjoy the day, as we are hoping to have a profitable day.

Martha Parsons.

Reidsville.—Our pastor has been on the sick list, but we are glad that he is able to be with us again, and is preaching some splendid sermons. Yesterday his subject was "Practical Christianity."

Our Children's Day service will be held next Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour. We will not have any more services after that until the first Sunday in August, as our pastor will be on his vacation.

Our Sunday school held their annual picnic last Tuesday at Ogburn's pond. Quite a number went and report a great trip.

A Junior Baraca class has recently been organized in our Sunday school. Mr. G. M. Reed is the efficient teacher of this class. We now have Junior and Senior Baraca and Junior and Senior Philathea classes.

The Christian Endeavor society met with Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Dixon Friday evening, July 6, and held their regular monthly business meeting. Committee reports were given and plans were made to start a library. After the business session refreshments were served.

IN MEMORIAM.

Neal.

Dallie Mae Neal was born September 5, 1921, died June 6, 1923, aged 21 months.

Our Heavenly Father: In Thine infinite wisdom and great love Thou has seen fit to call back to Thyself the sweet, pure spirit of Dollie Mae, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Neal. We sympathize with Brother and Sister Neal in the loss of their dear child, but may they be comforted with the blessed thought that hell has no children, heaven has them all.

"There is no death: the stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in heaven's jewelled crown
They shine forevermore."

D. R. Williams.

Robert Henry Weaver.

On June 30 death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Weaver, and took their little baby boy. He was only two years and 14 days old. We do not understand why he was taken so young but Jesus, who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven" knows best and has only taken little Robert Henry from sin and all suffering and transplanted his little life in the kingdom above, where no sorrow or death can enter.

His little body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Philadelphia church.

Farewell, little Robert Henry, you were to us so dear;
We know you're in that happy land where fall no more sad tears.
We miss your little pattering feet, we see your empty chair,
Your little voice which was so sweet we can no longer hear.
But we pray to live so we may meet in that land over there,
Where pain and sorrow flee away and we are free from every care.

His Cousin.

Sarah H. Kiger.

Sarah H. Kiger, generally known as Aunt Tip, was born November 11, 1839, and departed this life July 6, 1923, being at her death more than 84 years old. She was married to Adam Kiger of Old Germanton, August 5, 1857. Her husband preceded her to the beyond two years ago. To this union eleven children were born, nine of whom are still living. She also had seventy grandchildren, and ninety great-granchildren and many friends to mourn her loss.

She professed faith in Christ when she was 22 years old and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Hickory Ridge and remained a faithful member there until about fifteen years ago, when the Methodist Protestant church was established at Rural Hall and she moved her membership there, where she remained a faithful member until death. For the past few years she was too feeble to attend church often, but we are told by her closest friends that she was still willing to speak a good word for her Lord and Master.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer at the Lutheran church near Rural Hall. The grave of Mrs. Kiger was covered with beautiful flowers in token of their love and devotion for her and her friends. We extend our sympathy and prayers to the bereaved ones.

E. A. Bingham.

Matthew E. Blackwelder.

Matthew E. Blackwelder, the son of Lawson and Polly Blackwelder, was born December 2, 1855, and departed this life June 30, 1923.

On December 23, 1881, he was united to Mrs. Martha Frances Lilly Means. To them were born 14 children, five boys and nine girls. Two of the boys and two of the girls died in infancy, and one of the boys and one girl died in their youth; one son and six daughters and the wife still survive.

He had been in declining health for some time but his condition had not been considered serious until just a few days before the end. He was taken to Charlotte for an examination by a specialist but upon arriving his condition was found to be so critical that he was left at the Charlotte Sanatorium for treatment. While all was done that could be done, he grew weaker until the end came.

The funeral service was held at the church Sunday, July 1, at 11 A. M., by his pastor, and interment was made in the Roberta cemetery, where he shall remain in quietude until the resurrection, and those that remain shall not prevent him from risng then, for all those that sleep in Him shall hear His voice and come forth to meet Him in the air.

In September, 1907, he united with the Fairview Methodist Protestant church (now known as Roberta) as a charter member, of which he was a loyal member.

Brother Blackwelder for more than three years had been a door neighbor to the writer, and watching him as a pastor naturally would I saw no fault in him, he was always ready to do his part for the cause of Christ "To know him was to love him." As a friend and as a neighbor he was always kind, generous, noble and true. He was a dear loving husband and father, always ready to sympathize and console. His life was full of inspiration and hope, and the influence for good which he exerted in his community will live on. Therefore we feel that he is not dead but gone before to enjoy his reward and await our coming. While we shall miss him as his footsteps are hushed and his smiles are memory, we know that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord." Therefore we say with Job of old, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Weep not, dear friends, for our dear one up in mansions of glory. He enjoys an eternal gain; would you call him to earth again? No, let him rest on the Savior's breast, for there he waits to welcome you.

J. T. Sisk, Pastor.

Hill.

Julia Hill, wife of Milba Hill, born October 15, 1844, died July 4, 1923. She leaves to mourn her loss a companion, two children, six grandchildren, two brothers and three sisters and a host of friends. Sister Hill was a member of the M. E. Church and lived a quiet life and always instructed her children in the ways of righteousness and pleaded with them to shun the evil. She has passed but her life will live on and no doubt will be a beacon light to guide her loved ones to higher and nobler ideals in life and to home at last.

On the fifth of July she was laid to rest in the family graveyard near her home, amidst a large crowd of friends. May the blessing of God abide with the loved ones left behind and may they live that life that will lead them home.

Joel B. Trogdon.

Tucker.

Jonathan Tucker, born March 14, 1847, died June 30, 1923. He professed faith in Christ early in youth and joined the Methodist Protestant church at Love Joy, later moved his membership to Mount Ebal church and lived a faithful member until death. In 1869 he was married to Rinda Halton; to this union were born eight children, of whom six still live. He leaves behind six children, 26 grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren. and a host of friends, but we feel our loss is his eternal gain. He lived a quiet, unassuming life but always stood for what was right. He expressed himself in few words and always stood firm. He proved to all by his daily walk his firm belief in God. He will be missed in his church and community, but he will be missed most of all by his dear companion and children. May God supply them with His grace and lead them by His spirit until they reach the Home to which we believe he is gone, the home of the saints.

The Spainhour Reunion Called Away From Pinnacle.

Soon as the late article (as being referred to) came out, some of the relatives reported that the majority of those interested wanted the coming meeting to serve at Tobaccoville. Pinnacle is nine miles north of Tobaccoville.

The following comes in to explain:

Spainhour Reunion.

We representing for the Spainhour Reunion to convene on the fifth Sunday in this July, ask the relatives and friends to come to Macedonia church, Tobaccoville, for a meeting to begin at 11 o'clock A. M. Come prepared for a table dinner. The meeting will be consistently conducted.

C. W. Spainhour,
C. A. Spainhour,
Mrs. J. H. Vogler.

P. S. The event for July 29 is near at hand. The secretary, being very busy, gave me leave to work up for the desired meeting. It seems to be providential for the meeting to be at the church.

Surprise Birthday Dinner.

On Tuesday at the beautiful colonial home of Mrs. Mary Hayes, Grandma Hayes, as she is familiarly called, the children and grandchildren assembled for the purpose of celebrating her eighty-third birthday.

Mrs. Hayes is remarkably active for one of her age. Her mind is still very clear, and she can walk several miles and can read without glasses. She had often expressed herself as wanting to meet at the old home place with her children once more. "Grandma" has reared a large, interesting family, of which she is profoundly proud. She is the grandmother of 21 children and greatgrandmother of six. All the children are living and attended the reunion, and only five of the grandchildren not present.

Grandma is loved and honored by a host of friends for her beautiful Christian example. She is often seen reading her Bible and is still a regular attendant at church.

Grandma thoroughly enjoyed the occasion and expressed herself as that being the dearest place on earth to her, it being where she had spent all her happy married years. It was indeed a very happy occasion in some respects for the children, and yet at these reunions we are always made to feel sad, for so many of our dear loved ones have passed away. Some of the children had not been there since home was broken up. Mrs. R. K. Pender of Mebane is the only daughter. Mr. Charlie Hayes of Charlotte, T. R. Hayes, Durham, George Hayes, Durham, S. N. and Bud Hayes, of Mebane. It was our privilege to spend a few hours with this noted family and enjoy with them this happy occasion. Kodaks were furnished and pictures made of the family and the beautiful table, to be used as memoirs of this happy occasion for years to come. Many gifts were given as tokens of love and the most beautiful was the large birthday cake which was beautifully decorated. Rev. H. L. Powell, her pastor, made a short talk and offered prayer, after which a long table was spread under the large oak trees. The table was attractively decorated in keeping with the occasion. The center was ornamented by a large birthday cake.

About five o'clock the guests departed, wishing grandma many more happy birthdays. Mrs. H. L. Powell.

MY LORD AND I.

I tell Him all my sorrows,
I tell Him all my joys,
I tell Him all that pleases me;
I tell Him what annoys;
He tells me what I ought to do,
He tells me what to try,
And so we talk together,
My Lord and I.

He knows how I am longing
Some weary soul to win;
And so He bids me go and speak
The loving word for Him;
He bids me tell His wondrous love,
And why He came to die;
And we work together,
My Lord and I.

I have His yoke upon me,
And easy 'tis to bear;
In the burden that He carried
I gladly take a share;
For then it is my happiness
To have Him always nigh;
We bear the yoke together,
My Lord and I.

HIS MOTHER'S SERMON.

The Scottish mother is dying and she calls to her bedside her son, her only son, who hopes one day to be a minister.

"I canna see ye noo, John," she said, feebly, as she felt for his hand and stroked his hair, "but I know yir there, an' I've just one other wish. If God calls ye to the ministry ye'll no refuse, an' the first day ye preach in yir own kir, speak a good word for Jesus Christ, an' John, I'll hear ye that day, though ye'll no see me, and I'll be satisfied!"

They buried her, and the years slipped away. He had passed through a brilliant course at the university; had taken the Mac Khammel scholarship and had accepted a call to his first church. His aunt—his mother's sister—went with him to keep house, and he settled down to prepare his first sermon. He felt that, in view of his distinguished academic career, something particularly scholarly would be expected of him, and he tried to rise to the occasion. His aunt looked dubiously at the forbidding manuscript and catching sight of her clouded face, he pressed her for an explanation.

"It's no for me tae advise ye, laddie," she said. "I'm only a simple old woman, but I'm just anxious about the flock o' sheep the Lord has given ye tae feed for Him. They're no clever or learned like what ye are, but just plain country folk, ilka ane wi' his ain temptation an' a' sair trackled wi' money cares o' this world. They'll need a clear word to comfort their hearts and show them the way everlasting. Ye'll say what's right, nae doot o' that, and a'body 'll be pleased wi' ye, but, oh, laddie, be sure ye say a guid word for Jesus Christ!"

The clever manuscript went into the fire that night and next day a sermon was preached in Drumtochty that brought tears to the eyes of old and young.

His aunt met him in the study and when he looked on her his lips quivered, for his heart was wrung with one wistful regret.

"Oh, Auntie, if she had only been spared to see this day and her prayers answered!"

But his aunt flung her arms around his neck.

"Dinna be cast down, laddie, nor be unbelievin', for ye did it in remembrance of her and yon was yir mither's sermon!"

Yes, partly! Partly his mother's and partly his aunt's! The mother's sermon would never have been preached but for the aunt's gentle reproof and tactful reminder. Blessed are all they who carry to the perfect consummation life's broken ministries!—Ian Maclaren.

BLESSED IS THE MAN.

Blessed is the man whose calendar contains prayer meeting night.

Blessed is the man who is faithful on a committee.

Blessed is the man who will not strain at a drizzle and swallow a downpour.

Blessed is the man who can endure an hour and a quarter in a place of worship as well as two hours and a half in a place of amusement.

Blessed is the man who is generous to his neighbor in all things except the application of the sermon.

Blessed is the man whose watch keeps church time as well as business time.—Selected.

A CAT'S JOURNEY.

It is not certain at what time domestic cats were introduced into England, but some suppose they were brought by the Romans. They were very valuable, the price of a new-born kitten being one penny; after its eyes were opened and it had killed a mouse, it was worth two pence; and when it was known to be a good mouser the price was four pence. This was quite a large sum, being equal to about a dollar and sixty-five cents in our money at the present time.

J. G. Wood, in one of his interesting sketches of animals, tells of a cat which belonged to a family living in a country place in England. The family had occasion to remove to a town eleven miles distant, and took the cat and her five kittens with them. But pussy was not contented in her new home, and wandered disconsolately around the house. The night after she had been brought there the kittens mewed in vain for their mother, and when one of the family investigated the cause of their distress he found only four kittens and no cat. The next morning she came to the door, evidently very tired, and all day she kept quiet, sleeping most of the time. The next night she disappeared again, taking another kitten with her, and continued in her course until all her little family had been removed. Then the gentleman went back to the house from which he had moved and found the cat and her kittens safely housed in their old place in the shed. The poor cat was so exhausted with her journey that she could not walk, and could scarcely eat, but seemed so glad to be at home again that she was left in peace, and the new family that took possession of the house willingly cared for her.

Some years ago a celebrated doctor in London owned a pretty tabby cat, and made quite a pet of her. She would sit with him when he was reading, generally on his shoulder, or on the table at his elbow, and would occasionally rub her head against him or pat him with her paw to attract his attention. One day the doctor noticed his little pet seemed in great pain. She would run about the room shaking her head and mewing, and would uneasily rub the side of her head with her paw. He took her on his knee, hoping to find the cause of her trouble, and when he opened her mouth he found she had a badly decayed tooth. He stroked her until she became quiet, and then he gently took his forceps from the table and with one quick movement extracted the tooth. The poor animal sprung to the other side of the room and crouched in the corner, spitting and growling. She soon felt easier, however, and then showed her gratitude in every possible way. A few days afterwards she scratched at his room door, and when he opened it she walked in followed by another cat, whose head was much swollen. The doctor's cat mounted to the table and invited the stranger to follow her. She then told her master, in a way he could not misunderstand, that she wanted him to help her friend; so to please his pet he drew the tooth. His cat then went to the stranger and purred around her and licked her face, and they left the house together. Some time after the cat brought still another cat for treatment, whose tooth was badly decayed and ulcerated. This the doctor had the misfortune to break, and with a howl of rage and pain the cat darted out of the door, followed by the doctor's cat, who vainly endeavored to comfort it. It is needless to say the doctor had no more patients of that kind.—Selected.

To be unconcerned about where you are going to spend eternity is the height of folly. To escape the wrath to come is a matter of greatest importance. To make sure of the many-mansioned Home in the skies ought to engage the attention of young and old. To miss heaven is to miss everything that is worth while.

Let me entreat you to make your calling and election sure. Don't let the devil rock you to sleep in the chair of indifference. Don't let him cheat you out of your heavenly home. Get on the Lord's side at once. Take Jesus Christ as your Savior. Let Him rule in your life.—The Word of Life.

Halifax.—Our Children's Day services on this charge were good. Hollister, offering $19.42; Eden, $20; Union, $20.63; Ringwood, $20.15; total, $80.20. The children did well and reflected credit upon those who trained them at each church. The pastor appreciates very much the faithful work of those who had this work in charge.

We are now talking and planning for our special services. We hope that many are praying with a spirit of expectancy for a gracious revival in each church.

These meetings will be held at the following times and places with pulpit help as named: Eden, first Sunday in August, J. L. Trollinger; Union, second Sunday, T. E. Pierce; Harmony, third Sunday, C. W. Bates; fourth Sunday, Ringwood, C. L. Spencer; second Sunday in September, Bethesda, G. F. Millaway; fourth in September, Hollister, Mrs. A. G. Dixon. We are calling upon the membership of this charge to pray earnestly for a great outpouring of the Spirit. Willl appreciate the prayers of any who read these lines.

AN UNFORTUNATE LETTER.

Two ministers through years of association had become intimate friends. They consulted each other about all important matters and told each other their secrets. They had such faith in each other that neither would hear anything reflecting on the other without at once springing to his friend's defense.

At conference sessions these two brethren were much together. Their mutual attachment was very noticeable and was a subject of common remark for a time; but after years of continuance it was taken as a matter of course and ceased to be much talked about. Many were the letters that passed between these two brethren when they were absent one from the other—letters full of confidence and steadfast affection. It hardly seemed possible that one of them should ever write to the other a letter of a wholly different character.

But it came to pass in the course of time that a misunderstanding arose between them. How it started is not known; but one of the men began to suspect that the other was not sincere in his friendship. He even went so far as secretly to blame his friend for some unpleasant changes that had come in his own ministerial career. He thought the man that knew him best had taken advantage of him in communications to those in authority. He regretted that he had ever made the man his confidential friend, though as a matter of fact his friend was as true as steel, and was absolutely innocent of the thing charged against him.

Had the offended friend gone to the other in a spirit of frankness and asked for an explanation, the misunderstanding might have been cleared up and their friendship saved; but that course was not pursued, and suspicion grows upon what it feeds upon. The offended brother treasured up every scrap of seeming evidence against his friend until his wrath was wrought up to the highest tension. His state of mind became unendurable. He could find relief from his pent-up feelings only in a letter of terrible severity. He wrote such a letter and mailed it.

Three days later he read in the daily paper that his friend had been found dead in his bed. A coroner's inquest was held and the verdict was that the deceased had died of heart-failure.. There was nothing about the room to indicate that death had been anticipated. The only unusual thing found in his room was some fragments of a letter that had been burned in the fireplace. These fragments were insufficient to constitute a clue. The inference was that the letter was of an unpleasant nature and that the receiver of it did not wish any one to know that such a letter had been written.

Whether the letter hastened the end of his friend's life may never be known, but the writer of that letter would give his right hand if he could thereby recall that letter. What a shock it must have brought to the faithful friend! If it did not cause his death, it certainly robbed his life of one of its strong attractions.

Let no poisoned word fall from thy tongue or flow from thy pen!

HOW TO HAVE A GOOD CHURCH SERVICE EVERY TIME.

Going to church services is somewhat like going to one's meals. Whether one is benefited or not does not wholly depend on what is spread before him: it largely depends on his condition. The most wholesome dinner may prove poison to the system not prepared to receive it.

Many people go to church and are not benefited, not because the service is poor, but because they are not in a spiritual condition to be helped.

If you would have a helpful church service every time, go prepared to be helped. Pray that it may be a helpful service. Pray for the preacher especially, that he may be led of God to say something adapted to your case, something your soul may feed upon. Pray for all who take part in the service, the choir, your fellow-worshipers, and especially for the unconverted. Cry mightily to God from the depths of your heart for those who have no saving knowledge of Christ.

Pursue this course every time you go to church, and we confidently predict that you will find every church service a feast to your soul. Your pastor will be exalted in your esteem, the church will become a veritable house of God, and your fellow-worshipers will become saints of the Lord.

WHEN I GET BIG.

"It was in thy heart to build a house for my name." One night I stood on the chapel steps with a nine-year-old boy. Work had been given his father, food and coal had been sent to his home. The old threadbare clothing which was worn by the boy and his sister had been replaced by complete outfits new and becoming. The coat transformed the boy. It warmed him to the heart. "Say," he said, "What would become of us if there wasn't no church here?" His face lighted up and he laid his newly mittened hand lovingly down on the brown stone. "When I get big," he said, looking over at his sister, "I'll build one down on ——— Street, where there ain't none."—Exchange.

"May grace and strength sufficient to enable me to adhere faithfully to this resolution be imparted to me, so that in truth. not in name only, all my interests and those of my children may be identified with his cause."—Selected.

OUR PREACHERS AND OUR READING.

By William Thornton Whitsett.

Our preachers fill a large place in the life of our people. We are safe in saying that in no section of all our country do the ministers of the gospel exert a larger influence than here in the South. Our population is largely a native population, and it comes of lines of ancestors who have given a large place to religious worship for generations. Ministers preaching week after week to large gatherings; meeting them in the work of prayer meeting services; and visiting constantly in our homes, are in constant, close touch with practically all classes and conditions of our people. In almost every community the ministers are frequently visiting the schools, talking before the student body, mingling in our fraternal organizations, and in all these various ways they are in very intimate touch with us from day to day, and from week to week. Such ideas and ideals as our ministers may have may thus be easily communicated to our people, and a large per cent of those who hear will be ready to accept any reasonable suggestions that may be offered by the ministers.

This condition suggests the very large field for service that the minister may fill in giving attention to the reading matter that should go into the homes of our people. It goes without saying that the minister is supposed to be a man given to reading and study himself. It is presumed that he is a constant reader of the newspapers that he may keep in touch with the current affairs of the day in which his work is cast; it is further taken for granted that he is a constant buyer of such of the new books as he finds he can afford, and that he is making every possible effort to keep in touch with not alone matters of a theological and religious nature, but also of the higher and better things that are being done in more purely literary, educational, social and economic lines of thought. This he must do if he is to command the attention and respect of a constantly growing intellectual life. Should he for one moment decide that he can draw from week to week from pools of thought that are never moved and stirred by newer currents, and never replenished from fresher springs, he will soon find that his work will lose its vitality, and that at the most he can only hold a certain respect and attention, paid simply because of the hallowed associations that cling around his calling, and not because of any real moving force and effect that his work would possess if allowed to lose its touch with the life of his day and time. A non-reading, and a non-studying minister will soon find himself becoming a non-drawing and a non-effective minister. If he is to measure up to the possibilities of his great commission, "Go ye into all the world," he must carry with him an open mind, a receptive intelligence, an adaptive capacity, and an ability to take the thought of his time and mould and fashion it by the moral and scriptural standards of eternal truth for the instruction and guidance of those under his care. Otherwise, he must find year by year the events of a constantly changing civilization leaving him stranded amid the fossils of by-gone things. Principles are eternal, but they must be applied and re-applied as time passes to the events of new times.

"New ocasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
We must ever up and onward
Would we keep abreast of Truth."

It is asumed as a matter of course that the minister is one of the trained and educated men of his community. Preparation for this great work is taken as a matter of course to include not alone inclination and consecration, but the most thorough preparation possible in halls of learning; bringing to the active duties that lie before him his whole energy with a heart turned to higher things, and a mind so furnished that he can cope with the problems of the mental and spiritual realm. In all humility he has chosen a field where he is to be a leader, and he is expected to pay the price for this high choice in such equipment as will forbid any criticism upon his scholastic and mental furnishing so necessary to command respect. He must be a workman "Who needeth not to be ashamed" in the great field of his wonderful opportunity.

In what is here said we are not overlooking the duties of many others in regard to the direction of the reading matter of our people. We have in mind the duties incumbent upon teachers in schools, parents in homes, editors, and all others who stand in vital relationship to the choice and selection of proper reading matter. These are not forgotten, but we are here atempting to stress what may rightly be expected from the thousands of our ministers who occupy a strategic point and from whom we may properly expect co-operation, suggestion, and active help that no one else can give in the manner and method open to them.

No one wants a literary essay or discourse to take the place of a sermon; and no one wants our ministers to change their place for that of the critic of literature. It does not, however, seem to be asking too much or expecting too much to hope that they will be ready to use the continual opportunities that are theirs to make mention of such lines of reading as should engage those who look to them week after week. If a congregation is well supplied with proper reading matter in the daily, weekly, and monthly publications, and if it is a congregation in which the best books find homes, the minister has opened to him a fruitful field that will yield an hundred-fold in ready response to every proper call that is made upon it.

Think for one moment of the limited field of the minister if he has to deal with an illiterate, uneducated and non-reading people. Consider the church without intelligence and education. How necessary then for the minister if he is to rise to the heights of his mission that he see to it that his people are taught line by line, and precept upon precept, the necessity of giving ample attention to the matter of reading. In the homes, in the community, in the pulpit, then, wise suggestions from the minister as to books, and reading, and literature, will surely be words fitly spoken that will be "as apples of gold in pictures of silver." We are not making any plea that our ministers become book agents, save as we would argue that all intelligent people should be agents for the spread of good books, and seekers continually for larger and fairer fields of thought.

Imagine if you please a minister who reads no papers; who reads no books; and then you may easily imagine what kind of feast one can spread who has none of the essentials at hand for preparing a meal. Granted, even, that the minister in days long since gone was for some years in college classes; still we must wonder what he did there receive, or rather not receive, that he has done nothing along these lines since those far-gone days. Was he there so well filled, and so well furnished, that he has never needed since to replenish his stores? Did he even then learn the one simple truth, a very great truth, that all education is only a beginning for greater things day by day? Does he really expect God, his great leader and guide, to give him continual supplies without any effort on his own part? Has he read His promise that he will give to those who do not seek? That He will open His doors to those who do not knock?

Discussions are on from time to time as to the church's losing its hold upon our people. In these discussions it may be well to remember that all over our land we have churches crowded to their capacity, week by week, and we may well inquire whether such pulpits are filled by men mentally alert, keeping in close touch with life and its expression in literature, and ranking with the thinkers of their time; or whether it is otherwise. Hungry people naturally seek food. They want food, and they seek for it. If it is supplied they return for more. If not supplied, they turn elsewhere. Then for his own sake of success the minister must be interested in reading; certainly for the sake of young, hungry minds; and older inquiring minds, and the hosts of mankind who have a right to look to him, he must strive not alone to spread continual supplies before them, but to suggest where proper supplies may be had in the hours when he cannot serve them.

Our preachers and our reading; certainly a topic worth the serious consideration of those who preach, and those who listen to what is said. No moral and spiritual leader worthy the name can afford to overlook his responsibilities along this line.

NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH, W. F. M. S.

The twenty-third annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society convened in West End Methodist Protestant Church, Greensboro, N. C., April 18-19, 1923.

Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, of High Point, N. C., our esteemed president, presided throughout the session.

The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. J. F. McCulloch.

At the opening session of the conference, the pastor of West End Church, Rev. N. M. Harrison, Jr., host of the conference, was introduced and extended greetings.

Young People's Work.

Missionary education among our young people and children has increased in interest and enthusiasm. Eight new societies were organized during the year in the four divisions of the work: namely, Precious Jewels, Sunshine Circle, Mission Band and Young People's Societies. Mrs. J. W. Boyles, secretary of young people's work, reported 27 societies enrolled in the North Carolina Branch, with a total membership of 477. Let us continue to emphasize the importance of organization and missionary instruction among the young people of our church. They are the future hope of the great work the women are engaged in today.

New Auxiliaries.

Through the efforts of our field organizer, Miss Annie Forrest, fifteen new auxiliaries were organized during the year: namely, Salem, Saxapahaw circuit; Albemarle; Fair Grove, Haw River circuit; Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth circuit; St. Paul's Greensboro; Midway, Greensboro, R. 3; Midway, Reidsville, R. 2; Bethel, Mocksville circuit; Shady Grove, Tabernacle circuit; Bethesda, North Davidson circuit; Lexington Mission, Lexington; Pleasant Union, Mt. Pleasant circuit; Friendship, Albemarle, Stanly circuit; Friendship, Haw River circuit; West End, Greensboro.

The results of Miss Forrest's splendid work were seen this year in receipts of more money and a larger increase in membership.

The corresponding secretary gave a very comprehensive report of the year's work and on motion same was accepted with a rising vote of thanks.

The treasurer, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, made a splendid report. Total money for dues, $931.77; thank-offering, $905.57; Union Colleges of the Orient, $600. Total amount sent to Mrs Lida East, executive treasurer, for the year ending May 1, 1923, $6,330.75.

Mrs. J. E. Pritchard, secretary of literature, reported leaflets, pageants and study books sent out on request.

The report of secretary of native workers was read and accepted.

Mrs. S. R. Harris reported 50 Life Members enrolled, an increase of 20. Memorial Members, 23, an increase of six; Perpetual Members four, an increase of one.

Mrs. J. M. Stone, our faithful Record Agent, who has been untiring in her efforts, giving encouragement or suggesting methods to increase circulation and interest in our official organ, reported 363 Record subscribers, a slight increase over last year.

The report of the auditor, Mrs. W. P. Pickett, showing that the books of the treasurer had been neatly and correctly kept, was read and accepted.

The president introduced to the conference the following ministers and visitors: T. M. Johnson, A. G. Dixon, R. C. Stubbins, T. E. Pierce, W. H. Neese, Geo. R. Brown, J. F. McCulloch, T. F. McCulloch, R. A. Hunter, J. A. Burgess, R. M. Andrews, E. G. Lowdermilk, J. D. Williams, J. R. Hutton and Miss Annie Forrest.

Taylor; recording secretary, Mrs. J. M. Millikan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. P. Harrel; treasurer, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker: secretary of young people's work, Mrs. J. W. Boyles; secretary of native workers. Miss Velna McCulloch; secretary of Life and Memorial Members, Mrs. S. R. Harris; secretary of correspondence department, Mrs. J. J. Cawford; secretary of literature, Mrs. J. E. Pritchard; Record agent, Mrs. J. M. Stone; assistant Record agent, Miss May Bain; auditor, Mrs. W. P. Pickett.

Recommendations.

Your finance committee desires to congratulate the auxiliaries of the North Carolina Branch for the splendid reports of the past year, and we pray for a continued interest in this great organization for missions. We recommend—

I. That the budget for the coming year be $7,000, and suggest means of raising this amount:

1. Securing new members.
2. Every member become a tither.
3. Life, Memorial and Perpetual members.
4. Scholarships.
5. Pageants and plays.
6. Decide upon some definite object and then ask for special contributions not only from members but from others.
7. Public thank-offering service.

Recommendations from the secretary of scholarships and native women:

That all Bible women, native workers, teachers and nurses be placed under one general head—that of Native Workers.

Recommendations from committee on extension of work. Resolved—

I. That our slogan for this year be, "A Missionary Society in Every Church. A Missionary Record in Every Home."

II. That the study of missionary education which is in our Sunday School Journal be used in all our Sabbath schools.

III. Realizing that the district meetings have created interest and advancement along missionary lines we recommend that they be continued and, if practical, that new districts be made.

IV. We further recommend that co-operation of pastors and Sunday school superintendents be urged.

V. We recommend the presentation of missionary pageants and motion pictures which will be of interest and educational value.

Realizing that systematic giving through tithing is one of the best methods of securing funds, we recommend—

VI. That this be emphasized throughout the year and that space be provided on report blanks so that tithers may be reported annually.

Believing that inspiration is gained through information, we recommend—

VII. That the Missionary Record be taken in every home in the North Carolina Branch.

VIII. We recommend joining with the Woman's Home Missionary Society in the employment of a field secretary who will work with the district chairman in organizing new societies and stimulating old ones; and we further recommend—

IX. That special stress be laid on organizing young people and children.

X. That the Student Loan Fund be continued and each auxiliary be asked to pay ten cents per member to help finance this fund, to assist worthy young women in securing an education to become missionaries.

XI. That the superintendents of the Sunday schools be requested to use the missionary information the first Sunday in each month, by having some one give this information in the place of review of lesson. We suggest that one person be appointed a week in advance to give this information in an attractive way.

The outstanding feature of the closing session was the election of delegates to the executive board meeting which will be held in Columbus, O., in May. Delegates are Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, Mrs. M. P. Harrell, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, Mrs. J. M. Millikan, Mrs. C. W. Bates and Mrs. R. H. Brooks.

In all lines of endeavor the North Carolina Branch has had a year of splendid achievement. Many of the auxiliaries are to be commended for increased efficiency that marks their progress.

We now have 55 auxiliaries enrolled in the North Carolina Branch, with a total membership of 903, an increase of 307. Honorary members, 208, an increase of 44, making a grand total of 1155.

It was unanimously decided to accept the invitation to meet next year at Asheboro, N. C. The meeting at West End Church, Greensboro, was one of the most enthusiastic and largely attended in the history of the State convention. The gracious manner in which we were received, the genial hospitality, the bountiful meals served and the automobiles for our convenience, made our stay one long to be remembered. Nothing was left undone for our comfort Minnie P. Harrell,

Corresponding Secretary.

MONEY OR MEN?

It occurs to me that ours is fast becoming a nation of lopsided people. Things having only a specific monetary value seem to be the chief things sought by the great majority. We are eager to invest our money where it will produce the greatest income in cold cash. Men bank their savings, invest in government bonds and in real estate, with the expectation of being personally enriched thereby. No business proposition is turned down that offers a reasonable income. An income there must be, else no investment.

Many church members have become so intoxicated with money-getting that they refuse to finance the church and her institutions. When they are approached for church aid they seem unable to see how even a small investment in the church can profit them in the least. They expect no interest on the outlay. So a great many investors prefer to invest where they can see their investment come back in multiplied form. Money is a great asset. It represents much value. The majority value it for what it will procure on the open market. Its real value is in its transmutative power. Money invested in the church, in good schools, and in Christian education, becomes transmuted, or transformed into the product of intelligence, personality, and character. Which is best—an investment that returns a cash dividend, or one that polishes the intellect, refines the character, and purifies the heart? Which appeals most to you—money or men?

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

OUR SLOGAN:—As Faithful in Service for Christ as for Self.
OUR AIM:—1. A Family Altar in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
2. The Church Paper in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
3. A Revival in Every Church With a Worthy Increase in Members.
4. Every Member a Contributing Member.
5. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
6. The Full $300,000 Subscribed for the College by June 1, 1923.
OUR MOTTO:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all our workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

Saturday and Sunday, April 21 and 22, were given to the district Rally in Dictrict No. 7, which was held at Pleasant Grove church on Lebanon charge. It was a good meeting from beginning to end, though not largely attended on Saturday. All the pastors of the district except three were present at some of the meetings, a few of the official members came, and a goodly number of Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers were present. There were large congregations on Sunday. The meetings closed with a splendid educatioonal rally on Sunday afternoon, led by Mr. H. A. Garrett.

I had a short but very pleasant visit among friends in High Point, and enjoyed preaching to a good conggregation at our First Church there at the evening service. It is always a joy to preach to these people.

April 28 and 29 were spent west of the Ridge. Considering the fact that our Young People's Summer Conference is to be held at Weaverville June 12 to 22, we were urgently requested to give the fifth Sunday to this district. Brother Little and I were ably assisted in this district rally by Dr. R. M. Andrews and Rev. C. W. Bates. All the pastors of the district were present in the meetings and their people showed great interest. It was rainy both days and thus many could not come who otherwise would have been there. Besides the district meeting we scattered out and reached several of the other churches. Dr. Andrews went to Asheville and to Mt. Zion, Brother Bates to Weaverville and Clark's Chapel, and Brother Little to Clark's Chapel and Asheville. I preached at Pensacola and in Asheville. The work in this territory, it seems to me, is very encouraging. Many of you will see and learn more about it when you go to Weaverville in June.

That Test.

Please see last week's Herald, page 3, for full questionnaire for pastors' second quarterly report. If you have reported before reading this I thank you. Several have reported before this writing. If you have not reported please do it now.

Next Rally.

Our next rally will be held in Asheboro on Saturday and Sunday, May 5 and 6. The pastors, the official members, and the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers of Asheboro, Richland, Why Not, Randleman, Davidson, Denton and Uwharrie charge are asked to meet us in Asheboro Methodist Protestant church at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, May 5.

The Tenth District.

The Rally for this district will be held in the Concord Methodist Protestant beginning on Saturday, May 12, at 10 A. M. Charlotte, Concord, Midland, Allison's Grove, Mecklenburg, Roberta, Rockingham and Pageland are the charges in this district. A goodly number of people from each charge are expected in this meeting. For program see page nine of last week's Herald.

May 19 and 20.

These dates will be given to a meeting in the Eighth District. Announcement will be made next week of place of meeting.

CAN WE DOUBLE OUR CAPACITY IN FOUR YEARS?

The writer has been told that the first organization of the Methodist Protestant Conference had its birth in Whitakers Chapel, Halifax county, N. C., in the fall of 1827. If this be true history the North Carolina Conference is older from 1827 to the spring of 1828 than the denomination.

Now let's dream for a moment, and then open our eyes for real work. In November when we go to Annual Conference let's outline a home mission program in the North Carolina Conference which will cover a period of four years, and in this four years' time double our present capacity as a church. We should increase our membership from 25,000 to 50,000. Double our preaching force. Have just twice as many Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies. Twice as many church buildings with a well equipped parsonage for every station and ccircuit. To put a modern church in every town in North Carolina by November, 1927, would be a good motto.

This program would not only fit the North Carolina Conference, but would be a work worthy of every conference in the denomination. When we celebrate our 100th anniversary in 1928 as a general church, we want to rehearse our past history with pride. Why not make the four years to come the greatest of all?

Who will be the next to discuss this dream in the pages of the Herald? X. Y. Z.

THE FAITH OF AN INDIAN.

An Indian and a white man, being at worship together, were brought under conviction by the same sermon. The Indian was shortly after led to rejoice in pardoning mercy. The white man for a long time was under distress of mind, and at times almost ready to despair, but at length he also was brought to happy experience of forgiving love. Some time after, meeting his red brother, he said: "How is it that I should be so long under conviction when you found comfort so soon?" "O brother!" replied the Indian, "I will tell you: There came along a rich prince; he promised to give you a new coat; you look at your coat and say, 'I don't know: my coat is pretty good; I believe it will do a little longer." He then offered me a new coat; I looked at my old blanket, and said nothing; I flung it right away and accepted the new coat. Just so, brother, you try to keep your righteousness for some time; you loth to give it up; but I, poor Indian, had none; therefore, I was glad at once to receive the righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ!"

Reader, do as did the poor Indian, and you will obtain immediate peace with God.—St. Louis Presbyterian.

—English musicians are planning to celebrate the one hundredth birthday anniversary of the famous song, "Home, Sweet Home," on May 8. They hope that on that day "Home, Sweet Home,' will be sung at concerts in all parts of the world. It was sung in public for the first time May 8, 1823, at the Covent Garden Theater in London.

WEAVERVILLE CHARGE GOES OVER.

The first pastoral charge in the North Carolina Conference to subscribe the entire quota assigned it in this campaign is Weaverville, Rev. B. M. Williams, pastor.

There are three churches on this charge, Weaverville, Clark's Chapel, and Mt. Zion. There are not a great number of members, I do not know just how many, but rather a small membership. Their quota was $2,000, and it is all subscribed, and part of it already paid.

There are some things about this circuit I want to tell you. First, it is located more than two hundred miles from the college. The nearest church to High Point is two hundred miles away. These three churches have for years been on what was known as Buncombe charge, a charge with seven appointments; could not therefore receive much of the time of their pastor and many times left without a supply or with a pastor for only a part of the year.

For the first time in the present arrangement, these three churches are paying their pastor one thousand dollars; almost as much as the entire seven churches paid last year. There are many children on this work and some very old people who are not now earning anything. But the charge subscribed its quota.

The pastor does not have a car now; has worn his old one out and has not been able to get a new one. But this did not hinder him in his putting the charge over. Taking a staff in hand, like a patriarch of old, he visited from house to house, and canvassed every member in the household until the work was done and he could say "Weaverville charge is over". He did this on foot, very largely.

The people were not all in favor of giving; many argued with the visitor about it. Some claimed poverty, sickness, others declared that the conference had not treated them square. But nothing daunted, the pastor and his co-laborers kept up the work until the charge went over.. And last Saturday and Sunday I saw some of as proud people as there are in any part of our conference. They have just cause for being proud, and we rejoice with them. They have gone over.

Several churches on different charges had gone over before; but remember, keep the history straight, Weaverville charge is the first pastoral charge to subscribe all its quota in this campaign.

Congratulations, Pastor Williams; thanks, dear people. You have greatly heartened me in this campaign. And may your success be prophetic of the entire charge.

What about it, Guilford? What about it, other charges located so close to the college? Come along and show Weaverville that we are all of one body, that we can do a heroic thing just as well as they can.

We are not publishing the entire list of subscriptions received. We may later on publish in the Herald these, but they take a great deal of space and where a charge secures the quota we will not publish the entire subscription in the Herald, rather devote the space to other inspirational purposes.

ARE YOU FROM MISSOURI?

This is an expression which is understood to mean that you "must show me." When we began trying to raise the money to build our college, there was quite a host of them who took refuge in this cloister. It was regarded as a respectable corner to sit down in. One might maintain his dignity and keep his cash too. But, of course, the ostensible object was to maintain his dignity; but some of us knew that most of that sort were really more interested in maintaining their financial isolation to the enterprise.

But the rivers kept flowing, the clocks didn't stop and this sort of thing is becoming obsolete, it is now becoming out of date. This kind who are from Missouri have been shown a few things which they had hoped not to see, and now they say, "Well, you have the college building, but—" These doubting Thomases will doubtless have another reason for not helping us when we get our faculty and the college begins to function. Then we will begin to find that down beneath all these fabricated reasons was one, only one, and this one was just the one that has kept others from supporting missions, and the other benevolences of the church except where they just had to.

LEADERSHIP COUNTS.

One thing this campaign has revealed so clearly—where there is real leadership the college enterprise moves smoothly and in proper form. Where there are no real leaders it does not.. One or two laymen in every one of our churches would absolutely assure the quota for the entire district. We have tried to get this type of people to head-up our campaign in each local church; if we have failed, we will know when the campaign closes.

But you must co-operate with these leaders. Nothing short of sickness or death of a relative or self ought to keep you from doing just what they ask you to do, and to do it when they ask you to do it. It is a fine evidence of real manhood to co-operate with others when we are not in the lead and when we would not bear any stigma or blame in the mind of the public if the thing should fail which others are carrying on and which we can help. And this co-operation makes leadership count. R. M. Andrews, Chairman.

DIED.

Pully.

Jesse E. Pully died at his home near Littleton, N. C., April 27, 1923. He was 39 years and nine months of age. He joined the church at Weaver's Chapel M. P. church when quite a young man.

According to his own testimony he lived a life not always as near the Savior as he ought to have lived, but he was a good citizen and a very conscientious man, and no doubt felt his imperfection very much. In my visiting him I found him doubting but was easy to instruct. We prayeed with him and he was soon restored in faith and he died trusting Jesus.

He leaves behind a wife, six children and one brother, who have the sympathy of the church and comunity.

On Saturday, April 28, he was buried in the family burying ground near his home. The funeral was held in the home, conducted by his pastor. May the good Lord bless and comfort the bereaved family. J. B. O'Brian,

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev F P Klein, Sec.

WHY DO YOU WANT IT?

Why does the Board of Foreign Missions ask the Sunday schools to make a larger Children's Day offering this year?

That is a very reasonable question, and I cheerfully answer it in some detail.

All foreign missionary work derives its authority from Christ's command, and it has one objective, i.e., to preach the gospel to all peoples of the earth.

In such an undertaking there had to be gradual expansion, because conditions demanded it, and Christ emphasized it by requiring his witnesses to begin "in Jerusalem," and go on "unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Great progress was made in the early days of Christianity, and in later periods, and in our day more people own allegiance to Jesus Christ than ever before, and greatest opportunities to win the nations to Christ crowd upon us.

The Methodist Protestant Church, to maintain itself as a living part of Christ's Kingdom, is conducting work in Japan, China and India.

The work falls under three heads or departments—1. Evangelistic, consisting of all work by pastors and evangelists, etc., the buying of lots, building churches, opening new appointments, conducting Sunday schools, in short all that an annual conference does in America, for we have mission conferences in Japan and China, and will soon have one in India. 2. Educational. Includes school for the blind, night schools, and Nagoya College in Japan; boys' schools, night school in China; and boys' school in India. Educating young men for our ministry. 3. Medical. Dispenaries in China, one to be opened in India.

It must be remembered that foreign missionary work is largely a benevolent enterprise. God gave His Son, the Son gave His life, and we, His disciples, must give our lives and money and labor to save the world.

It is absolutely necessary for the churches at home to give the means needed to develop the work abroad.

From the beginning the effort has been to develop self-supporting churches abroad, but progress is slow where the people are poor.

A self-supporting church means a self-governing, self-propagating church, for it is recognized that heathen nations are to be won to Christ largely by their own people who are Christians.

To answer the question raised figures are necessary. They represent facts, they ought not to be "dry," they ought to be of great interest to pastors and members who preach, pray, and give for the Kingdom's success.

The expenses in each mission for 1923-1924 indicated in a detailed budget, were passed upon carefully by the board, and granted because closely cut and actual needs.

In Japan, evangelistic department calls for salaries, rents (includes taxes, repairs, fuel, light, etc.)	U. S. $19,230

But Nagoya College students, graduates, friends have raised $21,500 for buildings and equipment, on their $25,000 fund, and wing of main building is being built now. 1,000 students are expected to be enrolled at opening of school year this month, April.

General mission items, conference erpenses, insurance, superannuates, conference paper, ministerial education, etc.	$4,435
Total for Japan for all departments which board provides	$26,074

The board asks our Sunday schools to give a much larger Children's Day offering so the church and Science Hall may be built which the board agreed to build when the students and friends agreed to raise $25,000 for the institution. Methodist Protestants cannot let the Japanese, many of them not connected with our church, do their part and we fail to do ours. We must provide that church. We cannot do our religious work among that great body of students without it. We depend on you to help provide the money.

More next week. Fred. C. Klein.

THE MARTYRS OF MOSCOW.

The sustaining power of Christian faith has had no finer demonstration than in the conduct of the Roman Catholic priests in Russia before their savage judges. The story, as reported by an eyewitness, in the New York Herald of April 6, deserves a place on the same page which records the constancy of the Christian martyrs in all ages.

Some of these Christian ministers were young men, men to whom life and liberty must have seemed sweet. Yet they did not shrink from admissions in open court that they had broken the Soviet law against giving religious instructions to minors or celebrating the Eucharist in halls after the Commissars had closed their churches and banned the rite. One of them confessed that he had continued to teach the catechism to classes of children and others courted martyrdom by declaring that they had said the forbidden mass in private rooms. They were questioned one by one and "each stood up and declared proudly that he would continue to say mass and teach children the catechism, no matter what the consequences to himself." The youngest among them faced the judge unflinchingly. He knew the law. "And," said the Red judge, "will you continue to teach the catechism?" "Yes," said the priest, who had been taken from prison and was now before a merciless tribunal, "with God's help I will."

It is not for any Protestant to lessen the glory of these martyrs by saying that they were obedient to "Rome" rather than to God. They have been bred in the belief that the voice that speaks to them through the church is the voice of God. And in their defiance of that Soviet law which offends the dictates of conscience they have displayed a heroism which links them with all who through the ages have said, "We know that we ought to obey God rather than man." They have all been condemned. One has paid the death penalty. The others at this writing are still in prison. The spectacle of their Christian constancy ought to bring Protestants and Romanists to a clearer realization of their common origin and common destiny, and their obligation to their common Lord.—Editorial, N. Y. Christian Advocate, April 12.

CO-OPERATION IN WESTERN STATES.

The committee on co-operation in states and other areas of the Home Missions Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions joins with local administrators of church work of the different denominations, this summer, in holding conference for a better understanding of the common problems and the religious needs of the people. These conferences will be as follows:—

Idaho, June 10 to 19.
Northern California, June 21 to 30.
Wyoming, July 12 to 20.

Secretaries of national home mission boards will accompany bishops, superintendents, secretaries and field men in seeing typical conditions and needs and then in shaping programs for better work and fuller co-operation.

These conferences will repeat, it is hoped, the very successful experiences in the state of Montana in 1919, in carrying out what was known as the Every Community Service Endeavor.

Briefer conferences of two days each will also be held as follows:—

Seattle, Washington, July 2 and 3.
Spokane, Washington, July 5 and 6.
Portland, Oregon, July 9 and 10.

DEATH OF CORRESPONDENCE AUXILIARY.

The branch meeting has come and gone. When I made out our report I did not know a single member had sent in any money, so all I could do was to report its death. I learned later that two had sent their money to Mrs. Whitaker, our branch treasurer. Did I diagnose the case directly, or did you go to sleep and take a longer nap than you intended and let the year slip by?

I regret very much to give up this department of our work, for I know there are so many women scattered over the conference who would make splendid missionary workers, if they were only in reach of a society. And we do need the help of every one. I believe I will suggest that instead of your dropping out, that we will only make a division. Our local members at Orange Chapel have been wanting to organize into a regular society for some time. Now, if you are not dead, and really do not want to die, suppose every woman who is the least bit interested in foreign missions send your name and $1.20 dues to Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, Lexington, N. C., and tell her you want to join the correspondence auxiliary—and do it right away before you forget. The way is open for you to have the biggest society in the branch.

I am resigning as your president, but I believe I am showing you a better way.

Words cannot express the pleasure and benefits I have received through the auxiliary; it has opened my eyes to our great missionary work. And when the next branch meeting comes around, I sincerely hope you will have the biggest and best auxiliary there. I know some of you will always pay to missions in some way, so why not join together and do something worth while.

I am also going to suggest that Mrs. Whitaker have the names and addresses of the members printed in the Herald, so you will know each other. And you may be sure I will be watching for the list.

I don't suppose it is against the rules and regulations for us to mix up our articles, so while I am writing I just must say "College." Wonder if some of your are not getting tired of it. Well, you needn't be, for we really and sure enough have one that looks like it might stay with us for ages to come. And it is something to be proud of, too, but you have to put a few dollars in it before you can feel that way. Not every one knows it, but I am one of those O. C. pigs, and I am just pig enough to wish I could build a whole dormitory, whereas I can only pay for a few brick.

But isn't it funny how big some little folks can feel over that college? Here comes Brother Bethea with the statement that Halifax is going to have a college. Now he is a mighty little fellow to feel so big over it. I verily believe he feels like he owned the whole thing. All right, Brother Bethea, I only weigh 94 pounds, but I am touched a little bit with the same feeling, and I want you all to understand that Saxapahaw is also going to have a college (provided they do their part in building it). Can't tell till the campaign comes how our teams are going to pull, but hope we, as all the other charges, will not have any balky horses, for we all know when one horse refuses to pull its share of the load it throws double work on the other. I believe the world in general has more respect for a sleeping pig than it does for a balking horse.

So the right and best thing to do is for all to do the best they can and in the end be able to to say "our charge" has a college It is going to be built, and co-operation is so much better than standing afar off and letting the ones who are willing, but perhaps not so able, do all the work. Sometimes I fear we don't know what we can do till something comes along and drives us. It is better sometimes for us to stop long enough to count our blessings than it is to try and tell how poor we are when a call comes from the church.

Mrs. J. J. Crawford.

President Harding stands squarely in favor of the United States becoming a member of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

—Mothers' Day will be observed throughout the country on Sunday, May 13. The Government will help Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, to make the day a success. Miss Jarvis is president and founder of the Mothers' Day Association.

BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS

Rev. C. H. Beck, Sec.

MORE ABOUT OUR HOME MISSION WORK.

Harger Memorial Church, Detroit, Michigan.

The following facts were given by Rev. Howard J. Hescott, the present pastor of the church. The Harger Memorial Church was organized six years ago by Rev. W. C. Harger, of precious memory, in response to a plea from a former member of the Methodist Protestant Church who had moved to Detroit from North Branch, Mich. The work was begun in a small chapel built by an appropriation from the Michigan Conference. Rev. H. B. Hayes was the first pastor. The Sunday school grew so rapidly that it was necessary to have more room. The conference and congregation appealed to the Board of Home Missions to come to their assistance in this situation. After careful investigation, it was decided to assist in building a good church in this part of the city. The basement unit is now occupied. The church is in the center of a large community, the nearest church being about three-quarters of a mile away and seems to have a fine opportunity for service.

First Church, Jacksonville, Florida.

The First Church, Jacksonville, has been assisted by the Board of Home Missions for the past two years. Two years ago there was no property, and no money. A building was needed but the board was unable to assume further building obligations. The congregation, under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, secured a lot in what seems to be a good location, and has gone forward with the erection of a chapel. The property is worth about $5,000, and is already outgrown. Plans are under consideration for the erection of a community house on a part of the church lot. The time is here when the first unit of the permanent church should be built, and anything less than that must be regarded as being but a temporary expedient. We have several fine opportunities as a board and denomination in Florida, and some of them will not wait. The First Church is well organized, with a good Sunday school, a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and a very interesting organization among the boys. We have 91 members. Pastor Hendry insists that we could plant five or six new churches in and about Jacksonville, with modest appropriations of money, if the right men can be found for the work. This work will receive careful consideration by the board at the annual meeting.

Berwick, Pennsylvania.

This work has made its best advancement along material lines. We have a fine Sunday school with an attendance for the year averaging about 130. Our church membership is about 50. The services attract attention throughout the entire community and receive much favorable comment in the city papers. This has been accomplished on a decreasing population. Berwick is spoken of sometimes as a "one industry town," the big business being that of the American Car and Foundry Company. With better conditions among the railways, business will be better in Berwick, and our work will reach more people. Much credit is due to Rev. A. C. Struthers for the work accomplished. Other members of his family have rendered conspicuous service.

—The second Near East Peace Conference opened at Lausanne, Switzerland, April 23. The first Lausanne Conference broke up, February 4, after the Turkish delegates refused to sign the treaty submitted to them by the Allies. Joseph C. Grew, U. S. Minister to Switzerland, is attending the conference as an "observer."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

It was June 12th, and a large crowd of young people were gathered together in Greensboro, N. C., and amid excitement were anxiously waiting to start to Weaverville, N. C. We were a bunch of Methodist Protestants and from all over North Carolina, but we acted and seemed as intimate friends of one big church.

Finally we started in cars, and with several good chaperons, toward the west. On the way we sang songs, told stories, yelled, laughed, talked, ate, etc. About sunset we reached there, the beautiful "Land of the Sky," and the beauty of our surroundings was beyond words to describe. We went into the college, registered, and were assigned to our rooms. After a bountiful supper we gathered in the auditorium and heard the plans of the conference. Following this was a pleasant get-together social and then a peaceful night of good sound sleep in plenty of pure fresh air.

At 6:30 in the mornings did the bugle blow to call us from fairy dreamland, and then, in the quiet early hours of the day we looked unto the hills and communed with Him from whence cometh our help. After a wholesome breakfast we had inspirational chapel services and next a closed study period. Happily we entered the class rooms and received the best instruction to be given on phases of Christian work by the best instructors to be found and by ones we all came to know and love. In the afternoons, after an hour of rest, we had much fun by hiking, picnicking, kodaking, sight-seeing and the like. At sunset we again assembled in the quiet hush on the shore of the lake and held devotional vesper services. Following this we were entertained in the auditorium by some of the best speakers the United States contains.

Ten days glided swiftly by and June 23 found us again in Greensboro, brushing a tear from our eyes at the thought of parting, but rejoicing that we had met.

I suppose this dream was caused by having attended the Young People's Conference in Burlington, N. C., in 1922, where we had such a delightful time in all ways. The instruction given me there has been of much good to me since. Hardly a Christian Endeavor meeting or the like passes but that it deals with something we were taught about at the conference.

I have registered to go to Weaverville in June and am looking forward to going with much anticipation. You too would enjoy it from all standpoints, so come on, let's go!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, MAY 13.

Why Do We Believe That Jesus Christ Is the Son of God? John 20: 24-31.

Down through the two thousand years since Christ lived and worked among men on earth has come the question to many of his followers, "Why do we believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God?" This seems, however, to be a natural question with a large number of professed Christians, because they have not spent much time in prayer, and in Bible-reading, and in inner fellowship with Jesus. If we are to know Jesus Christ we must live near him in prayer and Christian experience.

Some say that they do not understand the Sonship of Jesus. That may be, but do we understand everything we believe? No. And it is not as necessary that we understand as it is for us to believe, for did not Christ say, "Thy faith hath made thee whole?"

There are a large number of reasons why we believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Some of the main ones are:

I. Jesus Himself claimed He was the Son of God.

II. Because of the testimony of His apostles.

III. Because of His works on earth.

IV. Because we believe the Scriptures.

I. Jesus claimed Divine Sonship. He Himself has told us what he is. He came, he says, from God, and was going back to God. He had glory with God before the world was. He does not say he was a son but the Son. These words of Jesus should be sufficient.

II. Jesus' apostles, who lived, rejoiced and wept with Him, give most convincing testimony of Christ's Sonship. They knew Him. They felt the charm of His personality. When they tried to explain Him, His character and His works, the only theory that fitted the facts was that He was the Son of God. And then, of course, they remembered that He had told them that He was the Son of God. Surely the testimony of His apostles should make us believe that He is the Son of God.

III. If we judge Jesus by His works surely we will have to believe He is the Son of oGd. His work as a teacher and healer has not, nor ever will have a parallel. He did things that only God can do. He raised the dead. He walked the waves. He forgave sins He claimed the right to do so. This expresses his opinion of Himself, and surely He knew who He was and what His authority was. Jesus labored among all classes and had a message for everyone. No teacher before or since has ever had a message that meant so much to the world. Not only did He bring a message but He applied the principles of that message. He had power over disease, life and death. All these things should strengthen our belief that Jesus is the Son of God.

IV. If we believe the Scriptures, and we do, it is natural that we believe their chief message, which is the revelation of God through Christ, the Son. In the Old Testament we find the prophecy which pointed forward to One that was to come, a Savior, and all the longings of prophets find fulfillment in Jesus. He is the end of the process that began in the calling of Abraham, the preparation of a nation through whom God might send His Son to bless the whole world.

ATTENTION!

All Who Registered for Weaverville.

We recognize the fact that many who have registered did so to lend encouragement to the young people's work, and did not at the time intend to go to Weaverville. The "on-to-Weaverville" spirit has so gripped them that they are now planning to go. Of course I do not know who intends to go and who does not intend to go, therefore I am herein asking you to please let me know at once. I cannot guarantee transportation, nor accommodation after we get there, to any except those who let me know that they are going. Do more than register, write me and say, "I am going."

Because of the preliminary expense to which the board is put in preparation for the conference, it made a ruling at its last meeting that every one be required to deposit five dollars, this to be credited to their $15 board and room bill at Weaverville. In other words, five of the fifteen dollars expense there will be paid before going. It will be of great convenience to the board if everybody will make that deposit as early as possible. All moneys thus received, if it is found that those who sent it cannot attend the conference, will be refunded, provided the board is notified before the tenth of June. After that no moneys will be refunded, and same will be used to carry on the work of the board.

Those who make deposits will be given preference as to transportation and accommodations. It will be wise to send in the deposits early. Send your deposit to the undersigned.

REPORT OF TREASURER, BOARD OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

The following payments were received from Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies during the period from April 9 to April 30:

Mt. Pleasant Sr. C. E. society, Mt. Pleasant charge, $2; St. Paul Jr. C. E. society, St. Paul charge, Greensboro, $1; Asheboro Sr. C. E. society, $2; Bethel Sunday school, Alamance charge, $2; Creswell Sr. C. E. society, $2; Bethel Sunday school, Alamance charge, $2; Creswell Sr. C. E. society, Creswell charge, $2; Mt. Pleasant Sunday school, Mt. Pleasant charge, $2; Burlington Sr. C. E. society, $2; Henderson Sr. C. E. society, $2; Whitakers Sr. C. E. society, Whitakers charge, $2.

The above list shows that seven Christian Endeavor societies and two Sunday schools responded to the requests that have been made through the columns of the Herald and by letters sent by Rev. N. M. Harrison, president of the Young People's Board. The present conference year for the young people's work is nearing a close, and there are many Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies that have not yet sent in their assessments of $2 for Sunday schools and senior C. E. societies and $1 for Intermediate and Junior C. E. societies. Please attend to this matter at your earliest convenience, as much more money than is already in hand will be needed to meet the expenses of the Weaverville conference.

C. B. Way, Treasurer.

Burlington, N. C.

In every walk of life today men are requiring trained, efficient service. The day has passed when everybody can do everything. To keep up with the times we must prepare for our job—we must specialize.

Ought we not to do this in our religious work as well as in our secular work?

A MOUNTAIN SCENE NEAR WEAVERVILLE. THIS AND OTHER PLACES OF BEAUTY AND INTEREST WILL BE VISITED BY THE DELEGATION ATTENDING THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SUMMER CONFERENCE IN JUNE.

Does your office equipment today look like it did thirty years ago? Would the office help of thirty years ago be able to do effective work in your office today, if they used the old methods?

How about your Sunday school?

Mr. Sims tells the following very amusing story. Does it fit your Sunday school?

The modern Rip Van Winkle went to sleep about thirty years ago and only woke up one day last week. He went home and found everything so much changed that he felt very much out of place.

Finally he asked if Bill Jones still lived down the road and upon being told that he did he called to his grandson to hitch up the mule and take him down to Bill's.

''But,'' said the grandson, ''we don't drive the mule any more.''

''What!'' said grandfather, ''have you gone back to riding mule-back''

''No, grandfather, we go in the Ford.''

''The Ford! What's that?'' asked grandfather.

''Why, that's our new automobile,'' said Johnnie.

''But,'' said Johnnie, ''grandfather. I think I'll 'phone to Mr. Jones and see if he is at home. Grandfather, wouldn't you like to speak to him over the 'phone?''

''A 'phone! What's that?''.

So Johnnie went to the wall, took down the receiver, gave the number and was soon talking to Neighbor Jones; but poor grandfather couldn't take it in.

Neither could he take it in when they started down the road without anything hitched to the buggy. He couldn't understand why it went without a horse and why it stopped without lines.

When he got to Farmer Jones's home he couldn't understand all of the talk about tractors, reapers and binders, silos, balanced rations for hogs, testing cows, etc., so he soon asked to be taken home.

When night came he asked to be taken to his room as he was tired; and inquired whether they were using candles or lightwood knots. So they explained that they didn't use any of those things, but were using Delco lights, which they immediately turned on, by pushing a button on the wall.

Grandfather was taken to his room and left to retire. Away in the middle of the night some one heard grandfather wandering around in the hall and asked if he were sick.

''No,'' said grandfather, ''but I wish you would come and blow out this light. It is in a bottle and I can't make it go out.''

The next morning Johnnie said to his mother, ''Mother, poor grandfather seems so lost I want to take him to Sunday school with me. I bet he'll feel at home there.''

So grandfather journeyed to Sunday school with Johnnie and upon returning said, ''My! I enjoyed that service. Why everything was just like I left it thirty years ago. They opened with the same song, read the same scripture lesson, and old Deacon Brown prayed the same prayer. Even Elder Green is still lecturing to the men in the corner so loud that he is the only thing that can be heard in Sunday school.''

If this is your Sunday school, there is only one way to catch up with the times: that is, to have a real, wide-awake teacher-training class among your young people and let them learn that there are better ways than the old ones.

Mary E. Young,
Superintendent Teacher Training,
Board of Young People's Work of N. C.

EXPRESSION OF THANKS.

Dear Mr. McCulloch: Please allow us space to express our deep appreciation of the many expressions of sympathy received in the deep sorrow through which we are passing. Especially to the ministers who came and rendered every possible service in their power to lessen our grief in the funeral service of our dear boy, R. Otho. Sincerely,

J. R. Stone and Family.

Loss by Fire.

Last week the well furnished, beautiful home of T. P. Troxler of Reidsville. R. 1. was destroyed by fire, including almost every piece of their house property. A number of other buildings were also burned, some of which included 200 bushels of wheat, 200 bushels of corn, a quantity of meat, potatoes and such like. There was no insurance. Their loss is estimated at some eight or ten thousand dollars.

Brother Troxler is a member of Fair Grove church. His family belongs to Mizpah church. Their many friends very greatly sympathize with them in this great loss.

BOYS' BUILDING, WEAVER COLLEGE, WEAVERVILLE, N. C., WHERE THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SUMMER CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD, JUNE 12-22.

BRIN.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell tells the story of the instinct for following the trail of one of the Northern dogs. Dr. Grenfell is the wonderful doctor-missionary and leader of the people on the Labrador coast. He tells this story in St. Nicholas:

One evening, as he was feeding his dogs, there came upon them suddenly another team driven by Joe, who had come to call the doctor to Island Harbor, where there was a case of sicknes, and "they doesn't know what t' sickness be." It was sixty miles across the country, and twice that distance around the shore, but there was no trail over the cross-country route.

Around the fire that night they were discussing the cross-country trip, when Harry, an old acquaintance, came in, beating the snow off himself as he entered. Harry, who was familiar with the route, had an errand over part of the route to bring in two stags that he had killed, and so it was agreed to make the attempt to go that way.

Dr. Grenfell and his fellow-doctor had left their experienced dogs at the hospital, and were breaking in a new team. The only dog of their last year's team was a yellowish-brown animal, with black-striped markings somewhat like a tiger. These lent to his face the suggestion that he was eternally grinning—an impression intensified by an odd way he had of turning up the corners of his mouth when he caught one's eye. The dog was named "Brin."

Long before daylight the next morning, they were astir, for it would require all the day to drive the sixty or seventy miles. Harry, with his good team and knowing the route well, led the way until about ten o'clock, when he had to turn aside to bring in his game. Before they parted, all halted under some spruce trees to boil "a mug of tea."

Then the doctor and his companion set out on an unmarked trail. Their only assets were their pocket compass, giving the general direction; their axes to clear a path when they should get stogged; a hopeful disposition which never spoiled for troubles until they should come along; and—Brin. A trackless marsh lay before them. Dr. Grenfell's companion said: "Don't say a word. Let's see if Brin will head right—across the marsh, anyhow."

"All right," replied the doctor. "Mum is the word. Go!" Brin, with his good team, led off in a gallop in the direction the compass indicated should be the course.

Their friend Harry had told them of certain landmarks—a tall, lone spruce at one place; at another, a forked juniper tree from which the top-boughs had been stripped, and the skull and antlers of an old caribou placed in the forks. As the galloping dogs ran on, Brin led them by the lone spruce. Some ten miles farther, the doctor's companion shouted, "There she is!" "There is what?" exclaimed the doctor. "Why, the skull in the tree," he responded. As they passed this they both thought that Brin looked around and grinned, but if the dog did not the doctors did, for their spirits were high that another ten miles lay behind them.

The shadows of evening were now falling, and between them and their goal were miles of rolling forest. How much longer could they trust Brin? At one point he swung off, almost at right angles from the direction they had been traveling. Passing down a long slope, they came to a long lake onto which they ran at right angles. Facing them was a steep bluff, and the lake seemed to end in a narrow defile, through which they supposed the river had escaped, and toward which they expected to turn, but no such notion entered Brin's head. He made exactly for the opposite direction, and then, crossing a narrow portion of the lake, he started to climb the hill in front of them. The travelers had hoped before this to come upon the snow-tracks of hunters, but nothing of the kind could be seen.

As they swung around a big drift of snow, a fresh fox-track ran directly down a bluff. Without looking back, Brin jumped right into the track and followed it. The men found it hard not to "butt in" and tell a mere dog that he was probably foolish in following a fox track, but the men did not know just which way they did want to go, and on they went.

It was now almost dark, and if they meant to make a camp for the night it had to be done. The team was stopped, and they were about to gather wood for a fire when the doctor's companion said: "I am for giving Brin another chance." "All right," replied Grenfell, and Brin gas given the signal to go. It was now dark. Running into a tree, they were compelled to stop. Getting out of the sledge, Dr. Grenfell found they were in a well-cut path. Taking his trail, they were soon at the Gray Cove, and by eight o'clock had reached the patient's house.

Before turning in that night, Dr. Grenfell went out to see if the dogs were all safe, and as he was about to re-enter the cottage door, something warm and furry rubbed against his leg. By the light that streamed from the open door, he found himself looking into Brin's eyes. They were asking, "How did I please you today, master?"

"I could not help putting my arms around his neck and hugging him," says Dr. Grenfell. "Then we both went to our beds the happier for it."—Selected.

HOW TO FIND OUT THE WILL OF THE LORD.

First: Pray.

Second: Think.

Third: Talk to wise people, but do not regard their decision as final.

Fourth: Beware of the bias of your own will, but do not be too much afraid of it. It is a mistake to think that God's will is necessarily in the line of the disagreeable.

Fifth: Meantime, do the nearest duty; for doing God's will in small things is the best preparation for knowing it in great things.—Selected.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Lincolnton.—It has been some time since we reported but nevertheless we have not been idle at all. The Sunday school and all the church work is in splendid working order. The attendance is increasing to such an extent that the classes are almost running together. Secretary's report for last Sunday was excellent: attendance, 151; collection, $9.31.

Our pastor was unable to fill his appointment at the evening service last Sunday, as there is a revival now in progress at Bessemer City, so he sent Brother Rabb instead. It seemed that all who were present enjoyed the message he delivered very much, and were benefited to a great extent, as it was mostly to young converts.

Both societies are doing fine. The seniors and intermediates went to King's Mountain last Saturday on a picnic. The majority of them enjoyed it very much and want to go back, but some say they don't ever want to go again. The Juniors are planning a picnic for Saturday week at McDaniel's Spring.

We are getting along very nicely toward raising the money to build the addition to the church; hope it will continue to be so, as we need the building so very badly. Reporter.

Friendship, Fallston Circuit.—We believe in doing things at our church. The Methodist Protestants have a new house, practically, to worship Christ in. Some time ago the outside was painted and now it is painted white on the inside and the benches stained. Mr. W. A. Gantt has given a nice present of new carpet for the aisles. Just a few more finishing touches in the pulpit and the work will be complete.

Regardless of the rough winter Sundays and the great influenza epidemic in this country, we had Sunday school just the same. Our faithful superintendent of Sunday school (N. J. Wright) is always present.

Since spring has come we are more active in larger numbers. Our pastor is doing his duties in a fine way as usual. We were sorry to learn of the death of one of his daughters and we sympathize with him and his family in his new experience of such sadness. She was a Christian, though, and has gone to a much better world.

Brother E. Ivester filled his appointment the third Sunday in April. Mr. Ivester gave an excellent talk on the need of a Methodist Protestant college, and how easily we can complete the undertaking if every member will do his part.

We are looking forward to the third Sunday in May. There will be Memorial Services and Mothers' Day combined. Reporter.

S. C. May all be comforted with the promise of the Eternal Spirit that said, "Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord."

The funeral services were conducted in the home by her pastor, Rev. N. Brittain, and Rev. F. C. Owens of the M. E. church, Cross Anchor, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives, after which her body was gently laid to rest in the Yarbrough Chapel cemetery, beneath a mound of beautiful flowers, to await the resurrection morn.

Hattie Lou Bishop.

Asheboro Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

We have just closed a very successful year's work in our society. Have held all regular monthly meetings, held our Thank-offering Service in February, and notwithstanding the extremely cold day, had a right good collection, $43.42. We had a most interesting program for the Thank-offering Service.

Our membership consists of forty active members, twelve honorary members, and also ten life members. For the past few years we have been having the August meeting as our annual picnic, and have found this to be very helpful to our society, as well as being something we all enjoy.

Our assessment for this year was $275; we raised $277.42. Our society was well represented at the branch meeting held in Greensboro last week, and quite sure we that were permitted to attend thoroughly enjoyed it.

Mrs. A. R. Winningham,
Corresponding Secretary.

Pageland.—Sunday the weather was very bad and the attendance was not so good, although I am sure the few faithful that were present enjoyed the service. Our superintendent was not present, but it was not due to carelessness on his part, for he has been faithful over thirty years.

Sunday afternoon we had the pleasure of having with us Brother Hardy from Rockingham, N. C., to speak to us concerning our Methodist Protestant College; his object was to raise more money for the College. We feel it our duty and hope that every Methodist Protestant will contribute as liberally as possible. Leo Sowell, Reporter.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—Brother H. A. Garrett and his class from the Home were to have had all-day service at this church yesterday, but could not reach here for the downpour of rain. We are glad to announce that they will be here next Sunday, the 6th of May. We hope to have a large congregation to hear them.

Baltimore is one of the best churches in Yadkin county. We have some fine people here.

We expect to have the people from Stony Knoll and Union Hill churches with us at Baltimore afternoon, May the 6th. May the Lord belss and give us a good day.

Yours in His name, A. M. Hamilton.

Thomasville.—Sunday school convened at 9:45 with 150 present. The downpour of rain made our number small, but there were many signs of life in our Sunday school.

Preaching service at 11 o'clock. Text, "Come and go with us and we will do thee good, for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel." From this Brother Troxler showed us that the church needs us and our service and we need the church. May God help us as a people to see this opportunity to grasp it before it is too late, and make this world a better place in which to live.

Christian Endeavor society met at 6:30 with 35 present and a good service. Subject, a Trained Leadership for the Church and Sunday School, showing that leadership is developed by service.

Preaching service followed at 7:15; text, "Prepare to meet thy God." We were made to feel the need of preparation and shown the need of preparedness for success along any given line we may be inclined to follow in life. Pray for us that we may make better preparation to meet our God. Reporter.

Twelfth District Rally, Democrat Church.

This was pronounced a success in spite of the rainy weather. Each church in the district was represented, with the possible exception of Mountain Valley.

Drs. Andrews and Dixon, Rev. C. W. Bates and Rev. L. C. Little from the outside brought us ringing messages which will bring results.

The pastors of the district each appeared at different times and expressed their sentiments. Also there were addresses by some of our laymen. The congregations were not as large as we had hoped for, but much interest was shown.

Weaverville Charge.—We were delighted to have Rev. C. W. Bates and L. C. Little speak at Clarke's Chapel Saturday night. Sickness in the community prevented many of our people from coming; however, those who did come were well paid for their trouble.

Dr. Andrews spoke at Mt. Zion. Several of the young people were out to hear him talk about our College.

Rev. C. W. Bates preached at Weaverville church last night. Sorry we could not hear him. Am certain those who heard him are to be congratulated on their good fortune.

The pastor wishes to thank all these brethren for their interest in our mountain charges and the helpful messages they brought to us.

Our College.

Weaverville charge has gone "over the top" by subscribing our full quota for the college. We wish to thank all who have had a part in making this announcement possible. We feel like singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Our Summer Conference.

To our own knowledge 65 have registered from this charge for the conference. Some of our young people have worked faithfully to enable us to make this report. We thank them.

Sincerely, B. M. Williams.

Burlington.—Last Sunday was a rainy day, and consequently there was a decrease of about 150 in Sunday school, there being 153 present. The Sunday school orchestra rendered a very beautiful selection entitled, "One Sweet Solemn Thought," which was accompanied by a vocal solo by Miss Kay Sellman. There were three preachers present besides the pastor, namely, Rev. J. H. Abernethy, Rev. H. L. Isley, of our denomination, and Rev. Russell Branson, ministerial student of Guilford College and member of the Friends' Church. C. B. Way was called on for a brief report of the recent state Sunday School Convention held at Winston-Salem, but did not attempt to make a full report on account of the lack of time. He stated that it would require an hour's time to give a complete report of the convention.

There was a large number of people present for the morning church service in spite of the down-pour of rain during the morning, preceding and following the Sunday school hour. Pastor Taylor held the congregation with rapt interest for 45 minutes, during which he delivered one of the most forceful and helpful sermons heard here in several weeks. The theme of the discourse was, "An Overmastering Interest," and the text was St. John 4: 28-29, which was a part of the conversation Christ had with the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well. We were glad to have Rev. J. H Abernethy and Rev. Russell Branson worship with us at the morning service. Brother Abernethy and son spent the week-end at Gibsonville and Burlington with friends, visiting those he had learned to know during former pastorates at Gibsonville and Burlington. Brother Branson was here for the state intercollegiate peace oratorical contest which was held on Friday night and in which he participated. He visited his brother, C. C. Branson, during the week-end.

The Junior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor meetings were held at their usual time Sunday afternoon and evening. At eight o'clock Sunday night the senior Christian Endeavor society presented a Christian Endeavor pageant which took the place of the preaching service.

Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Williams, of Enfield, visited their daughter, Mrs. Staley Garrison, in this city from Thursday morning till Saturday morning, making the trip in their automobile.

Pastor Taylor announced last Sunday morning that our spring revival meeting will begin next Sunday morning. Rev. C. M. Compher, of Washington, D. C., has been engaged to do the preaching and is expected to arrive on Monday or Tuesday of next week. Preparatory prayer services will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights of this week. The Sunday school classes that are organized have been asked to co-operate with the pastor in the services by securing and furnishing a list of the unsaved persons of each class above the primary department. We ask the praying Christian and preachers of the North Carolina Conference to pray for the success of the meeting.

The pastor will preach at both services next Sunday. In addition to the beginning of the revival, the other regular services of the church will be held. C. B. Way, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—In spite of the hard rain Sunday we had fifty present in Sunday school; collection $1.15. So you see we have a faithful few. We are sorry to report that our faithful superintendent, L. R. Dixon, has been sick and not able to be with us for two weeks. He has been our superintendent for a number of years and we ask all Christians to pray that he may be restored to health, and be with us many more years. He has been a faithful worker in the church so long, that when a Sunday school teacher asked her class one day, "Whose house is this?" one of his little grandsons answered, "Grandpa's."

Our pastor was with us the fourth Sunday and preached a splendid sermon on church going. We were glad to have him and his good wife visit in our home.

Our school closed last week with programs which were enjoyed by large crowds. We will miss the teacher in Sunday school and church.

April 30.

High Point.—On Sunday morning the pastor, Dr. Brown, delivered a very helpful sermon on the dignity of labor, from the text as found in 1 Cor. 3:9, "For we are laborers together with God." To those of us who must work the performance of even the most menial tasks becomes glorified when we consider that we are working together with God. The old couplet comes to mind,

"Who sweeps a room by God's laws,
Makes that and the action fine."

Jenny Lind, one of the world's sweetest singers, exclaimed: "I sing, I sing to the glory of God." The farmer, who guides his plow through the fallow earth these glorious spring days, and listens to the joyous symphonies of the birds, is indeed one of nature's noblemen, and is performing worthy and useful work in helping to feed earth's hungry millions; the groceryman, who sells the farmer's products in the city, is doing worthy work in helping this great cause; the manufacturer, who employs his time, money, and talents to make needful furniture for countless homes in our land, is performing a noble work; the hosts of teachers, who are laboring day by day to educate children and youth, to inspire them with high ideals, and to mold their character aright, are engaged in blessed work second only to the ministry of the gospel, and what shall we say of the humble house-keepers? They push on day by day, year by year, on the same monotonous round of duties, cooking, washing, sweeping, making innumerable little garments, cleansing baby faces as well as soothing wounds and heart-aches, and training their children for citizenship and life's duties. We often wonder what our grandmothers would think if they could return to earth and see all our improvements and labor-saving devices, such as electric washing-machines and irons, vacuum cleaners, gas stoves, furnaces for heating and many others.

Your reporter on a recent Sabbath afternoon's drive stopped at old Fairfield church, seven miles from High Point; here rest two of the founders of the Methodist Protestant Church in this section, Rev. Alson Gray and Rev. Alexander Robbins. These consecrated men toiled and labored all their lives under many difficulties to blaze a way for future generations. They rode horseback on circuits hundreds of miles in length to preach and encourage their people; we often wonder what they would think of our fine macadam and sand-clay roads penetrating even into remote districts, and the thousands of automobiles passing thereon daily. Surely we are living in a grand and glorious age with a world of possibilities for the men and women who see their opportunities and grasp them.

On Sunday evening the young ladies of the Christian Endeavor society gave a pretty pageant in the church with special music.

Dr. Brown left yesterday afternoon for Concord, where he will assist Rev. A. D. Shelton in a series of meetings for a week or more. He announced that he will help in only one more meeting this summer, for he is exceedingly anxious to stay at home and watch the daily progress of the new church. He says the hole in the ground is getting bigger!

Shelby.—On April 15 the good people of Shelby station took me over to town and dressed me so fine my good people thought they had a new preacher Sunday morning. I have never serveed better people. They surely look after their preacher.

Well, I had better close for fear some of the good brethren who are wearing old clothes will want my place. Ha! Ha!

We are having a good Sunday school and the interest is growing every Sunday. Your brother in Christ, J. M. Ridenhour.

Union Hill, West Forsyth Circuit.—We are still living and doing the best we can to upbuild our church. Our Sunday school is very good. But could you believe that we have people living right here at the church, you might say (not over a mile) who go to the church only when there is a burying?

There is going to be a community singing at Union Hill second Sunday in May, and we hope that everybody will come with a song. We are looking for Mr. J. W. Johnson and his singers from High Point and we hope to have the Green Street singers with us again. Now don't forget the second Sunday in May—we are looking for you.

Lots of love to the Herald and its readers.

Friendship, Haw River.—Since the assemblage of the young people's convention here we have been putting forth a stronger effort to improve our church and religious activities. Sunday school attendance has been very good and the interest shown by attending members has been pleasing. Although there are some whose attendance has been quite irregular, we hope that they will overcome that irregularity. New supplies, such as new song books, Christian Endeavor supplies, etc., have just recently come in.

Our Junior Christian Endeavor meets each Sunday. Last Sunday afternoon quite an interesting program was rendered, each member taking an active part, some voluntarily. The children have shown a spirit of enthusiasm from the very beginning of the society, which we hope will continue on, and on, and on.

The W. H. M. S. is endeavoring to do a greater work in the following year than it did in the past. We are to meet soon and put into action some new ideas which we feel will help our society. Dear reader, we ask your prayers that we may become stronger.

—Grace church's second quarterly conference was held last week (Wednesday night), President Dixon presiding. We had a good meeting. Brothers J. M. Stone and J. W. Causey were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference.

Graham Church.—Our revival services started here last Sunday, April 29. Rev. J. D. Williams arrived yesterday and took charge of the services last night. He preached a soul-stirring sermon last night from the subject of Soul-Winning. Brother Williams will remain over next Sunday and probably a few days next week. We are praying for and expecting a good revival.. Rev. J. M. Morgan, pastor of Glen Raven circuit, was with us last night.

Littleton Circuit.—On Saturday, April 21, 11 o'clock A. M., we held our second quarterly conference. Churches were all represented except Vaughn. Business was gone through with in the usual order. Reports were not at all flattering, but the brethren manifested some spirit that made us feel that it would be better. Brother J. H. Harrison, Jr., and A. B. Wilson were put in nomination for delegate to annual conference.

Easter services were held in part and some collections were taken for home missions. Some of our people are planning for Children's Day to be held in June.

Our Littleton people desire to have a piano in their church and Sister W. N. Thornton has worked faithfully for this end. She laid her needs on the hearts of the good people of Littleton and a number of our friends in Littleton helped her and made it possible to put on a play in Littleton of which proceeds amounted to $105. They took the same play to Norlina and Roanoke Rapids with some results but not so much. They hope to get the piano in some way, though they have not enough money in hand as yet.

We are remembered by our friends, not by storm, but in time of need. Brother E. B. Pair gave us $1 to buy gas. Sister Alice Glasgow, sweet corn to plant. And Brother and Sister E. G. Glenn, fruits, candy, etc., for the children. We have a little boy and girl with us most of the time and these Sister Glenn says are hers and she does not forget them.

IT IS TIME.

It is time to be brave. It is time to be true.
It is time to be finding the thing you can do.
It is time to put by the dream and the sigh,
And work for the cause that is holy and high.

It is time to be kind. It is time to be sweet,
To be scattering roses for somebody's feet.
It is time to be sowing. It is time to be growing.
It is time for the flowers of life to be blowing.
It is time to be lowly and humble of heart.
It is time for the lilies of meekness to start;
For the heart to be white, and the steps to be right,
And the hands to be weaving a garment of light.

IN MEMORIAM.

Resolutions.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from us our beloved brother, Mr. E. R. Spruill, who died April 11, 1923, age 66 years, we, the members of Rehoboth Methodist Protestant church, wish to express our appreciation for his faithful Christian life and character. He was for many years a steward and loyal member of his church and was ever ready to help in any good work. We shall see him no more on earth, but we feel sure we shall meet him in Heaven. We wish to offer the following resolutions:

1st, While we feel our loss keenly, we know God doeth all things well and our loss is his gain, for he has gone where there is no pain or sorrow.

2nd, That we extend to his wife, Mrs. Pattie Spruill, and to his daughter, Miss Mary Spruill, and his four sons, Edie, Leaon, Henry and Jimmie, and also his many friends, our heartfelt sympathy and pray God to comfort them in their sorrows, praying at the same time that all may live close to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who is the great Mediator between God and man. Since we, too, measurably feel their loss, if "to live in the hearts of those left behind is not to die," surely he liveth evermore.

3rd, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his bereaved family, and a copy to our church paper.

Ridings.

J. M. Ridings was born December 11, 1860. He died aged 62 years, four months, five days. On October 12, 1883, he joined the Methodist Protestant church at Harmony Grove. From that day to the day that he was called from this world he has been a faithful member. He never was a slacker and his pastor could always depend upon him, for he never was known to fall out with the stewards or superintendent and quit the church as some people do. He has been true and loyal to his church and to his pastor 40 years. He loved his church and was always present at every meeting.. He has never been known to shirk a duty. A good man indeed is gone. He will be greatly missed in his home church and community. While we miss him and mourn our loss, it is his eternal gain.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved widow and three sons and four daughters, who are all Christians.

The blow was hard, the shock severe—
To part with one we loved so dear;
God loved him too and thought it best,
So took him to his heavenly rest.
We cannot, Lord, Thy purpose see.
But all is well that's done by thee.

A. M. Hamilton, Pastor.

Yarbrough.

On April 16, 1923, the people of Cross Anchor, S. C., were made sad when they heard of the death of Mrs. Evelyn Yarbrough.

Mrs. Evelyn Yarbrough was born in Lawrence county, S. C., in 1845. She was converted when she was just a girl and united with the church.

She was married to Mr. Daniel Yarbrough, after which she, with Mr. Yarbrough, joined at Yarbrough Chapel Methodist Protestant church of Cross Anchor, and has been a member here for fifty years. Mrs. Yarbrough was indeed true to her church in every respect. She was indeed a faithful worker, although she has been an invalid for fourteen years. Her hip was broken in 1909 and she had not walked a step since, although she still came to her church. Some member of the family would bring her, leaving her seated in the car near the door, that she might listen to the preaching of God's word, which she enjoyed so much.

Mrs. Yarbrough was confined to her bed for only a few days. We do not know just the suffering she endured, but she was indeed cheerful and patient until the very last. Mrs. Yarbrough was a sweet woman. She was always thinking of others instead of herself. She enjoyed so much for people to visit her. Her home has always been the home for all the preachers. She was widely known, and greatly loved by all who knew her.

Her husband preceded her to the grave ten years ago; one of her sons, Mr. Calvin Yarbrough, also preceded her to the grave about eleven years ago.

She leaves to mourn her loss five sons, Mr. John Yarbrough, Mr. Lafayette Yarbrough, Mr. Hiram Yarbrough, Mr. Charlie Yarbrough, Mr. Lewis Yarbrough, and one daughter, Miss Lily Yarbrough, all of Cross Anchor, Eli Pritchard.

The funeral services for Eli Pritchard, aged 73 years, were attended by a large number of friends and relatives of the family. Mr. Pritchard was well known and liked, having been born and reared in the county. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pritchard who lived in the northern part of the county. Rev. H. F. Fogleman conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Talton Johnson, of Mebane, a former pastor of the deceased, having served the pastorate at the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church for a number of years. Dr. Johnson spoke in high terms of the deceased, saying he was a man who ran the even tenor of his way and was always the same to those with whom he came in contact, reliable, unassuming and substantial. Mr. Fogleman, in a few well chosen words, spoke of the love and respect in which Mr. Pritchard was held by his associates. The choir sang old familiar hymns, favorites of the deceased and the family. Surviving him are, besides a wife, who was Lou J. Vuncannon, daughter of the late Peter Vuncannon and wife; Garland Pritchard of Asheboro, Miss Ethel Pritchard, of High Point, Mrs. W. Ellis Luck, of this place, Mrs. Boyd Little of Charlotte, and Mrs. Oscar Austin, of Mt. Gilead. Mr. Pritchard had been in ill health for over a year.—Asheboro Courier.

Jesse Hathcock.

Our hearts were made sad on April 12 by the death of our much loved member, Brother Jesse Hathcock. He was born August 7, 1893. He was married to Onnie Lowder October 18, 1919. He leaves, to mourn, his dear wife and one son, J. C., Jr., and one little daughter; also four brothers, one sister. He was a member of Friendship Methodist Protestant church. He seemed to love the house of God. He delighted in its services and ordinances and gave prayerful attention to the instructions given.

He only suffered a few days. We can not understand fully why he was taken from a good, loving wife, as Sister Onnie was. He was greatly loved and needed, and out of a church where he loved so much to be and which he served. Yet the Master had greater need of him. We know sometime we will understand the things that are mysteries now.

The funeral services were held at Friendship Methodist Protestant church by the writer. The day was rainy and cold; however, a large crowd of people attended the funeral, which showed the high esteem in which the deceased was held. Weep not, dear ones, as those who have no hope; he is not here, but yonder; he can not come to you but you can go to him. A. Ridge, Pastor.

Letha Hatley.

Our hearts were made inexpressibly sad on February 5 by the death of sweet little Letha. She was only three years, four months, 22 days old. We can not understand why she was taken out of a home from her father and mother, where she was greatly loved. But the Master had greater need of her. We know some time we will understand the things that are mysteries now.

The funeral services were held at Friendship church by the writer.

We humbly pray that the sweet comfort of faith may fall with healing grace upon each of the sorrowing hearts of those to whom she was nearest and dearest. He that has power to raise from the dead, to close the lion's mouth, to open the prison, to forgive sins, has power to gather the little lambs and transfer them to His heavenly fold. The little rosebud that just began to open will bloom fully there. Who would disturb the little lambs playing on the green shore, and basking in the sunlight of God? What pen or tongue can describe the beauties of this scene in heaven? Little Letha is at rest now; harm cannot come to her.

Dear father and mother, you have contributed to this beautiful scene. Heaven is nearer you than ever before. You have more for which to live.

"What cheering words are these?
This sweetness who can tell?
From time unto eternity,
'Tis with the righteous well.
Then shall we see and feel and know
All we desired or wished below;
And every power find sweet employ
In that eternal world of joy."

Lord, keep us faithful unto the end for Christ's sake. A. Ridge.

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom to remove from us our dear sister, Mrs. A. S. Renn, on March 25, 1923, be it resolved by the members of the Aid society of Methodist Protestant church,

That, while we mourn her death, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

That we will cherish her memory as a faithful member of our society, and a kind and helpful friend.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved husband and children.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our church paper in Greensboro, a copy be sent to her family, and a copy be recorded upon our minutes.

Mrs. O. O. Young,
Mrs. L. R. Gooch.

HOW FAR WE MAY TRUST THE LORD.

For many years I have been a professor of the religion of Jesus Christ, and had truly believed that in His hands might safely be trusted all our soul's interest. To Him I had prayed, and unto Him rendered thanks. When sickness came and the dark shadow of death approached those who were dearest to me, my faith ventured another step, and I prayed not only for the salvation of the child, but that it might be restored to health; beyond this I never used to go. That wide field of temporalities, where the Christian finds his trials, his defeats or his conquests, to me was practically beyond the care of the Almighty. The everyday business of life I dared to transact without praying to Him for success in it or asking Him to guide me. Thus I passed through several years of extensive business transactions with almost unvaried success, and was esteemed rich.

But the terrible financial crises which fell so suddenly and with crushing force upon every part of the country, brought embarrassment for me also. My property was not lost; my securities had not depreciated; and my name had not been dishonored; yet I owed money; not in large sums; only such sums as I ordinarily could have obtained in an hour. The times were very hard, my neighbors were begging for loans; still I felt confident that I could obtain what I needed from any of several quarters. The time of payment came nearer, and with it the pressure grew harder; and, more than all, came that universal distrust which made men doubt even their own flesh and blood. I applied to one after another for temporary loans and went away disappointed. Then I attempted to sell property, which at another time would have found ready sale and at its full value; but now it would not sell at any price. The money must be paid; a business reputation, which had cost years of labor and many sacrifices, was at stake, and to preserve it I was willing to give all the wealth that I possessed. But no one of my friends could or would help, and none would buy.

I had but a day left, and went home at night with a sad heart. My dear wife was as devoted and faithful as ever, and when I saw the sweet joy that my coming gave her, I thanked God for the gift of such a wife. My only son came with beaming eyes to tell me of his success in his school examination, which had that day taken place. His joy was contagious, my heart was softened, and I thanked God for that child. Then little Ellen came, the youngest, so fair, so innocent and happy, and climbed up into my lap; in her little hand my heart became a harp of sweetest melody. Again I thanked God for His infinite and constant love. And with the prayer a blessed thought came into my mind: "You are discouraged; you have applied to friends for relief; you have used all the means in your power to obtain it, and have been everywhere disappointed. Why not go to your Father in heaven?"

This seemed to be whispered not into my ear, but into my heart. It seemed to me to be a suggestion from above, and I followed it. That night I prayed that the Lord would relieve me from my embarrassment; and no one who has not experienced the same feeling can tell what burden that prayer removed or how much courage it gave me. "The Lord is my Shepherd," came instantly into my head, and up to my lips for utterance. A sweet and refreshing night's sleep was enjoyed, and in the morning I went to my office—without money, it is true, but with a faith and hope that felt no place for fear, and patiently awaited for the fulfillment of its desire. Before that day had gone, a gentleman to whom I had before applied and who refused me assistance, called and asked me what amount of money I required. I named the sum; and he sat down and made out his check for that amount. That day my debts were paid, my property was saved, my business reputation was preserved—and, best of all, I that day learned to trust the Lord in temporal matters as well as in spiritual concerns.—Selected.

SINGING AND SIGNING.

A gentleman in the city of Boston who was in the habit of using wine was asked by one of his promising boys if he might go to one of the Cold Water Army meetings.

"Yes, my boy, you may go; but you must not sign the pledge."

Now, in our Cold Water Army we did not allow the children to sign the pledge without the consent of their parents. We believe the boy's first duty is to obey his father and mother.. Well, the boy came. He was a noble little fellow, full of life and fire and ingenuousness. We sang and sang, and the chorus was shouted by the children—

"Cheer up, my lively lads,
In spite of rum and cider;
Cheer up, my lively lads,
We've signed the pledge together."

We sang it eight or ten times; and the little fellow I speak of sang it too.. As he was walking home, however, the thought struck him that he had been singing what was not true—

"We've signed the pledge together."

He had not signed the pledge. When he reached home he sat down at the table, and on it was a jug of cider.

"Jim," says one of his brothers, "will you have some cider?"

"No, thank you," was the reply.

"Why not? Don't you like it?"

"Oh, I'm never going to drink any more cider—nothing more that is intoxicating for me."

"My boy," said his father, "you have not disobeyed me—you have not signed the pledge?"

"No, father," said he, sobbing, "I have not signed the pledge; but I have sung it, and that's enough for me."—John B. Gough.

A little while, and then
Shall come the glorious end;
And songs of angels and of men
In perfect praise shall blend.

A RULE FOR LIVING.

Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you have won it;
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it;
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer,
Wherever you may meet it.

Remember every kindness done
To you, whate'er its measure;
Remember praise by others won
And pass it on with pleasure;
Remember every promise made,
And keep it to the letter;
Remember those who lend you aid
And be a grateful debtor.

Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living:
Forget each worry and distress,
Be hopeful and forgiving;
Remember good, remember truth,
Remember heaven's above you,
And you will find, through age and youth,
True joys, and hearts that love you.

Birthday of Mrs. Teletha A. Boggs.

Sunday morning, April 15, 1923, a number of friends and relatives assembled at the home of our dear grandmother to celebrate her 87th birthday.

Guests began to arrive about 8:30 and continued until two P. M. Among the number was one of grandmother's old friends, Mrs. Bett Crutchfield, and yet she seemed to enjoy the occasion so much. It does one good to see older people enjoy the pleasant days with others. We were glad to have our pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, and Mr. Fletcher Williams, of Burlington, N. C., with us, also the speaker from Chapel Hill.

Each one seemed to enjoy the day, and there was not one long, solemn face in the crowd of about 80 people.

About 12 o'clock they began to spread the table-cloths out on the front porch, for there was not room in the house for such a long table; then all began carrying out rations to put on it, until it seemed there was no room for more. It was a nice spread of rations for any one to see; everything looked good and all that we tasted was good. More variety on one table I've never seen for this time of the year. One hardly knew which to eat for the best. After all had eaten, there was lots left.

After enjoying ourselves as best we could after eating too much, we wished dear grandmother many more such birthdays, and departed for our homes.

Her granddaughter, Annie C. Squires.

—Mrs. Teletha A. Boggs is very ill. Dear readers, please pray for her soon to recover.

FAITH AND SIGHT.

We wept—'twas nature wept, but Faith
Can pierce beyond the gloom of death,
And in yon world, so fair and bright,
Behold thee in refulgent light.
We miss thee here, yet Faith would rather Know thou are with thy Heavenly Father.
Nature sees the body dead,
Faith beholds the spirit fled;
Nature stops at Jordan's tide,
Faith beholds the other side;
That but hears farewells and sighs,
This thy welcome in the skies;
Nature mourns a cruel blow,
Faith assures it is not so;
Nature never sees thee more,
Faith but sees thee gone before;
Nature tells a dismal story,
Faith has visions full of glory;
Nature views the change with sadness,
Faith contemplates it with gladness;
Nature murmurs—Faith gives meekness,
"Strength is perfected in weakness;"
Nature writhes and hates the rod,
Faith looks up and blesses God;
Sense looks downward—Faith above,
That sees harshness—this sees love.
Oh, let Faith victorious be—
Let it reign triumphantly.
But thou art gone! Not lost, but flown,
Shall I then ask thee back, my own?
Back—and leave thy spirit's brightness?
Back—and leave thy robes of whiteness?
Back—and leave thine angel mould?
Back—and leave those streets of gold?
Back—and leave the Lamb Who feeds thee;
Back—from founts to which He leads thee?
Back—and leave thy Heavenly Father?
Back—to earth and sin? Nay, rather
Would I walk in solitude!
I would not ask thee if I could,
But patient wait the high decree,
That calls my spirit home to thee.

UNTIL SEVENTY TIMES SEVEN.

A writer in the Australian Record tells this story:

John and Gladys were out at the front of the house. Gladys was making a bead necklace for her doll.. The beads were on a little work-table beside her. John was playing at trains. His train was a toy cart, with a funny collection of dolls and animals in it for passengers. He was the engine himself, and he was steaming and whistling with all his strength.

"Don't come here, John," said Gladys, as he came near the table.

"Puff, puff," went this snorting human engine.

"Take care," cried Gladys again, as he came nearer to the table, "you'll spill my beads." Away John went, and soon forgot his sister's warning. The train came round the corner, and before he knew, the table was upset, and the beads scattered in all direstions.

"Oh, John," cried Gladys, with an angry face, "what did I tell you?"

"I'm awfully sorry,' said John, as he helped to pick up the beads. John was always sorry, but it did not make him careful. Gladys did not answer for a moment, but then she said, "Never mind, John, I'll forgive you."

She remembered the lesson she heard on Sunday about Jesus' telling Peter how he ought to forgive his brother seventy times seven. Gladys was a hot-tempered girl, but had resolved to obey Jesus. She had been saying to herself—although John did not know—"I will forgive him 490 times, but after that—" She shut her lips tight. "I'll keep a forgiveness account,' she thought, "so as to know when it's seventy times seven. Before she went to bed she wrote at the top of a clean page in a last year's exercise book:

THE TIMES I FORGIVE JOHN.

And under this:

"Monday—For spilling my beads."

Then she remembered how that very day she had upset a tower John had built with his bricks to show father when he came home, and John had not been the least cross with her. "I suppose I ought to count that on the other side," she said slowly. She then wrote on the opposite page:

THE TIMES JOHN FORGIVES ME.

"Monday—For knocking down his tower."

That made them even.

One day she had the longer list, and another day John had it—sometimes they were even. So Gladys was beginning to feel very humble, and after awhile said to herself: "I guess if I forgive all I can without keeping any list, it will take me all my life to make 490 times. Perhaps, after all, that was what Jesus meant. I will try."

The Forgiveness Account was not kept any longer; it had done its work.

JUST ONE DRINK.

It was at a children's party. A beautiful little girl with a face as sweet as a cherub, and yet marked with sadness, sat in a small rocking-chair watching the other children play, and taking no part. A dainty white cape, edged with lace, was thrown about her. More than one child wondered why, but presently they all found out "why." During one of the games, one of the guests approached the beautiful stranger with kindly attention. They were playing "Barbie Brunt." "Put out your hands," she said, "and I'll fill 'em to the brim."

But the gentle request was not obeyed. "Put out your hands, I say," demanded the leader. "Don't you want to play?" Still the child did not put out her hands. Her face paled. She tried to speak, but could not find her voice. At this moment, the little hostess, a charming child, entered the room. Finding her guests watching the little visitor (who was spending a few days at her home), who looked disturbed, she asked,

"What is the matter?"

"She won't play 'Barbie Brunt'," was the answer.

"She can't play 'Barbie Brunt'," said the hostess sorrowfully.

The little stranger had no arms. She was the child of wealthy parents, who did all they could for her comfort and pleasure, but they could not bring back to her her arms.

It is a sad story. One day she was sitting on the front door-step of her beautiful home—a happy, laughing child. While she sat there singing a lullaby to her dolly, her brother came home. He had a gun in his hand and was staggering. She thought he was staggering for fun, and she laughed with childish glee.

"I'm going to shoot you," he said angrily. Then she was afraid. As he raised the gun, she bent her head and threw up her hands. The boy fired. The dear little hands of the child were almost completely shot off. They had to be amputated at her wrists, and later—to save her life—her arms were cut off.

The boy was broken-hearted; he wanted to put himself out of the world. He had always loved his little sister, but "just one drink" had made him wild. He never took a drop of intoxicating drink after that "black day" in his life's calendar. But even his remorseful agony could not bring back the dimpled arms to his beloved little sister. His hair grew white before he was of age. Notwithstanding his father's wealth his days are spent in hard manual labor. He wants to forget that black day, but he cannot. No matter how tired he is, he never rests his weary head upon the pillow without this thought haunting him:

"Janie's dear little arms! Janie's dear little arms! The price of just one drink."—Temperance Banner.

Pat—I could not. 'Tis me wife's child by her first husband!

"Have you got so that you can distinguish classicaal music?" asked Mrs. Newrich.

"I think so," replied her husband. "When a piece threatens every minute to be a tune and always disappoints you, it's classical."

LET'S SING THE DOXOLOGY!

At last the Minnis Fund is complete—we've gone over the top! Went over rather suddenly and unexpectedly. One of my own churches did it Sunday morning. At the close of the sermon at Rehoboth, Brother E. C. Harris got up and said a few nice things about this preacher, and then told the congregation that he'd match dollars with them to complete the Minnis Fund. In much less than five minutes I had in my hands $30 in cash. You can't imagine how greatly I appreciate that money. When the churches you serve get behind the thing you are trying to do, it makes a fellow feel extra good.

There will probably be some response to my last appeal, so I shall not make a final report until next week. I am expecting to send Brother Staley, the general treasurer, check for the entire amount by this Thursday, when, I figure, any additional amount from my last appeal will be in hand.

At this writing the Fund stands at $449.47. It's been a hard pull to get it out of some of the folks, and I've well-nigh grown weary in well doing. But I'm glad, and so are you, that we've stuck to it until the goal is reached. So, I say, let's sing the doxology! And I don't have to say: Send your money to C. W. Bates, Henderson, N. C. You've done gone and done it. Final report next week.

THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE.

In my article last week I failed to say that the rates this year woud be the same as usual, a registration fee of one dollar and board at one dollar a day.

Will not some layman on each charge see to it that the pastor is able financially to go? Speak to him about it and if he says he is not able then get busy, raise some money for him and send him on, for it will be a good investment. The truth of the matter is, your pastor needs to get away from the regular grind of the work for a few days. Then the information and the enthusiasm of the conference will be helpful.

Also, let each pastor write Mr. H. A. Garrett when you will arrive and whether to meet you at the train or whether you will come by your own conveyance.

I'm saying some of these things a little early this time but I remember that next week will be the Young People's Summer Conference and there will not be much time for other things.

Please remember the date, June 25-29.

J. E. Pritchard, President.

—We met with the Building Committee at the college Tuesday afternoon to determine the location of the boiler house and laundry. We found some parts of the building nearly complete and painters at work on other parts. It is a magnificent building. We wish all our people could see it. Looking at a picture of it does not enable one to appreciate the building. Its substantial character, its commodiousness, its beauty, the convenience of the arrangement, can only be realized by a personal inspection. Prices of building have so advanced since we let the contract that we estimate that we saved at least $20,000 by letting the contract then instead of new. While it necessarily takes much time to build such a building as it should be built, when it is done we will not regret that time was taken to do the work well. From the tower one has a fine view of the surrounding country. From the upper window of the tower, to which the stairway is not yet complete, the workmen tell us that they can see the new skyscraper in Greensboro.

ONE OF OUR MINISTERS WEDS.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Nathaniel Zentz announce the marriage of their daughter, Eurath Rebecca, to Mr. Jerry David Hardy, on Tuesday, June the 5th, 1923, Westminster, Maryland. At home after July the 1st, Rockingham, N. C. President Elderdice was the officiating minister. The wedding tour embraces an auto trip to Washington and Asheville. Mrs. Hardy was a Sunday school teacher and pianist in the M. P. church, Westminster, Md. She had taken a special musical course in Peabody, Baltimore. We cangratulate Brother Hardy and also Mrs. Hardy.

Another Parish Paper.—The Christian Evangel is the name of a new parish paper published by Brother T. G. McAllister, pastor of Caroleen charge. The aim is to promote the religious work of the church and community. It is published monthly at 50c a year. We thank Brother McAllister for sending us a copy, and wish for him the realization of his hope in awakening the people to a higher realization of the importance of the things for which the church of Christ stands and for which the Methodist Protestant Protestant Church stands.

Material Nearby.—A campaign to double our church membership was recently proposed by a brother signing his name as X. Y. Z. There is no scarcity of people outside of any church in North Carolina. A bulletin sent out by the State University gives the following as the number of people over ten years of age outside the churches in the counties named: Alamance, 8,987; Guilford, 22,447; Randolph, 9,232; Forsyth, 11,252; Vance, 4,329; Granville, 5,639; Halifax, 11,680; Mecklenburg, 16,278; Buncombe, 12,572; Davie, 3,494; Orange, 3,866; Davidson, 8,704; Surry, 11,177. Here are people enough in these few counties who are unchurched to add several hundred per cent to our membership. Why not pray for all of them and try for some of them? Why not?

WHAT CONSTITUTES TRUE LITERATURE?

By William Thornton Whitsett.

True literature must have within it the elements of the universal and the general, rather than the special and the particular. True literature must make its appeal to the universal heart and thought of mankind, regardless of any lines of boundary or limitation. States and nations may have their lines of boundary, and limitation, but a work of real, genuine literature knows no limitations. Its appeal is to the universal heart of mankind, regardless of race, creed, country, or local habitation. Any poem, any essay, any work of enduring fiction, any form of literature of the highest type, must have a general appeal, rather than any local claim.

A writer as a mere huamn being must have his local habitation, but in his mental scope and range, he is cosmopolitan, of necessity, if his work is to take any place among the enduring things of the permanent expressions of his race. Hence, when we think of a work of real literary value that is to win its way to the select company of the immortals, we must at once dismiss all thought of ''Southern,'' or ''Northern,'' or ''Eastern,'' or ''Western,'' or ''Oriental,'' or ''Occidental,'' in short, the local and the transient must be utterly lost in the larger thought of the general and the universal.

Any writer whose work is to live must enter the field of world-wide competition, and so interpret the heart and passion of humanity, as to show himself a brother of all mankind, and a citizen of all times and countries. Sections and localities may shower their tributes of praise and adulation upon their richly dowered sons of genius, but they must not expect in return a local limitation to literary expression.

Exaggerated state pride, and sectional enthusiasm, have nothing whatever to do with making literary reputations that will endure. They may for a moment throw into the limelight names and productions that must of necessity die all the sooner because of the pitiless publicity turned upon them. The edict has gone forth from all time that only those names may find permanent place in the annals of literary renown that had the gift and the power to serve as interpreters of the heart universal. The great voices of truly great writers speak for their fellows in all ages and in all climes.

Sectional and local pride may be worthy and helpful if properly directed to be ever seeking to encourage and strengthen those sons and daughters who show evidence of the capacity to attune their voices to the music of universal and world-common aspirations and ideals.

Not alone the native mental endowment of strong intellectuality, but added to this also, such scholarship, such sincerity, such vision, such spiritual grasp and reach, such breadth of sympathies, as raises the writer to become the voice of all his fellows, is necessary to enable one to even aspire to dream of a lasting place in letters. The orator whose fame marches securely down the ages is the man who stands before his fellows and speaks not of himself, and for himself, but who hurls forth the burning sentences pulsating with the sufferings and wrongs, and dreams and desires, of all his fellows who stand around him stricken dumb by their own inability to voice their yearnings and desires. He has become the mighty medium of expression for his time, and so passes to a security of remembrance in the affections of his day. Homer, and Vergil, and Milton, and Shakespeare, and Dante and Goethe, spoke not for themselves, but spoke for those of their day and time, and for you, and for me, and so we entwine their names with the laurels of immortality.

A true poem, or essay, or novel, has nothing to do with state lines. Zones and hemispheres have no special claim upon it. It goes forth as a common possession of all those who have the capacity to receive it. It enters into the life of all kindred souls who can share its gift.

When we wish the history written of some certain event we usually have to wait until time has passed, and some one can see it in its true perspective, and in all its right relationships. This is acknowledged by all who know anything about historical work. If this, then, be true about some one, certain historical happening, make the application to all phases of pure literature. All times, all seasons, all events, must be lost in the one sincere attempt to interpret the profoundest secrets of the human soul. In the realm of enduring literature the local and the sectional must be lost forever. The appeal is to the heart universal.

The highest and best forms of genuine literature are known and recognized alike in all the markets of mankind. In every port where anchor the ships of understanding and thoughtfulness these wares are appraised and estimated by world-standards. The echoes of puff, and push, and pride, have no effect whatever upon such commodities. Those who seek these rare importations never ask as to shipping-points, and care but little for source and origin. The article itself is its own argument. By its own inherent worth it makes its appeal.

All time spent in attempting to place emphasis upon sectional lines in literary matters is time lost that might be employed to great advantage in advancing the cause of true literary progress. The effort should be put into the search for true gold, and yet undiscovered sparkling gems, rather than into any discussions as to the territory and the boundary that may limit them. No one ever found a gold mine by giving his entire time to deciding just where he would locate its boundaries. To set up his well-marked boundaries would only serve to call attention to his vanity and futile effort in case there was no panning out of the rare metal itself.

Thomas Carlyle justly claims that for any vision worth while ''we must look beyond the individual man and his actions or interests, and view him in combination with his fellows. . . . Man stands as in the center of Nature; his fraction of Time encircled by Eternity, his handbreadth of Space encircled by Infinitude.'' The microscopic eye then of local limitations is not the eye for seeing the pictures that are to be collected for general exhibition.

How, then, shall a state advance the cause of literature within its own borders? Certainly not by regarding itself as separate and apart from the world at large, and claiming special merit for any local product. Rather by coming into a due appreciation of the entire field of literary effort, and giving its hearty commendation to such of its own people as prove their ability to enter the lists and maintain their standing in competion with the best from any source and from any section. Know this, that no writer's permanent fame can ever be enhanced simply because he happens to have been born, or happens to live, in any special section. Misguided zeal manfested in misguided efforts to help may prove rather the undoing of some otherwise promising aspirant for literary honors.

In whatever field of effort one with ambitions would work in the realm of letters, it is for him to take in with comprehensive sweep the work already done is that special field the entire world over; it is for him to so equip himself with the tools of scholastic attainment and wide research that he is rich in supplies that may be needed; it is for him then to raise his voice among the myriad of world voices on some particular theme, and by his special ability, his special gift, his own unusual and particular talent, attract such favorable attention as it may be possible for him to win. In this way alone may one hope for anything that is lasting in the domain of letters. He must climb upon the shoulders of all the past until he has lifted himself above the special and the particular into the free air of the general and the universal, and must attempt to give to others the revelation which has burst upon his sight. He moves then as a man among men, as a thinker among other thinkers; asking and claiming no special favors, but simple justice, and only honest recognition as may be merited by the products which he displays. He would scorn any laurels because of the fact that he may hail from any particular locality; he would only ask that he be heard as one who sincerely believes that his message is worth the hour he asks his listeners to give.

Well may any section of any land, or any state of any group, long for gifted pens to write in burning letters its stories and its songs; but in this longing must be kept ever in mind the fact that there are wise and proper and helpful ways of doing things, as well as very foolish and very unwise ways that may result only in feebleness and disaster. In all the years examples are constantly multiplying of mistaken ways of seeking the laurels in fields of literary endeavor.

IN THE CULT KINGDOM.

By Rev. John E. Brown.

This is a day of many Christs. We have the Christ of Christian Science, the Christ of Mormonism, the Christ of Russelism, the Christ of Spiritualism, the Christ of Theosophy, the Christ of Sociology, the Christ of New Thoughtism, and the Christ of New Theology. These Christs, with a score more, are being paraded over the land today.

Nothing will expose the sham, the cheat, and the swindle of these imitation Christs like the demand that they show the nail prints. These Christs of today are advertised apart from the marks of the nails, the wounded side, the open forntain, and the cleansing blood.

How successful this satanic attempt to deceive the world has been, one can best understand by looking out over our churches. Literally tens of thousands have renounced the evangelical church and severed their connection therewith, to become identified, bag and baggage, with these blood-rejecting, cross-repudiating cults.

When Jesus said, ''If any man would be My disciple he must deny himself, take up his cross,'' He literally meant that he must deny himself by taking His place upon the cross, there to suffer, and there to die.

Too many people today are seeking to become disciples of Christ without going by the way of the cross; and to these unregenerated people, scattered through all our churches, the cult literature makes a profound appeal.

This is a day in which people are not alone seeking something new, but it is a day in which men and women are seeking for that which promises an immediate return. In other words, the day of ''Jacob'' is slipping away from us, and the day of ''Esau'' has been ushered in. Jacob had the spiritual vision and built for the future. Esau thought only for that which would bring him immediate comfort or imemdiate help.

In giving some of the striking similarities of these three religions—Mormonism, Eddyism and Russelism—Brother Brown lays special emphasis on the fact that each in turn does violence to the New Testament teachings concerning the Christ. Mormonism, like Eddyism and Russellism, appropriates to itself Christian phraseology and church forms, but practically denies every fundamental doctrine of the Holy Word.

Mormonism teaches the world that there are gods many.

Mormonism teaches that Adam is the God of this world.

Mormonism teaches that Adam had many wives; Eve was but one of the many.

Mormonism teaches that the gods were once men as we are now.

Mormonism teaches that, as men, we may become what these gods are now.

Mormonism teaches that these gods have been exalted to their high estate through faithfulness and fruitfulness; and that faithfulness and fruitfulness are the sure steps toward a throne for us.

Mormonism teaches that these many wives, plural wives, with their progeny, are to constitute the ''kingdom,'' over which these faithful men are to reign. Woman's welfare depends an her being united to one of the faithful.

Mormonism teaches that on the other side we are to retain our human forms and functions, and that the relationships entered into here between these husbands and their wives are to be continued through eternity.

The Mormon heaven is a heaven in which carnality and sensuality are sanctified and glorified.

Mormonism teaches that in the other world there are different realms, or spheres, or states and conditions.

Mormonism divides these different realms into the terrestrial, celestial, and telestial.

Mormonism teaches that to die unbaptized by Mormonism is to be lost, unless your loved ones are thoughtful enough to have the job done for you. Should they become your proxies and pass through certain forms and ceremonies, there is a possibility that you will manage somehow to pull through.

Mormonism teaches that there are certain sins that God Himself cannot forgive, and that when these sins are committed, there is only one avenue of escape, and that is by human sacrifice.

Mormonism teaches, or has taught, that you are loving your friends as Christ taught you to love them, if you take these friends who have thus sinned, and shed their blood; that ''the smoke thereof might ascend to God'' as an offering to appease the wrath that is kindled against them.

Students of history, of course, recognize in this human sacrifice teaching of Mormonism the identical teaching of ancient Moloch, when men were sacrificed to appease the wrath of their god.

Mormonism has its own absurd ideas concerning the return of our Lord. According to Mormonism, Christ will come and gather Isreal, including the ten tribes of Mormondom; and when He thus comes the enemies of the ''saints'' are to be destroyed.

Mormonism teaches that Christ was the son of polygamous parents.

Mormonism teaches that Christ was not conceived by the Holy Ghost. Mormonism teaches that Christ, Himself, was a polygamist; that Martha and Mary were His wives, and from these and other wives He had children.

Mormonism teaches that Christ's death on the cross had nothing whatever to do with our sins, but had to do with the sins of Adam. Mormonism teaches that to get rid of your sins you must work out your salvation through the teachings and ordinances of the Mormon church.

Such a religious system, with such astounding, silly theories, it seems, would need no refutation, and no denunciation. But this crude and lewd humbug is gathering in dupes by the multiplied thousands.

Mormonism denies the deity of Christ and robs the cross of its meaning and power.

The Mormon Christ lacks the ''nail prints.''—Reidsville Paper.

THE WESTMINSTER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

By action of the Board of Governors in their last annual meeting, May 8, 1923, there has been established a Course of Study for Graduates of any Theological Seminary and candidates may begin next September.

The Graduate Course.

This course is designed to give to qualified persons advanced instruction in the various branches of theological learning.

1. Students—The courses are open to all graduates of approved theological seminaries, both those who are and those who are not candidates for degrees. Other persons who do not wish to take the examinations may be admitted to the lectures as auditors.

2. Curriculum—The needs of graduate students are so varied that no graduate course of studies is outlined. The courses are elected by the students, with the approval of the faculty. The amount of work required is indicated under the requirements for the various degrees.

3. Methods of Instruction—The lecture and the research method are both used. (1) The lecture method requires that the student do a certain amount of his work in residence. He must attend the class lectures. Credit for such work is given on the unit basis. (2) The research part of the work may be done wherever there is access to a good library. Research work must be pursued under such measure of personal direction and instruction as the faculty may determine in each case. Credit will be placed upon the thoroughness of the word done.

4. Degrees — The degrees conferred are Bachelor of Sacred Theology (S. T. B.), Master of Sacred Theology (S. T. M.), and Doctor of Sacred Theology (S. T. D.)

5. Bachelor of Sacred Theology—In order to become a candidate for this degree the student must be a graduate of an approved theological seminary. This requirement may be waived in extraordinary cases, with the unanimous consent of the faculty, approved by the Board of Governors. For the attainment of this degree 32 units of work are required. Sixteen of these must be taken in class, and not more than eight of the sixteen may be taken in one department. A thesis upon some subject directly connected with one of the courses of study pursued must be presented by the student and approved by the faculty. This work may be completed within one year.

6. Master of Sacred Theology—To become a candidate for this degree the student must hold the degree of Bachelor of Divinity, or Bachelor of Sacred Theology. Thirty-two units of work are required. Of these, sixteen must be done in class. One-half of the lecture units and one-half of the research units must be in one department. At least twelve of the thirty-two units must be in other departments. A thesis upon a subject connected with the major group of studies must be presented by the student and approved by the faculty. In addition to the examinations in each course pursued, the student must pass a general examination before the faculty on some subject connected with the major group of studies. This work may be done within one year.

7. Doctor of Sacred Theology—To become a candidate for this degree the student must hold the degree of Bachelor of Arts, or its academic equivalent, and the degree of Bachelor of Divinity, or its theological equivalent. Before it is conferred the student must also have been a graduate, for five years, of a theological seminary. In case of marked theological scholarship this term of years may be shortened. Such action would require the unanimous vote of the faculty and the approval of the Board of Governors.

Sixty-four units of work are required for the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology. One-half of the entire work shall be done in one department and shall be known as the major group of studies. The rest of the work shall fall into two minor groups. No two groups shall be in the same department. One-half of the sixty-four units shall be taken in class. The other one-half may be earned in research work under the supervision of the professors in whose departments are the groups of studies. The work may be completed within two years.

A thesis must be presented upon a subject in the major group. It must represent original work and independent research and be a distinct contribution to theological learning. In addition to the examination in each of the courses pursued, the student must pass two examinations, one written and one oral, in each of the three groups of studies.

8. Credit for Work in Other Schools—Work done in other schools of theology of recognized standing may be credited by the faculty of this seminary in partial fulfilment of the requirements for a degree. To receive a degree from this school, however, a students must take at least one-half of the required work for the degree in this school.

9. Semester and Unit—A semester is one-half of the school year and a unit is one hour of class work a week for one semester. Eight lecture periods a week for the school year constitute sixteen units. These eight periods may be taken at the rate of four a day, thus requiring attendance for but two days a week.

10. Other Information—May be obtained by addressing President H. L. Elderdice, Westminster, Maryland.

WHAT THE CHURCH MISSES.

In the presence of the great hour that overshadows the world, with problems modern and ancient concentrated, the human heart instinctively longs for an enlightenment and an assistance more than human. Baffled by our thronging perplexities, we turn to religion, and, lo, we find the ecclesiastical leaders of the organized church pattering and puttering about money-raising projects, and the other conventionalities of the old routine, as if humanity had not been afresh in a garden of sorrows, and as if the penniless Christ and his equally poor apostles had never founded a church upon something more worth-while than silver and gold. "Church work" has become almost a synonym for raising funds.—Selected.

THE CAPITAL OF THE UNITED STATES CHANGED FROM PHILADELPHIA TO WASHINGTON.

In 1800 Congress met for the first time in Washington. In 1789 the location of the capital was considered one of the most important questions before Congress. New York had continued to be the capital after the Constitution was ratified, but this was not satisfactory to most of the people. Alexander Hamilton, Secretary of the Treasury, was not particular where the capital was located, but he was tremendously interested in his financial system. Therefore he made a bargain with Thomas Jefferson. He arranged for some northern votes for a southern capital, in exchange for some southern votes for the assumption of State debts by the National Government. In July, 1790, Congress created a commission to select a site, with President Washington at its head. They chose the land ceded by Maryland and Virginia. This district, ten miles square, included the site of Powhatan's village and the village of Georgetown. The plan for laying out the city in the District of Columbia was suggested by Washington. Major L'Enfant, a French engineer who served in the Continental army, made the complete plans and superintended the work. From 1790 to 1800 the capital was in Philadelphia. By 1800 it was possible for the Government to move to Washington.—Current Events.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

Brother L. H. Sides, Concord, joins the $1,000 Club.

Shiloh Church, Randolph charge, has subscribed its quota.

Pilot Church, Pinnacle charge, has also gone over.

Robert E. Williams, son of Rev. B. M. Williams, paid his college pledge this week by selling some chickens he raised. This is a suggestion to other boys.

ALL PLEDGES WANTED.

Just as soon as your church has completed the canvass, please to send in at once the pledge cards. Be sure that the names are plainly written, that the post office address is given and that the total amount is so stated that there will be no mistake in reading it.

THE CAMPAIGN CONTINUEES.

So many of the pastors have not been able to complete the canvass on their charge during the month of May that we are saying to them, Keep it up, boys, until the goal is reached.

We are very glad to have the good news of Brother Sides joining the Hauser Club; mighty good copmany in this club and we want to see a great number of our laymen there before the year closes.

Several of you preachers who have been debating the Millaway Club have waited long enough. The water is fine, but you will never know how good it is until you come in.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY.

Next Monday at 6:30 it is our expectation to have a fine meeting of the young people enroute to the Weaverville Conference. The High Point Endeavorers will serve lunch, the Thomasville orchestra and male quartet will furnish music and there will be several brief addresses of welcome. We will look over the College and the College ground and then the Children's Home and the good people of Greensboro will take you and put you to bed that you may be fresh for the mountain trip Tuesday morning. Remember the time, Monday, 6:30; the place, our College, High Point. We hope to have a great number of our friends from the community present at this meeting, please remember the date and join us in this fine meeting. R. M. Andrews, Chairman.

Mrs. Mary V. Pair.

May 20, 1923, Mrs. Mary V. Pair passed away at the age of 78 years, three months and 11 days.

Sister Pair had been in poor health for a long time, but was a very patient sufferer. We never heard her complain or speak ill of any one. She was of a sunshiny disposition and no matter what came, it seemed to be all right with her. We never will forget her smiles when we called to see her. She had a smile that time, age and disease did not rub off.

Sister Pair was converted and joined Smith's M. E. church early in life. She afterward moved her membership to Hawkins Chapel M. P. church and remained a very consistent member until death. She belonged to Hawkins Chapel for about 50 years.

She did not fear death. She was patiently waiting for time to go. Sometimes in her last illness she would sink away and her friends sometimes thought that she was gone, but she would revive again and when she became conscious she said, "I was almost home." We are sure that she is now enjoying "Home, Sweet Home."

Her husband and one son preceded her to the glory world several years ago. She leaves behind two sons, one daughter, nine grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren, and many friends who loved her and will miss her. These mourning ones have the sympathy of the entire church and community. On Monday, May 21, the funeral services were held at the home of her son, Brother E. B. Pair, with whom she had lived for a long time. Then her body was laid to rest in the old family burying ground nearby.

We read the following lines somewhere, and just now we feel the weight of truth they express.

"O mother, when I think of thee,
'Tis but a step to Calvary.
Thy gentle hand is on my brow,
'Tis leading me to Jesus now.
Yes, mother, when I think of thee,
'Tis but a step to Calvary."

J. B. O'Brian.

Today we are receiving answers to prayers uttered it may be a thousand years ago. They tell me that but last night or any night there arrives light that started three thousand years ago, and the planet from which it started may have perished from its place in the heavens. Who knows whether there is not some analogue, religious and deeply spiritual, in the fact that there may have arrived this morning a kiss from lips in heaven sent a thousand years ago? This is the harvest time.—Joseph Parker.

—The French government seems to be about ready to ratify the five-power Naval Limitation treaty made at the Washington Conference. The French Parliament will act favorably before it adjourns for the summer recess, reports from Paris say. France is the only nation that has not ratified this treaty. The four powers that have ratified are the United States, Great Britain, Japan and Italy.

THIRTIETH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

Pine Ridge, Kentucky, May 9-13, 1923.

The daily sessions were attended by the mountain folk, both men and women, and they were just as eager to see and know us as we were to see and know them, and at one meeting in particular there was pathetic, open-hearted confession by these friends, with tears running down their faces, of their early lack of opportunities, their longings, and their anxiety for their children to have what they had missed. They are sacrificing to send them to school. They love Mrs. Everett dearly, and told all she meant to them. They hold Alvan Drew school in high esteem, as they do Dr. and Mrs. Woodford. There was no place in that meeting for the self-satisfied, pleased-with myself individual, as it was one to shake the soul into greater endeavor and realization of one's obligation to one's neighbor and one's God, to which wet eyes attested.

Mrs. Everett frequently had a message for her dear people, as they loved to have her talk to them in that beautiful, simple speech she always employs in speaking to her mountain people. When Dr. Woodford, superintendent of Alvan Drew school, was introduced, he was tendered the Chautauqua salute while we stood. He spoke feelingly of the sacrificial efforts of the society, of his appreciation of the support he had received in his labor and the prosperity and blessings that had come. His report on the year's work does him credit as an excellent manager. He first told of his ministerial work: 92 sermons were preached, 154 Sunday school sessions, 54 Christian Endeavor meetings, 30 Junior Christian Endeavor meetings, 174 visits, four Children's Day, seven Christmas and three Easter programs, and 42 prayer meetings. The school enrollment is 92, 64 being boarding students. Fourteen students are in eighth grade. This year an accredited high school has been assured them, which makes the parents and students very happy. Dr. Woodford has established a special fund which covers a multitude of emergencies,—all sales of clothing, all donations of money, or whatsoever may be sent by churches, branches, classes or individuals, unless designated for a certain purpose, are put into this fund. Fifteen years ago, $1 was given at Pine Ridge; twelve years ago, $900 was raised; last year, from clothing sales alone, $704.75 was realized. The school children have first choice of merchandise. Monthly sales were arranged and many amusing things are told about sale days, the people will have none of charity but are hungry to buy, and prices from 15 cents up are charged, thus putting apparel within the slender resources of his customers. Messrs. J. C. Cox and Dick Riggs, two men of the community, lend staunch aid and advice when necessity requires it, and have proven themselves true friends of Dr. Woodford and the school. This admirable and gratifying report was accepted with a rising vote of thanks, and "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was sung with fervor. Dr. Woodford's staff of workers are as follows: Mr. and Mrs G. W. Andrew, Miss Minnie Byrd, Miss Mabelle Shaffer, and Miss Mary Land, and an efficient, lovable corps it is. Miss Shaffer's report on her field work was acclaimed with a rising vote of thanks and waving of handkerchiefs. She gave most efficient aid during an epidemic of influenza among the students during the last term. She will resume her field work almost immediately. Mrs. Andrew was a student at a Deaconess' school in Indiana and Mr. Andrew was studying for the ministry when they became interested in Pine Ridge. They sing beautifully together, and in this gift are able to give great pleasure to the mountain people. Mrs. Andrew has charge of the younger boys' dormitory, and teaches domestic science—sewing, mending and carpet weaving. She has the first organized Sunday school class in the district. Mr. Andrews is the man of the hour at Pine Ridge, always being in demand. His address, which was enjoyed very much, contained neighborhood happenings and Sunday school work, and then closed by saying that he did just anything that came next. Miss Byrd, whose home is in Texas, will take a course in a Bible school this summer; she, too, has a sweet voice and sings beautifully. She conducts the Junior Christian Endeavor on Sunday, the Friday night "good times," socials, games and plays, pictures and slides The neighbors enjoy dropping in for these pastimes. Miss Mary Land, who presides over the culinary department, was introduced, and a verse of "Mary Land, My Mary Land" was sung, much to her amusement. Miss Land has a pleasing personality and her art has demonstrated itself, as those at the board meeting can testify, as the proof of the pudding is in the eating. Ranie Collier, aged sixteen, and little James Ledford, aged ten, are remaining at the school, and cheerfully do the milking, some field work and chores. There is fine material in each of these boys. Four girls, Georgie, Nettie, Sargent and Eunice are also staying, and fine looking, lovable girls they are: they each have their duties, but during the meeting looked after the comfort of the guests and waited on table. Not anything could have been finer than the way Dr. and Mrs. Woodford managed every detail for our comfort and happiness. They are wonderful people in a wonderful place—no confusion, no friction, a tactful regard for everyone. Words fail their office when we wish to voice our appreciation for what they have done for the school and the community, and their own spiritual growth is reflected in their faces. Dr. Woodford is still firm in his conviction that it is worth while to preach the Gospel to these mountain people. There are 400 people enrolled in the five Sunday schools that come under his supervision and that is half the Sunday school population of Wolf county.

Mrs. Woodford's address, "Rewards of Service," was fine, and was followed by reading "A Starless Crown." Mrs. Woodford gave a schedule of an average Sunday: Rise at six o'clock; 6:50, inspection; 7:50, Bible verses, sentence prayers; breakfast; chores; 9:30, Sunday school. Second and fourth Sunday, Dr. Woodford preaches; 12:30, dinner; 1:00 P. M., quiet hour; two to three, Junior Christian Endeavor alternate Sundays, heart-to-heart talks with boys and girls on Life Ideals. Other teachers and students go for walks or calls; supper, 5:30; 7:00, Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, led by either students or teachers, and is open to the community. Quite a full day.

Mrs. Reed, as a delegate from Onondaga Branch, and her daughter, Miss Laura, who came as an applicant for field work, were introduced, and after an inspection of her credentials and a short address by her as to why she chose missionary work, a motion was made and carried that she be employed. The North Carolina ladies immediately engaged her services. Mrs. Badger has a fine surprise in store for the branches in the form of an album of original letters written by the students of their own volition—without help, which will prove a revelation to us at home. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, recording secretary of the board, made a motion that letters of sympathy be sent from the convention to Miss Mary Marshall, Pittsburgh, and Mrs. T. R. Matthews, Baltimore, and a letter of appreciation to Mrs. Jane A. Gordon, Pittsburgh. Carried. A round table on the organization of people was conducted by Mrs. A. P. Badger in her characteristic and enthusiastic manner, and it proved very instructive. She said, "Get into the spirit of the work." "In neglecting our young people we are losing our strongest forces, young and old must be given something to do." Mrs. Charles Knight, national secretary of scholarships, made an encouraging report of $1,728.78. Mrs. E. J. Heath was elected secretary of Buds of Hope. A motion was made and carried that the name Thankful Box be changed to Blessing Box. Mr. B. F. Gadd, of Indiana, and Mr. F. G. Douglass, of Pittsburgh, were introduced by the committee on courtesies as the two lone men who dared brave a woman's convention. A motion was made that no child wishing to attend school should be turned away, but that a way should be found to take care of him. Carried. Election of officers took place Friday morning. The only change made was in the election of Mrs. Arthur Hinkle, West Virginia, as national secretary of literature. The secretary of the board, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, cast the ballot for the election of the old board.

Standing committees appointed were: Foreign Work in Ohio, Ohio Branch; Programs, Maryland Branch; Constitution, North Carolina Branch; Life, Memorial and Perpetual Membership, Pittsburgh, in co-operation with Miss Mary Marshall; Report Blanks, Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Cooke, Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. L. M. Hockenberry. Historian, Mrs. Elmer E. E. Stewart.

An invitation for next board meeting was extended by Ohio, place to be decided later. On motion made and carried, the invitation was accepted.

Friday evening the session convened for the first time in the church edifice, and we found it a very comfortable, well lighted room. Mrs. Everett led in prayer; memory verses were then asked for; the special music was beautiful; boys and girls from the student body gave an amusing dialogue and several of Mrs. Woodford's elocution class gave readings in a manner worthy of their teacher and themselves.

Mrs. Bates, of North Carolina, spoke on "Goals to be Reached." She demonstrated her idea on a blackboard, using the hub of a wheel as the W. H. M. S. and the spokes as the branches. Each delegation stood and gave the goal of their respective branch. Mrs. Dixon spoke on Construction and Reconstruction, comparing the work of Pine Ridge to construction among children, paying high tribute to the workers and asking for closer co-operation from the community. Mrs. Elmer E. E. Stewart told the story of the Vision of Service. The committee on award of pennants reported the increase of membership pennants for West Virginia; Thank-offering pennant for Washington-Virginia, and the pennants P. P. circles, Y. P. clubs and Buds of Hope, to Ohio. Congratulations to Ohio. The presentations were made by Mrs. B. F. Gadd, of Indiana, who told a story of the World War to illustrate what a banner means on a firing line and what it stands for to the soldier. We cannot close this report without calling special attention to the singing of Miss Byrd, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew, Mrs. E. J. Heath and Mrs. W. B. Gilligan, who were most lavish in their gift of song, their solos and duets being a delight to the sessions.

The committee on resolutions returned thanks to God for all he had done for the prosperity of the work and His care for us: to our hosts for every phase of our entertainment; to the community people for their interest in the meetings and for their regard for the school; to all those who in any way contributed to our comfort and happiness.

The last session adjourned at noon, Saturday, with singing, "Till we meet again," and the Mizpah benediction.

Epilogue.

Dinner—the last together under the most ideal circumstances. Haste in packing, haste incidental to departure. Last messages of appreciation and pledges of future meetings. Pictures taken as mementoes of a glad occasion. Then the tiny Mountain Central train, with much clanging of bell, coming to a swaying, jerky stop. Again last words, hand waving, and the little train takes up its bumping, tortuous way down the mountain with its precious freight. Ten delegates are staying over Sunday and turn within doors to seek diversion as may be found. A walk is suggested, and several foolish ones start out the railroad track. Beautiful scenery is the compensation for this tie-stepping, when, without warning, more rain—torrents of it, real mountain rain that fills the creeks and gullies quickly. A scamper for shelter. Another mountain store, which is, miraculously, near. Home again, dry clothes, a warm supper and a long evening for music and tales—tales of the hill folk, their problems, sorrows, and romance. Then to bed in preparation for an average mountain Sunday. A gorgeous morning, birds singing, glistening pines swaying to a gentle breeze, a thousand perfumes in the air,—a fine setting for Mothers' Day. Sunday school at 9:30 in the auditorium, preaching service abandoned in favor of messages the guests might have to bring—warm and loyal tributes to a mother's memory. This was, indeed, a beautiful hour of reminiscence. A story for the mountain children, of her sojourn in Japan, was told by Mrs. R. C. Dean. At one o'clock two wagon loads of delegates start for Sunday school, one for Meadow Branch, the other for Rodgers. A quaint experience, really primitive this time. The visitors, were, of course, the center of curiosity. The drive home in the lengthening shadows of the pines was delightful. Christian Endeavor —visitors and mountain people intermingling songs and prayers in this last service. A social half-hour following,—the mountain people loath to leave. The dawn of a new day—bright, crisp and fair, at breakfast a picnic is hastily planned to Natural Rock Bridge, eight miles distant; a scurry of preparation; wagon and automobile in commission this time; riding and walking in relays; a wonderful trip. The scene when reached fully repaid everyone, the encircling mountains forming a great cup, in the bottom of which lay the gorge, a fairy land of light and shadow. Nature's majestic handiwork, Rock Bridge, spanning a rushing roaring torrent of water, keeping guard through the ages. The miller's deserted cabin lying some distance from the old millsite, and, over all, God's glorious sunshine. Luncheon is eaten on a large rock, after the return climb to the top, and, refreshed, the return trip is begun. One o'clock, again a hustle and bustle of departure; the same speeding of departing guests, the same reiterations, with that beautiful quality of sincerity that suggests something found at the end of a perfect day. Again the little train comes bobbing to a stop; all hands aboard; bell clanging, steam hissing, and again the unknown is unfolding. A trip down a steep mountain side this time, with, in some places, only room for the ties on the rock overhanging the depths below; only faith can keep the pulses quiet as the descent is slowly made; finally the bottom land and Campton Junction is reached. With many a backward glance the eventful trip to Pine Ridge draws to a close. An experience of a life-time; one of those sunny spots along life's highway—long to be remembered and garnered into the picture store-house of the heart and mind. The unit formed under such happy auspices gradually breaks, each one taking his own way home, taking to each home circle, home branch, auxiliary and church, new energy, new inspiration, new resolves for the ensuing year. Religious Services at Ellis Island.

A most significant innovation has taken place at Ellis Island, the gateway to America. Regular religious services are now being held every Sunday. Definite opportunities for worship through religious services have been made possiblbe through the splendid co-operation of the present Commissioner of Immigration, Mr. Robert Todd. Every Sunday morning three types of religious service are held: At 8:15 o'clock the Roman Catholics have their mass; at 9:15 o'clock the Protestant service is held; and at 10:15 o'clock all Hebrew immigrants have an opportunity for worship, with a rabbi presiding.

These religious services were inaugurated through a special committee of the "General Committee of Immigrant Aid," composed of 33 religious and social agencies. Representatives of the three distinct religious groups from the General Committee were appointed to this special "Committee for Religious Services." It was very gratifying to watch this committee of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish representatives at work, and to note their spirit of co-operation and the conviction of every member of the great need for religious worship at Ellis Island to comfort distressed immigrants in detention. A Protestant sub-committee was organized through the helpful assistance of the offices of the "Home Missions Council to take charge of the Protestant services every Sunday.

For the Protestant services, a monthly schedule was worked out, thereby allotting four Sunday services for each month to a different Protestant denomination. To date eight denominations, including the Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Dutch Reformed and Baptists, have all rotated in taking charge of the Protestant services.

Dr. Millard L. Robinson, Chairman of the Sub-Committee for the Protestant services, writes:

"We regard the religious services as a real success. The plan has in it large possibilities for developing religious welfare of the aliens who are detained."

The testimony of one of the matrons is:

"For the first time in the history of the Island, it seems like Sunday over here."

Every effort is made to secure speakers and clergymen of outstanding personality, who can give a short and simple but spiritual and comforting message. Their remarks are translated by an interpreter into two or three languages, depending upon the dominant nationalities of the immigrants present.

A beautiful pipe organ has been installed especially for these religious services by the present Commissioner at Ellis Island.

Imagine yourself at Ellis Island. It is Sunday. The detention rooms are crowded with men, women and children of all nationalities. Time hangs heavily. The official business has ceased for a much needed day of rest. Interviews of friends and relatives with detained immigrants are not possible. The organ in the Hall of Inspection begins to peal out a musical strain of religious devotion. The guards call out in the detention rooms in various languages "Church, church, who wants to go to church?"

It is an impressive sight to see these immigrants from many lands assemble in the main Inspection Hall at Ellis Island and attend the Protestant service; to notice their real appreciation while they listen to the beautiful music of the organ and hear a vested choir; to study their faces while the Scripture is read and a simple message concerning God and His love is given and translated by interpreters; and to observe their deep reverence when prayer is offered.

Thus spiritual and mental comfort in a very definite way is given to every detained immigrant as he passes through Ellis Island. Many of them have great sorrows and disappointments to bear. They need the strengthening influences which only religion and a belief in God can bring. Besides, each one is also given the impression that the "Spirit of America" is fundamentally religious.

185 170 METHODIST PROTESTANTS CONTRIBUTE $1.999 PER CAPITA FOR ALL BENEVOLENCES IN 1922; $1.88 PER CAPITA FOR DENOMINATIONAL INTERESTS.

Statistical Report For 1922—Part IV.

The contributions of the churches for the General Conference and the annual conference interests for 1922 are here given, together with the total for denominational interests, the "external" benevolences and the total of all benevolences. By "external" is meant causes not among those for which either the general or the annual conference levies an assessment. Not all the conferences report external benevolences. If they did, the total for all interests would be much larger, no doubt.

Two conferences, Michigan and Washington, do not divide the general and the annual conference offerings in their reports. No record is kept in Virginia.

The figures show that the Methodist Protestant Church gave for all benevolences in 1922 almost $2 per capita, and that $1.88 was the per capita offering for denominational interests.

Approximately 65.4 per cent of all denominational money is contributed to causes under General Conference management.

This report shows, first, the totals; second, the distribution among the annual conferences.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

OUR SLOGAN:—As Faithful in Service for Christ as for Self.

OUR AIM:—1. A Family Altar in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
2. The Church Paper in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
3. A Revival in Every Church With a Worthy Increase in Members.
4. Every Member a Contributing Member.
5. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
6. The Full $300,000 Subscribed for the College by June 1, 1923.

OUR MOTTO:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all our workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

The last one of our District Rallies for this year was held June 2 and 3 at Oak Grove church on Cleveland charge. Dr. R. M. Andrews, Rev. L. C. Little and I, with my nephew, Norman Dixon, drove through the country in a car and spent Saturday and Sunday in the rally with the good people of Oak Grove and surrounding churches.

Despite the fact that two of the pastors felt that, because of the backwardness of crops and the busy season there would not be enough people present on Saturday to hold a service, the people came in goodly numbers and the meetings were fine all day Saturday. Then on Sunday there were twice as many people present as could get in the church. This was the largest crowd we have had in any of the rallies.

Brother Little and I have given fourteen weeks to these district rallies. The chairmen have planned the programs well and have cooperated splendidly in every way to help make the rallies a success. The people where we have been have expressed the highest appreciation for the meetings. We believe much good has been done.

In this way we have covered the entire conference. After the Summer Conference for Young People at Weaverville, and the Pastors' Summer Conference at High Point are over we will endeavor to visit just as many local churches as possible before the next annual conference.

Plan of Appointments.

I shall make out the plan of appointments for this visitation as soon as convenient, and notify the pastors. There are some fields that I must visit, so my time will be given to these and to a few others that need me most.

Children's Day.

I am glad to note that so many of our Sunday schools are holding the Children's Day service. I trust your offerings will be good and that you will send the offerings promptly to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Burlington, N. C., and designate that they are for foreign missions. These offerings should not be held, and they should not be directed to any other purpose.

Young People's Conference.

This is the last call for the Young People's Summer Conference. Lots of folks are going, and you will miss it if you are not there. A fine program has been prepared.

Pastors' Summer Conference.

June 25 to 29 should be reserved by every pastor in the conference for the Pastors' Summer Conference at High Point. This meeting is planned for the fellowship with each other and for the development of ourselves. You owe it to yourself and to us to be there. We need you whether or not you need us. See Herald of last week for program.

Where ministers live near each other it will be fine for three or four or five to go to the Children's Home in one car and thus lessen the expense for each one.

Also Remember That June 29 Is Educational Day at the College. Be Sure to Be There.

Yours in the Master's Service,

A. G. Dixon.

The minister is to be a live man, a real man, a true man, a simple man, great in his love, great in his life, great in his work, great in his simplicity, great in his gentleness.—John Hall.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

THE LAST WORD ABOUT WEAVERVILLE.

The Train.

Lacking just a few of having the required number to get the special train to run from Greensboro to Asheville, I guaranteed that number, because I have faith in the young people of the Methodist Protestant Church, and I believed that the sufficient number would send in their names to go. The special train will run, leaving Greensboro nine A. M.; High Point 9:25 A. M.; Thomasville 9:34 A. M.; Lexington 9:50 A. M.; Salisbury 10:20 A. M. Other points will be made on flag, or if you will write the undersigned we will have the train stopped. The fare from all of these points is $8.25 round trip, including the bus fare from Asheville to Weaverville.

Those coming from the eastern part of the state will come to Henderson, and start from the Methodist Protestant church there, 11. A. M., Monday, June 11, arriving in Greensboro about five o'clock that afternoon. Free entertainment will be given by the Greensboro Endeavorers, provided you let me know that you are coming, and we will all take the special train the next morning out of Greensboro. The round trip fare from Henderson by bus and train is $10. We cannot guarantee accommodations from Henderson for more than the number who let me know that they want transportation from that point, but we can accommodate as many as come, up to a thousand, from Greensboro. Send in your reservations NOW; it is not too late.

What to Carry.

Everybody will have to provide their own blanket, sheets, pillow case, towels. Take a sufficient number for the ten days. I would suggest that you send all of these things by parcel post so you will not have so much luggage. Address them to yourself in care of the Methodist Protestant Young People's Conference, Weaverville, N. C. Arrangements have been made for these to be taken care of until you arrive. They will be at the college when you get there. It would be a good idea to insure them.

Likewise take with you whatever tennis outfit you have, basket ball and base ball outfit.

More Rooms Have Been Secured.

More accommodations have been made to take care of the crowd. We can take care of as many as come; however, you can save considerable trouble and inconvenience if you will let me know that you are coming, and when and how you are coming. If you expect to come late, and are coming by train, and will let me know, I will see that you are met at the station in Asheville and conveyed to Weaverville. But why not go with the crowd? Everybody is saying, "On to Weaverville."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, JUNE 10.

Lessons From Every-Day Objects.

Prov. 24: 20; 26: 20; 27: 17; Jer. 23: 29.

"Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth." Unguarded words are often fuel to flames of anger. Making unkind and unjust remarks about others or repeating the unkind things we hear about our neighbors is only adding fuel to this fire of anger. Much less fuel would be added if each of us would ask ourselves these three questions, Is it true? Is it necessary? And, Is it just? The power of speech is a great blessing but oh, what an ocean of trouble it causes.

Everything is good for something. We know that cinders are all right on the path, but they are out of place in the eye. Everything has its proper use and, when it gets out of place it often causes pain.

What about us is more useful than fire or heat? Its many uses are known to all of us. So is it possible to imagine living without fire? Yet think what a great loss of lives and the damage is often caused by fire as a result of a moment's carelessness on the part of some one person.

I know of no surer proof that God is, and that God is good, than that found in the greatness and beauty of nature. All common things are lovely so far as man loves them as such. And in their loveliness we read the very presence of God. We look upward and there is the overhanging vault fretted with the golden fire of its sunrise and sunset. We see the clouds lined, as it seems, with silver, showing us some of the beauty of which our God thinks. We look downward and there is the green grass with its daily miracle of humble flowers which our Creator has placed there to beautify our lives. The hills and dales, the yellow wealth of harvest, the trees as their buds burst forth, the dewdrops sparkling like diamonds in the rays of the early morning sun, and the merry ripple of the streams, are not all these signs to constantly remind us that God is, and that God is love?

Since knowing that God is everywhere, we should seek to see more of Him and to ever be on our guard lest we become blinded to His greatness.

Perhaps we have had the pleasant experience of training a vine about our window and know that we must have a definite plan of how it is to grow before we start training it. Then it is necessary to direct the young tendrils everyday in the direction we want them to grow. If we miss only one day they have grown larger, then there is more danger of breaking the young, tender shoots. The same is true about the many young lives about us.

Oftentimes while waitng for a string of freight cars to go by we see these words, "Perishable; do not switch off," meaning the car contains something that requires attention and to take that car off on a side track would mean a great loss to some firm. In a similar way, if our boys and girls are allowed to yield to temptation they are being switched off the main track to the loss of the Master. Let each of us strive to ever see God in all things about us and we will be brought closer to him.

CHARACTER COUNTS.

Ripon College, at Ripon, Wisconsin, will keep "character records" of all its students in the future. In this way the college officials hope to limit the number of students to five hundred. The president of Ripon, Dr. Silas Evans, has this to say of the plan:

"This character record will be kept in addition to the scholastic record. In addition to its consultation as a basis for limiting our attendance, it will be used as a basis of recommendation of our students in the varied activities of life. It is a constructive means of recording creditable items to the great majority of our students who are aiming to do the right thing, and to fit into the spirit of the institution.

"Good habits, loyalty, industry, honesty, initiative, good manners, respect for law and property value, good campus citizenship, forensic, musical, athletic, social and varied other activities will be made a matter of record, as also will church attendance.

"Character defects and failure observed in meeting requirements for good citizenship also will be recorded, and a student failing to establish a satisfactory record will be unfit for Ripon College."—Current Events.

In Memory of Dalton Ward, of Canaan.

On Friday, May 11, at the early hour of five A. M., Father Time leisurely strolled into the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ward, and with his avenging scythe, reaped the beautiful life of their little beloved one. His loving spirit sweetly and peacefully left its abode and went to its eternal home, to God, after suffering five weeks horribly, the pain being so intense that he was compelled to let it be known by his pitiful cries and groans.

His kind and sweet countenance, which shone like a sunbeam, and intelligent character like an angel, will be greatly missed in the home and among his friends. Although a child of not quite three years of age, he possessed a loving disposition, was a devoted child and loving brother. He was loved by every one he came in contact with. The lovely wreaths of flowers bespoke their great love for their departed one. We deeply regret his early summons from labor to reward, and we, like the child and brother, must submit to our heavenly Father's will, who doeth all things well. May his gentle spirit hover over and about the parents, brothers and sisters and let the dear relatives and sympathetic friends strive to be more faithful. May they have their lamps trimmed and burning like dear Dalton when the summons shall come for them. We find these consoling words in Rev. 21:4, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." Isn't this consoling?

"Oh how sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain;
With songs on our lips and harps in our hands,
To meet sweet Dalton again."

CHILDREN'S CORNER

THE COUNTERFEIT SHILLING.

Dick Manning went into his uncle's store, where his cousin, Thomas Downs, was looking over some coins. "There, Dick," said he, shoving a piece of money toward him on the counter, "there's a counterfeit shilling." "That counterfeit!" said Dick; "it looks real." "Yes, but it has a yellowish brassy look, which silver never has—silver is white." "But it will pass," said another boy; "somebody passed it here, why not pass it on somebody else?" "Because, if one fellow cheats, it is no reason why we should," answered Thomas Downs. "Well, what shall I do with it?" asked Dick, balancing it on his finger. "Anything but pass it," answered Thomas; and presently Dick pocketed the piece and left the store. He showed it to several of the boys, and none of them guessed it was counterfeit until he told them.

"Come, treat us on it," said Henry Morris. "No, no; it is against the law to pass counterfeit money, and if he does he'll get taken up," shouted four or five of the boys.

Dick kept it a great while in his pocket, but how often when he passed the confectionery at the shop windows was he tempted to pass it! "They won't know it's counterfeit," he would say to himself. But still the small voice ever whispered, "It is."

One afternoon a party of boys went down to the Neck, two or three miles from town, to play on the rocks and catch crabs. On their return they passed some small houses, in one of which a poor old woman had kept beer and cakes for many years. She was a kind, pleasant old woman; and as the earnings of her little shop helped to maintain an idiot son, people of the town seldom passed by there without buying of her; and the children were often sent down with kind charities to the good dame. "She's got some chestnuts," said the boys, looking at the shop window. But none of them had any money. "Dick," said Henry Morris, "now's the time to pass that shilling; she'll never know it, that's certain." "Yes, yes," said two or three, while the rest had hastened on, "would it not be a good joke?" "Come, Dick." "No; it would be mean to cheat this poor woman," said one of the better boys. "She's got specs; she can see for herself," said another. "Oh, it would be such a good joke!" cried Henry Morris; "besides, the chestnuts! Come, Dick, there is no danger of being found out."

Meanwhile Dick had drawn the shiling from his pocket, and looked at the chestnuts in the window, which the boys declared would be such a treat on the rocks. The voice within said, "No, Dick;" but somehow or other the boys' voices were the loudest, and the chestnuts looked tempting, and they wanted him to treat and it would pass for a joke. At last Dick went into the shop; his conscience smote him as he entered, but in he went, and out he came with a great paper of chestnuts, and away he ran, the boys after him; nor did he stop until he came to a pile of rocks, behind which he threw himself on the sand. "There they are," cried he, throwing the paper to the boys as soon as they came up with him. "And what did she say?" they asked. "She never suspected," said Dick. "She looked very much pleased, and put it into her drawer, and said, 'Thank ye, sonny'."

The boys set up a shout of laughter, but Dick did not join in it. I do not know how they enjoyed their chestnuts; but I do know when Dick's mother asked him about the excursion, he told her nothing about them; and after he went to bed, it did not appear such a good joke, after all, to cheat a poor woman out of her chestnuts. Turn it which way he would, the affair had a mean and shabby look, and Dick felt very much ashamed of himself.

The next day when he went to school, Henry Morris met him and asked him to do his sums for him. "I can't; I can't stop to," answered Dick. "Yes, yes," said Harry, "or I will tell about that shilling, and then somebody will go to jail for passing counterfeit money!" Poor Dick was terribly frightened. How he wished he was innocent. But as it was, he found himself a bondsman to a wicked, idle boy, who kept threatening to inform against him if he did not do as he wished, and Henry's demands were pretty hard sometimes. Indeed Dick had so little confidence in Henry, that he was constantly afraid lest the police officers might be at his heels, and he was very miserable. Dick despised Henry, but guilt made him serve him. There was a quarrel at recess one day, when one of the boys feling angry with Dick, said, "Pooh! a fellow that would cheat a poor old woman, will do anything." To be twitted in this way was almost too much for poor Dick to bear; and now he keenly felt what bad friends bad boys are, for the very boys who urged him to buy the chestnuts, were the first to turn against him.

On his way home he suddenly met his cousin, Thomas Downs. "Halloo!" said Thomas, "let us see that shilling again." "Haven't got it," answered Dick, hurrying by. "Stop; it isn't lost, is it?" "No," said Dick. "Well, where is it? surely not passed?" It was on the end of his tongue to say, "No;" but Dick never lied, and great as the temptation was, he could not lie now.. Poor Dick, thus "holden with the cords of his sins," turned very red, and seemed as if the veins in his face would burst. "Oh," he cried, choking with mortification and grief, "I wish I had never taken that counterfeit piece; it has been a temptation in my pocket ever since. I have passed it, and what shall I do?" and the boy looked wretched.

Thomas was very sorry and surprised, and took him down a lane where they could talk by themselves. Dick made a full confession of what had happened, and asked what he should do. He thought he should rather have it all known, and go to jail, than live in such fear of himself and everybody else. Thomas told him that he ought to carry a real shiling to the woman, and own what he had done. "Could I not go and put it under her shop door?" said Dick; "it will be just the same; she'd get it, and not lose by the counterfeit." "Just as well for her," said Thomas; "but for ourselves, when we have done wrong and are really sorry we must make clean work of it. Now go like a man, be honest about it; here, take this real shilling," putting his hand in his pocket; "go down to the woman, own it all, and do works meet for repentance, as the Bible says."

"I will,' cried Dick, with a freer feeling than he had had for many a day; "but this is not mine." "No matter," said Thomas, "take it; I give it willingly for my share in the business, and it will be a good lesson to me to be careful how I put temptation in the pockets of my friends." Dick felt badly at the straits he was reduced to, but having done wrong, he was resolved to repair the wrong like a man, and he did. And when he came out of the old woman's shop, he ran down to the rocks on the shore, and tossed the counterfeit shilling into the waves. "Now," said Dick, "I am free again. I am afraid of nobody. May God forgive my sins, for Christ's sake, and help me ever to do what is right."—Tract Association of Friends, New York.

W. H. M. S., Tabernacle, one dozen teaspoons; W. H. M. S., Hollister, half-dozen teaspooons.

The closing exercises of our school take place Wednesday, eight P. M.

Colon Haltem, who left here in 1920 and cast his lot with the North State lumber Co., Charleston, S. C., is spending a few days with us while on his vacation. We congratulate him on having been elected assistant secretary for the company. We are expecting several of our former boys and girls for our commencement.

Through the kindness of the Rotary Club the larger children and all the workers enjoyed the Redpath Cautauqua. It was greatly enjoyed by all of us because it was of a very high order and instructive.

We trust our pastors will arrange to attend all the Summer Conference. They can't afford to miss it. I want to suggest that you provide for your pastor to come, it will pay you. He comes back to give a better service. Look at the program given last week.

It was a real pleasure to meet with Pastor Moose and the people of the West Thomasville charge last Sunday at Spring Hill. The people had a Sunday school rally, and a class of our children gave a program in the afternoon to a crowded house. H. A. Garrett.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev F C Klein, Sec.

THE BOARD MEETING.

The Board of Foreign Missions met in the Baltimore Book Concern Building on Tuesday, May 22, 1923, with the president in the chair.

A gratifying annual report of the work in Japan prepared by Dr. Layman was read.

The Atsuta proposition, involving the building of the third church, Nagoya, was referred to the Joint Committee representing the society and the Board. The addition of two rooms to the Shizuoka parsonage was approved, the expense to be covered by the regular budget.

The Isebara church was proceeding to buy a lot, and the mission's approval was endorsed by the board, and commendation of the church's efforts was recorded.

The new rules of the Japan Mission Conference were considered, but as changes were to be suggested by the board they were referred to a special committee to report at the next board meeting.

The occupancy of Lafayette Cottage by Brother Auman was approved. Dr. Layman's wife, having returned to America in advance of his coming on deserved furlough after seven years of active service, is to be joined by him in August next.

The adjustment of the budget as made by the mission was approved.

The mission's request that they be made members of the National Christian Council of Japan was laid over until the next meeting, to enable the board to secure more information.

The quarterly and the yearly evangelistic work, and also financial reports, and those of the educational department were read, and pleasure was evinced at the good showing.

The treasurer's quarterly and annual reports were reported correct by the auditing committee.

At this juncture Rev. J. M. Sheridan, representative of the Board of Home Missions, appeared before the board, and discussion upon matters of much interest to both boards followed, which it is hoped will be developed shortly.

Mr. Walter D. Manrow, of New York, attended the board meeting, and agreed to give to the board's Annuity Fund the sum of $2,000, the board giving its bond guaranteeing interest during his life and that of his wife.

An intertesting comparative statement, compiled by Dr. Layman, showing salaries paid by different institutions in Japan made it clear that the board's teachers are faring very well indeed.

China. The board commended Dr. C. S. Heininger in purchasing property at Chaikoupu for Mex. 1780, about U. S. $890, for the church and school, etc. He hopes to finance it without addition to the regular budget, but needed improvements must be delayed.

Two young men graduated at the theological seminary in Peking, and were at the conference to take work, much to the gratification of all.

The board expressed its appreciation of Brother A. D. DeCamp's generosity in contributing $325 to purchase property in Hsiheying. It has greatly encouraged our pastor and people there, as the buildings have been rented and used for church and school for some time.

He is considering supporting the Chinese pastor, and will thus have the joy of providing a whole outstation in China for a very nominal sum.

We can duplicate that investment, if you will give us the money, friend.

The mission conference elected Dr. C. S. Heininger and Wang Shou Chih as messengers to the General Conference.

The report of the conference president, Rev. Dr. C. S. Heininger, was read, and note was made of the growing co-operation between the Chinese and our missionaries, and the good work being done by the executive and the educational committee.

At this point a committee from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society appeared before the board, and discussion followed upon a number of matters connected with the work abroad conducted by both organizations.

The belated India budget for 1923-1924 was referred to a committee to report later. It was decided to allow Rev. Mr. Minnis to remain in the language school at Poona until the October examinations, if found desirable.

The erection of a small building for the boys' school, to cost $700, was approved. Regret was expressed that the board is still unable to send the funds for a house for Rev. and Mrs. Minnis and one for Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus, but hope was expressed that the church would ere long supply the money.

Rev. Mr. Minnis's plan of teaching the young men candidates for the ministry, and the holding of special classes for Bible study, etc., as a summer conference here, was approved.

Communications from Rev. Mr. Minnis and Mrs. Theophilus were read, and the secretary was given instructions as to the replies.

Mrs. Theophilus was commended for her effort to secure a lot for a church in Dhulia from the government, and concerning the one hundred acres she was seeking to obtain for natives more information was requested, though the board understands there is to be no financial responsibility attached thereto for the board.

The thanks of the board were extended to the agents of our Book Concerns in Baltimore and Pittsburgh for their generous donation of space as an advertisement to secure orders for Children's Day supplies.

The three large illustrated posters gotten out in connection with this year's Children's Day Services were explained, and the Service also.

The thanks of the Board were tendered to Rev. C. W. Bates of the North Carolina Conference for his service in securing special funds for Rev. Messrs. Auman and Minnis, the board's missionaries in Japan and India.

The date of the next board meeting was left to a special committee.

Fred C. Klein, Corresponding Secretary.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Pinnacle.—Hurrah! Three of the churches on this charge have gone over the top on College quota, viz., Mt. Zion, Shoals and Pilot. Pinnacle church is yet to land. But I am confident that they will go over when they see R. N. Hauser. Brother Hauser was with us at Pilot Sunday and in a short while the quota was raised. Pilot is learning how to do things.

Memorial services were held at Mt. Zion Sunday evening. There was a large crowd present and the services were very effective. It was their first experience in a service of the kind.

Yadkin Township Sunday school convention will be held at Mt. Zion church on Saturday, June 30.

Our special meeting will begin at Pilot the first Sunday in July, Rev. A. D. Shelton the help.

W. D. Reed.

Weaverville Charge.—Children's Day yesterday at Weaverville church, eight P. M. Offering $13, good for Weaverville. Mrs. Fred Edwards and Mrs. Mamie Garrison took the lead in training the children. The pastor was sorry he could not be present; but glad Brother Casto was on hand and addressed the congregation.

Memorial Day yesterday, 11 A. M., Cark's Chapel. The graves were decorated. The service was well attended. Splendid attention was given to the preaching of the word.

Good congregation at Mt. Zion, 8:00 P. M. yesterday.

Signs of material improvement are in evidence around the parsonage and Weaverville church. Plans are being formulated whereby Clarke's Chapel and Mt. Zion hope soon to improve church buildings and grounds. The whole work shows signs of progress, which is encouraging to the pastor.

Other things not mentioned above are being set on foot, of which we will speak later.

We are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of the young people from the age of Brother Bethea down and also up, if there be any in North Carolina who are older than Brother Bethea.

May we have a profitable conference.

Sincerely, B. M. Williams.

Concord.—Our special meeting began the fifth Sunday in April, and closed on Tuesday night after the first Sunday in May.

Dr. Brown, of High Point, was the pulpit help, and his preaching was of a high order.

The meeting was not what we had hoped and prayed for, but we are sure that the good preaching and faithful work done by Dr. Brown will bear fruit in days to come. There were two professions during the meeting.

We are still hammering away on the building project, and hope to accomplish something definite before Gabriel blows his horn.

A. O. Shelton.

Pleasant Hill Church, Spring Church Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. J. L. Trollinger, filled his appointment here Sunday evening. He preached a forceful and touching sermon, telling us what the really true and great men of our country think of Christ at the present day. Communion service was administered after the sermon.

The roof of our church has been repaired recently and we hope that we will not have any more leaky roof, as it has been a hard job to get it fixed satisfactorily.

The ice-cream social held by the Ladies' Aid a week ago was enjoyed, and although we had a small crowd we cleared $10.

Children's Day services will be held here the third Sunday night in June.

Best wishes to all. Mrs. W. L. Alston,
Reporter.

Albemarle.—Our special meeting began second Sunday in May. Rev. R. C. Stubbins came to us on Monday and remained ten days. We had a glorious revival, the church greatly revived and several converts. Brother Stubbins did some wonderful preaching that was enjoyed by all. He did a great work here among our people.

Brother D. A. Braswell preached a good and helpful sermon for us yesterday. We were glad to have him in our midst. His health is greatly improved. T. A. Williams.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Another short report to let the readers know we are still living. Our Sunday school is doing nicely; 60 present last Sunday. We have a wonderful school now, more older people than usual.

We are expecting M. P. Chambliss of Roanoke Rapids with us next Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour; he will give us a talk, so everybody come, we wish to have a large congregation.

Several of our people attended services at Olive Branch (M. E.) church Sunday afternoon and enjoyed a splendid sermon by Brother King. We have some church-going people in our community. They will go to church somewhere on Sunday, which is a pretty good idea, I think. Reporter.

June 4, 1923.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—The third quarterly conference will convene at Jerusalem next Saturday, the 9th. Hope to see a large audience.

The third Sunday in May we had communion at Cid church. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely.

Rev. J. S. Riddle got him a tent and put it up in the forks of the road near N. W. Lanier's store and he began services Saturday night and we are having an old-time revival. One got saved the first sermon, others convicted, and on yesterday and last night more were made righteous. One old man seventy years old or more got saved last night and some others and many were made to praise God aloud and we had such a large congregation; I believe there were 400 people or more.

To our heart's delight Rev. Robert Short and family of lower Davidson came up to worship with us Sunday night. The people around here learned to love these dear people when they served us and true love never dies.

Brother Riddle is preaching some old-time Holy Ghost religion and not compromising with Satan, and if nothing prevents he expects to run the meeting three weeks or more. And if he is not a man after God's own heart, looks like we had just as well lay down the Bible and go home. We are just now beginning to see the fruits of our prayer services.

The prayer service at N. W. Lanier's on the 26th ult. was largely attended and there have been several converts at these meetings.

Mrs. C. H. Conville of Pomplin, Va., spent a few days more last week with her sister, Mrs. N. W. Lanier, and will now go and visit relatives in High Point, Greensboro, and then go on to her home. It is joy to meet our friends here on earth, but so sad is the parting and the five sisters, of whom all are living, may meet on earth again, but if not may we all live so as to meet in heaven. Mrs. Conville has been in North Carolina for seven weeks. She had not been here before in eight years. This is her native home, and while here she had the pleasure of meeting so many of her old friends, and still more of them she would have loved to see.

Now, brethren, pray for us that we may accomplish much more good in saving precious souls. We have services only at night so far, and Sundays. So now, everybody that can, come and help us. Come!

So, much success to the Herald and its readers. The Herald is such a welcome visitor in our home. It brings us good news from the Methodist Protestant work, and many other good thoughts. Yours in the Master's work.
Reporter.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely, with the attendance of about 176. Our superintendent is loyal to the church and his greatest desire seems to be to make it the very best.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment Sunday with a splendid sermon. We were more than glad to have Mr. Braswell with us Sunday night: he will soon be seventy years old and preached such an excellent sermon. We trust he will soon be back in the ministry, like he once was, with a strong body.

The Christian Endeavor society will meet Saturday night, June the 9th, at 7:30 o'clock: please be present. Vina Harwood.

Vance Circuit Since my last report we have been remembered quite generously. We were a bit surprised on the fourth Sunday afternoon at Harris Chapel, when they presented a pounding, as follows: R. C. Clark, Mrs. B. W. Brame, Mrs. Mittie Clark, Mrs. M. H. Clark, John Wells and Mrs. S. A. Burroughs, each five pounds sugar; J. E. Burroughs, coffee; Sallie and Virginia Burroughs, dress for Sara Marie; Mrs. L. F. Boyd, preserves; Mrs. J. T. and Mrs. G. E. Knuckles, corn and tomatoes: Mrs. Nettie Burroughs, butter; Mrs. Louisa Ellington, eggs and sugar; a friend, matches; Mrs. G. W. Harris and H. G. Ellington, cash; Miss Bettie Daniels, tomatoes.

From New Hope—Mrs. J. W. Dowling, one ham; Mrs. Bud Paschall, four pounds honey.

Flat Rock—Mrs. Henrry Satterwhite, vegetables; Miss Pearl Reavis, canned peaches.

W. C. Hight, Henderson, one bag high grade guano.

Our gratitude for all the above is inexpressible.

A hopeful sign on the field is an increasing attendance at church services.

Our special meeting at New Hope will begin on the first Sunday in July. Rev. J. H. Bowman is our engaged help. One the second Sunday we begin at Harris Chapel, and on the third Sunday at Flat Rock. Rev. C. L. Spencer and Rev. J. E. Pritchard respectively are our engaged help. Wm. H. Neese.

Siler City Charge.—I have been on this work about one month and now I know, in a measure, what it means to be a pastor. As the work was left without a pastor, naturally it was in a run-down and disorganized condition, yet not so much as one might expect. The Sunday schools at both churches were in fair condition, the attendance being a little below normal. Now the schools have new life and added interest and we are working and praying that each school may be even more successful and fruitful.

During the first week on the work, we held a quarterly meeting in our church at Liberty. Both churches were well represented and we had a good meeting. The conference elected nominees for delegate to the next annual conference. They are: Brother Floyd Deaton of Liberty and Brother Ed. Woody of Siler City.

I would like to say a word about our mid-week prayer services. When we began these meetings they were poorly attended and the outlook was not so bright. But now the people come out splendidly. Last week at Liberty we had a very large crowd. Some one told me that we had 45 present and that that was the largest crowd they had had for years. At our church in Siler City we had an unusually large crowd last week also. These facts are very encouraging and we are praying that these services will continue to be well-attended because a praying church is an effective church.

The young folks are very enthusiastic and they have good Christian Endeavor societies in each church. The young folks at Liberty have a large society and they are doing good work. They have a good president, Miss H. L. Hanner, and the members rally to her support. The society at Siler City is just in its infancy, as it was organized since I have been on the work. But it is one of the most enthusiastic societies one ever saw. The number of members is small, but they believe that quality counts and so under the capable leadership of Miss Margaret Siler they are pressing onward.

Thus the work in all departments is advancing. There are still some problems, yet not amny pastors are free from these, so we patiently go forward. We are praying in both churches that God's Kingdom may be extended and that the summer's work may be abundantly fruitful.

Yours in His service,
Fred W. Paschall.

Sandy Ridge.—We are planning to begin our special meeting the second Sunday in July. Pray for our success. We had the glad privilege of meeting some of the members of this charge at Spring Hill last Sunday; we had a fine time and enjoyed some of the best singing and the best talks I ever heard. Many of our people were sorry they could not go; but on account of sickness and measles they could not go. Our Sunday school is doing very well and our prayer meeting is holding up fine, I think, considering the epidemic. Mr. John Gordon and his family are all down with the measles and several others, from one to two. Aunt Charity Raper, as we call her, is very sick, we are sorry to note. Mr. L. G. Wood carried his son Fred to the hospital in High Point last Monday, where he was operated on. He is reported as getting along nicely. Pray for his recovery.

I would be glad if we could get up a nice Children's Day exercise; and we could if we would all go at it. There are plenty of children that will speak to have a nice time. We would be glad for Spring Hill, West Thomasville and Canaan to come over and sing for us sometime. They did some fine singing; they impressed me so I just had to mention it again.

Our regular preaching day is next Sunday, and Sunday night. Best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Assistant Reporter.

Burlington.—The following members of the Burlington church were in the graduating class of the Burlington High School this year:

Miss Jessie Petty, Miss Blanche Thornburg, Miss Mable Hargrove, Miss Lula Mae Glenn, Mr. James Rogers, Mr. Aubrey Amick.

The graduating exercises were held June 1.

S. W. Taylor.

New Hope, Vance Circuit.—Yesterday morning Pastor Neese delivered another splendid sermon to a large congregation. It is indeed encouraging to see so many of our people coming out to church again. At the close of the service the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed.

On the first Sunday in July we expect to have our Children's Day service. We are planning, working and praying for the best service ever held in New Hope church. The children will hold their service at 11 o'clock and that evening our special meeting will begin. Mr. Neese has secured the services of Mr. J. H. Bowman. He has the reputation of being a good revivalist, so with him to work with us we are sure of helping many lost souls to find the way to Christ. Pray that we may have the best meeting that ever was held at New Hope.

On next Sunday night, June 10, at eight o'clock, we will hold a special Christian Endeavor service. Miss Bertha Paschall is leader, and we feel quite sure of a good service.

I am glad to report that our Sunday school has greatly increased in attendance and we are hoping that still more will begin coming. With best wishes to the Herald and all its readers. Kathleen Paschall, Reporter.

Spring Church Charge, Take Notice.

At the last meeting of the quarterly conference, Brothers R. C. Crew and R. M. Robinson were nominated as delegate to annual conference, which meets Wednesday, October 31, at First Church, Thomasville, N. C.

In accordance with the election law of the North Carolina Conference, the date for the election of said delegate is appointed as follows:

Pleasant Hill, June 17, at the evening service.

Spring Church, June 24, at the morning service.

Lebanon, June 24, in the afternoon service.

All those who are entitled to a vote in this election are hereby notified to be present on the above named dates; and please vote at the church of which you are a member.

Fraternally, J. L. Trolliinger, Pastor.
June 4, 1923.

—Rev. S. W. Taylor will help Rev. J. L. Trollinger in a meeting at Lebanon beginning August 12.

Spring Hill, West Thomasville Circuit. On the third Sunday in May we observed Mothers' Day, at which time our pastor brought us a fine message, enjoyed by a large congregation. The altar was decorated with flowers. After services we marched together to the cemetery and there decorated the graves of our departed ones. This was a great service to us, for it brings our mind back to our childhood days and mother. May God help us to be true mothers indeed. We have a fine Sunday school with 116 on roll and still growing in interest.

The first Sunday in June was observed by a Sunday school rally by West Thomasville circuit at Spring Hill, which proved to be a great day with us. The first on program was Spring Hill school, the next West Thomasville, Sandy Ridge, Canaan. The program for the morning was rendered by the different schools. An address at twelve o'clock was delivered by Mr. George Berrier; at 12:45 we adjourned for dinner on the ground. At two o'clock we reassembled for devotional services, which were in charge of the pastor. We were indeed glad to have with us Brother Garrett and Sister Bowman and a class of the children of the M. P. Children's Home, who had charge of the afternoon program. The program was fine.

We enjoyed having the good people of our sister churches to spend the day with us and we extend to you a hearty invitation to come again. May God help us all to get the spirit of co-operation.

Mrs. A. D. Sink, Reporter.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.—We were very much pleased with the services yesterday. The Sunday school continues to increase in both interest and attendance.

Immediately after Sunday school a meeting of the Board of Trustees was called by the pastor, Brother Williams. Mr. A. N. Eller was elected chairman of the board and Miss Elinor Webster secretary. The meeting adjourned.

The memorial service was then held. Brothed Williams delivered a splendid sermon, after which he asked if any one else had anything to say. Mr. L. F. Eller came up, and I only wish I had his talk written so I could send it to the Herald. It was our privilege to hear it and I wish it were yours to read it. He tried briefly to tell something of what Brother Williams has done this year on this work, walking from church to church. He asked everyone interested in helping to get a Ford for our pastor to please give one dollar each. In a very few minutes $21 was made up. Mr. Hampton of Jupiter was the first to start this work, if I was rightly informed. Each church is working to secure the machine as early as possible. Mr. Eller said that he wanted "to see our pastor equal with the other preachers expected to come to the Young People's Summer Conference." He is that now, but we certainly want to see him riding in a new Ford anyway. There's certainly no one else responsible for this charge's going over with the College pledges except by his faithfulness.

Mr. Lester Watts has succeeded in getting 52 registrations for the Young People's Conference, half of our membership.

Louise Cheek, Reporter.

Harmony Grove, West Forsyth Circuit.—We are still trying to keep our little band of faithful Sunday school workers together.

The past two Sunday s have been splendid days for us. The fourth Sunday in last month was our regular preaching day and Pastor Hamilton delivered us a good and helpful sermon at eleven o'clock and then we had dinned and got in our cars and drove over to Sharon M. E. church to our Township Sunday School Convention.

The first Sunday in this month we had a community singing at our church, conducted by Mr. Hoke Hunter of Clemmons. We had quartet from Jamestown and the Green Street Quartet from Winston and a part of the Twin City Quartet.

We were glad to have with us Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Merritt and Mr. and Mrs. James Wood of Jamestown and Dr. Surratt. Hope they all will come again. With best wishes to all Herald readers, Margaret Moser, Reporter.

James Monroe Parks.

James Monroe Parks departed this life Monday, May 28, 1293. He was born in Rockingham county January 18, 1860. His parents died in his infancy, and he was adopted and reared by Mr. and Mrs. D. Brailey. He was married to Miss Ellen Rominger March 23, 1884. To this union ten children were born, five girls and five boys. Mrs. Parks, four boys and four girls and two grandchildren survive to mourn his loss. He was converted and joined Mt. Carmel Methodist Protestant church 26 years ago, and reamined a faithful member until his death.

Brother Parks will be greatly missed by his home, church and community. For several years Mr. Parks has had poor health, and could not attend the services as he would like to have done, but we believe he was faithful to his Savior in his home. I have been told that he thought so much of the flowers and when able helped to cultivate them. His friends brought beautiful roses and other flowers in abundance to his funeral. Very seldlom do we see such a display of flowers. Surely this is an index to his character. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. James E. Hall, and Rev. J. F. Christian, at Pleasant Fork Union church. We extend our sympathy and prayers to the bereaved, and pray that we may all live so that we will be prepared to meet God in peace when our summons comes. E. A. Bingham, Pastor.

We never know a greater character until something congenial to it has grown up within ourselves.—Channing.

TONSIL AND ADENOID CLINICS.

Definite schedules have been announced for June, July and August as follows: Halifax and Northampton counties at Roanoke Rapids, June 4-8; Franklin county at Louisburg, June 11-21; Vance county at Henderson, June 25-29; Stokes county at Danbury, July 2-6; Davie county at Mocksville, July 9-13; Iredell county at Statesville, July 16-20; Alexander county at Taylorsville, July 23-27; Caldwell county at Lenoir, July 30-Aaugust 3; Avery county at Newlands, August 6-10; Mitchell county at Bakerville, August 13-17; Madison county at Marshall, August 20-24.

Dates for Randolph, Scotland, Brunswick and Hoke are to be announced later.

The medical societies of Nash and Henderson counties have arranged to conduct clinics for the children of their respective counties. Similar arrangements have been in operation in Buncombe, Haywood, Wake and New Hanover counties for some yaers.

A complete traveling hospital unit for the care of 25 children daily is in the field. This includes a truck for the transportation of the necessary equipment, such as cots, bedding, towels, hospital supplies. A staff of ten nurses, an orderly, and an experienced physician for making physical examinations and administering anesthesia is maintained. The specialist performing the operations is selected by the local medical society.

The value of the work accomplished in these clinics has been demonstrated by the increasing demand for them each year. Last year 2,488 children were treated. This year the number will approximate 3,000.

FOR THE PEOPLE.

The national name of the Greenlanders, by being interpreter, said "The People"—hence they called themselves "the people." By the expression they meant the most intelligent creatures in sight. Besides seeing their own tribe they saw the creatures that only contrived by instinct. They could reason and thus felt that they could see something of the why and the wherefore of things, and thus philosophize.

Some have thought that Abraham Lincoln originated the expression, "Of the people, for the people, and by the people," but it has been traced back to Daniel Webster—and the expression is fitting for the idea of such a man as Webster—who had great ideas about the duty of government.

A special meeting in a neighborhood, as a district conference, is intended for the good of the neighborhood—the people. If there is a burial, a funeral—a child or a grown person—it is usually expected that a large congregation of people will be in attendance—and all should go.

The livng do not give their class quite the attention that they deserve. The living need the benefit of the flowers. The dead are not able to use flowers. Association is a hundred times more important than flowers. The way to be sure to respect the dead is to associate before they die, and this means to congregate. Our places for gathering together are not respected enough. We do not go to our churches and school houses often enough and when we go we do not stay long enough. Often the lesson is dropped before getting near through. (This effort does not mean to criticize but to call attention to certain facts.) The people will serve, and be served for Sunday much better at the church or in the school-room, than will be the case when they get home.

The urging is not to try to keep you from home all day, but to remind us of the duty of staying at the church long enough. When there is a meeting at the church every family near should be liberally represented—if possible. The Son of God had due respect for the unfortunate—and ate with publicans and sinners. The "publicans and sinners" should be urged to come to the church annd welcomed to the Sunday school with the little children, and all should be made to feel free to sing. However, the publicans and sinners are not to be made teachers, but all should be urged to take the teachings.

The Sunday school literature has been arranged by those who are well up to their task—and this proves to us something of the great necessity of having men and women to be thoroughly educated. They are educated so as to lead and teach us—hence they have been educated so as to be able to help us, and are now in shape to be "servants of all."

W. F. Grabs.

SOME SEARCHING QUESTIONS.

Dear Editor: Please allow me space in your paper—a paper that I love and read with much care every week to try and learn more and more about what the Methodist Protestant Church is doing. Brother or sister, how can you be what you should be, or know what you should know unless you take your church paper? That is the only way that you can find out what the church is doing or trying to do.

Well, how about that big pounding that brother preacher got some time ago? That was fine, if given in the spirit of Christ. But did you stop when you passed that poor widow's house and make her glad on your way to the parsonage? Or did you come the next day or have you been at all? Have you ever been to see the widow or invalid and sick and see their faces beam with joy when they would tell you of some Brother or Sister who was to see them a few days ago? How about it, brother preacher? When were you down there to see the sick? Have you called on them in six or twelve months, or have you looked up the church members that cannot or do not come to church? What did Christ say about visiting the sick? Brother preacher or lay-member or sister, if this hits you I hope it will do you good and not harm.

I am glad to see through the Herald that they are getting on so well with the College; it looks fine on paper and looked well on land when I was there but I think that it looks much better now. Are you doing your part to make it look better or are your waiting for Brother Jones and Sister Smith to pay first? Get in the lead and let the other brother or sister follow you; be a leader and not a follower.

Don't live for self alone. Your money or land when you are dead will not do you any good. Make a good investment in the College while you live: it will do some child good if not yours. Do not live for self alone. If you can trust God at all, you can trust Him that He will not let your family suffer when you are gone.

What about the Cildren's Home? Are you doing your part to help make Christian men and women of helpless children or are you leaving it to some one else to do their part and yours too? Now if one were to come down the road to your house you would take care of it, I know you would; so send Brother Garrett a few dollars and let him have all of the trouble and you will feel better every time you hear of one going out in the world from the home because you know that you helped to make that boy or girl what they are.

Hoping these few lines will do us all good, for they are meant for good and for the advancement of God's kingdom, with best wishes to the Herald and all of its readers.

INCOMING CABLEGRAM.

Aleppo.—Ninety-nine babies arrived Aleppo from Diarbekir after traveling 500 miles overland in native carts, in charge of John Detweiler of Birchtree, Missouri. These children, aged two to five years, are last of 20,000 orphans evacuated from Anatolia by Near East Relief via Aleppo past eight months.

They are not included in the evacuation last autumn owing to physical condition. They have been under continuous medical care in Near East Relief Diarbekir Hospital under Miss Emily Wade of SanFrancisco and Doctor Abbie Noyes Little of Boston. All are now in excellent health despite hardships of the journey.

Arriving here the children were besieged by a crowd of 10,000 refugees hoping to find among them missing babies lost during exodus. Two mothers collapsed on finding babies. Three mothers collapsed on failing to find theirs. All five mothers now recuperating in the Near East Relief Hospital.

Children unclaimed by relatives will be sent to Oropos Orphanage in Greece with other baby refugees. Miss Wade and Dr. Little, who were expected to arrive with the bobies, insist on remaining at Diarbekir to protect remnants of Greek and Armenian population.

NATIONAL FATHER AND SON WEEK FOR 1923.

Attention is called to an important change of date for the observance of National Father and Son Week. This now established and increasingly popular institution, which was originated in 1917 by the International Boys' Work Committee of the Y. M. C. A., fixed its dates for February 10-17, covering the week of Lincoln's birthday, and that period has been observed up to this year. As the movement developed, and larger numbers of fathers and sons attended the events conducted by the associations and churches alike, it was realized that closer co-operation with the Sunday school organizations was most desirable. Conferences were held, and a joint committee of representatives of the International Sunday School Association and of the Young Men's Christian Association was appointed.

In response to the desire of the Sunday school forces the observance has been changed to November 11-18, centering it around Armistice Day. The change has been ratified by the Committee of Reference and Counsel of the Sunday School Asociation and Sunday School Council of Interdenominational Churches, by the International Sunday School Conference of Religious Education, and the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Asociation, whose Boys' Work Committee will continue actively to promote this idea, which has become of world-wide significance.

Father and Son Week in the coming November will be the sixth annual observance. Now that it has become an established affair and of national scope, it is felt that in order to accomplish the objectives desired, the Father and Son idea should be an all-the-year-round program. In view of this, the Father and Son Movement is being introduced this year with the thought that a year's program will be launched anually at the time of each Father and Son Week in the future.

THE FAMILY ALTAR LEAGUE.

Its Purpose, Plan and Progress.

"The Family Altar League will do more to make America great than scores of battleships."—Reverend Malcoln James McLeod, D.D.

The Christian people of this country, or of any other civilized country, need not be told of the profound significance of a thoroughly Christian home. Genuine piety in the homes of the world will settle all problems, national, social, industrial, as well as domestic.

W. H. Grady, who was a true patriot, said to a friend when he looked for the first time upon the White House in Washington: "That, sir, is the home of my nation." But a few days later he went for a trip through the southland and stopped over night at a plantation where the planter and his wife were Christians, and in the evening they gathered the children about them and together read the Bible and prayed, and Henry W. Grady said: "I was mistaken when I said that glistening pile of marble at Washington was the home of my nation; the home of my nation is the homes where the Bible is read, where Jesus Christ is respected, where God is honored and the children are taught to pray."

Old John Randolph said: "I should have been an atheist had it not been for the recollection and memory of the time when my mother used to take my little hand in hers and cause me on my knees to say, 'Our Father Who Art in Heaven'."

The Purpose.

There was a time when the Family Altar was not an exception but that time, alas, is gone. We have traveled this broad land over from corner to corner and have been amazed, as you would have been and no doubt thousands who read this article have been, at the sight of the holy influences which make for Godly character all forgotten while the father and mother join in eager and sometimes frenzied pursuit of the world's pleasures and its treasures. It is estimated that only ten per cent of the Christian homes of our land have family worship. Think of it!

Surely any plan which will serve in any degree to call us back—back from the spirit of materialism, from unconsecrated commercialism, the Epicurean indifference to the things of God, all true Christians will greatly approve. This is the Purpose of the Family altar League, inaugurated after many months of prayer and conference with God's chosen leaders in religious work.

The Plan.

The Plan in brief is this:

1. Christian people are urged to sign the following covenant:

"Believing myself responsible to God for a true home and realizing the need of God's grace for my own Christian life, I covenant with God to make it a rule of my life to gather together each day, so far as possible, my family, and together read some portion of God's Word and pray for His blessing upon my home."

2. Each covenant is given a special number and the home thus enrolled is registered in the Family Altar League and its number kept on record at headquarters.

3. The pastor of the persons signing the covenant is then furnished with a card as a reminder that the home is regarded in the Family Altar League as a household of prayer.

4. To every home thus enrolled there is sent, in exchange for the covenant card, a certificate of membership. Homes where the Altar exists may also be enrolled by signing the covenant card.

5. Into the homes of the members of the League is then sent, each month, at an annual expense of $2, The Christian Home Magazine, a forty-four page monthly magazine, containing, among others, the following departments:

a. Daily Bible Readings, with comments by the world's best Bible students.
b. A Prayer for each day suggested for family or personal devotion.
c. Family Circle Department, in which is published helpful suggestions for the development of a spiritual atmosphere in the home.
d. A Digest of the World's Religious News; religious items of interest gathered from many sources and presented in condensed form.
e. A Department of Evangelism; the winning of souls to Christ.
f. A Departemnt of Religious Stories written especially for this magazine.
g. A Department on Missions; interesting and educational information regarding various missionary enterprises.
h. A sermon each month on the home or some kindred subject.

It is more especially for the help the home will derive from the Daily Bible readings that this monthly is issued, although the suggested prayers and other departments have been pronounced by many to be most invaluable. All this, it has been taught—and experience has shown it to be true—will assist much in emphasizing our obligation to honor Christ in this particular way in the home.

It is the intention of the League to keep in touch with all homes enrolled and to help them in every possible way. Though already upon a solid footing and doing great work, the undertaking desires to be strengthened and any suggestion loking toward its greater efficiency will be most gladly welcomed at headquarters.

A Strong Feature.

The League does not attempt to organize anything new in the local church but simply to help the pastor stimulate the spiritual life of his own congregation.

The Progress.

Far more even than its founders anticipated has this movement taken hold of the churches and Christian public. God has set His seal of approval upon the League. Its growth has been phenomenal. For many years the work was promoted by the volunteer service of some prominent ministers and a few special friends; and yet requests for more than 500,000 cards for signatures for those covenanting to establish the Family Altar have been received.

It is estimated that more than 100,000 new Family Altars have been established, and 250,000 lives are being touched and influenced every day in the home because of the efforts of the League.

Letters pour in from every quarter of the United States and from foreign lands, three-fourths of which are from ministers. Pastors everywhere are presenting the plan to their people. Headquarters are being established in foreign lands, and if it please God He will carry the work around the world.

Plans for a Larger Work.

Much has been accomplished, but the directors have planned for bigger things. "An Altar in Every Christian Home in America" is the motto.

To meet the increased demands a general secretary is giving all of his time to the promotion of the work. Our headquarters are in Chicago, with an up-to-date equipment. A vigorous campaign of extension is being prosecuted.

The work is being presented at ministers' meetings, conventions and other associations.

How You May Help.

This work is so big and its demands so great that we must have the prayerful co-operation of our friends.

FIRST—by taking the covenant and thus becoming a registered member.

SECOND—By becoming our representative in your church and community. Form a circle of those already interested and seek to interest those who do not now have the Altar in their homes. You cannot engage in anything that will take less of your time and bring larger results. Will you not become one of the goodly number who have united with us and help extend the work?

THIRD—By becoming a Sustaining Member. Give $1 or more annually to the support of the work—or give $3 or more per year and receive the magazine and other literature regularly.

FOURTH—if you are a minister, by putting on a campaign for the Family Altar in your own church. We would suggest that you preach on the subject and appoint a strong committee to canvass all the homes of your congregation. The League will be glad to supply you with covenant cards and literature for a campaign of this kind.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S PLANS.

Plans for President Harding's trip to the far West and Alaska are about completed. He expects to leave Washington June 20. He will make speeches at St, Louis, Kansas City, Hutchinson, Kans., Denver, Salt Lake City, Helena, Boise and Seattle.

From Seattle the President will sail for Alaska on the transport Henderson. He will remain in Alaska for about two weeks and will then start on his return journey to Washington by way of the Panama Canal. Stops will be made at Portland, Ore., San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, the Canal Zone and Porto Rico. The President plans to be back in Washington by early September.—Current Events.

—Captain Donald B. MacMillan, the noted Arctic explorer, will sail for the polar regions June 16. He will try to find out whether another ice age is beginning. The advance of glaciers during the past seventy years indicate this, scientists say. Captain MacMillan will also study magnetic and electrical conditions of the atmosphere. He hopes to bring back a series of pictures of bird and animal life. He plans to aproach within eleven degrees of the North Pole.

—A movement has been started in New York State for the protection of wild flowers. The New York Legislature will be asked to pass a law to save the flowers from destruction. Thoughtless persons often uproot and carry away plants from the woods. In this way many beautiful American wild flowers have almost disappeared.

—President Harding gave an address in the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater on Memorial Day. His audience included veterans of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the World War. He said, among other things: ‘‘I devoutly wish the United States to do its full part toward making war unlikely, if not impossible. While I should abhor a pacifist America, I should rejoice to have the United States proved to be unafraid, and yet the most peace-loving and the foremost peace-promoting nation in all the world. We have already proved that we can have less of armament. Let us strive for the assurance that we shall have none of war.''

—The twelve-hour day in the iron and steel industry will not be changed to an eight-hour day, at least for the present. That was decided at a recent meeting, in New York, of the Iron and Steel Institute. The members of the Institute approved unanimously the report of a committee that has been investigating the twelve-hour day.

—Collier's national weekly, is asking its readers to vote their choice for President. The first instalment of votes is more than 19,000. Henry Ford leads with 5,547 votes. President Harding is second with 4,460. William G. McAdoo, Senator Hiram Johnson, James M. Cox and Charles E. Hughes each received more than a thousand votes.

—Special warnings were broadcast last week for all ships to be on the lookout for ice floes and icebergs in the Atlantic traffic lanes. ‘‘Double your lookout, slow down or even stop during thick and foggy weather,'' the messages said. Icebergs and ice floes have drifted further south this spring than at any time in the past twelve years.

—Panama Canal tolls amounted to $136,000 on May 26. That was the first time that more than $100,000 had been received in a single day. Twenty five ships passed through the Canal and paid this record sum in tolls.

—The Massachusetts Legislature has passed a law placing a tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline.

—Beginning next September all children born in Poland who have reached the age of seven must attend school. Compulsory education is provided by the new constitution of Poland.

—Joseph Wingate Folk died in New York City on May 28. From 1900 to 1904 Mr. Folk was circuit attorney for St. Louis, Mo. In this position he exposed much political corruption and brought many wrong-doers to justice. He was elected Governor of Missouri in 1904 on the Democratic ticket and served from 1905 to 1909.

NEAR EAST WORKERS HONORED.

Five Americans who died in the service of the Near East Relief have been awarded the War Cross by the government of Greece. The Americans thus honored are: Lester J. Wright, of Waukesha, Wis.; George J. Williams, of Foxburg, Pa.; Ribert E. Wilson, of Morning Sun, Iowa; Oliver Crawford, of Boston, Mass.; Charles Flint, of Syracuse, N. Y. An official statement of the Greek government says:

‘‘This is a roll of honor without precedent. The American effort in behalf of the refugees of Asia Minor is the most outstanding act of organized altruism in history. These names constitute a glorious page in the annals of Greece, whose million refugee survivors of the horrors of the Asia Minor evacuations are living witnesses they did not die in vain.''

Our actions must clothe us with immortality loathesome or glorious.—Rochefoucald.

ARAB KING SIGNS TREATY.

King Husein, of Hejaz, signed a treaty with the government of Great Britain last week. By this pact Great Britain recognizes the independence of Husein's kingdom and admits that Palestine is included in the territory of Hejaz. Husein agrees that Great Britain shall keep its mandate over the Holy Land, however, and that the present form of government there shall not be changed.

Hejaz is a long, narrow strip of territory bordering on the Red Sea. Mecca is the capital. Before the World War Hejaz was a province of Arabia and belonged to Turkey. In 1916 Husein, who was ‘‘Grand Sherif'' of Mecca, proclaimed the independence of Hejaz from Turkish rule.

He covered 1400 miles in 11 hours, 54 minutes. His is the langest non-stop flight made by an aviator traveling alone.

How Can we Win Friends and Keep Them?

Solomon said, He that hath friends must show himself friendly. If a friendly attitude toward others will win friends for us, it will also keep them after they are won. We know that all men will not be our friends, whatever our life may be. So in winning friends we must know the traits of character that guarantee friendship, and we must ourselves have the qualities we look for in a friend. To win a friend, be a friend. Jesus conditioned discipleship on unselfishness and service. He that would be my disciple, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me. And I think true friendship exists only between unselfish people who understand each other. David prays for understanding that he may keep the law; an understanding heart will also help us to win and keep friends. Jesus was called the friend of sinners and he was glad to be a friend to them; some of them were won when they understood his interest in them and his love; he understood them and found something human worth developing as well as a soul to save. Through understanding he found a common interest and a companionship followed; he taught the great truths using the things they were familiar with. I heard it said of a prominent preacher the ther day, ''He makes you think he is interested in you; I liked him at first sight.'' Well, no doubt he is interested in all whom he meets, and his likable spirit finds a response in those of the same quality. Here's the conclusion of the question as I see it. To win friends, be a friend, be everything we would have them be, unselfish, frank, and just; and to keep them, keep on giving to them and all the world the finest and best we have.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

There is great danger our young people being led off into formality, and of all things displeasing to the Lord is a form of worship. God wants heart service. We feel sometimes the young people are doing such a great work and we are rushing on, and possibly have not taken time to consider what church work means. There was a time when the young people could be prepared for leadership in our church, but since we (some of us) feel we can do the church work without the help we could get we have done away (some of us) with the means of grace our fathers and mothers needed. Some of us needed the old-time class meetings to train us for leaders. We could not when a babe in Christ have led a meeting; we were so weak, could only get up and say we loved Jesus; but as we went on testifying for the Lord we in due time felt the call to lead the church services. We can not take a little child just born into the world and compel it to walk and eat such food as we older ones can, and can not do so with the babe in Christ. They must be fed on milk, not meat, and now, see, they can lead a meeting, read a scripture verse, do just lots of church work and haven't any Christian experience whatever. We must be spirit-filled to impart the blessing to others; otherwise we are not blessed and are not a blessing to others. Let me say we should have the class meetings to prepare our young converts for leadership. We are going too fast and we older ones will be responsible for the young people's reward. We hear some one say this was all right to have these meetings then, but we do not need them today, we are so progressive and are living in such a fast age we haven't time for such old-fogy things as class meetings. Man has tried in many ways to change the plan of salvation, but God made it and it will stand just as it is. We can not improve it, and we will not be saved in any other way. We must have the Spirit of Christ or we are none of His. Not every one that saith, Lord, Lord, shall enter in, but they that do the will of their Father in heaven. How can wo do His will unless He leads us? How can He lead us when we do not have His Spirit? As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. We certainly believe in progress but believe also in preparation. We should not hurry the young into leading in church work until they have some experience of their own. God never hurries his work. We must be steadfast and unmovable. Not by power nor by might but by my Spirit, always abounding in the love of God, just one continual and untiring walk with God. Nature never hurries. Every phase of her working shows plan, calmness, reliability and the absence of hurry. Hurry always implies lack of definite method, confusion, impatience of slow growth. The Tower of Babel, the world's first sky scraper, was a failure because of hurry. They mistook arrogant ambition for inspiration. They had too many builders and no architect. So we feel we have progressed to the extent that we are far ahead of nature. This is the age of the hot-house. The element of natural growth is pushed to one side and the hot-house and the force-pump are substituted. Some one has said that hurry has ruined more Americans than has any other word in the vocabulary of life, that it both is a cause and result of our high pressure civilization and that hurry is the death blow to calmness, to dignity, to poise and that the old-time courtesy went out when the new-time hurry came in. Then, again, we not only find the church work leaving nature out of all her plans, but also the educational system of today that the children are forced to go through. They are taught everything but essentials, how to use their [illegible] and how to [illegible].'' [illegible] back just where we left off and have our class meetings and train and prepare our young people for more and better efficient leaders. Is it possible we must have some good preacher or good worker give all their time to the work of the young people when we could have the young people meet once a month in class meeting and give their own personal experience until we could get them prepared for leadership indeed and in truth? For we are his witnesses. It puts me in mind of the girl taking domestic science at school. When at home her mother should teach her. Too fast, too fast, are we not? Everything that is great in life is the product of slow growth. The newer and greater and higher and nobler the work, the slower is its growth, the surer is its lasting success. Mushrooms attain their full power in a night. Oaks require decades. A fad lives its life in a few weeks, a philosophy lives through generations and centuries. Then here we are rushing and pushing and pushing our young people into leading Christion services when they haven't any personal experience whatever and we honestly believe

Brother W. L. Ward joins the Hauser $1,000.00 Club this week; we want to thank Brother Ward for this encouragement and we believe that it will encourage others who are yet debating whether to enter or not. So come along, brethren, and go with us.

Union Hill and Harmony Grove churches, West Forsyth, report their quotas in full this week. This leaves Stony Knoll, Pleasant Hill and Tabernacle churches to subscribe their quota and West Forsyth will be over. This is a bit of encouraging news from West Forsyth.

Please to send in your cards as soon as the quotas are secured. We are anxious to publish a full report of results, but cannot until we have the pledge cards in our hands. Then we will publish a tabulated report giving the quotas and the amount subscribed on each church. Please to bear this in mind and help us to make a good finishing up of the campaign.

Miss Mary E. Young of Henderson is making a challenge to the school teachers in our conference to give $100 a year for three years to the College. So we are establishing another club this week in the Herald. Who will join the Mary Young $300 Club, out of the ranks of the public school teachers in our church in North Carolina? May we not have a great response to this appeal?

Very truly, R. M. Andrews, Chairman.

DISTRICT MEETING AT CHESTNUT RIDGE.

The District Meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societties will be held in Chestnut Ridge church on the fourth Sunday in June. We sincerely hope that each church in the district will be represented.

A splendid program is being prepared. Mrs. George R. Brown of High Point will be the speaker for the morning hour.

Come and learn what our women are doing for missions.

Mrs. J. J. Crawford,
Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Chairmen.

A FOGLEMAN MEMORIAL ROOM AT OUR COLLEGE.

Rev. W. D. Fogleman, who served this work some years ago and who has since been called home to be with the Lord, did a good work here on Greensville circuit and because of his good deeds and loyal service for the Lord the people of Greensville circuit are going to honor his memory by furnishing a room at our High Point College to be known as the W. D. Fogleman Memorial Room.

We believe that there are many other circuits, churches, Sunday schools and individuals who have the same love for Brother Fogleman that Greensville has and who would like to have part in this Memorial Room. So we invite you to join with us. We want 20 who will give $5 each, one hundred who will give $1 and a number of Sunday schools who will send one Sunday's collection for this cause.

Mrs. Geo. W. Pearson is solicitor for this. She has on hand about $100 in pledges to be paid when called for and some cash. So with your help we can furnish one of the best rooms of the College. Address your donations to Rev. R. M. Andrews, D.D., Greensboro, or to Mrs. Geo. W. Pearson, Fitzzhugh, Va. In sending in your donation be sure to mention the Fogleman Memorial Room.

James H. Trolinger.

Triplet, Va., June 8, 1923.

Graham.—We had a good service Sunday. The Sunday school is on the increase since the epidemic of measles has subsided. We are planning for a Children's Day service on the fourth Sunday in this month.

Miss Ethel Rich left this morning to attend the Young People's Summer Conference at Weaverville.

Mr. Winfrey T. Martin and Miss Ethel, Parks, the latter a member of our church here, were married on last Thursday evening by the writer at the home of the bride's parents.

The committee is making the drive for the College now. The Junior Christian Endeavor has subscribed $100. C. L. Spencer.

Reidsville.—We have had a great revival in our town. Evangelist John E. Brown of Arkansas held a three weeks' meeting in one of the warehouses here. Large crowds attended every service and much interest was manifested. We feel that the whole town was revived.

We had two splendid sermons by our pastor yesterday. He will be away next Sunday attending the Young People's Summer Conference at Weaverville, and has secured Brother W. F. Ashburn of Liberty to fill his pulpit in his absence.

Miss Blanche Weatherly led the Christian Endeavor meeting yesterday evening. The subject was "Object Lessons." Quite a number gave talks on it, and it proved to be an interesting meeting.

Last Sunday Misses Beulah Sawyers and Eunice Roach united with our church on profession of faith and yesterday Mrs. Agnes Faulkner Shreves came to us by letter from the Henderson Methodist Protestant church. We are indeed glad to welcome them into our church.

Several of our people leave tomorrow for Weaverville to attend the Young People's Conference, and several will leave Friday for Kinston to attend the State Baraca-Philathea Convention.

The Philathea class met with Mrs. G. M. Reed last Tuesday evening. Several items of interest were discussed and new officers were elected, after which delicious refreshments were served. Madge T. Dixon,

IN THE CULT KINGDOM.

By Rev. John E. Brown.

Christian Science.

Christian Science teaches that prayer to a personal God is a hindrance.

Christian Science teaches that a lie is all the Satan there is.

Christian Science teaches that angels are only beautiful thought, winged with mercy and love.

Christian Science teaches that there is no final judgment.

Christian Science teaches that sin is not pardoned.

Christian Science teaches that there are no lost souls.

Christian Science teaches that marriage it not the ideal state, and that the time will come when marriage will be done away.

Christian Science, in keeping with its pagan ideas on marriage, makes no provision in the Christian Science house of worship for a marriage ceremony.

Christian Science teaches that marriage is not a necessary basis of generation, and that the perpetuation of the race is not dependent on the sexes.

Christian Science repudiates the Lord's supper.

Christian Science repudiates all forms of baptism.

Christian Science denies that it is pantheism, though the evidence is overwhelming that that is just what it is.

As near as Brother Brown can figure out, the story of Christian Science should read something like this: "Mortal mind (that never existed) thought thoughts of evil that were never thought, and did deeds of evil that were never done; and an impersonal mind, called God, sent to this material world, (that never existed) that he might be the way-shower, directing the minds of men, (who never had any existence apart from the one mind, God) how to overcome evil, (which never had any existence, and of which God had no knowledge). This living manifestation of God was known as Jesus Christ. After He had lived in a material body (which never existed) for more than thirty-three years, He was arrested, tried and crowned with thorns (that never existed), and was nailed to a cross (that never existed), where He died a death which He did not die. He was buried in a tomb (that never existed), and there in the tomb He practiced Christian Science and healed Himself of unreal wounds in His unreal body, which He had received in His unreal death. He arose, passed through some sort of an ascension, and was re-joined to the one impersonal mind from which He had never been separated.—The Review. Reidsville.

HENRY JEROME STOCKARD, THE POET.

William Thornton Whitsett.

For several years there was published in North Carolina a monthly journal known as the North Carolina Teacher. It was edited by Eugene G. Harrell who was then secretary of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly. In 1886 he offered a prize of five dollars in gold for the best poem submitted to the magazine. The prize was won by Henry Jerome Stockard, then a teacher in the Graham Normal College. The poem was entitled, The Review of Our Dead, and was published in the North Carolina Teacher in the issue for January, 1887. At this time Stockard was twenty-nine years old, and had never before published any verse. From this time on he began to write as opportunity offered. The Review of Our Dead has eight verses, and is published in Stockard's book, Fugitive Lines, issued in 1897 by G. P. Putnam's Sons, but for the book it was greatly changed by Stockard, and much improved. It may be of interest to compare a verse or two of the poem with the changed form.

'Twas night; the stars shone bright
And wrapt in spectral glow the silent world—
Before the rising winds the clouds were whirled,
Like phantoms weird from out the western skies;
The myriad eyes,
That from those boundless regions sentry kept,
In darkness slept!

In his book he makes this first verse read as follows:

'Twas night. A lurid light
Made field and wood seem of some other world.
Before the rising winds the vapors whirled,
Wild, spectre-like; and in deep gulfs afar,
Star after star
Shone fugitive; the white moon shuddered thro'
The clouds that flew.

All the remaining seven verses are much changed, showing that he felt that he could improve upon his first effort after having given more study to his art.

As we have stated, his book appeared in 1897. In 1911 he published through the Neale Publishing Company his Study in Southern Poetry, in which he included a few of his own poems. In April, 1898, Stockard wrote at the request of a friend a sonnet which is not included in either of his books, and which we are glad to give below as a good specimen of his most excellent work in the difficult field of the sonnet.

The Quest.

Across the world he set his earnest face
To learn the door where happiness doth abide;
The strength of hope was in his buoyant stride,
And on his brow the morning's gentle grace.
While stole the seasons on, with weary pace
He wandered through the nations far and wide—
Beyond the heave of earth's remotest tide—
But never once drew near her dwelling place.
"Lo! she is shaped of dreams!" with sudden tears
He murmured turning home. Then evermore,
As if his life's sad ruins to repair,
He healed the sick, and heard the starveling's prayer.
A soft step fell, and, swinging wide his door,
He found her whom he'd sought through ail the years.

THE "O. M. B."

State prohibition was adopted in Kansas in 1880. For some four years the battle against persistent law-violation was waged, with varying but increasing success. The better enforced the law the more popular it grew, until sentiment overwhelmingly favored it. Then came an era of lethargy. Liquor advocates grew increasingly bold, then defiant. Temperance conventions were slimly attended and prohibition leaders became discouraged. It seemed impossible to arouse the people to the imminent danger of the repeal of the law, notwithstanding the fact that the liquor men had formed themselves into an organization known as the "Order of the Mystic Brotherhood," into which they had gathered, as far as possible, all the forces of moral and civic darkness, and were spending thousands of dollars in a systematic propaganda to break down prohibition. They claimed a voting strength of 50,000, and in the estimation of the public were "making good." The state could fight successfully its outside enemies, even its open enemies within, but so easily this cunning foe boring at its very vitals. The four state-wide temperance organizations were all but in retreat. Leaders were failing to lead. These were the conditions that prevailed in 1895-96. Then, suddenly, a strange thing "happened."

A "Prayer Movement" was formed. And soon the things which frantic appeals and human efforts had failed to accomplish, God did.

No one ever knew what became of the "O. M. B.;" within two years every vestige of the organization as such had completely disappeared. The tide began to turn, and within a few years not a state in the Union or a community on earth could show better results from Prohibition. Kansas is still lied about, but it goes on its civic way, unconscious perhaps that the maintenance and popularity of its law is a monument to prevailing prayer.

But today another "O. M. B." has stealthily entrenched itself in forbidden territory and has grown to gigantic proportions—the "Order of the Modernist Brotherhood"—its chief doctrine "the universal brotherhood of man," without reference to spiritual regeneration through faith in the atoning merits of the blood of Christ. It is forcing its way everywhere. Its propaganda is insidious. It is opposed to every fundamental doctrine of evangelical religion. It boasts its growing power. Before it denominations are capitulating and leaders are quailing. In its presence even the church itself, apart from God, is utterly helpless.

Ah, But God Still Lives, and Prayer Still Avails.

If evangelical leaders will lead, tens of thousands of evangelical people are ready to follow. If they will not lead (but they will), the people themselves will cry unto God until He raises up new leaders. The great heart of the church is true to its living Head. Surely the day is not far distant when God will hear the simultaneous supplication of His interceding children from one end of the globe to the other. And the God who hears is the God who answers.

Nothing will so effectually stem the tide of world-wide Modernism as a thorough-going, heaven-sent church-wide revival. "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (James 5:6).

CIVE THE BOY A CHANCE.

Boys very early manifest the peculiar traits of character which determine the course of their whole lives. When John Roach came to America, a boy of about fifteen, he was penniless and found no friend who could help; his uncle, whom he expected to meet, having gone to the South. He applied to the foreman of a manufacturing establishment for permission to learn a trade. The foreman turned him away, saying:

"We require a boy whom we undertake to teach a trade to deposit $50 as security that he will remain until his apprenticeship expires, and you have no money."

The young man went away disappointed, but not discouraged. He went to a brick-yard and carried brick for fifty cents a day until he had saved $50, and, returning to the foreman, said:

"Now I have the money, and am ready to deposit it with you if you will allow me to learn a trade."

Again the foreman repulsed him, because he thought so ungainly a youth could never be a mechanic.

The young man was again disappointed and chagrined, but not cast down. He went to the proprietor and told his story.

The proprietor of the establishment was sure that a boy who could make such sacrifices and persist so long in his purpose to learn a trade ought at least to have a chance, and, going to the foreman, he ordered him to take the young man and give him a trial. He did learn a trade, and by industry and perseverance rose until he became the leading shipbuilder in America, and one of the wealthy and honored citizens of the nation. The pluck which he displayed in boyhood, rising superior to obstacles and refusing to yield to discouragement, was one of the important qualities which carried him to success and made him a great and useful man. Those who have no noble qualities in youth, are not likely to become noble men.—Unknown.

A RETURN FOR EACH SORROW.

Sorrow has a salutary effect. For each misfortune, we are repaid in one guise or another.

Over in France in one of the villages of the Vosges there is a beautiful story told concerning the wondrous rose window which rises so stately above the entrance of the local cathedral.

Many years ago there had been another window above the west entrance, a window which was the pride of the town, for tourists came for far to view it. One night a fearful storm arose which hurled its fury against the unprotected panes, and the far-famed window crashed into a thousand pieces on the floor beneath.

The next day the villagers came and sadly gathered pieces of glass and put them away in a box. Gloom settled upon the town. The object of their pride and joy was gone.

Now it happened that not long after this a stranger arrived in the village and inquired about the famous window. When told of its destruction, he requested to see the broken pieces. They were presented to his view and upon a slight offer they were purchased by him and taken away.

A year or so went by and there was still a bleak gap in the gray wall above the west entrance. One day word came from a world-famous artist in Paris to the directors of the cathedral in the form of an invitation to visit him at his studie in Paris. Greatly honored, they made haste to the metropolis and were cordially received by the artist.

Taking them into a nearby chamber and throwing a large curtain aside, the artist disclosed to his visitors a wondrous rose window which thrilled their very souls.

"See, it is yours," he said, "I made it from the broken pieces of your shattered window. Take it back home with you and fill up the great circle above the west entrance of your cathedral."

The villagers were entranced with their new window. Its fame spread through all of France, for it was far more beautiful than the old.

So it is, dear friends, that our hopes and ambitions are often crushed by the storms of life. Loved ones are taken from us. Cherished plans are frustrated. Accidents of life bruise us, and we seem to be shattered hopelessly beyond repair. Ah! In such an hour there is a Great Artist who can take our shattered lives and fashion them anew into a far more glorious image than we ever were before. It is only through the white hot caldron that the dross is removed and the gold is refined. God is conforming His children to the image of His Son, who learned obedience through the things that He suffered. Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of Grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.—Rev. Willis Bergen.

DOGS ON THE BATTLE-FIELD.

While man, obeying the command of king and czar and emperor, goes forth to kill his fellow-man, dogs, silent, unprotesting, guarded from flying bullets only by a symbol, search the bloody field for maimed and wounded, taking with them promises of comfort and of help.

These Red Cross dogs are especially trained for this service. Entrance requirements are high. "The preference is usually given to sheep dogs," says a recent issue of "The Collie Folio," "and to those of good temper and ability. But this does not necessarily mean that every sheep dog will make a good ambulance dog. Shy or aggressive dogs are useless, also those who hunt game, or who lack character."

There are various ways in which these dogs are today hunting for the wounded and making their reports to headquarters. Some dogs wear bells. When the bell ceases ringing the master follows its last direction and comes upon the dog, keeping watch beside a wounded soldier. Other dogs have been trained to bark as soon as they find a man who needs assistance; another will take a man's cap, or something from his pocket, and retrieve it to his master.

The Belgian Club of Ambulance Dogs for some time past has been making special study of these various methods of training, by holding competitive contests. The trainers of these ambulance dogs are given free transportation to the place where these contests are held; and "specials are given them, but only registered dogs of pure breeding can obtain this for their master." "Breston," who won the prize in the 1911 Red Cross Contest, was purchased by the Red Cross Dog Society of the Netherlands for $250. This was much less than would have been paid had the dog been of pure extraction.

Before the declaration of the recent war it was planned that such a contest should soon be held in Holland. These dogs today, however, instead of using their intelligence to gain honors for owner and trainer, are busy putting into actual practice the valuable lessons they have learned in helping to alleviate the human suffering now raging throughout Europe.—Our Dumb Animals.

WHAT IS A FRIEND?

A friend is a person with whom you dare to be yourself. Your soul can go naked with him. He seems to ask of you to put on nothing, only to be what you are. He does not want you to be better or worse.

When you are with him you feel as a prisoner feels who has been declared innocent. You do not have to be on your guard. You can say what you think, so long as it is genuinely you. He understands those contradictions in your nature that lead others to misjudge you.

With him you breathe free. You can take off your coat and loosen your collar. You can avow your little absurdities, and in opening them up to him they are lost, dissolved on the white ocean of his loyalty. He understands. You do not have to be careful.

You can abuse him, neglect him, tolerate him. Best of all, you can keep still with him. It makes no matter. He likes you. He is like fire that purges all you do. He is like water that cleanses all that you say. He understands, he understands.

You can weep with him, laugh with him, pray with him. Through and underneath it all he sees, knows, and loves you.

A friend, I repeat, is one with whom you dare to be yourself.—Selected.

A MISSION TALK.

Calling. Calling. Can you hear them calling? The man of Macedonia, the child-widow of India, the starved soul of China, the demon-tortured heathen of Africa, the neglected Indian of South America, they are calling, calling you.

A vision appeared to Paul, and there was immediate response. Oh, that the young people of the church might see the vision of the lost souls—four thousand heathen dying every hour, ninety-five thousand every day swept out in blackness without God and without hope! Paul saw one man calling him; today there are over a billion calling us. We have ears to hear the latest song, and eyes to see the new styles in clothing; must we confess that we are blind to the vision of millions marching on unwarned to hell, and deaf to their entreaties?—Sunday School Times.

—The largest restarrant in the world has just been opened in London. It covers five acres of floor space and employs 1700 workers. Twelve million meals wil be served there during the first year, it is predicted. The largest American restaurant serves about two million meals a year, it is said.

we will [illegible] of their lives [illegible] into leading the church services before they were prepared and actually have taken the full time of a good young preacher to take charge of this work when we could have the class meeting and prepare them for leaders.

In conclusion, let me say that we feel that any church that does not have leaders that can organize a young people's work, that they have to get some one to come and organize for them, that they are so low spiritually that we fear they have never been able to take only the food for the babe in Christ. We are to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord. What are we doing and what is our hurry? Martha Parsons.

Roberta Station.—Children's Day was observed at Roberta Sunday. The children rendered a nice program. At the beginning of the practicing there were 25 mite boxes distributed among the children; the one getting the most money was to receive a prize. So some worked faithfully. The winner was Miss Beatrice Blackwelder. The prize was a $10 ring. The amount she got in her mite box was $12.50.. We wish more had taken interest like Miss Blackwelder and worked.

Rev. Fred Love preached Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All enjoyed his sermon fine.

We want the prayers of all the Herald readers for our church, pastor, and also for ourself. Essie Linker.

Knob Creek Fallston Charge.—Our second quarterly conference met at this church on Saturday before the second Sdnuay in May. Most of the official members were present. This charge elected B. A. Sain and R. L. Lackey as the nominees for delegate to annual conference.

Everything seems to be moving along nicely on this charge. Reports from all the churches were very good, but we still feel the need of pressing forward to greater things.

Memorial services were held at this church the fourth Sunday in May. The floral decoration was beautiful. It showed the love and admiration of those that sleep beneath the sod to await the resurrection morn.

Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, filled his appointment at the 11 o'clock hour. He preached to a very large crowd of attentive hearers. The sermon was one of the best and a very impressive one. We should never forget to remember to God our pastor who so faithfully serves us from time to time and delivers the splendid sermons that we are so eager to hear. May we put forth our efforts to [illegible] for him and for the cause he represents. I trust that each of us will take this as our motto: "I will be as earnest in service for Christ as for self." If we will only put forth the same earnestness and the same devotion into our work for Christ and His church that we always do when working for ourselves, then we may confidently expect great results and so much good will be accomplished. Let us put our whole hearts into His service and carry on. His commands.

"Make one another happy,
It is the Lord's command;
March on with heart concordant,
Toward the promised land;
Share one another's burdens,
Then none will heavy be,
And we shall dwell together
As one blest family.
By ties of love immortal,
Together be ye bound;
To God's eternal glory
Let all your acts redound.
Then till we enter heaven,
Where sadness none shall see,
To make each other happy
A pleasant task 'twill be."

The Passing of Mrs. Lineberry.

Julia Ann Lineberry was born October 28, 1849; died May 27, 1923. Her age was 73 years, seven months and one day. Her husband, one son, one daughter, one grandson and one sister survive her.

In early life she professed faith in Christ and connected herself with Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church. After her marriage she removed her membership to Shady Grove Methodist Protestant church, where she remained a faithful member until her death.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Tabernacle church. A number of other ministers were present and took part in the service. Rev. W. F. Ashburn led the devotional. Very appropriate talks were made by Rev. J. F. McCulloch and Rev. T. M. Johnson. Her body was laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

The writer knew Mrs. Lineberry for only a very short time, but during the short acquaintance formed a high estimate of her Christian character. This seems to have been the way she impressed those who knew her best and longest. In this way she did the only thing in life which is really worth while. In doing this she has obtained all that is worth while in the world to come.

May the blessing of the Father be upon the bereaved husband and children, and may her faith and obedience be an inspiration to all who knew her. J. A. Burgess.

Mrs. Julia Lineberry.

Our hearts were made sad on May 27 by the death of our dear loved member, Julia (Causey) Lineberry.

She was converted early in life and joined Tabernacle church, where she remained a member until her marriage, then she moved her membership to Shady Grove, where she proved to be of great service and help until her death.

Aunt Julia was sick only a short while but suffered intensely. We can not see why she was taken from us, but God, who does all things for the best, knew it was best. The little home circle does not seem quite complete without her, but we all know she has gone to a place much better and we all hope to meet her in that same beautiful home of the beyond.

Vesta Lineberry.

In Memory of Elwander Edwards.

Last Saturday eve, June 9, at 6:30 o'clock, God called from above, to His home, little Elwander Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Late Edwards of Alamance Mills. She was a sweet and an obedient child, and was loved by everyone whom she came in contact with. She will be missed in her home and by her little friends, she being the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards. She suffered a great deal, being sick so short a while. The lovely wreaths of flowers bespoke our love for her. May the Lord's gentle Spirit hover about the parents, friends and relatives, and may they strive to be more faithful and have their lamps trimmed and burning bright when the summons shall come for them. Elwander was at the early age of 17 months.

The funeral was conducted at Friendship church by Rev. G. F. Millaway. She is sleeping in the burying ground with a lily in her hand. How sweet it will be in that beautiful land to meet sweet Elwander again.

A SYRIAC CATECHISM.

It is believed by many that Syriac was the mother tongue of the Lord Jesus, and a Syriac version of the New Testament exists in which are set down Christ's sayings probably in the very words in which many of them were uttered.

The following extracts from an old Syriac Catechism drawn up by Mar Yukhanan, Bishop of the City of Khirta, will show how an old subject may sometimes be presented in a new light.

Q. Who was born and did not die, died but was not born, died but did not corrupt?

A. Enoch, Adam, Lot's wife.

Q. What, fleeing, gave life; returning, brought death?

A. The Red Sea.

Q. Who when he lied saw, but when he spoke the truth became blind?

A. Samson.

Q. Not of us, not from our race, he spoke with us as our fellow?

A. Balaam's ass.

Q. Sickles of fire and reapers of flesh, harvesting all day, but taking no wage?

A. The foxes of Samson.

Q. What when living ate straw, when dead drank blood?

A. The jawbone with which Samson slew the Philistines.—Selected.

HOW HE WAS BOUND.

"I wish I were as free as you are," said Morris to Earl. The two college chums were having a confidential chat one evening. One of them was kept at college under certain very strict conditions. His father would support him there only as he observed the required regulations as to class standing, expenses, athletics, and other matters. The other student had money in his own right, and under no outside restriction. It seemed to Morris that Earl had the most perfect liberty imaginable. "You can do exactly as you please," he said, with a shade of discontent in his tone, and a great deal of envy.

"Well," said Earl in reply to this, "I am free only in a way, you must remember. I am bound, too, as truly as you are, and as strongly, every bit."

"Don't see how," grumbled Morris skeptically.

"You know," said Earl, seriously, and a little sadly, that my father is gone, and that my mother leaves to me the control of my own money; but my father bore an honored name, and wished his son to uphold it. My mother trusts me utterly. Morris, I am honor bound to do right, and to make the very best of myself while I am here, and always. I am not free to please myself. It seems to me that there cannot be a stronger bond than to be honor bound. I should hate myself if I broke through that! and that wouldn't be comfortable, you know, since I have to live with my self always.

Morris looked up quickly. "I hadn't thought of things in that way before!" he exclaimed. "Why, as to that, Earl, I'm honor bound, too."

"I think you are," said the chum, quietly. —Selected.

LITTLE DOG THAT SANG IN THE CHOIR.

Long, long ago in our own country, there lived a little skye terrier that had been taught to do tricks. His funniest trick was to stand on his hind legs and sing. His family were musicians. He was the particular pet of Natalie's grandmother. Natalie, as you may know, is a big girl now and goes to college. When she and her brother were little, they loved to hear this story about their skye terrier that learned to sing.

You see, Natalie's grandmother, to whom the dog belongeed, sang in the church choir. Her mother, who was Natalie's great-grandmother, not only sang in the choir, but was the choir leader.

In those days there were many, many churches without organs. There were many good ministers who thought it was wrong to have organs in churches. The choir leaders then used what were called pitch-pipes to pitch the tunes with. Before the choir began to sing, the choir leader would sound the proper note on the pitch-pipe so the choir would begin to sing on the right key.

Great-grandmother used to sound the note on her pitch-pipe in her church because she was the leader of the choir. It seems that the choir often had rehearsals at great-grandmother's house. Grandmother, who was a school-girl then, without dreaming of being anybody's grandmother, sang soprano in the choir. There was always so much music in their home, with rehearsals and all, that she thought the little skye terrier should learn to sing too.

So she taught him to stand on his hind feet and sing, "Ow-oo-oo-oo wow-ow-ow oo-oo-oo," dog fashion. It was the best he could do.

The dear little old-fashioned children of long ago used to laugh until they almost cried sometimes when they listened to grandmother's little dog sing like that, up and down the scale. It was great fun for every one to see the little dog stand on his hind feet and sing with his little fore paws waving in the air as if he were trying to beat the time.

At home, whenever great-grandmother lifted the pitch-pipe just for fun to sound a note, the little skye terrier was ready to sing and the children were always more than ready to laugh.

In those long-ago days all good folks went to church every Sunday morning rain or shine. Then, as now, small dogs stayed at home. No one dreamed that grandmother's little skye terrier would ever think of such a thing as going to church to sing in the choir. The family of course knew that he would trot along to church if he had a chance because he never liked to be left at home alone. Some one always tried to be sure to shut the little dog in his house when it was church time.

One Sunday morning the family were late in starting for church. Great-grandmother knew that she simply must not be late for services because she was leaders of the choir; so she walked ahead with the others, fast as she could travel, leaving grandmother to lock the doors, shut her pet in his little house and come, later, when she was ready.

Grandmother hurried, but best she could do, she was late that morning. She was so late she would not walk down the long aisle to sit with the choir. Instead, she slid into a pew near the door and was glad she could do it so quietly.

The choir sat on a long, wide platform back of the pulpit, facing the congregation in that old-time church. They were about to begin the singing of a hymn when grandmother entered. Perhaps if it had been prayer time or sermon time or during any other part of the church services, Natalie's pretty grandmother might have noticed her little dog had followed her. She didn't know it though, and was thankful as she could be that she hadn't disturbed the minister and the congregation by coming in so late.

Grandmother had no more than seated herself before the choir rose to sing. It was perfectly still in the church when great-grandmother, dignified as she could be in her Sunday silk and best bonnet, lifted the pitchpipe and sounded the note so the choir could begin singing the hymn in the right key.

The very second that note sounded, some one who shouldn't have been singing in the choir that morning, piped in with a shrill little song, the only song he knew:

"Ow-oo-oo-oo—wow-oo-oo-wow-wow-oo!"

And there was grandmother's little skye terrier, standing on his hind legs on the platform, in front of great-grandmother, waving his fore paws and singing in church!

The children tittered. Little girls and boys immediately had to put their faces in their mothers' laps to keep from laughing aloud. Grown folks tried not to even smile, but some of them turned as red in the face as pretty young grandmother herself, because they tried so hard to keep from bursting with laughter.

Great-grandmother had to pipe two or three times more on the pitch-pipe before the choir could straighten their faces, steady their voices and sing. The good minister, the only one who could not see the little dog, was shocked; but poor great-grandmother was so mortified she longed to sink through the floor.

Now it happens that Natalie's great-grandmother was a gentle woman with perfect manners. She never lost her temper and she never scolded her children as some old-fashioned mothers did, and she had never been the spanking kind. She could spank a child if it were necessary, but usually she just didn't.

Great-grandmother said that at first when the little dog piped in like that, she felt like sinking through to China. The next minute though, when the choir behaved so badly, and nobody looked solemn except probably the minister, and when an usher picked up the little dog and put him out, great-grandmother said afterwards, that then and there, right in church, she felt exactly like spanking somebody—hard!

By the time services were over, great-grandmother felt better and didn't even scold grandmother for unintentionally disgracing the family.

You may be sure though, that the little dog never again had a chance to sing in a church choir.—Frances M. Fox, in Presbyterian Banner.

DIED.

In Loving Memory of Junius Wade Braxton.

Oh how we miss our darling boy!
Yes, miss him everywhere!
Most of all when we gather
At the close of day for prayer.

Yes, we miss him, sadly miss him,
As we see his vacant chair:
Miss his quiet, gentle footsteps,
And his voice so full of cheer.

And his willing hands so helpful
In and out the whole day long,
And his life was, Oh, so useful,
Just a life of one glad song.

Oh, dear June, how we loved you!
But our Father, He knows best,
And we'll meet, yes, we will meet you
In that blessed home of rest.

Meet you at the gate of heaven,
Look into your mild blue eyes,
Beaming with angelic radiance,
Forever safe in paradise.

So farewell, our darling boy,
Who was our earthly pride and joy;
We cannot, Lord, Thy purpose see,
But all is well that's done by thee.
Aunt Harriet.

FAITH AND WORKS.

"What shall I do to be saved?"

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"Lord, I believe; help thou my unbelief."

"Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another."

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

After all obedience is the best commentary on the Bible. Do and you will know.—Theodore Monod.

A GLIMPSE OF HOME.

The boy who has never left home does not know how precious home is. Payne, who wrote "Home, Home, Sweet, Sweet Home," never had a home of his own, and died a stranger in a foreign land.

We know the worth of water when the well is dry, and we know the value of home when deprived of its privileges.

The highest point in Boston is crowned by the State capitol, whose gilded dome can be seen at a great distance. A young Bostonian had crossed the Atlantic and journeyed hither and thither in the old world, visiting famous places, and seeing noted sights. After his return a friend asked him,

"What interested you most of all the things you saw on your journey?"

"The dome of the State-house!" was the traveler's prompt reply.

The sight of one's native shore sends a thrill to the heart, even if the home there has been a place of toil and poverty and privation. Some years ago, crossing the Atlantic, I gazed on the coast of old Ireland for the first time. By my side was an Irishman returning to the land of his nativity.

"There's the old sod, God bliss it," broke from his lips as he scanned the coast of the green isle.

Many a boy has longed to get away from home, and many a boy has soon had a far deeper longing to get back again. He thought if he was away he could do as he liked; but he found when he got on shipboard that he had to obey orders and do what others liked; and it does not take a very long voyage to make a young wanderer so sick of a life on the ocean wave that he will long for home and sometimes dream that he is there.

And when the long voyage is well-nigh over, and the home port heaves in view, how eagerly will the wanderer climb the mast and look out over the blue waters to catch a glimpse of home. The cottage where he was born, the home where mother dwells, the paths he has trodden, and the pleasures he has enjoyed,—all these rise like glad visions before him as but to which he more gladly returns.

Happy is the boy who finds his home as he left it, with no vacant chairs or new-made graves; happier still the boy who returns to his father's house in penitence and faith, and who wakens there a joy which faintly images forth the joy there is in heaven over one sinner that repenteth; and happy, thrice happy, he who returns not only to the arms of his father on earth but also to the embrace of his Father in heaven. O wandering one, will not you thus return?

"Spread for thee the festal board,
See with richest dainties stored:
To thy Father's bosom pressed,
Yet again a child confessed,
Never from his house to roam;
Come and welcome, sinner, come!"

THE PROMISES.

The promises of God are "exceeding great and precious." They are exceedingly great because of the greatness of their Author. They have come from the heart and lips of the Father of mercies. They were prompted by an everlasting love. Omnipotence is pledged to fulfil every one of them. Each one is an expression of the unfailing goodness of the Most High. They cover the entire field of human need.

They are exceedingly precious and valuable, because they pledge such vast and imperishable riches. "The unsearchable riches in Christ," such as forgiveness, sonship, Christlikeness, and immortality, are to be had in their fulness through the promises. The care, protection and guidance of God are also promised. Rich and everlasting rewards of bliss, inheritance, and glory are conveyed through the promises.

The promises are God's chosen means of putting Himself under obligation to a fallen race. There is nothing in man, nor indeed can be, that can possibly entitle him to such consideration from God Almighty. We deserve His eternal wrath instead, on account of our sins and sinfulness. There is nothing that we possibly can do that can put God under the least obligation. When we have done all in our power, we are still unprofitable servants. But it is entirely out of His wonderful love and goodness that God has obligated Himself through the promises.

These precious obligations conveyed by the promises serve to put every rational being also under obligation. This is the obligation to meet the conditions of every proimse by the exercise of humility, penitence, faith, consecration, or faithfulness. This obligation to meet the conditions must always be met before God will meet His obligation to fulfil the promises. "Return unto me, and I will return unto you" is the magna charta of God's gracious dealings with mankind.

There are some promises that are entirely unconditional. Some of these have already been fulfilled. The promise of a Messiah and the provisions of redemption have been fulfilled in the coming, the life, the crucifixion, and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The promise of the Holy Comforter has been fulfilled in the inauguration at Pentecost of the Spirit's administration to "reprove the world of sin, righteousness, and judgment." The The general providences are unconditional promises, which are being fulfilled every day. The sunshine, the showers, and the fruitful seasons are the performances of promises that are mainly unconditional.

The all-wise purpose of the promises is that "ye might become partakers of the divine nature." To substitute the divine nature for the fallen, sinful nature is a wonder and most delightful achievement. The transformation from nature to grace, from death to life, and from sin to holiness is most desirable and indispensable. And all the power of grace necessary to bring this about is pledged in the promises.

The promises are invaluablbe checks upon the Bank of Heaven. The Lord Jesus Christ has subscribed His name to every one of these checks, written with His Own redeeming blood. These checks, or promises, are to be filled out by each petitioner. "What wilt thou that I should do unto you?" is the demand of the Promise-maker. Ask for large blessings. "Expect great things from God; attempt great things for God."—The Word of Life.

POISE.

A business man who buys his paper every day from Jim is going to give him a promising job as soon as Jim is old enough under the law to take it. "I want just that smiling sort of worker," he says, "who doesn't lose his temper in difficulties. He can easily learn the rest of the job, for he has the most important thing already, poise."

"Poise" is a technical word. Jim has probably never even heard of it, but he shows it every day at his post in life. It is going to make a fine man out of him too. "Blessed is he that overcometh." Jim is an overcomer, and a first-class one.—Selected.

A HIGH AMBITION.

A dear companion of mine, for three years a true yoke-fellow in evangelistic work, one extremely cold winter evening, as he joined me in a railway train to take his last journey on earth in the service of his Master, said pleasantly: "I got a good illustration from the man at the gate as I came on to the train. It is very cold, and every one was grumbling, and some abusing him as he made them all get their tickets out and show them before they could get past. I said to him, 'You don't seem to be very popular around here.' 'If I am popular with the man that put me here it is all that I want.' was his reply. Ah,'' said this dear friend, ''if we could go through this world keeping the same thought toward Christ, what a straight path we should make!'' May this be our ambition, the only ambition the gospel enjoins. ''Wherefore also we are ambitious, whether at home or absent, to be well pleasing unto him.''—D. W. Whittle.

FINAL REPORT OF THE MINNIS FUND.

I hope you folks have sung the Doxology. I have several times since last Sunday morning. I felt like a great, big weight had been lifted off my shoulders. Don't believe I'd have felt any more relieved if I'd gotten the money myself.

Sent Treasurer Staley check for $452.47 this morning—Saturday. Also wrote Brother Minnis that his money is on the way. I'll wager he won't talk Hindostanese when he gets the draft—it'll be plain United States. I'd like to be there, wouldn't you, and look on from some secluded place and see his antics? Believe me, he'll lose his ministerial dignity—if he's got any, which I hope he hasn't too much of.

I want to thank you all for responding to this appeal. It's been a little hard to get you to do it. But I'm sure you don't regret having sent your bit. Just a little treasure laid up in heaven. You'll get the principal and the interest after a while. No paltry four or six per cent, I'll assure you. I'm glad of the opportunity to get you to give it. I've enjoyed the task. Got a good deal of fun out of it. Thank you, thank you very much!

The Fund stands as follows:

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev F C Klein, Sec.

A FINE SPIRIT, A GOOD DEED.

A pastor of one of our smallest conferences, the Colorado-Texas, Rev. M. C. Wilson, who receives a very meager salary, read Rev. Dr. C. S. Heininger's appeal for funds to enlarge the Kalgan, China, Boys' School, and wrote, ''I have just read Dr. Heininger's appeal in the Methodist Protestant. I have only $1.06, but I am enclosing one dollar for the China school.'' Another friend of the cause, in response to the appeal sent a contribution, and Rev. Dr. T. R. Woodford, doing such a splendid work in Pine Ridge, Ky., among the mountain people, sent a very generous gift to be credited to Pine Ridge, and expects also to make an offering for the work on Children's Day.

These and others are special gifts, not to count on the budget, and will be directly applied to the purpose for which contributed.

But the Nagoya College need is most pressing. The enrollment has steadily progressed to fullest possible capacity, and from two to five hundred turned away for lack of room each year. Last year, ending in March, when 100 graduated, 37 of whom were Christians, 845 were enrolled. The new year opened in April with 1018 male students enrolled. There have been 742 graduates in the last seventeen years.

The standing and influence of the institution are pronouncedly Christian, and its work is extending far and wide, and becoming more and more appreciated.

The students and friends are contributing, as announced, a fund of U. S. $25,000 of Yen 50,000 for improvements to the school, and already the East wing to the main building has been built, and now occupied, at a cost of $12,500, contributed by the Japanese.

But the Board of Foreign Missions is not able to fulfil its part of the agreement, for it has not the funds to build the greatly needed church to minister in spiritual things to that great body of students , and the surrounding community, nor for the Science Hall long delayed.

Special gifts for the church will be greatly appreciated, and by not counting on the budget every cent would be applied to the church.

But we look expectantly to the Sunday schools, and to our people generally through that avenue, for large offerings which will count on the local church's budget.

The Children's Day offering for the year ending May 1, 1923, were just a little over $800 more than the offerings for the year ending May 1, 1922, but the total receipts for the year just closed was over $11,000 less than the year before.. You can see that the work cannot be sustained under those conditions, and the board was forced to sell the larger part of its Liberty Bonds, held in reserve fund, to pay regular expenses, and the work in all departments is conducted as economically as possible.

The Board is in honor bound to provide that church at Nagoya College and that Science Hall, but it cannot do it unelss the Sunday schools and our people generally put forth extra efforts to raise the largest possible Children's Day offering, and make special gifts for this one purpose. We depend on you to help.

Not Too Late Yet.

Send your order for Children's Day supplies to Rev. Fred. C. Klein, 316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. They will not cost you a penny. Arrange to hold a service, and thus help your church raise its budget, and help to keep up our great missionary work in Japan, China and India.

Fred. C. Klein.

THE ACORN CHAIR.

Baby was sitting in her little new oak chair she had gotten for her birthday.

''When that little chair was an acorn it never, never would have dreamed that some day a little red-headed girl would sit in it,'' I said to her.

Baby's eyes popped open.

''An acorn! My chair an acorn?'' She looked at me and laughed, for, you see, she thought it was a joke.

''Yes; that chair was an acorn once,'' I repeated, ''and I'll just give you a history of that chair's life, for it has lived a long, long time, though not always as a chair, it is true.

''One day an acorn fell from an oak tree to the ground, and was buried under some leaves, and bless you, it took root!

''Then it did just like it was a seed, and it began to grow and grow and grow, till it was a tree.

''A great big oak tree it was then, not an acorn any longer, and it had taken a great many years, too, to grow to be such a tree.

''It was such a fine tree, some men admired it one day and what do you think they did?''

Baby shook her head.

''Why, they cut it down and hauled it off to a saw mill. Then this tree was cut up or sawed into lumber.

''So you see, it wasn't a tree any longer, but now it was lumber, and it was shipped to a factory.

''Then at this factory it was cut and sawed and hammered and glued, till it wasn't lumber any more, but a dear, comfortable little chair!

''It took yet another trip, and was sent to the store here, where your father bought it for you, and here you sit in it!''

''My! all the names and trips this chair had before it was a chair!'' said Baby. Then she laughed and added, ''And I am in an acorn!''

''Yes, and you are sitting up in a tree,'' I said, ''and then you are sitting on some lumber, and yet all the while you are in a dear liitle oak chair!''—Child's Hour.

A BAD RECOMMENDATION.

The gentleman looked at him a little and then said: ''I could easily give you a situation here, but you carry in your mouth a very bad recommendation about with you.''

''I never saw any harm in smoking,'' the young man said, ''almost everybody smokes.''

''My young friend,'' the old gentleman answered, ''I am sorry that I must tell you I

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Our Children's Day service was held last night and pronounced a decided success. The children did unusually well, directed and trained by Mrs. Vivian Cook, Mrs. Rome Hutchens and Mrs. J. W. Montgomery. Collection amounted to about $22.

Tonight (Monday) our Christian Endeavorers, with the First Church C. E.'s, expect to serve lunch at the College for all the eastern delegates who are stopping in Greensboro enroute to Weaverville. Miss Ida Guyer, of our society, goes to Weaverville. She is on the entertainment committee at the College tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thacker are quite proud of their new daughter, Lily Gene, who arrived recently.

Dale Montgomery and Avery Cook have returned home after spending a few pleasant days in the southern part of the state.

We are glad to report that Mrs. W. B Hutchens is improving after an illness of several weeks. Reporter.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—We are having a great revival of religion here in the old tent. There have been four reclaimed and about eight converts. Now, in my opinion, a tent meeting is no hindering cause to the saving of precious souls. The proof of the pudding is in eating it. They are coming from Denton, Thomasville, Lexington, Piney Grove and Handy, etc., to help in this great work, and our congregation keeps on increasing. It was said by some at the tent last night that there were over 600 people here last night. Brother Riddle is delivering some powerful Holy Ghost sermons and that is what it takes to reach the sinner.. So let everybody come and help your "bit" in the great work, as every one has his part to do. We have had four other ministers to come to our assistanace. Come on, brethren, and fill your mission that God has given you, for union is strength. Sorry that Brother Riddle has not been so well physically, but the power of God can restore that, and he can be made to deliver the message that will cause men and women to see their lost and ruined condition. So pray for us, brethren, for if there ever was a time that we need power from God and man, it is now, and man can do nothing without God.

The third quarterly conference convened at Jerusalem last Saturday; a small attendance, but it was interesting to the faithful few that have to bear the burden. "Must Jesus bear the cross alone, and all the world go free? No, there is a cross for every one and there is a cross for me." Mr. Sam Delk was elected delegate to the annual conference and Mr. Robert Hunt alternate. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Delk are just recovering from a case of measles.

Of course, as usual, some of the places have not yet quite come up. Cid has gone over her quota, Jerusalem about out and there were only three churches represented. The fourth quarterly conference comes to Cid on Saturday before the third Sunday in October. So now let us all pull our very best and pay up soon as possible and not let our minister become discouraged, as I believe he is doing his best, and that good wife is so faithful as organist, and in other work also. So pray that we may overcome many of the wicked. Yours in the Master's work, Reporter.

Bess Chapel.—Our reporter seems to be very busy doing something (not reporting to the church paper) but then we all neglect things sometimes.

We are still living at Bess Chapel, our Sunday school is growing: we have the largest enrollment now that has been since the writer has been with these good people and the attendance is very good. Attendance at church services every Sunday is very good. Financially we are behind last year but otherwise we are having a far betteer year to date than we had for the same period last year, which is encouraging, to say the least.

Yesterday, June 10, was a red letter day for Bess Chapel: we had our memorial services yesterday morning and a community singing in the afternoon; dinner on the grounds (which was a large feature of the day). It was all fine: it would be hard to say which was best. At ten o'clock we had Sunday school, at 11 o'clock a song service; scripture lesson from the 51st Psalm; this was followed by a splendid memorial address by Prof. L. Berge Beam of Crouse community, superintendent of public schools, which was a masterpiece and thoroughly enjoyed by all who could hear it (for the church would not hold near all of the people present). After the address there was a short song and prayer service in the cemetery and the graves were decorated with some of the most beaautiful flowers ever seen.

We had visitors from Newton, Hickory, Marion, Maiden, Lincolnton, Crouse, Cherryville, Gastonia, Bessemer City, Waco, Shelby, and Fallston. We had the services well advertised and invited some of our sister churches and denominations to be with us and they came. Everybody enjoyed the day and such a feeling of fellowship and good feeling as was shown by the mingling of old friends who had not met for years. Such meetings as this was do one's heart good to see and be in.

On next Saturday night our Christian Endeavor society will give an ice-cream supper at the parsonage, the proceeds to be used in repairing the church; our young people are planning to paint the church inside, stain the floor and paint the seats, and put carpet on the aisles, also to buy another lamp for the church. The young people are to be commended for the work that they have undertaken: you know, brethren, it does the pastor's heart good to have such a fine bunch of young people to work with.

Our special meeting will begin the first Sunday in August. Brother Curry of Charlotte will be with us during the meeting. Pray for us that we may have a gracious revival at this time.

Brother H. O. Proctor and son, also Brother N. L. Rabb and family, were with us yesterday; we were glad to have them and hope that they will come again.

After dinner yesterday we all met in the church and sang all the afternoon, some of the finest singing it has ever been my pleasure to listen to. We have a community singing with two other churches (Bethlehem and Zion) every two weeks; that gives each the singing every six weeks and yesterday was the regular time for singing at Chapel. Wish you could all have been with us for the day.

No more for this time, for this might land in the waste basket, for the editor will want some room for the news. E. G. Cowan,
Pastor.

Cherryville, N. C., R. 3.

Shiloh, Randolph Charge.—A convention, or rally, of Tabernacle, Chatham, Siler City and Randolph charges was held at our church May 26 and 27. A large number of representatives were present from all charges. Rev. Lawrence Little and Rev. A. G. Dixon were the main speakers for the rally. They discussed the need of church organization, need of a Methodist Prortestant College, Christian Endeavor work. We feel like their work here has been of great success.

At 6:30 o'clock Sunday evening, May 27, the Christian Endeavor of Mt. Pleasant held its meeting with us. An interesting program was rendered. This class is doing a great work.

Mr. Little helped to organize a society here at our church. The following officers were elected for a term expiring August 12: President, Glady Pickett; secretary, Margaret Pickett; social committee—Hester Paterson, Mrs. A. L. Kime, Alma Glasgow; lookout committee—Grace Garrett, Margaret Pickett, Ethel Glasgow; prayer meeting committee—Floyd R. Garrett, Pauline Whitaker, Mary Freeman; missionary committee, Ethel Stout, Beulah Freeman.

During the convention, a drive or campaign was on to raise the quota of our church. There has been enough subscribed to put our church over the top.

Our Sunday school is proud of the curtains which have recently been added to our church. They are a great help where there are not Sunday school rooms. The church, too, looks much better since it has been painted. We had Sunday school the first Sunday, but on account of the measles our attendance was not as large as before.

On Saturday evening and night, June 9, the Ever Ready and Senior classes gave a lawn party at Julian. The proceeds are to go for the benefit of our church.

Our school opened yesterday at ten o'clock with a better attendance. At 11 o'clock Rev. W. F. Ashburn, our pastor, filled his regular appointment, preaching a forceful sermon from Psalm 137:1.

We are planning to render a Children's Day program the second Sunday in July, which is only four weeks before our special meeting. Reporter.

Mebane.—Since writing last a number of good things have passed our way or come to us. Of material improvements, the staining of the church floor and the adding of class rooms by curtain for Sunday school work may be mentioned, also a 'phone in the parsonage, ordered by the quarterly conference.

An address on Christian education by Prof. J. Albert Holmes at the Sunday evening preaching hour and a get-together and college-booster meeting of the members in the chamber of commerce hall both created additional college sentiment. The get-together meeting was addressed by Rev. R. M. Andrews and by Messrs. D. A. Neese and C. B. Amick of Burlington. The splendid refreshments furnished and served by Messrs. C. O. Pickard and D. M. Qualls and the Junior Philathea class added to the pleasantness and profit of the occasion. The pledges to the College made on the following Sunday brings the church within sight of the goal. The local committee will finish the canvass and put us over the top.

A report from delegates to the Greensboro missionary conference and also from the more recent Pine Ridge convention tend to quicken our interest in the greatest cause, missions. Interest in this subject is to be deepened by a monthly study of missions proposed by the Baraca class, to be planned and conducted jointly by that class and the women's missionary societies of our church.

Perhaps the one most powerful working agency in our midst for the length of time was the four weeks' big tent meeting conducted by Evangelist R. F. McLendon. As one result 25 have joined our church and four others yet to join, mostly men and women, some boys and girls. The revival in the churches and the reclaiming of backsliders in considerable numbers is also a matter of no small importance. T. M. Johnson.

Greensville Circuit.—Since our last report we have held all services at Philadelphia, Hobbs and Matthews Chapel. Brother M. P. Chambliss assisted in all these services. At Hobbs the Sunday school children, under the splendid leadership of Miss Dora Pair, rendered a good program in memory of father and mother.

We are not over the top yet with our College pledges, but "we are going that way." Hobbs church and Sunday school has accepted to pay $300 to the College in three years at the rate of $100 a year. This is $300 above what has already been pledged. We will have others to report soon.

Greensville circuit has three girls who have just graduated from high school: Miss Ila Chambliss from Roanoke Rapids, N. C., Miss Indie Branscomb from Emporia high school, and Miss Irene Allen from Ebony high school. Miss Chambliss is expecting to go on to college. Sorry our College at High Point will not be ready for her.

Our third quarterly conference will meet at the parsonage on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in June. Not only are the church officials invited, but we are inviting the Sunday schools and the community to attend this conference. For dinner we are going to have a fish fry and Brother J. H. Chambliss is going to cook a fish muddle. Come on and be with us June 23.

We want to thank Brother James B. Norwood for a fine ham, Brother H. J. Butler for cabbage, Sister Rosa Butler for soap and flavoring, and Brother Atwell Phillips for a chicken. Thank you all.

James H. Trollinger, Pastor.

First Church, Thomasville.—The reporter for the Thomasville church and Sunday school has conferred upon me the honor of reporting for this week's issue of the Herald. The writer and family moved into Thomasville one month ago and have found a most pleasant, clever and congenial people among the congregation of the Thomasville church. Pastor Troxler is a good preacher, an excellent leader and a sympathetic pastor.

The past Sunday was a good day for the church and Sunday school. There were 227 in the Sunday school. Music is an interesting feature of the Sunday school. An orchestra, composed of a number of the young men and young women of the Sunday school, renders some good music each Sunday. The Sunday school has a strong Baraca class, with about 75 on roll. There were 41 present last Sunday. They have had a contest running for several weeks, the class being divided into two groups, known as "Reds" and "Blues." Each group is running close in the contest.

In the morning church service Pastor Troxler delivered a fine sermon from the texts, Heb. 2:4; 1 Peter 4:10; 1 Peter 1:6. The sermon dealt with the manifold temptations of life and the manifold blessings of God. He discussed (1) temptations, (2) grace, (3) the Holy Spirit. Discussing temptations, the preacher said that people are changeable; they see differently; their thoughts change; their wishes change; their feelings reach out and yearn for something in the future, the one thing needful—God. He spoke of the depressing experiences of life and the temptations that come to the Christian in different forms. Speaking of the grace of God, the pastor declared that the manifold grace was in the heart of God, who, after creating the world and man, looked down upon His creation and saw the wickedness that the people had fallen into, repented that He had created man. Jesus Christ came into the world as the Saviour, which was the result of the grace of God. Brother Troxler is an interesting preacher, and his sermons are delivered in a conversational tone, plain and understood by his hearers.

A very interesting and helpful service was held by the Christian Endeavor society at seven o'clock. They decided to attend the meeting of delegates to the Weaverville Summer Conference, held at the College in High Point.. Three delegates will go from the Thomasville Christian Endeavor and Sunday school to the Weaverville conference. The pastor will also attend a part of the conference.

The Children's Day service was held in the church Sunday night. The boys and girls of the Sunday school rendered a splendid program of songs and recitations and special exercises. The orchestra furnished several selections of music preceding the program by the children. The entire program was an excellent one, and the children performed their part in an excellent manner. They had been trained by Mrs. J. W. Boyles, who is one of the best workers in the Thomasville church. The offering was taken for the Board of Foreign Missions. This writer did not learn the amount of the offering, but we think it was a very large one.

A singing class has been in progress in the church for the past two weks. Joseph Bryant, a singing master, is teaching the young people and some older ones in the art of vocal music. The class meets on Monday and Thursday nights, and will continue for two or three weeks.

The pastor will be absent from his pulpit for the next two Sundays. No announcement was made Sunday as to the services for the next two Sundays. C. B. Way.

Weaverville Charge, Clarke's Chapel.—One of our members, Harry Swain Webster, recently graduated from N. C. State College, Raleigh. Brother Webster represented his class in Business Administration as class orator, with an oration entitled, "Opportunity for Business Leadership in North Carolina."

Immediately after graduating he, accompanied by his sister, Miss Elinor Webster, visited places of interest in Eastern Carolina, such as Fayetteville, Wilmington and Wrightsville Beach; after arriving home, he immediately left for Dayton, Ohio, where he has accepted a position with the National Cash Register Company. We wish him success in his new position. B. M. Williams.

Fairgrove, Haw River Circuit.—Since my last report, we have been progressing nicely with our Sunday school and church work. Our church services are increasing in interest and attendance.

Yesterday was another good day for the people of Fairgrove church. Brother Lowdermilk preached to an unusually large congregation. He made very clear to us that to be children of God we must be ready and willing to serve Him at any time, even though we are not called on first, for, as we realize, each of us cannot be first. After the sermon the Lord's supper was administered; a goodly number partook of this.

Preparations are being made at this place for Children's Day. As yet the date is undecided.

We were very glad to have with us yesterday some of the people from neighbor churches; come again. Best wishes to the Herald and readers. Ethel Richardson.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—We are moving along nicely. Sunday school is moving along successfully under the leadership of our faithful superintendent, L. R. Dixon.

Nadine Harris has gone from this place to the young people's convention; wish more of our young people could have gone.

Brother Lowdermilk was with us Sunday and preached a splendid sermon, his subject being "Work." He showed very plainly that there is a work for every Christian to do. The congregation was good. Among the visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Cornwell from Jamestown.

A good number of our people attended the John E. Brown meeting at Reidsville. His preaching was good and inspiring, and we hope that all who attended are stronger in faith and more able to do the work that our pastor spoke of Sunday. Pray for us that we may do a greater work for our Master.

Mrs. G. W. Apple, Reporter.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

BLACK TOM'S STRANGE EXPERIENCES.

Five sleek, handsome cats sat sunning themselves in a grassy tangle between Farmer White's barn and the house. Their toilets were made, their dinners were eaten, and now they had nothing to do for the rest of the afternoon but gossip about their families and their neighbors.

Said Fuzzy Gray Tail: "Whatever do you suppose has become of Black Tom? He hasn't been over to see us all this week. I'm afraid something has happened to him."

"Oh, you're always afraid something has happened to somebody, Fuzzy," said Yellow Cat. "I should think you'd grow thin worrying so much. Look down the driveway. There comes Black Tom now, and I can't see but that he looks as well as he ever did."

"Well, he'll have something to tell us today, I'm sure," answered Fuzzy with a wave of her beautiful tail.

When Black Tom came up to where his friends were sitting he was greeted most cordially, for he was a great favorite, and a place was immediately made for him in the center of the little group. Hardly had he settled himself when the five curious cats began: "Well, Black Tom, where have you been all the week? We've missed you a whole lot."

And Black Tom answered sadly: "And I've missed you too. Oh, I've had an awful experience, and I thought more than once that I was never going to see you again."

"Oh, why not? Tell us about it," chorused the five cats, and they pricked up their ears at the prospect of hearing something exciting For Black Tom was always having strange adventures, and moreover, he had a very fine way of telling about them.

"Well, last Friday my mistress gave me some extra nice fish for my dinner, and I liked it so much I couldn't seem to eat it fast enough."

"What kind was it?" asked Bill Bailey eagerly.

"I don't know—but I never want any more again, for it had bones in it—the worst I've ever seen—and before I knew it, I got one down my throat."

"Oh, how awful! Couldn't you get it out?" And Tabby Ann was all pity and sympathy.

"I tried and tried. I coughed and sneezed and did everything I've ever done before, but it was no use; it only got worse and worse, and I felt more miserable every minute. I tried all the afternoon to tell my mistress, but of course I couldn't make her understand."

"Couldn't she see that something was the matter?" asked Fuzzy Gray Tail.

"Yes—and she and all the rest of the family tried to find out what it was. They tried to make me take one thing after another, but I just couldn't swallow anything. So, after a while, when they saw I couldn't, they let me alone and I lay down back of the kitchen stove, the most miserable cat you ever saw.

"Well, all that evening I could hear the family talking in the living-room, and I felt sure it was about me, for every little while one of them would come out and look at me and then when they went back there would be more talking. It was the longest evening I ever remember."

"But couldn't you get to sleep and forget all about it?" asked Tiger Cat.

"Not much that night, I can tell you, and perhaps I wasn't glad when morning came and I saw my mistress again."

"Did you feel better then?" asked Tabby Ann.

"No, worse; but I was thankful to see some one again. It was so lonesome after they went to bed and left me crying to myself.

"But my mistress was in such a hurry I knew something unusual was going to happen soon, and by the way she kept looking at me and talking, I felt sure it was going to happen to me. I didn't care what it was if it would only make me feel better, and whenever I looked at her I tried to tell her so.

"Well, right after breakfast she put me in a big market basket and tied the cover down tight, and in a few minutes we were in a wagon rattling over the rough roads. Oh, how I ached and wanted to die—yes, I did!

"After a while we stopped, and my mistress got out and carried me into something else that moved faster than the wagon, and we rode and rode until I thought we'd never stop."

"Oh, that must have been a train," said Bill Bailey wisely. "I travel on one every time my mistress goes to the city to visit her sister. It's very nice after you get used to it."

"Well, I hope I'll never get used to it. Once is enough for me. And I don't believe you'd like it if you were as sick as I was."

"But what happened after you rode on the train?" continued Bill, curiously.

"When we finally did stop riding on the train, as you call it, we got into something else and rode again, and we bumped and jerked even worse than in the market wagon until I thought I should die."

"Oh, that was a taxi probably," said Bill. "I've been in those too."

"Well, finally we stopped riding and went in somewhere, and after a long wait my mistress began talking excitedly with a man. Pretty soon she took the cover off the basket and lifted me into the man's arms.

"I didn't like his looks at all and tried to scratch, but I couldn't I was so weak. And I could hardly make a sound when he opened my mouth and stuck something shiny down my throat. I heard him say, 'Yes, there's a bone there, but we can get it out all right if he isn't too far gone.'

"Then he took me over to a table and asked my mistress to hold me there a minute while he went into the other room for the chloroform. I don't know what that is, but when he came back he put a damp handkerchief over my face and I went right to sleep and didn't wake up for a lone time.

"When I did, that bone was gone out of my throat. But oh, how it ached and how sick I felt! And weak—wh—I've never been like it before. But happy! My! how happy I was, for I knew if the bone was out I could swallow and I would be all right pretty soon."

"But how did he get the bone out?" asked Tabby Ann.

"I don't know," answered Black Tom. "I suppose he cut it out with some sharp-looking things I saw on the table. From what I heard, I think he was a doctor and my mistress had taken me to a hospital."

"But I thought hospitals were only for people, not cats," said Yellow Cat.

"Well perhaps this one was for people and cats too. Anyway, he fixed me all right, and by late afternoon I was feeling so much better that my mistress put me into the basket again and we started for home."

"And were you all well then?" asked Tabby Ann.

"Oh, no, I couldn't eat anything for a day or two, and my throat is a little tender now if I put anything hard in it. But I'm feeling stronger, and I'm so thankful to be alive that I don't know what to do. But you'd better believe I'll not touch any fish for a long time."

"But all fish hasn't bones like that," interrupted Fuzzy Gray Tail.

"Never mind—the very smell of fish will bring back the whole thing, and I want to forget it as soon as I can. Now tell me what you've been doing since I've been away. My throat is tired, and somebody else can do the talking for a while."

"Let's see the place where the bone was," said the ever curious Tabby Ann.

"Well, I guess you can't see much now—not so much as I can feel, anyway. And my mouth is still too sore to open wide enough. You'll have to take my word for it, Tabby Ann, and don't let your curiosity run away with you when you smell fish."

"Never mind Tabby Ann, Black Tom," said Bill Bailey, "we've got something to show you. Farmer White has just filled the barn loft with fresh hay, and it's the best stuff to snuggle in and we caught three mice sneaking through it last nice. Come on, everybody."

And Mrs. Farmer White, glancing up from her work in the kitchen through the open window, wondered why all the cats suddenly started up out of the grass and streaked off in a long line to disappear quickly through the barn door.—Gertrude Fisher Scott, in Zion's Herald.

MOTHER'S COMFORT.

I know a little girlie,
With loving eyes so blue,
And lips just made for smiling,
And heart that's kind and true.
She wears no dainty dresses,
No jewels does she own;
But the greatest of all her treasures
Is her little self alone.

Her name is "Mother's Comfort,"
For all the livelong day
Her busy little fingers
Help mother's cares away.
The sunshine loves to glisten
And hide in her soft hair,
And dimples chase each other
About her cheeks so fair.

Oh, this darling little girlie,
With the diamond in her eyes,
Makes in mother's heart a sunshine
Better far than floods the skies;
But the name that suits her better,
And makes her glad eyes shine,
Is the name of "Mother's Comfort,"
This little treasure mine.

—Dr. Jas. K. Stockard was buried in Greensboro last Sunday afternoon. He had an eventful life in the course of which he made many friends. Many paid tribute to his memory by their presence at his funeral, which was conducted by Rev. R. Murphy Williams, pastor of the Church of the Covenant.

—Dr. T. H. Lewis completed his series of sermons on Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress last Sunday night in a discourse on The Pilgrim at Home. The value of his discourse we would say lies chiefly in his replacement of fancy or imagination with reason in our thoughts about the great subjects treated. The religious life when true to the purpose of God is a reasonable thing, a truly natural thing, and Dr. Lewis sees it so and helps his hearers to see it so. Heaven is the natural goal of the spirit that in faith and love follows the lead of the Spirit of God.

—Mrs. A. S. Renn, one of Henderson's most prominent women, died in St. Elizabeth Hospital, Richmond, Va., last Sunday morning. The funeral was in Henderson on Monday afternoon conducted by Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

—The world has advanced some since the Egyptian ruler Tutankhamen was buried with his collection of furnishings 3,500 years ago. His articles of furniture were artistic, but they were hand-made at a great expense of time and labor. Today labor-saving machinery makes it possible for the poor man to have in his home articles equal to those used by the Egyptian monarch in the time of Moses.

—Sarah Bernhardt, the famous actress, is dead.

—Rev. T. E. Pierce, pastor, and Rev. J. L. Trollinger, singer, are conducting revival services at St. Paul this week with good attendance.

—Rev. W. F. Ashburn reports the death of Mrs. Henderson, of Julian, in Long's Hospital. She leaves husband and several children.

—We are indebted to Mrs. A. L. Moore, of Spencer, N. C., for the copy of "Resurrected Songs," from which we reprint the two old songs asked for last week. This book is published by J. B. Vaughan, Athens, Ga.

—The General Federation of Women's Clubs meets in Atlanta, Ga., May 7 to 11. The most important question which could come before these important women is the question of preserving and enforcing prohibition.

—The Pennsylvania Legislature has passed a prohibition enforcement bill in accordance with Governor Pinchot's policy of good faith toward the prohibition law.

—Every prize fight is simply a case of assault and battery, for viewing which an admission is charged. There is no more reason for prohibiting a vicious and brutal fight in the streets than there is for prohibiting it in a public arena.—Quoted.

—The Treasury stands ready to redeem at any time, at the option of the holder, any uncalled Victory Notes maturing May 20, 1923, at par and accrued interest to the date of optional redemption. These Notes are now outstanding in the amount of about $820,000,000 and bear the distinguishing letters G, H, I, J, K, or L prefixed to their serial numbers. The Notes may be presented to any Federal Reserve Bank or Branch, or to the Treasury Department, Washington, and Banks and Trust Companies generally will handle the transactions for their customers.

—The Treasury again reminds holders of called Victory Notes, bearing the distinguishing letters A, B, C, D, E, or F prefixed to their serial numbers, that interest on such Notes ceased absolutely on December 15, 1922, in accordance with the terms of the call for redemption. There are still about $80,000,000 of called Notes outstanding which have not yet been presented for redemption, and on this amount in the aggregate, holders are losing interest at the rate of about $10,000 a day, or over $1,000,000 since December 15, 1922 Holders of called Notes are urged to present them for redemption without further delay, to any Federal Reserve Bank or Branch, or to the Treasury Department at Washington, utilizing so far as possible the services of their own Banks and Trust Companies.

SHAKING THE TOP BRANCHES.

Federal Judge Winslow of New York took the right view of that society bootlegging case.

An aristocratic firm, with the super-aristocratic name of La Montagne, whose members were the pets of polo crowds and exclusive clubs and "the dansantes," was engaged in a social service for the Four Hundred. It supplied the choicest of wines and liquors to "the best people"—of course at the very, very, best prices.

In the palmiest days of the historic La Montagne wine establishment, the firm had never made such profits out of the legitimate wholesale trade—if such a trade could be called legitimate.

The thing was so notorious that the Federal officials got wind of it and they descended like an avenging angel in the night on the establishment of the La Montagnes and dragged them off to prison—with the evidence.

The case was brought before Federal Judge Winslow and the proof was so complete and circumstantial that the La Montagnes, three brothers, pleaded guilty. The high society lawyers were there in force, pleading with the judge that, because of the social station of the La Montagnes, leniency ought to be extended. And Judge Winslow treated that kind of insolence as it deserved. He sentenced them to jail and whacked on a good substantial fine.

No more illuminating case has come before the public eye. These were called sportsmen. They were cheap sports indeed. They were called social leaders. What must a society be which is led by bootleggers! They and their associates assumed that the Federal judge would be overawed by the social eminence of the criminals. And he put these socially elite exactly where they belonged for their crime, in prison cells along with thieves and thugs and murderers.

The law has a long arm and can be made by conscientious judges to pluck the fruit from the topmost limbs of the bootleg tree as well as from the lower branches.—The Christian Statesman.

—Louis Brooks has bought an interest in the paper published for his high school. He and his fellow-manager are putting out a neat and newsy sheet.

—The Lausanne conference between the Turks and the allies which was ended without agreement is to be followed by another conference. Let us hope for a just agreement.

—Lenine, the Russian premier, continues very ill.

—The Carolina and Yadkin Valley railroad is to be sold again at public auction on April 10. An offer of $125,000 will be made by business men of High Point, Thomasville and Denton.

JESUS RECEIVING LITTLE CHILDREN.

Dr. Lewis visited Palestine some years ago and saw a sight that recalled to his mind the occasion when Jesus received little children over the protest of his disciples. What the doctor saw was this: At a place where his party stopped for rest, a throng of little children, ragged and dirty, kept pressing about them, eager to look into everything. The guide, a native of that part of the world, had a long whip which he used to drive the children away. Dr. Lewis thinks these neglected children are like those that Jesus took up in his arms and blessed.

CHURCH UNION, LOCALLY.

By Rev. L. K. Long.

The small town and the open country have furnished the field in which sectarian bigotry and division have done their most disastrous work.

In the large cities population is sufficiently dense to require many churches within a comparatively small area, and it is not quite so serious a matter that they are denominational churches—they more or less supplement each other.

The united church is a necessity in the rural regions if anything like an adequate religious program is to be conceived and carried on—and the final decision as to what form the church shall take rests with the people of the community. However desirable and helpful it may be to have the counsel and approval of the authorities higher up, religious self-determination is the right and responsibility of the folks who live in a place.

The most assuring thing in the outlook for Christian union is the increasing number of ministers and laymen in all the denominations who are becoming thoroughly community-minded. They think and plan in terms of the community rather than the denomination. If the fences were entirely removed they would mingle freely and with the greatest satisfaction—holding no prejudices against anyone because of his present or previous denominational affiliations..

In line with the growing conviction that the Christians of a community are entirely competent to enter into such a church organization as may seem to them fitting under the circumstances, many readjustments have been made and other communities are on the verge of organization.

I will now give several of the ways in which church union is being achieved locally—characterizing, also, the results:—

1. By Simple Absorption. The stronger church swallows the weaker one. If any haste or violence is required in the swallowing a serious case of indigestion with possible violent unscrambling will follow. But if the larger church becomes broad-minded and treats the constituency of the smaller organization with Christian consideration a strong and effective community church will be the result.

2. The Union Church. Dropping all denominational names and connections the churches of a community organize a union church without any denominational affiliation. This sometimes works well. But there is a serious weakness in the lack of supervision, uncertainty of pastoral supply and lack of adequate development and expression of missionary interest.

3. The Federated Church. Two or more churches, while maintaining intact their separate organizations, unite for worship—using one building or each in turn. The pastor is called or appointed according to an agreement. Separate treasuries for local and missionary funds are maintained. This has proved a good step in many communities, but is usually looked upon as only a temporary arrangement. The tendency is to dissolve the federation or to go into some form of real union.

4. The Denominational Community Church. Two or more churches agree to become one. But, appreciating the need for fellowship and organic connection with missionary and educational enterprises of the church at large they connect themselves with a denomination to which one of the parties to the union already belongs. This gives the church a home and a source from which a regular supply of ministers may be drawn. It is important in such a union that the resultant church be broad-minded and that the denomination with which it becomes connected recognize the miscellaneous character of its members and treat them with becoming brotherliness.

5. The Affiliated Community Church. This is much the same as the type just described. The difference is that what I call the affiliated community church chooses to identify itself with a denomination not represented by any one of the churches comprising the union. When churches attempt to get together it is sometimes found that prejudices against local denominational names have been increased by the real or fancied unfairness which the community has suffered from the general officers of those denominations. This feeling is not likely to exist with reference to a denomination not represented in the community and all may readily agree to affiliate with it. All start out on an even footing in the new organization and learn the new ways together. In this case, also, it is of prime importance that the pastor be a community man, that the church broaden and sweeten its spirit, and that the denomination with which it is affiliated manifest always a fine reasonableness in its relations with this new church and in all the work of the kingdom.

6. I have written elsewhere at some length concerning still another possible arrangement. The churches of a large town combine. They erect a modern edifice of adequate size and equip it with up-to-date appliances. An elaborate program of Sunday services, week-day activities and community service is carried on with a full corps of trained workers and the co-operation of many volunteers. Intelligent interest in state, national and world affairs is fostered. They make large contributions to home and foreign missions, sending the money where they are sure it will not be applied to promote sectarian divisions. From among the ministers of like disposition with themselves they have no difficulty in securing pastors. For fellowship they send delegates to any of the local associations, conferences and conventions willing to receive them—not being under the authority of any. Not having to guard the flock against the enticements of neighboring shepherds the pastors devote all their energies to feeding the sheep, the sheeplings and the lambs, and to bringing back those that wander.

Each community or group of churches desiring to come together will choose from the plans I have here suggested, or from others that may be conceived, the method that seems best adapted to its own situation. If the people will magnify inclusiveness and minimize the exclusive spirit, and show always abounding love, all will be well. Humanly speaking, the success of the enterprise will depend upon the ministers and laymen who have already attained community-mindedness.

(The final contribution in this series will follow soon.)

BIEDERWOLF AND RODEHEAVER IN EVANGELISTIC TOUR OF WORLD.

Immediately at the close of the great Bible Conference at Winona Lake of which Evangelist W. E. Biederwolf is director and Homer Rodeheaver the leader of the music, these two men with a small company of helpers will start for the Orient in answer to an invitation from many of the larger cities and towns to hold evangelistic meetings. Mr. Chas. Gabriel, the noted hymn writer, will accompany the party, as will also Miss Grace Saxe, who for many years has had charge of the Bible work in the meetings conducted by Billy Sunday with whom also Mr. Rodeheaver has been associated for now more than twelve years. Mr. Joe Rodeheaver will take management of the entire tour, and a few friends will accompany the party although without official connection with it.

The first stop will be at Honolulu and from there the trip will continue to Japan, Korea, China, Siam, Burma, India and Australia. The music is being put into such shape that Mr. Rodeheaver can sing the songs in the language of the natives in each country. Dr. Biederwolf will of course speak through an interpreter.

It will be a rare privilege for the people of these lands to benefit by the ministry of these two highly successful evangelists. The invitation to these men is the result of a recent mission on the part of Evangelist Biederwolf to these lands from which he has but a short time ago returned. Everywhere he reported a great response to his message both by the students of the universities and the people in general. Special conferences will be held for the missionaries. Miss Saxe will speak and teach especially at these conferences.

The party will also represent the Family Altar League, the headquarters of which are in Chicago, establishing branches of this work in the countries the party is to visit. Dr. Biederwolf is just closing one of his most successful evangelistic years and already making dates for meetings upon his return to this country.

A CHINESE EXPERIENCE MEETING.

Dr. C. S. Heininger, our missionary at Kalgan, sent the following:

''The other day I discussed with a class of men the story of Paul's conversion, and then I pressed home on them to find out about their experiences. Here are some of the results of my conversation.

''Ii Kao Ts'un of Shan-nan-shan on Wanch'uan charge is in many ways a pillar in the church. He and his wife and his three sons and their wives and two grandchildren are members of our church while other grandchildren have been given to the Lord through the rite of infant baptism. He has been a delegate to the annual conference, and is now a member of our Executive Committee of 'President's Cabinet.'

''He first came in touch with the Kalgan missionaries in 116 while I was on furlough. His interest, he says, was fist aroused through a book seller whom he met at an open-air theatre, and from whom he bought some books.

''Later he and his wife came to Kalgan, and studied in the class for enquirers and were baptized by Mr. Soderbom and received into the church. He said the teaching concerning immortality and the life after death was what held his attention in the Gospels. Now I had heard a little about Mr. Li's first experiences, and so I pressed him, and he admitted that at first there was a good deal not Christian in his motives when he tried to enter the church. He had hopes that the foreigner could protect him from petty persecutions, but later he saw that was not the mission of the missionary, and he was drawn to the truth and gave his heart to Christ.. Certainly if riding four miles over the mountains to church, if hitching up and bringing his whole family to the mission fourteen miles away for Christian teaching, in fact if Christian worship in the home, if Christian care in giving his children an education, and a constant growth in spiritual things for these six years counts for anything, I believe that this man of some sixty years, the head of a family that reminds us of the patriarchs of old is a real Christian.

''Then we asked Liu Kuang Han, of Hsimalin, for his story. He said that when a boy of sixteen he had come in touch with the missionaries and the Gospel. He had come to Kalgan to be treated for a sickness by Dr. Naples of the American Board Mission, and he was cured. He wanted to stay and study with the doctor to be nurse or assistant, but his family wanted to have nothing to do with the foreigner. So he lost track of the missionaries, but almost twenty years later when we began our work in the region west of here a Chinese preacher went to Hsimalin, and he remembered the kindness he received at Kalgan years before, and listened to the Gospel, and believed on Christ. His knowledge at first was very little, and his faith rather simple, but with several weeks spent in a number of different Bible classes he has come to a stronger faith, and says that he believes truly in Christ, and finds in Him his salvation. In his youth he had been well-to-do, but later lost his money, or rather other members of the family lost it for him, and this was a help in making him more ready for the Gospel when it came to his home town, he believes.

''The next one to tell his story was Yang Kuei Lin the Mohammedan. He told how he had crawled to the Mission to get help for his frozen feet, and did not care for anything but medicine, but later he came to find in the people who served him a different spirit than he had known, and so he read and believed the Gospel.

''Then came Li of Li-hu-chuang, a young man who has been a Christian only about two years. He said he had never felt satisfied at the Chinese stories of man and his creation and his destiny, and so when he heard a preacher, Hou Ch-eng, tell one day about the God who had made man, and was seeking to save him, he inquired more fully of these things, and he truly found peace since he believed.'' Fred C. Klein.

—Railroad traffic for this time of the year is heavier than ever before in American history. That is announced by the American Railway Association. During one week more than 900,000 cars were loaded with freight. Grain, lumber and livestock shipments have been unusually heavy.

FIVE REASANS WHY WE SHOULD BUILD A METHODIST PROTESTANT COLLEGE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

1. Because the colleges in North Carolina have done so much toward the fitting of young lives for more and better service in the kingdom of God.

2.. Because it is our duty as a church to contribute our part to the betterment of our country morally and spiritually.

3. Because we are able to build and it will mean so much to the growth and success of our church.

4. Because it is a duty we owe our children, to give them a better opportunity than most of us have had, and should give them the best moral training that is possible for us to give, and we should send them to a college where they will be surrounded by a good wholesome influence.

5. Because it will mean a great loss to our church if we fail to build now; we can not afford to fail, and we will not fail, so let us push, pray and pay, until the task is completed, and then we will be glad and rejoice together. C. L. Spencer.

WILMINGTON, DELAWARE, AND FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

The following items were written by the pastors in charge of the respective fields, Rev. Leonard B. Smith at Wilmington, and Rev. Aubrey F. Hess, PhD., at Fort Worth. I give their own language, with their own interpretation of the situations under which they labor. Dr. Smith writes as follows:—

''The Peninsula Church is located in Wilmington, a city of about 110,000 inhabitants, at the head of the Maryland-Delaware-Virginia peninsula, in which we have about fourteen thousand members. Though considered for years to be a most promising field, yet no effort has ever been made until recently to establish our church on an adequate basis in this city. Three years ago, as a result of the liberal co-operation of many of our Maryland Conference laymen, work was begun with the purpose of organizing a creditable and well located church. The church was organized in 1920. Ten months later this church became self-supporting with a current budget of $3,500. It has also contributed about ten thousand dollars for property interests. We now have a membership of 160, a Sunday school of over 200, including nearly 100 young men and women. Three hundred families formerly affiliated with our churches elsewhere, and who have not joined any other church in Wilmingtoon, have been located, and many of them won to this new work.

''The present new building enterprise was launched in 1921. A request was received from the Maryland Conference by the Board of Home Missions for $15,000 as an initial fund for the new building. The board had already contributed $5,000 toward the purchase of the ground. The request was granted. A subsequent campaign has been conducted throughout the Maryland Conference and in Wilmington, with the result that the new church building is now completed, except the organ and pews of the auditorium, and we now have a property, including ground, building and furniture, costing $105,000, with $60,000 already provided for. The congregations have doubled since the new building was opened in December, 1922, and new members are being constantly added. This work is called by our leaders 'the greatest piece of church extension and home missions' ever achieved in so short a time in the history of the denomination.''

Fort Worth, Texas.

Dr. Hess writes as follows with reference to the work in Fort Worth:—

''To plant securely the Methodist Protestant Church in this great city of the Southwest it is necessary to meet such local demands as are expressed in the type of architecture of other denominations already established here. Fort Worth is a city of churches in which great pride and interest is taken. The goal has been set for us and we must meet it if we are to succeed.

''The personnel of the Methodist Protestant Church in this city is changing rapidly. New blood is being brought into the organization and each day witnesses a more satisfied body of faithful men and women. There are six to eight people who drive thirty miles on Sunday to be in the Sunday school and preaching service.. We have an obligation here in this city to the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. Shall we fail Him? Or shall we take our place with the other great Christian forces in this gateway to the Southwest so full of inviting opportunities?

''The denomination should make this city an exhibit of what she is, and what she proposes to do in all this great land of almost perpetual sunshine. Let us stand by this field until we have here the kind of a church which will correctly represent real American Methodism.''

These are great opportunities for service, and should be a challenge to every loyal member of the Methodist Protestant Church. There are other inviting fields, but think of these two today. Charles H. Beck.

MONEY RAISED ON GREENSVILLE CHARGE—1922 BUDGET.

A QUERY.

Resolved, That it would be wiser and easier for the Methodist Protestant people in North Carolina Conference to secure the $300,000 to meet the Wills condition by making a supreme sacrifice with the assistance of his gift than it would to make no sacrifice and wait until enough of our people are willing to build and endow the college without the assistance of his gift.

I would be glad for all of our people to consider this query and after due consideration to act accordingly.

I am so fully convinced myself that it is the part of wisdom for those of us who have already given to increase our gifts to the limit of sacrifice in order to secure the needed amount that I do not fear there would be many on the negative side by choice.

ANOTHER NEW CLUB, THE THACKER $100 TEEN-AGE CLUB.

This club is organized by Mrs. J. W. Thacker of Lebanon church, Lebanon charge, among teen-age youths. We are suggesting the membership be kept between 12 and 18 years; that both girls and boys may join. The purpose is to raise one hundred dollars for the college in the quickest way possible. Our goal is to find one hundred such clubs throughout the conference at once.

We would like to have an organization of this character in every Sunday school in the conference, and there might be several such clubs in some schools. Which school will furnish the second club?

THE BUILDING NEARING COMPLETION.

Roberts Hall is surprisingly near completion. Many rooms have floors laid, wall complete, doors hung, blackboards placed; only waiting for the brush of the painter to complete the job.

We want to hold the night sessions of our Pastors' Conference in our college assembly room. It can be done all right.

There are quite a number of rooms which can be furnished for a nominal sum, ranging from one to three hundred dollars in this building. If you desire to place your name plate on one of these rooms, you now have the opportunity. But you must act quickly as we shall press the matter to get all rooms furnished soon as possible.

WE NEED MONEY.

We are desperately in need of funds. If you only knew how much your pledge would do us by paying up in full, we believe that you would gladly remit at once. While it is true you are not due us the amount, if you have made two payments, but since you intend to pay the total amount when due, and if you can spare the money now, you might well consider the matter of helping us now to finish up Roberts Hall without any debt upon it.

We had a pleasant visit to English Street Methodist Protestant church last Sunday at three P. M. All seemed to be pleased with the program Miss Bowman and the children gave.

It was our pleasure to meet with Lebanon quarterly conference Saturday, 24th. The churches were well represented and one of the important matters considered was accepting the apportioned amount to raise on that charge in order to secure that magnificent offer of Brother Wills's for the college. I believe the charge will raise even more than it has been asked to do. Some of the leading members notified me that the Lebanon church will raise its quota before we can start on the campaign, so it will not be necessary to send them any speakers. That's fine; we wish others would enter upon their duty as enthusiastically and we would soon have the full amount raised.

We sincerely hope every Methodist Protestant will invest something in our college and we will have something that will cause our grandchildren to rejoice because of our action.

If you have any hesitancy as to the wisdom of making an investment come visit the college and the grounds and your doubts will be removed. H. A. Garrett.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE WOMAN'S HOME AND FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

A letter from Mrs. George R. Brown requests me to conduct a memorial service in memory of those of our fellow-workers who have died during the past year. This will be for both societies. I have consented to take charge of this service, and now ask all auxiliaries that have lost members whom they wish to have remembered, to send me their names. And also appoint some member of your auxiliary to present the name or names of such members at the memorial service and be prepared to say a few appropriate words about them. This can be done by Scripture quotations, by quotations from poetry, or in any way you see fit, but as the service must be short, make your remarks brief. Let us try to make the service an interesting and impressive one. Mrs. J. F. McCulloch.

—Rev. J. E. McCulloch, of Washington, D. C., a worker in the fields of education and public welfare, was a visitor at Grace Church, Greensboro, last Sunday. He thinks his grandfather was a brother of the grandfather of the editor of the Herald.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

OUR SLOGAN:—As Faithful in Service for Christ as for Self.

OUR AIM:—1. A Family Altar in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
2. A Revival in Every Church, With a Worthy Increase in Members.
3. Every Member a Contributing Member.
4. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
5. The Full $300,000 Subscribed for the College by June 1, 1923.

OUR MOTTO:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all our workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

On March 17 and 18 Rev. L. C. Little and I were with the charges in the second district in their meeting in Henderson. The meeting we believe was a profitable one. The attendance was not very good on Saturday, but was fine on Sunday.

Brothers Pritchard, Bates and Neese had planned well for us to reach as many people as possible, so besides the services in Henderson I was present with Brother Neese at his second quarterly conference on Vance. His people, those who were present, showed great interest in the conference. One church was not represented at all, and several officials from the other churches did not come.

On Sunday morning Brother Little preached at Flat Rock on Vance, and at night Mrs. Dixon made an address at Spring Valley on Vance, and I preached at Union Chapel on Granville. We also met with the Woman's Home Missionary Society on Vance.

It was delightful to meet so many dear friends in and around Henderson, and to meet new friends who are now in the work. They were exceedingly kind to us.

Mocksville and Union Grove.

March 24 and 25 we were with the good people on the Mocksville charge. We had expected to meet and greet some of the Union Grove people in this rally, but for some reason none of them were present. Rev. C. H. Whitaker, pastor of Mocksville charge, had planned for us to visit four of his churches. This we did with a great deal of pleasure, and we trust with profit to the people. There is a great field for service here, and the work seems going well.

I remained over on Monday to be with Brother Whitaker in his quarterly conference. The meeting was full of interest from beginning to end. Those present were thoroughly interested in the work, and were so interested in the discussions that the women chided the men, at the close of the meeting, for talking so much. One church on this charge was not represented in this conference, and other officials either forgot or were not sufficiently interested to go. Our quarterly conferences are very important and all official members should plan to attend.

Easter Sunday.

When you read this Easter Sunday will be almost upon you. This Sunday should mean much in our religious lives. "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." Our Board of Home Missions is calling upon the church for a great thank-offering on Easter Sunday for Home Missions.

Many of you are planning for an Easter service and in connection with that you will take an offering. Make it a worthy offering.

Stop, Look and Listen.

Think about our home mission work, pray about it, and think of your responsibility in trying to help save others. Then on next Sunday, wherever a Sunday school or a congregation meets to worship God and to think Easter thoughts, be sure to take an offering, and make it liberal and then send it at once to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Burlington, N. C., as your Easter offering for home missions. You will thus help a worthy cause and pay a part of your General Conference budget. The Lord is looking to you to render this help.

Our District Rallies.

These district rallies have been fine so far, and we believe they are going to be far-reaching in their results. We have also been pleased with the attendance in these rallies so far, except for the absence in so many cases of the official members of our church. We want these to attend that we may sit down together for an hour and study better plans and methods for doing the Lord's work.

Our Next Rally.

No rally has been planned for the Easter tide. I am to spend next Saturday and Sunday on Haw River circuit, so our next rally is to be held in the third district, and will be held in the Graham Methodist Protestant church beginning at 10:30 on Saturday, April 7. Pastors, Sunday school workers, Christian Endeavor workers, and official members are all urged to be present. The charges are Orange, Graham, Glen Raven, Mebane, Burlington, Mt. Hermon, Saxapahaw, Alamance, Gibsonville and Fairview.

May we not expect every church on these charges to be represented?

Pastors Note.

Please do not feel that these meetings will interfere in any way with plans for the College Campaign. We want them to help. That is the most important thing before us now, and we must make everything else bend to the help of the College Campaign.

Paul had the right order, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine." Being comes before saying or doing. Well may we pray, "Search me, O God! Reveal me to myself. Cleanse me from secret faults, that those who are acquainted with me, who know my down-sittings and my uprisings, may not see in me the evil that gives the lie to my words."—Maltbie Babcock.

WANTED—THE BEST TEACHER.

Whatever the ministry may be today, many times it lacks the power of reaching numbers of the young people, not only the ministry, but the preparatory schools, the Sunday schools and home training oftentimes is not effective. Indeed many students go to college in almost a heathenish condition in regard to religious and Christian knowledge. It is the day and time of the teacher's ministry in both secondary schools and in college. The college professor who does not forget that he is first a man, then a professor, and who can get past the friendship of books and knowledge to a genuine friendship with students, can be the highest force in our present-day civilization. The drift in our modern colleges is toward technical and scientific education. The aim in the college to be at High Point is toward the great teacher, the men of thought-provoking power and of spiritual capacity; sincere and genuine, both in scholarship and manhood.

To some people the shaping idea of what character should be, comes from the books they read, but to the majority the ideas are given by persons whom they most admire before they are twenty-one years of age. Not bare facts and theories that are taught give inspiration. The greatest thing any person or teacher, either in school or college, can do for a student is to furnish him with high ideals. It was a college lady who transformed me through acquaintance with her. I am sure the conversations were few outside of the classroom, but the ideal of character, of conduct, of leadership, was unconsciously transmitted to me as through a subconscious channel. It isn't the teacher who patiently works out the best method of teaching, but the teacher of faith in Christ, the just, courteous teacher. Just to come under the influence of such a teacher is enough to make college worth while. It is the teacher in the Chrirstian colleges that never forgets the vast difference between making life and making a living. They leave this idea with pupils taking their college degree. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." They teach us to test our lives by Whittier's noble psalm—

"O Lord and Master of us all,
Whate'er our name or sign,
We own Thy sway, we hear Thy call,
We test our lives by Thine."

Matilda Alexander.

OUR MISSING LINK.

Since imagination holds right of way in the realm of thought, things most appreciated are often, if not as a rule, those things which have not been acquired rather than the things which have been already realized. For instance, a sick person can appreciate health, and will sacrifice his all to gain it; so can one uneducated appreciate knowledge.

In most instances, however, men already involved in the affairs of life have passed the age where college training is practicable, but at that stage they are in a position both to understand and to apply the needed preparation for their children and others who come after them.

Poorly equipped teachers, preachers, parents, and in fact all those who assume leadership clearly perceive the source of efficiency, and should be quick to seize the opportunity to fortify their successors against low standards.

Now, in our church the college is the "missing link" in the chain of progress. While none can afford to be indifferent or passive toward it, the young people should be zealous because their shorter route to usefulness may be through it.

No true parent will hesitate for a moment to encourage, even to "back up," a worthy son or daughter in his aspiration looking toward influence and power.

As it is in the case of the family, so also in the church. Our "church fathers" are providing for their church children, just as all their sister denominations have already done for theirs, and are appealing to every member of the family for his loyal support. Let there be no slackers, lest there be friction. Let there be no friction, lest there be spanking Let there be no spanking lest there be rebellion. Money to build those dormitories should not be lacking, for there is enough surplus in the denomination to do it.

People are just as desirous for their money to do service as for themselves to serve otherwise. Money service here combined with other service will soon wake up the energies of the entire denomination to possibilities which have been sought for a generation, and will bring efficiency out of inefficiency, wiser men in pew, better preachers in the pulpit. Upon these grounds appeals are being made for your money, for your co-operation, for your prayers, and for your sons and daughters to be getting ready for entrance at the opening of the college.

The alignment of all forces for the uplift of the young people, and for extending and energizing the kingdom of Christ is definite in purpose.

The inspiration and enthusiasm are increasing.

The goal is appearing.

Just one more strong pull all together—every one doing his best—then we shall rejoice in triumph of the greatest enterprise ever undertaken by the church. H. C. Stort.

SUGGESTIONS, NOT CRITICISMS.

Our pastor is a good, spiritual man; intelligent, good reasoner, fine interpreter of the Scriptures, sound in theology and can preach sermons of such power that his audience will forget the passing of time while they listen to his eloquence.

But in my feeble judgment a pastor's work is not done when he finishes his sermon. Jesus went about among the people. "The common people heard him gladly." There are some things I cannot understand. How will the common people hear him gladly, if he never goes among the majority of them? How can he know their needs, and how to minister to them and understand their troubles—even to know they have troubles—when he comes just in time to preach Sunday morning. After the sermon he goes to one of three or four places for his dinner, then back home in the afternoon. He never goes out during the week to visit his flock. Does not know of the sickness and deaths among his people unless he is sent for. Those that wish to be marrie usually go hunt him up or find a justice of the peace.

I have in mind one member who lay for months sick and his pastor did not visit him. His wife, a member of another church, after his death rejoiced that they would not pay him any more money. Can you blame her? That is just one among such cases.

In one church no communion service has been held for over a year, and when the special meeting is held it is hurried over to get ready for the one to be held next week.

The young show little interest because they are not put to work. How can they work without a leader—a shepherd to lead the flock? People who raise sheep do not employ a shepherd to come occasionally and feed the sheep. but he must live with them, feed and protect them, and keep them from straying into danger. How is a shepherd to feed his sheep and lambs when he only sees them for an hour or two once a month? The ninety and nine, instead of the one, are straying away from the fold. One day each month spent among the members of each church would deepen the interest and help to fill the church pews each Sunday. If people do not go to church, it is hard to get them interested in church work. This is the situation as I see it at one church.

Perhaps there are others like unto it, and perhaps again some one can give us some advice, for we need lots of it, and perhaps our pastor will tell us wherein we fall short of our duty and what he would like for us to do, and then we can join forces and do what the Lord wants us to do. "Whatsoever thy hands find to do, do it with thy might," is a good text for both pastor and people.

Jesus went about doing good. He preached to the poor, made the deaf to hear, the blind to see, the lame to walk, raised the dead, healed the sick, took the little children in his arms and blessed them. He lived among and loved the people whom he ministered to. "Herein is my Fathher glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue in my love." XXX.

EASTER, 1923.

In the Methodist Protestant Church, Easter has been designated as the special day for the presentation of the work of the Board of Home Missions. For many years a program has been prepared by this Board, and offered to the Sunday schools throughout the denomination with the understanding that an offering be taken for the benefit of the Board of Home Missions. Formerly this offering was allotted to the board without reference to the budget, but under the present order, the offering may be credited to the apportionment of the local church for the General Conference budget. It is to be forwarded immediately to the treasurer of the annual conference, designated as an Easter offering, but for credit on the General Conference Budget. He in turn will send all such funds to the general treasurer with the proper information. This total is placed to the credit of the Board of Home missions, and becomes our working capital for the time being. In the final distribution, no board or institution is permitted to receive more than its allotted percentage of the total sums received from all sources. The receipts of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Missionary Society may reach the total percentage allotment of the total budget, but this is an exception to the general rule, and is made in their favor.

Upon the amount of the total receipts of the Easter campaign this year will depend our ability to properly close up the current fiscal year of the board, which ends April 30, 1923, and work to be planned by the board at the annual meeting to be held in Pittsburgh May 16, 1923. A liberal offering will enable the board to meet its obligations maturing during this period, and will make possible the adoption of a progressive program at the annual meeting. If for any reason the offering should be small, the work of the Board would be greatly embarrassed, and the progressive elements of the program for the coming year would necessarily be held in abeyance.

During the recent weeks your secretary has discussed various fields in these columns, and has endeavored to give you the facts furnished by the missionary pastors themselves right from the respective fields. We have not completed these references, and for several weeks other fields will be discussed. We are sure that these articles if carefully read have given much information concerning the field and the work being done by the Board of Home Missions.

That the church is showing greater interest in our work than ever before is clear from the fact that more than seven hundred and fifty of our Sunday schools have ordered programs and we have information indicating that many more will make an offering on that day for our work. Maryland leads in the number of schools ordering programs, with 116 orders up to March 16, when this article is being written. North Carolina is second with 74 schools ordering the program. Ohio is third with 63 orders. Indiana is fourth with 33 orders. Pittsburgh and Eastern are tied for fifth place, with 42 orders each. And West Virginia follows, with 39 orders for programs. Every conference in the denomination is represented in this list.

Now for the finish of a work so well begun. Let every school see to it that an offering is made for the benefit of the 60,000,000 unchurched in America, whether a program is rendered or not. We cannot afford to disregard this great obligation to God, and our country. All records must be broken in the offering as all have been broken in the number of schools planning for special programs, if we as a denomination shall be able to do our part in this great work.

EDUCATION OR MONEY—WHICH?

An inquiring reporter on a New York City newspaper asked five people, two men and three women, chosen indiscriminately from among six million inhabitants of the metropolis, the following question: "Would you rather be rich without education or poor with education?" The answers, with the occupations of the persons asked, were as follows:

Housewife: "If I had to choose, I would much rather be poor with education. It is easy to lose riches, but if you have education you retain it and can enter 'most any field of endeavor."

Salesman: "Just as most of my friends are, educated and earning a fairly good living. There is nothing more offensive than an uncouth rich person who wants you to know he's rich."

Secretary: "I prefer education to riches. An educated person knows how to enjoy herself and appreciate life without spending a single penny. Riches are least essential for true happiness."

Compositor: "Any one with sense would prefer education to riches because he could read and think intelligently and also mingle with people worth while. Riches alone give men very little standing."

Hostess: "I would choose to be poor with education. Ignorant rich people have friends only as long as they have money and spend it freely. The educated class makes worthwhile friends who last."

These answers are an indication of the growing belief among people in varied walks of life that a sound education is the only investment which is proof against all forms of loss.—Zion's Herald.

COLLEGE IDEA GROWING.

It is simply wonderful the way the College idea is growing in the minds of the members of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina..

It is true that we should have begun this great undertaking a long time ago, but somehow I feel that we are going to do so much better because we are building it now.

I am so glad that when our College is opened that all of the young people in our church may know that there is a place where they may fit themselvles for the larger responsibilities of life and that no one, not even the poorest among them, need have any fears of being able to get a college education.

I have reason to believe that there have been many among us who could and should have gone to college but did not think they could and no one would encourage them; but now all the teachers in our public schools may be looking out for our own young people and our ministers also may encourage the young men who would fit themselves for the ministry and help them to find a way to college.

And in a few years all of our pulpits may be filled by men who have college training and all will be much better fitted to take their places as leaders in the Methodist Protestant Church.

I feel that nothing that has been undertaken by our denomination anywhere in a long time will mean so much as the building of this college. R. F. Williams.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Education is the paramount need of our day. Institutions of various classes and degrees are serving as a medium by which the masses are being educated. Monthlies, weeklies and dailies pour into our homes in an incessant stream; books without number are at our daily command, with new ones born in a day; schools of every grade, from the kindergarten to the university abound; movies also lay claim to the right to appear on the world's educational program, and are holding forth in every hamlet and city of our land. The direct result of these institutions is the education of the individual, and the masses. No one will deny that the masses are receiving some kind of education. But, may I ask, is the type of education offered by the above agencies in every case wholly satisfactory to the serious, sober minded thinker? It education is now our greatest need, that need cannot long exist with the present educational facilities at our command.

You will please note that my first sentence is incorrectly stated, in that it is unlimited in its application. The first word—education—needs a qualifying word. Christian is the only word we dare to use. So then, correctly stated, Christian education is the paramount need of our day. Some may not agree with me here, and may say that repentance, faith and love should have precedence. I would reply, that before there can be repentance, faith and love in their various manifestations, there must be an intellect capable of exercising these graces. The supreme aim of Christian education is to fit the individual for a more complete exercise of the gifts and graces intrusted to him by his Maker.

One type of education is founded on materialism, where it ultimately ends. Christian education is founded on faith in God, and belives and teaches, "in the beginning, God." I am glad that we are building a Christian college where our boys and girls may obtain Christian education; where they will be taught to know Him, whom to know is life eternal. We believe in one God over all; we believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ; we believe in life everlasting. May the sun of that dark day never rise when our faith in this creed shall be uprooted by godless men in godless institutions, who might wilfully wreck our children's faith in their father's God. My salvation, your salvation, and the salvation of those who follow us, yea, the salvation of the world depends upon its Christianization, through and by the means of Christian education. Wm. H. Neese.

TO PARENTS.

You fathers and mothers of the Methodist Protestant denomination, it is up to you to decide the great question and further the cause of Christian education, by helping to establish "our College."

Do you wish for the moral standards, the high ideals and the Christian training for which you have spent your life in giving to your children, destroyed and their faith undermined in the few years spent in college? If not, now is the time to join others and be one of the many to help establish a place where you may with thankful hearts and peaceful minds send your girls and boys to prepare for a greater life of real service; where sacred truths will be instilled into their hearts and a greater knowledge of God.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 8.

What Are Wise and Unwise Uses of the Lord's Day? Isa. 58: 8-14; Psa. 118: 24.

Daily Readings.

Monday. Exodus 20: 8-11; 23: 12.
Tuesday. Ezekiel 46: 1-3.
Wednesday. Isaiah 56: 1-7.
Thursday. Nehemiah 13: 15-22.
Fridady. John 9: 1-14.
Saturday. Colossians 2: 16-23.

Wise Uses of the Lord's Day.

Worship. We should worship God every day of our lives, but on this day set aside by Him, this holy day, more thought should be given to real worship. On other days business and social affairs take time, and we need to spend one-seventh of our time in really thinking about and worshiping God. Sunday is that day set apart for us to study God's Word, to search our lives, to set them right and to get in tune with the good and the spiritual things of life.

Sunday School and Church Attendance. In order to properly worship one must put themselves in a place of worship and in a position to gain real inspiration and help by reading, studying and hearing God's Word explained. There is no better way or place to do this than the Sunday school. The day should begin with worship in the Sunday school. Many children receive the only religious teaching in the hour given to the teaching of the lesson in Sabbath school. How important it is that we give our time and thought to ways and means of making this hour mean more to the lives of those who come to us. It is not enough to go to the Sunday school; we should stay for the church service. We need to hear the sermon, to sing songs of praise and to engage in prayer with other Christians. An hour spent in such a way gives inspiration and fills us with good thoughts to last during the week. It gives us a clear realization of duty.

Visiting the Sick and Shut-ins. Most people are too busy during the week to give much time to visiting the sick or doing errands of mercy. A Sabbath spent in doing good to the sick, the needy, the ignorant or the fallen will bring joy to them and fill our own hearts with a sense of duty well done and pleasure over having done our duty. Hospitals should be visited carrying flowers and messages of cheer to those who are sick. A short song service and brief messages are often appreciated by those who are kept away from church by illness. Prisoners appreciate visits on the Sabbath Day. A Christian Endeavor society can get lots of pleasure and be of help to the prisoners by going to them with a message on the Sabbath. Many a prisoner has been saved by such a meeting. It is a small service on the part of the Endeavorers, but how much it means in the life of those who have fallen victims of their own sins.

Unwise Uses of the Lord's Day.

Sunday Outings for Pleasure. Many people regard the Sabbath as merely a day of recreation and pleasure. They get up early and start off for a frolic with no thought of the day or of the spirit of worship to be gained by the proper observance of such a day. In this busy age all of us need time for recreation, and for many Sunday is the only day. But the entire day should not be given just for pleasure, neglecting the Sunday school and the churches. Several Sundays spent in this way would cause one to forget the worship, good deeds and inspiration to be gained by this day.

Neglect of the Sunday School and Church Services. It is easy to make excuses and find reasons to stay away from church on the Sabbath. People who go constantly during the week complain of being too tired to go out on Sunday morning. Many people have Sunday headaches which prevent their going to Sunday school and church, but strange to say these headaches vanish after dinner and they are free to go where they please. This is not the proper attitude to have toward the church or the proper way to spend the Sabbath. We have a duty to perform on Sunday as well as during the week. Our business claims our attention during the week; we should give more time and serious thought to the way we spend our day of leisure. We need to get inspiration from the services of the day to carry us along during the storm and stress of the week.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY MEETINGS TO BE HELD IN GREENSBORO.

The branch meetings of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies will meet in Greensboro April 17 to 19, in the West End Methodist Protestant church. It is hoped that every auxiliary, every egg club and every church in the Methodist Protestant Conference of North Carolina will have at least one representative at the meeting in Greensboro. The people will be glad to entertain any and all who will attend the meetings. The names of the representatives should be sent in.

An interesting program has been arranged and will appear in the church paper. The meeting begins on Tuesday at two P. M., the Home society having the first part of the meeting. Rev. Homer Casto will be present and tell of the work at Bethel Home. Mr. H. A. Garrett will speak of the Children's Home and Mrs. A. G. Dixon will speak on the work at Pine Ridge and Pittsburgh Mission. All money should be sent in to Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Ligh Point, treasurer of the Home society and Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, Lexington, treasurer of the Foreign society, before March 31, when the books for the year will be closed. Let each auxiliary do their best to meet the apportionments which were made last year.

It is desired that every delegate go prepared to tell the best methods used in their society duing the past year. In this way the exchange of ideas will prove beneficial for the next year's work. Let every delegate make an effort to be present or arrange for an alternate.

Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, President,

Asheboro, March 26.

—We were pleased to have a call on Tuesday from Brother D. A. Neese and wife of Burlington. Brother Neese is teacher of the Baraca class and had 96 present last Sunday. Mrs. Neese speaks very highly of the work of the Philathea class.

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT?

I mean all those articles in the Herald on "Errors in the Bible." Do the readers of the Herald generally think that is the kind of reading matter to put before the boys and girls and young people of our Methodist Protestant Church? I do not object to those questions being discussed in a theological seminary or at our pastors' summer conference or in such magazines as the Homiletic Review but I do think it a mistake to discuss them in the church paper that goes into our church homes to be read by the boys and girls who are not mature enough yet to make the fine distinctions made by the theologians and logicians who have been writing the aforesaid articles.

The Herald of February 22 arrives. On the editorial page we find an article headed "Two Views of the Bible," on the second page an article, "Errors in the Bible." Then a reply by the editor to that. Beginning on the same page an article, "A Little Rejoinder." Here we find nearly two pages of the Herald or one-eighth of our church paper taken up with the discussion of the "Errors in the Bible." And to make the matter still worse, for me, the editor, in reply to my request for sample copies of the Herald to use in a campaign for new subscriptions, sent me along a batch of this same issue of the Herald.

Well, I succeeded in keeping quiet over that issue of the Herald but here comes last week's issue and on the second page I find awhole column article on the "Psalms of Hate" with the editor's reply to that taking nearly two columns of space. Beginning on that same page is another article in "Errors in the Bible." This article takes more than a page of space. That is followed by the editor's rejoinder which occupies nearly a column and a half of space. A good bit over two pages or more than one eighth of the paper taken up with the discussion of "Errors in the Bible." Very frankly, and yet kindly, I want to ask the editor and those who have written the articles referred to, Is this kind of treatment of the Bible edifying to the average reader of the Herald? Is it calculated to increase their faith in the Bible as being the inspired Word of God? I want also to ask the readers of the Herald if they think the discussions referred to are the kind that should be published in the Herald. If the verdict is against my opinion, then I submit.

For my part I am pretty well fed up on the recent dissertations on "Errors in the Bible," "Psalmsm of Hate," and "My First Pants." What say some of the rest of you?

Yours for a helpful church paper,

L. W. Gerringer.

Asheville, March 26.

[The editor believes that Brother Gerringer is entirely right in thinking that too great prominence and too much space and time may be given to the discussion of the subject named. But the editor believes Brother Gerringer in the wrong when he tries to rule the discussion out of the church paper. It is a practical subject and not merely an academic one. All the people should be interested in forming correct notions of the Bible. Roman Catholics may think it good policy to keep the people ignorant, that they may be more easily controlled. Protestants, and especially Methodist Protestants, believe in freedom of thought and discussion, provided always that it be in proper spirit. As to the young people, we think it much better for them to hear the truth from their friends than from those who might employ the truth to lead them away from the church. I believe the Bible would have been worth far more to me in the course of my life if I had been led to see it in early days as I see it now. I do not believe the truth will hurt the young people if given to them in true perspective. It is distortion and perversion of the truth that hurts, whether this distortion and perversion come from Christian teachers or from the enemies of Christ.—Editor.]

THE BOY AND HIS SISTER.

He was a little fellow, dwarfed by long illness. She was a beautiful girl to whom nature had given every grace of health and every joy of a bright mind. There could have been no greater contrast. Her step was elastic and strong. He was a helpless cripple, bound to his chair.

Her wedding day came. Every good-by was spoken, the carriage waited, yet she flew back upstairs to the brother gazing from the window in his wheel chair. He should have the very last embrace. Her kisses, her protecting tenderness threw about him something of the joy that could never be his own.

When Nature has her way the love between brother and sister is sweet beyond all telling. The girl's pride in her brother's progress at school, his prowess on the playground, amounts almost to worship. Why does any boy ever lightly hold his sister's love? He may live long and yet find no other purer and stronger. Her caress may be as tender, when the harness bruises his shoulders, as that of the mother, who may not always be near him. The girl learns much of the sterner sex if she be the sister of a manly boy. Through her the boy receives his best knowledge of womanhood. In countless ways each is the other's instructor.

Our congratulations to you, my boy, who often escort your sister and are glad in her beauty. You yourself know that there will be no more beautiful girl at the party. But perhaps you do not know the happiness that thrills your parents' hearts as they see you go out together and know how much you are to each other. If you do not realize it now, we hope that sooner or later you will know with what respect the parents of other girls look on you, sir, for your gallantry to your sister.—Unknown.

KNOCK IT UP!

It is curious to think how common the idea of "knocking" has become, especially since it is associated with a hammer. The hammer naturally represents construction. Anybody that has grown beyond babyhood seldom takes up a hammer just to pound with it; he uses it to make something—to "knock up" a chicken-coop, a new toy, a piece of furniture. That's the sort of thing hammers are for.

Why should not verbal hammers be used constructively? If you have one that's eager to be used, get busy. But don't merely bang away like a ten-month-old baby. Knock up something worth while.—Selected.

THE LITTLE RED SHOES.

They were very little and very red and—Oh, dear me!—how pretty they were, especially to the tiny Louise May, who had never owned a pair of red shoes in all her short life before.

There were many little folks in the Alcott home, and very, very little money, so when a friend from Boston sent Louise the red shoes, the whole family stood about to admire and help the small girlie rejoice in the very loveliest things she had ever owned in all her life.

Shoes have to be worn, or they will soon become too tight for little feet, and so it was that Louise May trotted about that summer, day after day, in her red shoes. They were a perfect fit, and the little girl was happy the whole bright summer long, just because she could look at her own pretty feet and forget that she did not have any of the things that other little girls had.

Well, one day in the early fall, Louise May put on her red shoes. Then she slipped into a pretty little white dress with red dots on it, and at last her mother tied a big red bow in her hair. Then it was that an idea entered this small girlie's head. She would run away, and see the world! She always had wanted to see it, and this bright day, when she had on a new dress and the wonderful red shoes and the pretty bright ribbon, was the very time!

So it was that, by and by, the little red shoes trotted along right bravely, turning corner after corner, until at last she had no idea in which direction lay her home! Hours passed, and still the little red shoes trotted along.

By and by the sun hid, and the rain came. Then it was that a very tired and frightened and homesick little girl crept into an open doorway, and curled up in a miserable ball. It rained harder, and then it grew dark. Louisa drew her red shoes up under her short skirts, and sobbed herself to sleep.

Nine o'clock had boomed out from the town clock, when a queer cry rang through the streets, mingling with the ringing of a bell. "Lost," cried a man's voice. "A little girl, in a red-and-white dress, with a pair of red shoes on!"

"Why-y-y-y!" cried an ecstatic little chirp right under the man's nose. "Why-y-y-y, them's my red shoes you'se a finding!"

"And you in 'em, I'm thinking!" cried the man. He flashed the light of a lantern on the forlorn little figure in the door way, and gave a shout of delight. "I've got her!" he called, and then others came running up out of the darkness, and a very tired but very happy little Louise May was clasped in her father's arms.

"He found my red shoes, and that's how come he got me," she said in sleepy chirp that night, when her mother tucked her into bed. "And me'n them ain't ever, never, going away not no more er tall, Muvver Alcott!" —Selected.

KEEP ON THE TRACK.

"Mamma, where will I find some good texts for our League meeting tonight?" said a youth as he turned the leaves of his Bagster's Bible.

"What is the subject, Clarence?"

"'The Footsteps of Jesus;' and I want something strong, something that means keeping on the track."

The mother smiled to herself, and her heart leaped up lovingly with a prayer, "Dear Lord, keep him on the track," as she said. "How would that verse over in Proverbs do?"

"What verse? I do not recall any like that."

"The one about letting your eyes look straight before you. Turn to your concordance and look up the word 'straight,' and you will find it."

"Oh, yes! here it is: 'Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee.' 'Ponder the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established.' 'Turn not to the right hand nor to the left; remove thy foot from evil.' That's just it; that will do."

"Do you want another?"

"No, thanks; this will do. I will take all three of the verses."

"Do you lead tonight, my son?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Then make the duty to follow closely in the footsteps of Jesus clear and positive. To get off the track means disaster and danger, and perhaps death; and yet many are careless, and seem to regard it as a slight matter, while others become self-indulgent and sleep by the way. You remember, in 'Pilgrim's Progress,' that, when Christian slept in the beautiful arbor that God meant only for rest and refreshment, he lost his roll which he carried in his bosom, and how sorrowfully he retraceed his steps until he found it where it had dropped when he was sleeping. It is ever so. We shall surely lose the blessed assurance of God's favor if we grow careless and self-indulgent. We must keep our eyes upon Jesus if we would make straight paths for our feet."

"We boys have a good many things to meet, in the social line, that are questionable, but, if you say a word of warning to one who indulges, he replies, 'My conscience does not condemn me'."

"Then tell them, my son, that conscience needs a guide. The Word of God is the only sure and safe rule of action. The conscience must be educated and enlightened by it, and illuminated by the Holy Spirit. The only way to settle the question of right and wrong is to take your Bible, go into your closet, get down upon your knees before God, and sincerely seek the illumination of the Holy Spirit, and God will make it plain. By so doing, the conscience becomes sensitive, and able quickly to discern good and evil. We must keep our hearts with all diligence, for Jesus says, 'He that taketh not his cross and followeth after me, is not worthy of me'."

"We need to have the 'stuff that martyrs are made of' to keep loyal and true in these days, mamma; but I am bound by God's help to be wide awake and keep on the track."—Christian Standard.

PRIDE GOETH BEFORE A FALL.

One day a very plain little girl dropped down into the school. She dressed very plainly, talked in an old-fashioned way, and seldom ever spoke of herself. The other girls shunned her, and talked unkindly about her. But the quiet little girl went quietly on her way, learning her lessons. Of course she noticed the way the girls treated her and she felt hurt.

The leader of these girls was Jane. She had been abroad for a year, and now the day had come for her to arrive, and the girls were anxiously waiting for her to come to the school.

One afternoon the girls stood about in the schoolroom when Jane came in with a smile and word of greeting for everyone. In the midst of the excitement the quiet little girl was overlooked, but presently Jane saw her and then how quickly things changed. Jane stopped in the middle of a sentence and with a surprised look on her face ran toward the timid little girl.

"Why, you darling!" she said, excitedly, "you dear, darling old girl. I'm mighty glad you're here. Why, I've missed you so terribly since we left France. Oh, Clarice, are you going to stay with us for awhile? I am so glad—" But the rest was smothered in Clarice's warm ulster.

All the little uppish misses had to stand back and watch Jane's extravagant love for this quiet girl, and, of course, they couldn't understand it. Even when Jane got her breath back she found it hard to tell.

"You lucky, lucky girls to have had this dear girl here with you all winter," she said at last as she stood with her arms about Clarice's waist. "She was my very best friend while we lived in France. Her father is a count, with a dozen other titles to his name, and her mother was an American girl who was a school friend of mother's. We stayed with them at Troyes, in a glorious big castle, which is their real home, but they have a great house in Paris, and another down on the Riviera, and a villa in Italy, and ever so many other places, and she's my very best friend. Oh, Clarice, I'm so glad your father has come to America for this season. But I'm terribly surprised, because I'd been hoping we'd get back from London before you got here. Oh, now we're going to have some fun, I tell you. Good-by, girls. See you tomorrow."

Imagine the surprise of those haughty, proud girls who had shunned and snubbed that dear little girl just because she wasn't dressed as they were.

You never can or ought to judge a person by the things they have. Very often the people who say the least and seem to have the least are the people really worth knowing.—Sabbath Visitor.

—Great Britain and France have made sharp cuts in their naval programs for the coming year. Both governments announced that they had made these cuts because of the Naval Limitation treaty signed at the Washington Conference. France has not yet ratified that treaty, but will soon do so, reports from Paris say.

—The situation in the Ruhr becomes more and more threatening. Last week the most serious clash between the French troops and German mobs took place at Buev, a town in what is known as the Recklinghausen district. There the Germans killed two French soldiers. The French troops fired into the crowd and killed five Germans.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Oak Grove, Cleveland Circuit.—Since our last report we have been progressing very nicely with our Sunday school trying to make this the best year we have ever had, and we are successful so far. Last Sunday, March 18, we had a large crowd present at Sunday school, we also took up a missionary collection, $5.69 for the orphan children.

We are practicing an Easter exercise which will be held at his place Easter. We are expecting a large crowd, and also a large missionary collection, which will go to the orphan children; everybody is cordially invited to come.

Our Christian Endeavor society has been stopped for quite a while on account of the bad weather and sickness. We are hoping to start it up before long.

We are looking forward to have a good song service and also good preaching on the fifth Sunday in April as the quarterly conference and district meeting will be held at this place then. Willie Pendleton,
Reporter.

Missionary News of Flat Rock, Vance Circuit.

On Tuesday, March 20, at 2:30 o'clock, the Woman's Home Missionary Society met with Mrs. A. E. White. In absence of president Mrs. W. B. Jones, vice president, presided. Nine of our fourteen members were present. The society had as its guest Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon of Greensboro. Mrs. Dixon conducted devotionals, after which Dr. Dixon led in prayer. After the business part of meeting and reading of report of year's work, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Dixon.

She said many encouraging things, as well as told us of the work at Pittsburgh Mission and Pine Ridge. It was indeed a pleasure to hear her. It makes us feel more like trying a bit harder, after we have seemingly done our best. Do hope to have them both in our meetings again sometime.

We are not over the top with our apportionment yet, but are going to try and get it in to treasurer before March 31.

Miss Hazel M. White is our delegate to branch meeting.

Mrs. Dixon met with the J. Clyde Auman Mission Band of our church on same afternoon as woman's meeting at 1:30 o'clock. She gave them a splendid talk on Boy and Girl Life in Japan, also touched on the work in China and India. In closing her talk she told them of the great need of good work in school room to develop the brain, the need to play just as hard to develop the body, and the greatest of all, the need of Christ to make their hearts good and pure, that their lives may mean much to the Master.

Sallie Hunter Satterwhite was elected to represent the Mission Band at branch meeting. The Band's treasurer has sent Mrs. Whitaker its apportionment, which was only dues.

We have a growing society of Buds of Hope. They now number eight. Our president's new girl, Estelle Hester, is the last added to the list. Mary V. White,
Secretary W. H. M. S.

Clark's Chapel, Buncombe Circuit.—Our Sunday school is increasing. We had the largest school yesterday that we have had since before Christmas. The prospects for a good school are hopeful, and each attendant seems interested. We have been largely handicapped this winter from "flu", and the roads have been so bad that that would almost be an excuse. But we truly hope to be prospered and that this will be a good year's work yet.

Our pastor, Mr. Williams, does not seem easily discouraged. So he fills his appointments faithfully and preaches helpful and inspiring sermons. Come out and hear him. When we fail to be present we are certainly losers. Reporter.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.—Our pastor filled his appointment the third Sunday at three o'clock, and preached for us a good sermon to both saint and sinner. Brother Riddle preaches for us every first and third Sunday. We are always glad for that time to come, for he always gives us messages to press onward in the service of the Lord.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely, considering the sickness in this community. Last Sunday Mrs. A. L. Delk was elected as superintendent. She is a faithful worker in our church.

Brother Riddle is building a belfry addition to our church, which will be very much help to the looks of it when completed.

Mrs. Riddle is our faithful organist at Piney Grove, and she is a ready worker for the Master.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Reporter.

Bethel, Alamance Circuit.—Bethel Sunday school is progressing nicely. We are preparing for an Easter service. Rev. G. W. Holmes filled his appointment the third Sunday in March, giving us a good helpful sermon on the Crucifixion.

We had the pleasure of having the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies meet in our home last Sunday at 2:30 P. M. Meeting was opened by our vice president, Miss Marcia Foust, using a portion of 1 John 2. Song, "In the Garden," followed by a discussion of our subject, "Walking with God." Lesson was taken from the second chapter of study book. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Lou McPherson; vice president, Miss Marcia Foust; treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Foust; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Lon. Stafford; recording secretary, Mrs. R. W. Lindley; assistant secretary, Mrs. F. R. McPherson; Record agent and Corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. M. Foust. Officers of Home society were retained, as we so recently organized. Next meeting to be held with Mrs. J. A. Foust. Subject, "Influence." Time not decided.

Mr. and Mrs. Lon. McPherson are rejoicing over a fine baby boy. Mr. and Mrs. John Bivins, who have been right sick, are improving, but sorrowing over the death of a sweet little girl, aged about fifteen months. One more sweet flower transplanted in the garden above, anxiously watching, papa and mamma, for you. We have sick among us—Mr. Amick Foust, Mrs. Lon McPherson, Mrs. J. H. Allen, Miss Lala Lindley and Miss Jewel Stafford. May the Lord comfort and help them and restore them to health.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Reporter.

Shiloh, North Davidson Circuit.—A very interesting meeting was held in this community last Saturday night at the home of Mrs. Sally Sink, when a Teachers' Meeting was held in memory of her husband, Mr. Lee Sink, who passed to his reward two years ago Saturday. Mr. Sink was one of the most efficient and most faithful teachers of Shiloh Sunday school. It was he who organized the Teacher Training Class, and who continued in this great work until he was called to be with his Great Teacher in the Great School Beyond.

There were 149 present in the Sunday school Sunday.

The family of Mr. H. A. Leonard are among the recent victims of measles. Mrs. Leonard was able to attend church Sunday for the first time since she fell and broke her leg several months ago.

Dr. Whitaker preached an excellent sermon at 11 o'clock, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. The pastor announced that the second quarterly conference will convene at Shiloh on Saturday before the third Sunday in April. He urged all members to attend, as business of special importance will be transacted.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held a Thank-offering service Sunday night. The president, Mrs. Wiley L. Shoaf, read a part of the 28th chapter of Matthew, after which Dr. Whitaker led in prayer. Mrs. Shoaf then told of the growth of the local auxiliary during the one year of its existence. Dr. C. L. Whitaker made a talk on "Thank-Offering." A dialogue, "As It Really Is in India," was given by Misses Florence Sink and Willie Veigh Leonard. A pageant, "Light and Thanks," was then presented. America was represented by Miss Elizabeth Koontz, Thank-Offering by Miss Florence Sink and India, Africa, Japan and South America by Misses Elsie Koontz, Eula Swicegood, Reva Sink and Druzilla Evans. Little Frank Shoaf gave a short reading about giving, after which a Thank-offering amounting to $15 was received. Dr. Whitaker pronounced the benediction. Mrs. Curtis L. Koontz, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Yesterday was a good day for us. We had a splendid Sunday school with 90 present. Collection, $4.45. We hope to get our roll up to 100 by next Sunday.

Brother Lowdermilk was with us yesterday and gave us another one of his good sermons, his text being, "Thy kingdom come." We are always glad when the day comes for him to be with us. We will have preaching twice a month after this month.

We are planning to have an Easter program next Sunday night, consisting of songs and an address by Mrs. A. G. Dixon. Come all who can. Am sure Mrs. Dixon will bring us something good. Mrs. G. W. Apple, Reporter.

March 26.

Thomasville.—We have had a great day at our little church on the hill. Our Sunday school had 241 present. We were sorry to note our superintendent's being somewhat indisposed, but assistant superintendent D. R. Connell being present, there was no time lost in proceeding with a live Sunday school session, after which our regular church service, with subject, Ridicule, picturing how we may hinder God's cause by ridiculing his workers or would-be workers.

Our Christian Endeavor society met at 6:30 with very interesting service, followed by preaching service at seven o'clock, subject, One of the Fools of the Bible. The preacher gave his hearers a powerful word-picture of how Saul said, "I have played the fool." As we know, all Bible students are familiar with what happened that made Saul submit to his guilt. The subject was presented with force and power.. Pray for us that more such messages may reach us before we play the fool ourselves. Yours for the Master,

Reporter.

Orange Circuit.—Hon. J. S. Cook and Phil Dixon will be with me at Union Grove first Sunday in April at 11 o'clock and speak on some phase of our college.

Mr. Albert Holmes of Raleigh, N. C., will be with and speak to the people of Chestnut Ridge on second Sunday in April at eleven o'clock.

Brother Fletcher Williams of Burlington will be with me at Efland on third Sunday in April and speak at eleven o'clock.

Brother Rogers of Burlington and Phil Dixon of Graham will be with me at Hebron at 11 o'clock on fourth Sunday in April. We extend a hearty welcome to all of these brethren and anxiously await their coming.

Second quarterly conference for Orange circuit will convene at Union Grove on Thursday before second Sunday in April. The conference will convene at two o'clock P. M.

H. L. Powell, Pastor.

Lebanon Charge.—The second quarterly conference for this charge met last Saturday at Lebanon church. The attendance and interest were good. The reports showed that all the churches were behind with the finance but we hope this condition will not exist very long. Brother H. A. Garrett was with us and added much to the interest of the meeting. Brothers John Harvey of Lebanon and George Hilton of Pleasant Grove were elected nominees for delegate to Annual Conference. A great deal of interest was manifest in the College, and the quota for this charge was accepted. I feel safe in saying we will have no trouble raising the full amount. The Lebanon folks are already at work on their quota.

We wish to thank the people of this charge for the many tokens of kindness we have received since our last report. We have received milk, butter, meat, potatoes, wood, and various other tokens of kindness which we appreciate very much. Edw. Suits.

Winston-Salem.—Our Sunday school, under the leadership of Superintendent Hauser, is showing many signs of new life. The attendance last Sunday week was the largest in its history, 220. Every teacher was present, and expressions similar to this were heard on every hand: "The school sure looks good today." But the "good looks" were not confined to the Sunday school, large congregations being present at both preaching services.

The first Brotherhood supper took place on the evening of March the 13th and despite the down-pour of rain about thirty men of the church were present. The ladies of the Home Missionary Society served a bountiful supper, consisting of a meat and salad course, followed with cake and ice cream. Brother J. Norman Wills, of Greensboro, was the speaker for the occasion, and, in the language of the Twin-City Sentinel city editor, who was present, gave "a wonderfully interesting and inspiring address on 'Enthusiasm'." Following his address a number of the members made short talks. Brother C. W. Williams is president of the Brotherhood and acted as toastmaster.

We were pleased to have with us last Sunday evening Brother L. C. Little. Brother Little was passing through our city on his way home from Mocksville, not thinking that he would have time to attend the evening service, but finding that his train did not leave until 8:50 and that our service would begin at 7:30, he gladly consented to speak to our people. The congregation was not quite up to the standard, but those present were highly pleased and helped by his address and quite a number registered for the Weaverville convention.

College sentiment is growing here. The people are talking it as they never have before and we shall be greatly surprised and disappointed if we fail to reach our quota—$10,000. Brother R. H. Shouse, one of our young business men and good church workers, has joined the Scout $500 Club, and we are of the opinion that we have some more Hauser $1,000 Club men here. Who will be next?

R. A. Hunter.

Glen Raven.—We had a very good attendance at Sunday school March 25—127. Pastor Morgan preached a most excellent sermon at the morning service. The song service was one of the leading features of the service. On Sunday, the 18th, Mr. J. B. Turner of Burlington, president of the Alamance County Christian Endeavor Union, spoke on the Christian Endeavor work, with the view of organizing a Christian Endeavor society at Glen Raven. At the night service Mr. Turner was back again, bringing Mr. Carl Clapp of the Reformed Church with him; both of these gentlemen spoke on the Christian Endeavor work. Mr. Clapp spoke of the Christian Endeavor work as a live wire in the church, especially fitting the young people for the work of the church. Mr. Turner was back again Sunday, the 25th, bringing Mr. Carl Clapp, Mr. C. B. Vray and Mrs. Herbert W. Coble, all three of Burlington, and organized a senior and Junior Christian Endeavor society. Mr. John Tickle was elected president, Miss Lowell Glenn vice president, Miss Florence Garrison secretary, Mr. E. H. Thompson corresponding secretary, and Mr. Mack Boone treasurer. Our meeting was first held at 6:30, just before the evening preaching service, which was very largely attended. Mrs. Tom Hornaday was elected president of Junior society and Miss Donnie Dixon secretary.

At the evening service Brother Morgan preached a sermon using as a subject, "The Devil Fishing," to a large congregation.

Mack Boone, Reporter.

Pleasant Union.—It has been so long since I have seen any report from our church that I will try to write once more. We are still moving on. Our Sunday school is growing larger as the spring comes on.

On the second Sunday of March Brother Millaway organized a Christian Endeavor society at our church and a large number joined. Although we have had but two meetings, yet I think it is proving a great help to our church and Sunday school.

Our pastor preached a very practical and helpful sermon at his last appointment. His subject was, "Is Life Worth Living?" We are glad to have Brother Millaway for our pastor, for he seems just like one of us. I hope that as the weather gets warmer our congregation will get larger.

James Bowman.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—The work at this church is progressing nicely, considering the sickness we have had this winter and also bad weather, but I am glad to say that we did not have to close our Sunday school this winter. It seems that when a Sunday school is closed through the winter the members wander away and then, when the school is opened again, they do not attend as regularly as before.

On account of sickness I was unable to attend service last third Sunday night at Philadelphia but I attended services at Matthews Chapel Sunday morning and Brother Trolinger preached an excellent sermon and more than one said that they thought it was the best sermon they had heard Mr. Trolinger preach.

Our Sunday school is planning to render a short Easter program next Sunday morning; ten o'clock is the hour and there will be preaching at 11 o'clock. Everybody come. Love and best wishes to the Herald and its readers. Dora Pearson, Reporter.

March 27.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—We are having a very good Sunday school; 43 present this morning. We have 67 on roll.

Brother Hulin filled his apopintment this evening, giving us a splendid sermon, after which a collection was taken up for the Children's Home at High Point, which amounted to $5.07.

We have class meeting once a month, usually the first Sunday, but on account of our Easter services next Sunday, it will be put off till the second Sunday. The Easter services will begin at ten o'clock A. M.; everybody is invited to come.

Mr. W. A. Dawson is right sick at this writing. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Rosa Merritt.

March 25.

Fairgrove, Haw River Circuit.—We are still on the job, although due to sickness and weather we have not been progressing as nicely as we hoped for during the winter months. But as spring has approached we intend to put forth a greater effort.

Brother Lowdermilk was with us yesterday, and gave us a very interesting and helpful sermon, using for his text, "Thy kingdom come." After the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered. Almost the entire congregation partook of this.

Our missionary society was unable to have its meeting last third Sunday, and the members are requested to be present next Sunday, as the meeting will be held immediately after Sunday school, and everyone will be expected to pay their dues.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers, Reporter.

Canaan, Denton Charge.—Pastor Trogdon on the second Sunday delivered a most excellent sermon. Not many folke out because the day was damp and cloudy. There are some people who think the day must be bright and sunny if they go out to hear a man preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, but they can work or go to town just any kind of a day. We have a good Sunday school at Canaan. I do not think we have missed but one Sunday this quarter. There will be Easter exercise at our church next Sunday at 11 A. M. Hope to have a large crowd out.

The second quarterly conference of Denton charge was held at Canaan on Saturday evening, March 17. The most important business transacted was the nominating of delegates to Annual Conference.. Brother Walter Johnson from Mt. Ebel and Brother Eddie Hill from Denton are the nominees from this charge.

We are hoping as beautiful spring days come to us that our church will take on new life and strive to accoomplish greater things for the Master this year than ever before.

Vance Circuit Home Missionary Societies.

It was our great pleasure to meet with each of the three Home Missionary Societies during the past week. It was an inspiration indeed to me, and it caused me to see more clearly what a little band of women working together for God could accomplish. Of course we have not accomplished anything great but in reviewing the year's work we find we have not been idle, and we are hoping, planning and praying to be able to do much more during the coming year.

Gillburg: Yesterday we met with this little band of women and children. We have in connection with our ladies' auxiliary, ten children between the ages of six and sixteen that we call our Mission Band. We hope in the near future to organize the children into a separate society. Yesterday we organized a "Buds of Hope" society with three members. There are a number of children in the community we hope to add to this list.

There is still a small deficit to raise on our apportionment, but we feel confident that the full amount will be in the hands of the branch treasurer before her books close. Miss Laila Blanks was elected to represent Gillburg at the branch meeting.

Spring Valley: We met with the Spring Valley auxiliary March 21. We had a real interesting and inspiring meeting. It means much to me to meet and mingle with a number of consecrated women who are doing their very best to measure up to their great responsibilities. This society has already "gone over the top" with their apportionment. Besides the money raised and sent to branch treasurer, they sent a box of towels, pillow cases, etc., to Pine Ridge School. The society also has done much mission work in the local church. They have pledged $50 towards improvement of their church, and they have a plan on foot now to raise that amount.

Flat Rock: We had the great pleasure of having Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Dixon meet with us in our Flat Rock society March 23. Mrs. Dixon gave us an interesting and helpful talk on home missions, and the great work the Home Missionary Society is doing. She also gave some helpful suggestions, and I feel sure that Flat Rock auxiliary will do more in the future since hearing Mrs. Dixon. We hope to have Dr. and Mrs. Dixon meet with us again.

We are very much alive here and working hard to raise our apportionment. We are still behind some, but we are hopeful of yet being able to report all paid. At our last meeting we decided to make Mrs. Lelia Satterwhite (one of our deceased members) a perpetual member, and we are working hard now trying to raise that amount.

At our January meeting a "Buds of Hope" society was organized with four members. We now have eight members.

Miss Hazel White is our delegate to branch meeting.

The J. Clyde Auman Foreign Mission Band under the leadership of Miss Mary V. White is doing excellent work. They have already raised their apportionment. We are expecting great things from this live band in the future.

Yours for mission activities,

Mrs. Wm. H. Neese.

March 26.

SNOW-BALLING SAM SCOTT.

Yes, it was capital snow-balling. The snow was just moist enough to pack splendidly.

"Hey! Ned!" said Charlie Preston to his brother, "There goes old Sam Scott, drunk as 'booze'; let's give him a salute when he comes along." So the boys, allowing their love of fun to overcome their manliness, without intending to do anything out of the way, prepared to give "Boozy Sam," as he was sometimes called, a royal salute. And really, what harm was there in it? "He's nothing but an old drunkard," as Charlie said, afterward. So as the staggering footsteps of the old man drew near, he received the intended volley; once, twice, three times, the well-packed balls found their mark in quick succession.

Then there was a sweet voice from the door which called, in surprised tones,

"Boys! boys!"

If there had been any thought in the boys' minds that they were not doing just right, they surely were certain of it now, as they heard their mother's voice.

The boys instantly followed their mother into the house, and when she expressed her surprise at what they had done, Charlie in his earnest way, said,

"Why! mamma, he's only old Sam Scott, the drunkard."

In reply, his mother said,

"Boys, listen, and I will tell you a story. When your grandfather was young, he had one friend whom he prized more than all his other companions. They were together continually. People used to speak of them as the 'twin brothers.' Their fathers were partners in business, and it used to be a common saying that where you would see one you would see the other. This continued until they both became young men, when, their business tastes being different, they became separated. But still the friendship of their youth endured, and they always met with the greatest pleasure. But it was not long before your grandfather learned, in sorrow, that his friend was becoming intemperate. In vain did he endeavor to help his friend give up his dreadful habit. He continued to go on from worse to worse, until he became a common drunkard. He squandered the moderate fortune left him by his father, and early became penniless. How often I have heard your grandfather mourn over the sad ruin of his early friend."

"Mamma, mamma! you don't mean that it was Sam Scott?" excitedly exclaimed the boys, almost at the same time.

"Yes, my boys, the old drunkard whom you snow-balled this morning was the youthful friend of your grandfather, and I've often heard him say, when he used to see you and Ned at play, 'That's just what Sam and I used to do;' then he would sigh, and I knew what he was thinking about."

"I'll tell you what we'll do, Ned," shouted Charlie, excitedly; "we'll fix a whole basket of stuff for him. You'll fix it for us, won't you, mamma? And we'll tell him it is from Ned Harper's grandsons."

Mrs. Preston watched the boys with a smile as a little later they passed through the gate with a large basket on their sled. As the old man received the boys' gift, he brushed the tears away from his blurred eyes with his trembling hand, and all the boys heard was the one word, "Ned!"

A few days after that the boys rushed into the house shouting, "Hurrah! hurrah!" and waved over their head a piece of paper, that was all. Was it a bank note? No; it was a pledge on which in a trembling hand was written—"Samuel Scott."

"Oh! how I wish grandfather could see this," said Ned.

Every boy seemed to become a friend to old Sam after this. For the sad story of his youth had become known and the boys all enlisted themselves as his helpers. The old man goes to church regularly and has become a reformed man indeed, and without doubt he will meet the friend of his youth again, and for this he is faithfully striving. Who shall say that he will fail?—C. W. Wilson, in The Little Christian.

MEN WHO ARE SCARCE.

There are men enough, such as they are; beggars, tramps, hoboes, loafers, drunkards, smokers, fourth-class, fifth-class men,—there are plenty of such men, but says Samuel Clemens, "Literature, the ministry, medicine, law, and other occupations are cramped and hindered for want of men to do the work, not for the work to do. If you wish to test the truth of this statement hunt up a first-class editor, reporter, business manager, foreman of a machine-shop, mechanic, or an artist in any branch of industry, and try to hire him. You will find him already hired. If you need idlers, shirkers, half-instructed, comfort-seeking editors, lawyers, doctors, and mechanics, apply elsewhere. They are plentiful."

The boy who does his best will find his place. The half-baked, half-taught, half-trained, half-hearted boy will be always getting left, and will never seem to find the place where he is needed.—Selected.

DIED.

At Cedar Falls, on the morning of February 24, 1923, Causey Jennings was found dead in bed. He had been in poor health for some time, but was still able to go about and do some little work. No one thought the end so near. He leaves a wife, two sons (Winston and Harris Jennings) and some grandchildren.

The deceased was a little more than 72 years old and was the last one of the family of David Jennings. So death passed upon all. He lived all of his life on the same plase where he was born. He was a member of the M. P. church at Cedar Falls. He was a man that always stayed at home. He and his wife never stayed apart but one night in all their married life of around fifty years.

I know it is sad and lonely for his widow when the sun begins to go down and Causey is not there, but we believe that he is with God and the holy angels. So, dear Sister, look up: ''Sorrow endureth for a night but joy cometh in the morning.'' It will not be long until you can meet him in the sweet by and by.

I can not remember when I did not know Brother Jennings. He was a man that I always loved and as I did not have the opportunity of saying anything at the funeral, I have written this. The service was conducted by Brother R. T. Thorpe. So let me say to the family, you have my prayers and sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement, but they have the gracious consolation that their loved one has gone on to await their coming.

In Memory of Margie Sykes.

Angels came and took our Margie, whom we loved and cherished dear;
It was Margie—yes, dear Margie. Can we help but shed a tear?

And how hard we tried to save her; all we did was all in vain;
Happy angels came and took her from this world of toil and pain.

We stayed near you, Margie dear, we stayed with you all we could;
I longed to see your sweet face more, when life held you so I could.

And our hearts are ever aching, although we smile each day,
For our thoughts are all with Margie, whom God has called away.

You suffered long, you murmured not; you waited patiently day by day.
Until at last, with smiling face, you quietly passed away.

From this world of pain and sorrow, to the land of peace and rest,
God has taken you, dear daughter, where you found eternal rest.

We shall never cease to miss you, until on the golden shore
We shall meet and live forever, where life's parting comes no more.

Now my heart is almost broken, looking for my daughter home;
But she is now in heaven's window, beckoning now to me, ''Come.''

Margie, thou wast mild and lovely, gentle as the summer breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening, when it floats among the trees.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber, peaceful in the grave so low;
Thou no more wilt join our number, thou no more our songs shalt know.

Dearest Margie, thou hast left us, but your memories are so sweet!
Could I see you now, dear, walking heaven's golden street!

Yet again we hope to meet thee, when the day of life is fled;
When, in heaven with joy we'll greet thee, where no farewell tears are shed.

One Who Loved Her, Annie Squires.

Burrow.

Swanna Margaret Burrow, daughter of A. M. and Margaret Burrow, was born November 18, 1911, departed this life February 12, 1923, aged 11 years, two months and 25 days.

She accepted Jesus as her Savior and joined Bethel Methodist Protestant church three years ago. Swanna was a good, sweet, obedient child. Just before she breathed her last she asked her sister if she had not been a good girl. Her sister told her she had and she said, ''I have tried to be.'' Then she looked up at her mother and asked them to join her in prayer. After she prayed she said as her last words, ''I see the open gates and Jesus.'' What a wonderful testimony she left us. It should draw us on toward heaven.

How we will miss Swanna in Sunday school. She was so faithful and interested in her class work. From a very small child she was just a wonder in the way she helped in Children's Day programs and other entertainments. She did so much in such a short time that it seems now that she was doing her life's work rapidly. We will never know how much good was acomplished by her work until we join her inside the golden gates.

She leaves a father, mother, one brother and two sisters. Three brothers died in infancy.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. F. Ashburn, at Shiloh Methodidst Protestant church and interment followed in the church cemetery. The flower bearers were her Sunday teacher and the members of her class.

A dear little boy was very sick. His father and mother had prayed many times that he might vet well again.

One night, when very ill, he asked, ''Isn't God so busy sometimes, helping everybody, that he forgets such little boys as I?''

''No, my darling,'' said his mother, ''God never forgets. He cares every moment for his own dear children who are to live with Him always in glory. Even if he should take you from us, it would not be because he forgets you, but because he is thinking of you, and doing what will be the best thing for you and us.''

''O, mamma, I'm so glad God never forgets me!'' said the sick child. ''I won't forget him, if I can help it, ever.''

After a few days the little boy began to get well, and he said, ''God didn't forget me, did he, mamma?''—Selected.

WE MUST BUILD THE COLLEGE.

A Methodist Protestant college in North Carolina! What an inspiration the thought brings to the youth of our denomination in the Old North State! We who did not have the college in our youth want to build a college for the young people of the present era in the history of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina and in the south.

A reflection upon the past few years when the writer was coming into maturity causes thoughts of limited educational advantages. We had no college of our denomination in North Carolina. We did not have the advantages of a college education, and now we are convinced very deeply that we need a sollege and must have an educational institution in which our children may be trained for leadership and for service in the world. Our lack of the college training makes us feel more deeply the need of such an educational institution that the Methodist Protestants of North Carolina are going to have.

Again, the lack of the college training with those of us who have taken time to meditate upon the matter, drives us to the conclusion that we must provide for those of our young generation with a school that will give them a Christian education in every sense of the term. We have confidence in our leaders in the establishment of the college that it will be made such an institution. The writer feels as scores of others do that we must go forward and build the college. We must not stop; we will not stop until we have secured the entire $300,000 for ''our College.'' We rather like that term, and we all may speak of the college as ''our College'' after we have pledged and paid an amount to the building fund of the college.

The one great need to bring about the successful consummation of the college and the securing of sufficient money for its maintenance, as has been state repeatedly by Dr. Andrews, is getting all of the 25,000 or more Methodist Protestants in North Carolina interested in building the college. Thousands of them are interested and have contributed splendidly toward the erection of the college, but many thousand more of them apparently are not interested. We who are interested must work persistently to get others interested, not merely interested to the extent that they would like to see a college erected, but interested to the extent that they are willing to contribute of their means as God prospers them to the building of the college.

It is the earnest desire and hope of the writer that the momentum which the college enterprise has gained during the past few weeks and months may increase as the weeks and months come until every Methodist Protestant in North Carolina shall realize that he or she must have a part in establishing a Christian college in North Carolina which will be the highest, noblest and best work we will ever be able to do for our young people. Let us be optimistic. We ought to build the college; we need to build it; we must build it; we are able to build it; we will build it.

With apologies to Dr. Coue, the French scientist, let us say: ''Day by day, in every way, college interest is growing better and better.''

SOUTHERN RAILWAY IMPROVEMENT.

New cars and locomotives, costing more than $17,000,000, which have just been ordered by the Southern Railway System, will nearly all be built at points on the Southern's lines.

Fifty freight locomotives, 16 passenger locomotives, five dining cars, 3,070 box cars, 2,865 hopper-bottom coal cars, 2,000 gondola coal cars, and 200 stock cars are included in the order, all of them contracted for delivery during the summer so as to be available for business in the fall.

The locomotives are to be built at Richmond, Va., by the American Locomotive Co., 1,500 box cars and 1,365 coal cars at Memphis and St. Louis by the American Car and Foundry Co., 2,000 coal cars at Lenoir City, Tenn., by the Lenoir Car Works, 570 box cars at Mt. Vernon, Ill., by the Mt. Vernon Car Manufacturing Co., and 200 stock cars at Anniston, Ala., by the Kilby Car and Foundry Co. The remaining box and coal cars will be built by the Standard Steel Car Co., at its Baltimore and Middletown plants, and the dining cars by the Pullman Co. at Chicago.

All of this equipment will be of the latest design and suited to meet the requirements of traffic in the South. The freight locomotives will be of the Mikado type and the passenger locomotives of the Pacific type. The box cars will be 36 feet in length and of 40-ton capacity, similar to the 6,000 new box cars recently placed in service by the Southern. The stock cars will be 40 feet in length and the coal cars of 50-ton capacity.

With these new cars and locomotives in service, the Southern will be enabled to ''serve the South'' even more adequately than in the past and its faith in the continued growth of business in the territory it serves is indicated in a most substantial manner by this large outlay for additional equipment.

TERRIBLE TO CONTEMPLATE—MUST IT BE SO?

At Scutari, where the worst conditions prevail, 10,000 deportees are existing in Selamli Barracks and stables. Deaths average 25 daily. Typhus today claimed the last member of a family of twelve to fall victim to that disease since arrival here. The fourth physician to die of the same malady while attending refugees succumbed yesterday. Dr. Post, on one of his rounds, counted 100 dead bodies. Wrapped in bundles of rags, death had come days before the living knew it. One room contained 53 bodies. Refugees were afraid to bury them for fear of contracting disease. Three thousand people, who a few weeks ago were prosperous farmers in Anatolia, live on mud floors of stables, where many of them become staring skeletons from undernourishment and are waiting to die. Children are brought into the world a few feet from where the village priest offers prayers over the dead.

No less terrifying are scenes at Boadjikeuy Camp and other Depositories of the destitute and starving exiles. Especially heart-rending is the plight of 1200 dumped into a shelterless cove at Asiatic Kavak a few days ago, where they are exposed to cold and rain and where pneumonia is mowing them down.

Turkish gendarmes who guard these concentration camps have strict orders from Angora prohibiting taking photographs.

Word has just been received that the Turkish steamship Guljemal which brought 4,000 from the Black Sea to San Stefano is returning to Trebizonde for additional deportees to dump into these overcrowded camps to await removal to Greece. This notwithstanding the fact that Greece, which already has absorbed more than 1,000,000, officially notified the Turks that it can take no more refugees.

OUR LAW AS TO REASSESSMENT OF LAND VALUES.

Permit me to call attention in your columns to the fact that under the new revenue law the County Commissioners of each county on the first Monday in April, 1923, may determine by resolution duly entered upon the minutes that the real estate of the county is at present assessed at its true value in money and that reassessment thereof is not necessary, and if they shall so determine present values shall stand. On the other hand unless such resolution shall be adopted real estate shall be appraised this year by local assessors, i.e., a resident free holder as county supervisor with assistants in each township.

I think that this presents the final opportunity to readjust valuations of real estate, especially farming property and to correct the over-valuations that were had under the Revaluation Act of 1919. I, therefore, urge all land owners, especially farmers, to see their respective county commissioners on or before first Monday in April and urge them to see to it that nothing shall be done to prevent a new appraisal of real estate this year.

It may be argued that even if values shall be reduced tax rates will be increased. Even so, we have much to gain by way of arresting the tendency in the direction of public money spending by putting land values at their true values and letting the rate go to so high a point that public authorities will dare not go further, and it may be that the high rates will cause them to set up more economic policies.

THE GOSPEL FOR SPIRITUALLY NEGLECTED.

Tens of thousands of homesteaders are scattered over the vast rolling plains of the West. Many have settled from fifty to seventy-five miles from a railroad.

Aside from homesteaders, there are many farmers in more thickly-settled valleys; cattle men and sheep herders scattered over the sand-hill grazing lands in lonely seclusion and new settlers following the lumbermen on to the cut-over lands of the Northwest.

The spiritual neglect of these hardy pioneers is alarming. Without a knowledge of God many are falling a prey to bolshevist agitators, promoters of Mormonism and other soul-destroying cults. It is imperative that these scores of thousands of homes be reached with the Gospel at once!

The Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, founded by D. L. Moody, has undertaken to reach these spiritually destitute families with Colportage Library books adapted for both old and young, also emphasized gospels and testaments. This Association reports that during the past year nearly 600 shipments of this gospel liberature have been sent for careful placing in these out-of-the-way communities. Already some definite conversions have been reported; former church members revived and much interest manifested by children. Those desiring to may secure further information by addressing the Association.

GLADSTONE WHEN A BOY.

It is not always safe to follow the example of good and great men, even when advised to do so. The ''Evangelicaal Companion'' tells the following personal incident once related by the famous English statesman, Gladstone, to a small visitor.. He said:

''When I was a little chap, just leaving my folks, my father sent me to dine with Beaconsfield, who, having taken a fancy to me while visiting in Norfolkshire, wanted to have me as his guest.

''My good father, as he parted with me on his way to his lordship's, said, 'Now, William, when at his lordship's board be sure you do exactly as he does.' Well, I went to the good man's house, and sat down at the table and anxiously watched my host while he served the guests, bent, of course, on following my father's orders to do exactly as his lordship. When the guests had been served his lordship looked up from his plate and soon sneezed several times. I watched him and soon sneezed the same number of times I had noticed he had done. Nothing was said, the meal continued without interruption for a few more minutes, then his lordship exclaimed, 'A beastly draught,' and wheeling around in his chair, called to his valet to close a door that had been left open near his lordship's seat.

''Again I watched him, then, repeating the exclamation he had uttered, I wheeled in my chair and gave a similar command to the valet.

''There was a silence, his lordship's brow netted, his lips closed, and he gave me such a hard and inquiring look that I trembled from head to foot.

''At last he spoke, his voice not harsh, but determined.

'' 'See here, William, are you imitating me?' he asked.

'' 'Oh, no, your lordship,' I stammered out.

'' 'Well, what does this mean?'

'' 'Only, your lordship, that I am doing what father told me. He said I was to watch you at the table and do exactly as you did.'

''His lordship laughed heartily, then turning to his guests, said:

'' 'I am taught a lesson. I must not do that which I would not have others do'.''

Then closing the story with his little visitor, Mr. Gladstone said:

''Little man, always be careful never to do anything because other people do it, unless you are certain it is good and pleasing to God.''—Selected.

PROGRESS OF PROHIBITION IN GERMANY.

J. H. Larimore, Westerville, Ohio.

That Germany will go dry within ten years, is the belief of Dr. and Mrs. Reinhard Strecker of Darmstadt, Germany, who are in the United States studying prohibition and its effects. They and three others were delegates to the recent convention of the World League Against Alcoholism at Toronto, Ontario.

Dr. Strecker says that the American prohibition example will be followed by the German people who are watching everything that is going on in America. He is president of the Central Committee for Prohibition in Germany. Mrs. Strecker is a member of the German W. C. T. U.

In the young people of Germany, Dr. Strecker finds the greatest hope. They are, he says, insisting that a new order of things shall come about in their country. The Arbeiter Jugend, which is the organization of young workmen, has pledged itself against liquor. The Good Templars are the strongest and best individual organization in Germany. The W. C. T. U., although small, is making progress. There is a great deal of forward movement in the churches, Dr. Strecker says, especially among the young ministers. The aftermath of the war, he says, had produced two results. Many persons have ceased drinking liquor because of the drop in the value of the mark—others, discouraged because of economic conditions, have begun to drink more heavily.

Dr. Strecker says it is a mistake to regard the German people as a nation which drinks nothing but beer. The consumption of whiskey is very large and distillers especially fear the dry movement. The farmer, he says, has very little interest in the temperance proposition. He says the Jewish Young People's organization are for prohibition.

The obtaining of licenses, according to Dr. Strecker, is a matter of having the money to get them. Applications are made to the city attorney and he gives a license to all who can pay for it.

All political parties are represented in the Committee for Prohibition. The Socialist party is especially strong for wiping out the liquor traffic. Of the 430 seats of Reichstag, 186 are ocupied by Socialist members.. At the last party convention, two resolutions were adopted. First, that no food stuff should be used for liquor and second, that prohibition in America should be studied by workmen and the labor unions. Manufacturers also will be interested, Dr. Strecker says, in facts and figures from America showing that sober workmen produce the best results.

The women of Germany have equal suffrage with the men and there are thirty-seven women in the Reichstag. A total of three billion dollars is generally spent in Germany for drink. The drinker first takes beer and then whiskey and a lot of wine is consumed.

"In our investigation of conditions in America," said Dr. Strecker, "we found that the propaganda against prohibition is being conducted and financed by those who are interested in the liquor business and is the same in Germany. The news that comes out there from America is distorted. The liquor manufacturers and dealers are lying about conditions in the United States. I found many falsehoods when I examined the situation here. Many of your establishments are growing better and better in all of their interests. Drinking I find has been very greatly reduced.

"Many of the German speaking people I have met in the United States who were formerly against prohibition now favor it since they understand about prohibition and have seen its results. This will have a good effect in our country. Some of our German newspapers are against alcoholism. We have sent home many articles from America and they were all printed. A couple of test votes taken in two or our cities—Ornabruck and Bielefeld—showed that between 90 and 91 per cent of the residents who could vote were in favor of prohibition."

Dr. and Mrs. Strecker will remain in America several months and will make a speaking tour for the World League Against Alcoholism.

THE OLD SHIP OF ZION.

O what ship is this that will take us all home?
O glory! Hallelujah!
'Tis the old ship of Zion, Hallelujah!

Come along, come along, and let us go home!
O glory! Hallelujah!
Our home is over Jordan, Hallelujah!

Do you think she will be able to take us all home?
O glory! Hallelujah!
No doubt she will be able, Hallelujah!

She has landed many thousands and can land as many more,
O glory! Hallelujah!
She has landed them in heaven, Hallelujah!

(The last line of each stanza is repeated.)

WILL THE WATERS BE CHILLY?

Show pity, Lord, O Lord, forgive;
Prepare me, Lord, to die.
Let a repenting rebel live,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.

Chorus:—Will the waters be chilly?
Will the waters be chilly?
When I am called to die.

Are not Thy mercies large and free?
Prepare me, Lord, to die.
May not a sinner trust in Thee?
Prepare me, Lord, to die.

My sins are great, but don't surpass,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.
The pow'r and glory of Thy grace,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.

Great God, Thy nature hath no bound,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.
So let thy pard'ning love be found,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.

Here on my heart the burden lies,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.
And past offenses pain my eyes,
Prepare me, Lord, to die.

SHALL WE REFORM THE PAPERS?

As Dr. Whitaker, I think we need some trimming in many of our publications of news. I read with much interest the editorial to which Dr. Whitaker referred in the "Greensboro Daily News," and read almost all his editorials with much interest. I think he is one of the finest writers that I read after. I mean that he has the ability of telling you so you can see at once what he believes. He teaches many things I do not believe and so do many others. I just call attention to these from the pulpit and tell people that he is mistaken.

I am sure that he is off on the prohibition question and certain social questions, I mean the "mud-hole," pool table, evolution and other tommyrot. Shall we turn him down and continue to read the same stuff in other papers under the cover of some church flavor?

He may reform yet and be a strong man for Prohibition. I remember some twenty years ago that some preachers of Greensboro were in favor of the Dispensary, and now they are strong for prohibition. I am with you, Dr. Whitaker, if that is the right thing to do.

"COME UNTO ME."

Never before was there so great need for relaxation, and never before so many ways to relax. But it is well to remember that the tiredest part of a man is not his body but the soul of him. And we need to inquire, oftener than apparently we do, whether our diversions really rest the soul. There was Luther with his favorite musical instrument; and Ole Bull hanging over a cliff that he might catch the deep overtures of the sea; and Gladstone chopping trees in the forest at Hawarden; and Tennyson climbing to the aerie of his favorite house; and my mother with her open Bible and the far-away look in her eyes. Always need for a palce of retreat and repair. Perneed for a place of retreat and repair. Peris the best way to restore and restock a jaded spirit. Recreation is there, but not true rest. Better a brook to sprawl beside, or a hill to climb, or a good book, or a friend to commune with, and God. The old invitation is unannulled: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will rest you."—Rev. George Clarke Peck, D.D.

SUMMER CONFERENCE ON TUESDAY.

When we looked in on the Pastors' Conference on Tuesday we found Rev. D. A. Braswell speaking and the brethren applauding his sentiments. At the last meeting of the Annual Conference he was found to have a cancer in his mouth and the worst was feared. He attributes the prolongation of his life to the prayers of the brethren. Training for Leadership was the theme of the Conference. This had been discussed first by Brother Bates. Brother Braswell urged that parents do their part in preparing their children for service in the church. Bother Dixon spoke of the need of special training for local church officials, particularly stewards. Brother Bates referred to his practice of giving the best book on Sundady school work to each of his Sunday school superintendents as a Christmas gift.

Professor Forlines followed with the first of his series of addresses. He announced as his subject The Atonement. He makes a distinction between atonement and reconciliation, though many do not. Atonement he said is the ground for reconciliation, not reconciliation itself. He spoke at some length of atonement as set forth in the Old Testament. His conclusion was that atonement was made by animal sacrifices or other offerings only for ceremonial offences, not for real sins. Christ suffered for the real sins of men, and those who preceded Christ must be saved, if at all, through the merits of the great future Offering. He discussed briefly the doctrine of vicarious atonement as formerly held, and stated that the thought of scholars is now undergoing this change: Whereas they formerly believed and taught that Christ suffered the penalty of man's sins, now they are coming to the view that His sufferings, while vicarious, were not in the nature of a penalty.

Brother Neese followed with a paper on Evangelism. We hope to publish this paper, and will not discuss it here.

The address of Prof. William J. Thompson, Ph.D., of Drew Theological Seminary, was looked forward to with interest, and when the hour arrived he was introduced to the conference. In personal appearance he reminded us of McFarland of the Federal Council of Churches. To others he suggested Ed Stone of Baltimore, or Dr. Elderdice, or T. T. Hicks. He is vivacious, witty, and yet philosophical. He has an interesting manner of speech which engages and holds the attention. Occasionally his voice dropped too low to be heard a little distance away. We presume he was speaking with his lecture room pitch of voice. He surprised us by telling us that he started as a Methodist Protestant in Maryland. He went from home to live where there was no Methodist Protestant church, sought and followed his father's advice and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. How many good men we have lost by not having Methodist Protestant churches everywhere! We believe Warren of Boston was in early life a Methodist Protestant. He surprised us again by telling us that in polity our church is right and his wrong. He said his church is coming our way and some day will arrive when things will come to a state of normalcy. He said his church is imitating the policy of the tender-hearted man who cut off his dog's ears an inch at a time so as not to hurt the dog so badly. The subject of this first address was Prayer. He uncovered the reason for prayer, beginning with the first assertions of the human mind and feeling the way along to the discovery of God and the nature of God and our relationship to God. In prayer God has our attention and we have His. He distinguished several varieties of attention, as voluntary, involuntary, and spontaneous. His closing thought was this: when men will not voluntarily give their attention to God, when they stupidly ignore God, or perversely turn away from thought of God, He does something (sends some affliction or startling event) to attract their attention involuntarily to Himself. Men must recognize God and commune with Him—must pray.

After dinner in the dining hall of the Children's Home, and a rest period, we met again and heard a sermon by one of our young ministers, Rev. C. E. Phillips. Taking the incident of the two disciples on the way to Emmaus, with their troubled minds, and the discourse of Jesus which brought to them comfort and renewed hope, he applied the lesson to our own time, with its doubts and distresses, pointing to Jesus for light and peace and hope. Brother Phillips has good natural abilities which it is hoped he will continue to improve in a spirit of humility until he reaches his best efficiency.

In the night service in the college chapel, Dr. Thompson was to preach—the first sermon in our new college building, the auditorium of which has been furnished by the Heuser family.

Duties in the Herald office called us away before the night service.

—On Monday of last week Dr. F. T. Tagg, formerly editor of the Methodist Protestant for a long time, passed on after a week's illness. His death was caused by a clot on the brain, and he was unconscious for quite a while before the end came. He was one of the most widely known and best loved members of our church. He served as President of the General Conference for one term. The report of his death will bring a melancholy feeling to many in North Carolina, where he was an especial favorite. He came to our church from the Lutheran or at least from Lutheran parentage in his young manhood. He was brought up near Westminster, Md., we believe where he learned to love our church. We are permitted to give in another column the address of Dr. H. L. Elderdice at the funeral.

—It is rather startling to read of auto garages and modern machine shops being in operation in Nazareth near where Jesus lived when a boy.

—Rev. N. G. Bethea regrets his inability to attend the Summer Conference this year. After three services and a funeral last Sunday he felt too tired to make the trip.

—The attendance of ministers at Summer Conference is good, though a few who usually attend are missed—kept away by illness, funerals, or other circumstances.

—Rev. D. A. Highfill calls our attention to the fact that Brothers Hunt and York are his superiors in age. Brother Highfill is among those in attendance at the Summer Conference. We had placed him next to Rev. W. C. Kennett in order of age.

—Brother J. T. Trollinger as leader of music can either serve as chorister or as pianist.

—Two young men from Davidson county sang a duet and one of them a solo in the Summer Conference Tuesday afternoon. It was announced that their services would be available for special meetings as leaders of song.

—Charles Weaver, once a type setter in this office when he was in his teens, is now president of a college. He was a quiet industrious boy and has worked up to his present position of trust and responsibility. He is a Baptist.

—Four men in President Harding's party in his western tour were in an auto which fell down a mountain side. Two were killed and a third has since died. One was a member of the National Republican Committee and another was a distinguished newspaper man.

If the enthusiastic young friend who sent the report of the baseball game at the Young People's Summer Conference will send his (or her) name, we will publish the report. Such reports touch too delicate sensibilities to publish them without knowing who is responsible.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS.

By William Thornton Whitsett.

Some day we shall have written for us by an agile brain and a facile pen the story of the college commencement considered from the psychological standpoint. It will be a fat and juicy octavo volume, and its contents will be a revelation to the uninitiated. As it holds the mirror up to Nature it will give us many a satisfying picture.

''Know then thyself, presume not God to scan,
The proper study of mankind is man.''
—Pope—Essay on Man. Ep. I, Line 57.

In the second chapter of that wonderful book known as The Wisdom of Saso we have this attempted classification of the various elements that enter into an average commencement. This reduction to percentage bases has evidently been arrived at from a long and careful study of these occasions, and while the percentages may rise and fall on various occasions, it is likely that the correct average has about been described as follows: Wisdom, five per cent; Philosophy, five per cent; Humor, five per cent; Absurdity, ten per cent; Society, 25 per cent; Humanity, 50 per cent.

If we were attempting an analysis of these figures we would be inclined to begin with the highest score, Humanity. Under the high statement of 50 per cent we would place the coming and going of the crowd, their striving for choice seats, their forgetfulness of all but their neighbors, their disregard of the rights of others, etc. The score of 25 per cent under the heading of Society would call to mind dress, cars, groups, fraternity clans, amorous couples, etc., etc. Wisdom, with a score of five per cent would remind us of the occasional flashes of real insight into life and great events as shown by those who move as the high lights of the occasion. Philosophy with a score of five per cent might call to mind the successful efforts of various parts of the program to make the most of the moment, and to give something of the lasting and permanent to the flying occasion. Absurdity may often have no difficulty in making a score of ten per cent. Pomposity, seeking by sundry devices to attract attention to itself; unwonted and unwarranted dignity settling down as a halo in some favored spot; some over-bold individual wading out beyond his depth in deep waters of advice or discussion; cap and gown in battle with the uncouth and the untrained; accidents in place and position revealing the fact strongly that they are only accidents, ''simply that and nothing more.''

''All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players.''

The play of the commencement as it is set is always an interesting one, but the study of the larger play that is also going on in connection with the interesting scholastic exercises is much more interesting. It adds to the occasion a zest that no brilliant commencement can ever give, and fills the hour with memories that may well form the basis for consideration in many days to come.

If one might move as an observant philosopher amid the throngs he could find material on every hand for his reflections. Chilhood, Youth, Manhood, Old Age, are all around, and from each and all something of value and suggestion constantly come.

It is not alone the scholastic that may entertain us; politics, social advancement, love-making, displays of wealth, envy, friendship, good-will, courtesy, and a hundred other matters are on every side if we care to behold.

Great is the college commencement. No wonder that it is one of our most popular institutions, and that it keeps its perennial hold upon so many people. Its elements are sufficiently varied for it to make always an unusual appeal to a great number. It is to be taken seriously, but in so doing there can be no harm in seeing its lighter sides also. It would be entirely too serious a matter to take it as seriously as it sometimes takes itself.

ON THE HOUSETOP.

''When thou buildest a new house,'' said the law of Moses, ''then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house if any man fall from thence.'' Deut. 22:8. So every new house built by the Israelites was required to have a wall around the edge of the roof. The roofs were not peaked as they are in countries where the snows lie heavy and must be disposed of, and so the housetop became a safe and quiet place where one could find rest, seclusion, air, and sunshine.

There doubtless the children had room for their plays. There we may suppose many a husband retired for a little quiet when there was too much talk downstairs. Prov. 21:9. Here also men, looking down over the battlement into the streets, could proclaim to the passing crowds the messages which were designed for the public ear. Matt. 10:27; Luke 12:3. Here in seclusion idolaters could worship the host of heaven unobserved. Zeph. 1:5.

To the housetops people fled in trouble and distress. Isa. 22:1. And in times when safety was to be sought in instant flight, he that was on the housetop was to hurry directly down to the street and escape, without entering the house to attempt to save his goods. Matt. 24:17; Mark 13:15.

It was easy to make the housetop like a garden. There little short-lived grass might spring up, only to be scorched by the summer's drouth. Ps. 129:6; Isa. 37:27. But by the use of the watering-pot the housetop might be made a conservatory, adorned by various plants and flowers. Here, too, the birds of the air could find a refuge and a rest. Ps. 102:7. And from the housetop ill-bred people sometimes looked abroad and saw things they had no business to see.

We can easily imagine how pleasant it must have been for an Eastern woman, secluded and shut in as they often were, to go up on the housetop and feed the birds and water the plants, and catch the morning breeze or enjoy the glory of the sunset, and so spend an hour in quiet and in peace. Here sometimes the booths were placed in which the children of Israel were to dwell during the feast of Tabernacles, and so the housetop was associated with days of pleasant religious festivity.

Especially was the housetop fitted for a place of prayer. There, away from the gloom of the ill-lighted and ill-ventilated house, and above the noise and confusion of the city, was a place for quiet communion with God, and earnest prayer for his blessing. It was to such a place that Peter went up to pray, and there the vision of the great sheet let down from heaven taught him the lesson that ''God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him.'' Acts 10:9-35.

There are many modern houses that have gardens and quiet retreats upon the roofs. But whether we have such paces of seclusion or not, there is always some place for prayer if we only have hearts to pray.

''Sweet hour of prayer, sweet hour of prayer,
That calls me from a world of care,
And bids me at my Father's throne,
Make all my wants and wishes known.
In seasons of distress and grief,
My soul has often found relief;
And oft escaped the tempter's snare,
By thy return, sweet hour of prayer.''
—The Little Christian.

A CONSCIENTIOUS HORSE.

Dr. Paul, of Winnepeg, recently told a story about his partner in business for a score of years or more,—his horse.

When the doctor and he were twenty years younger in practice, Dr. Paul received a ''hurry'' night call from one of the best families in his circle. They lived a mile or more away in a rural neighborhood, and although it was late at night and storming, the doctor rushed out there at full speed.

On arriving in the yard at the house, he threw the blanket hastily upon, or rather at the horse (which never required hitching), and dashed into the house with his case of instruments. It turned out that the aged grandmother of the family had had a fall, that her shoulder was dislocated, that the pain was so great that ether had to be administered; in short, the doctor could not take his hand off his work for three hours. All this while a driving sleet storm, the moisture freezing as it fell and giving everything a coat of ice, was beating upon his partner out in the yard.

When the doctor emerged in the small hours, it was to find the horse where he had left him, except that the rig was headed round for home. A daylight examination revealed the fact, through the marks of the hoofs and wheels of the buggy, that during his long wait of three hours in a pelting and freezing storm, the horse had, a score of times, made up his mind to go home, and had gone down the road sometimes a quarter, sometimes half, of the way, and then had thought this hard on the doctor, and had turned back to wait as in duty bound.—Boston Transcript.

THE PREACHER'S SON.

Three boys were discussing the greatness of their fathers, each one bragging more than the other. The first boy said: ''My father just takes a piece of paper with lines on it, and makes a few dots on them. That's music, and he gets $50 for it.''

''Oh, that's nothing,'' said the second boy. ''My father writes some words on a piece of paper in verse. That's poetry, and he gets $100 for it.''

The third boy came back trong. He said: ''My father writes out some words on paper and then preaches them in church. That's a sermon, and it takes six men to bring in the money!''—Boston Globe.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

OUR SLOGAN:—As Faithful in Service for Christ as for Self.

2. The Church Paper in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
3. A Revival in Every Church With a Worthy Increase in Members.
4. Every Member a Contributing Member.
5. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
6. The Full $300,000 Subscribed for the College by June 1, 1923.

OUR MOTTO:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all our workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

Sunday, June 10, was spent on the road to Calvin, La., with Rev. L. C. Little, accompanying the remains of his sister Alice back to the old home for burial. Alice was a dear sweet child only 17 years old and longed to live just as do all boys and girls of that age, but she was ready to go, and although loving and longing hearts were praying for her recovery the dear Father saw best to call her home. It was a sad home-going for Brother Little, but we left his mother and sisters much more reconciled after we had told them of her last days and last hours here. I am sure that all the brethren who know of this sad bereavement will breathe a prayer to the Father of us all for His rich blessings upon each member of the immediate family.

I returned to North Carolina in time to spend most of the ten days with the young people and the workers in the Young People's Summer Conference at Weaverville. It was a deeply spiritual meeting from the beginning to the end. In all my experience I have never seen a finer group of young people gathered together. They were wide-awake and full of fun, but there was a seriousness that characterized them which bespeaks greater service in the home churches to which they have all returned.

It was my privilege to be there among the workers who were interested in the development of these young people, and as I mingled with them I didn't see one thing in them to criticize adversely except that some of the boys did smoke occasionally.

Mr. Geo. B. Harris of Henderson and Capt. A. M. Rankin of High Point were there for the entire meeting, and Mr. J. Norman Wills was there for the greater part of it. They were about the youngest ones among us, and the boys and girls came to appreciate them all the more. I am hoping that the three referred to, together with others who were present, will find the time to give us their impressions of the meeting. I am sorry any of our people had to miss it; for it was a mountain-top experience to all who were there. Yours in His service,

A. G. Dixon.

Mrs. Medlock, although in her eighties and has never seen the Home or any of the children, never forgets our needs.

The O'Brien Bakery donates another supply of nice bread and the Ladies' Aid of First Church, High Point, furnished us some nice beef roast and bread.

Just received six more table cloths from the Ladies' Aid at Randleman. How would the churches get along without the different organizations of the ladies? H. A. Garrett.

HOW THE BOY BOUGHT A BIBLE.

John Davies was but thirteen years of age when he purchased a Bible for himself with his own money. Of course in our day many younger children than he have procured Bibles for their own use; but in his day, years ago, Bibles were much more scarce than they are now. In "Sunlight for the Young" we are told how this boy got his Bible:

John was the son of a poor widow, and lived at Newtown. One bitterly cold night he arrived at the bookseller's at ten o'clock, and finding that the shop was closed, he went to the house and knocked. The little circle within the house had gathered for their reading of the Scriptures and prayer, and he was at first unanswered. But he continued knocking, and his perseverance was at length rewarded. Opening the door the servant asked what he wanted. He replied, "A Bible."

"If you come in the morning," said the bookseller, who had drawn near, "you can have one."

"I cannot, sir, as I work two miles from Newtown, and don't return home until late at night."

"Come in, then, and you shall have one."

In answer to further questions he told the bookseller that he heard that Bibles could be got very cheap at that store, and therefore had saved money in order to get one for himself. Receiving the book he went off with his purchase, well satisfied.

The next morning his widowed mother came to the bookseller's with the Bible in her hand. At first he feared that the money with which it had been bought had been got in some wrong way, but his doubts were soon dismissed.

"Did my little boy buy this Bible here last night?" she asked.

"He did, and told me that he saved the money for that purpose."

"And how do you think he saved it?"

"I cannot tell."

"Well, I will tell you. Having to leave home very early every morning, I cut him two large pieces of black bread,—for I cannot get anything better,—one for his breakfast and the other for his dinner; his supper he had when he came home at night; and with this I gave him a half-penny each day to buy some milk, and told him to divide it into equal parts, to drink with his slices of bread." The mother paused, for her feelings almost overcame her, but with an effort she proceeded: "The little boy ate the black bread, and drank water in order to save some money to buy this Bible."

Such is the story. What do you think of it,—have you such a love for God's Word in you? In this day many are turning from truth unto fables. May God give you to value the Scriptures, to hide them in your heart, to think them over, to feed upon them, and to esteem them more than thousands of gold and silver.

We know a boy who bought his first bound book, a hymn-book, by going without butter for a month. Since then he has had many books and has published many books. He has never regretted buying that first book.

MANHOOD GREATER THAN WEALTH.

A very interesting story is told of a young clerk in a dry-goods shop, who came into possession of a large fortune by inheritance from a distant relative. The young man was one day called to his employer's private office, and listened with amazement to the news as it was imparted to him by a lawyer.

"I suppose I must not expect your services as clerk any longer," said the merchant with a smile. "I shall be sorry to lose you."

"Oh, I shall stay my month out, of course, sir," said the boy, promptly. "I shouldn't want to break my word just because I've had some money left me."

The two elder men exchanged glances. The money referred to was nearly $300,000.

"Well," said the lawyer, stroking his mouth to conceal his expression, "I should like an hour of your time between ten and four tomorrow, my young friend, as it will be necessary for you to read and sign some papers."

"Yes, sir," said the clerk; "I always take my luncheon at 11:45. I'll take that hour for you, instead, tomorrow. If I eat a good breakfast I can get along all right until six o'clock."

That was a sensible boy. He had hold of the right end of life. It is not what we have but what we are which counts most. That is what Christ meant when he said, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."—The Voice.

Glory follows virtue as if it were its shadow.—Cicero.

In my report of the subscription made by Mrs. S. J. Kernodle to the Library Fund, which had been reported previously by Dr. Andrews, I failed to state that she gave her check for the full amount—$1,000, at the time of making the subscription. This has been credited to a special Library Fund.

THREE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS.

The secretary of the Board of Education had the pleasure of being present at most of the commencement exercises at two of our institutions and was present at one other, just before and just after commencement week.

Kansas City University and Westminster College both face another school year with new administrative heads. At Kansas City University there is still a lively hope that Dr. Showers of the Bonebrake Theological Seminary will accept the chancellorship to which he was unanimously elected. In the meantime the University is fortunate in having Prof. May of the faculty as manager pro tempore. Prof. May has already outlined an aggressive campaign both for students and money. The new manager is a graduate of the University as well as of the Bonebrake Theological Seminary and commands the confidence and respect of all those who know him. Dr. S. S. Fisher, for several years a member of the faculty, who has won for himself a place in greater Kansas City, both as author and educator, has been chosen dean. The office of dean was made vacant by the death of the well-beloved Dr. Reese. The thanks of the friends of the University are due to Dr. Martin who has been acting dean during the time intervening between the death of Dr. Reese and the election of Dr. Fisher. The election of a United Brethren as chancellor and of a Methodist Protestant as dean is in recognition of a common understanding between the two denominations and is an evidence of the marked spirit of co-operation between these two churches in the administration of this institution. Dr. May and Dr. Fisher are both worthy of the full co-operation on the part of all those interested in the cause of Christian education.

Prof. E. E. Biggs, a graduate of Kansas City University and of Westminster Theological Seminary, having done special work in the University of Texas where he received the degree of M. A., was elected president of Westminster College. This institution suffered the loss of several members of the faculty who had served the institution most worthily. Perhaps Westminster College enjoyed its best year in the year just closed; certainly this was true from an educational point of view. However, the return to the faculty of some who had served it in other years will help to balance the loss suffered through the resignation of several valuable members of the teaching force during the pasty ear. Dr. Biggs has been a self-sacrificing servant of the church through many years and will give to this institution the best that is in him and he is worthy of the full co-operation and support of all those interested in this school.

Adrian College graduated one of the largest classes ever completing the ful college course at "Old Adrian." Fortunately there were few changes in the faculty and Dr. Feeman remains as administrative head.

The cause of Christian education is one that lies near the heart of all those interested in the progress of the church and growth of the Kingdom of God. While we are proud of what has been done by all our schools we are concerned lest there should be a failure on the part of the church itself to appreciate its full responsibility in this field of definite Christian service.

George H. Miller,
Secretary Board of Education.

—The attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement of Western Maryland College appearing in this issue. This college has made a record for thoroughness and excellence not surpassed by any in the state. During the past year, it has received the highest rating for colleges by the standardizing agencies, and it is now in every respect a Standard A-1 college. Its beautiful location in the highlands of Maryland, its fine equipment in buildings and grounds, its high-grade faculty, its modern courses of study, make it an attractive place to get an education.

A new dormitory, costing $150,000, was completed during the past year and a new athletic field, built at a cost of $50,000 and considered one of the best fields in the eastern part of the United States, was also dedicated during the year just closing. A building campaign for the construction of eight additional buildings during the next four years is now under way. The college plant has now a value of $1,500,000 and it is proposed to augment this by at least that much more.

The college offers eight courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Courses may be elected which prepare for the schools of law, medicine, and engineering, and which admit to the best professional schools of the United States. A four-year course in Home Economics leading to a degree is offered. In addition to the regular courses offered, there are supplementary courses in Music, Speech and Education. Completion of the last named course secures a certificate of the State Board of Education. A regular unit of the Reserve Officer's Training Corps is established at the college, the Government supplying the Professor of Military Science and Tactics and uniform and equipment.

We commend this institution to our readers who may be considering sending their sons and daughters away to college. The college opens Monday, September 17th. Students ard advised to register in advance.

—Brother Henry Hunter is to take a trip to Florida soon with other members of the family. The sons are particularly eager for the trip.

—Mrs. Hannah Greeson, widow of the late Thomas Greeson, died last Sunday and was buried at Tabernacle Monday afternoon. She was 80 years old. She left one son and four daughters, Mrs. Rev. J. H. Bowman, Mrs. W. A. Bowman, Mrs. Charles Kirkman, and Mrs. D. A. Neese. Brother Millaway assisted Brother Burgess in the funeral.

—We went to the hospital last Sunday to see Rev. Fred Paschall, and found him gone. His recovery was most rapid, he having been in the hospital less than two weeks.

—Rev. Lawrence Little has the distinction of having received the highest average grade of all the young men at Guilford College the year just closed. He completed the sophomore year.

—John W. Kimball, High Point's chief electrician, fell from a pole last Monday and died from his injuries.

FORWARD MOVEMENT

Rev C S Johnson, Sec.

WHAT THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH IS DOING TOWARD THE SUPPORT OF HER SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS AND MINISTERS' WIDOWS.

Information published in the annual conference minutes reveals the fact that but little financial support is given our superannuated ministers and ministers' widows and orphans. The general church at the last general conference started a fund from the earnings of which help is to be administered, but no distribution will be made this quadrennium. The treasurer, Mr. Thos. A. Murray, reports that this fun has grown to $14,651. It is made up of the receipts on the General Conference budget at the rate of four per cent.

Each annual conference is left to look after its own claimants. In most of the conferences very little is done. If what the average preacher receives from his conference were all his support he would probably starve. One or two conferences only provide a competence. The rest provide little or nothing. Fortunately, some of these men and women have other means of support, or friends see that they do not suffer.

There is a growing sentiment that the support of the worn-out ministers and their widows is a responsibility resting upon the churches and must be met not as a charity but as a debt, in the nature of a deferred payment on salary. By the nature of his calling the preacher is not a money-maker, except for others. He cannot give attention to business to the extent of having his own home. His salary is usually figured on the basis of a bare living, and often it must be supplemented by donations. If his salary were as it should be he might be independent in his age.

Most business corporations recognize their obligation to their old and faithful employees. The ethical sense of the church should not be lower than in the commercial world. The church is moving slowly in that direction. Maryland's $100,000 campaign will be an inspiration to the whole church. It would be a great outcome if other conferences would follow the pace set, each according to its need.

We set forth here the facts regarding the present situation as we have been able to gather them from the conference minutes and elsewhere. The following conferences make no report of any kind regarding their superannuates: Alabama (Colored), Florida. Mississippi North Mississippi, South Carolina, South Carolina (Colored), Tennessee. Virginia, Washington. The following report the number of their superannuates, but nothing done for them: Georgia, Georgia (Colored). Kentucky, Louisiana.

According to the reports there are 145 superannuates, 167 widows and one orphan in the denomination; and of these 97 superannuates, 140 widows and one orphan received last year appropriations amounting to $38,729. or $163 each, on the average. The total of all capital funds reported is $5[illegible]567, which added to the general conference fund makes a total of $532,218.

The following table shows the number of superannuates and widows in each conference, the number of beneficiaries. the capital fund in each conference reporting, the total distributed, and the average paid to each beneficiary. In the case of Maryland one orphan received help, but to avoid making another column he is counted in the column with the widows.

MEETING OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committee of the General Conference will meet in North Baltimore Methodist Protestant Church, Mt. Royal Avenue, near North Avenue, Baltimore, Md., on Tuesday, July 10, at nine o'clock A. M., standard time. The church is five minutes walk from Union Station.

Any person having business with the committee is invited to be present, or to communicate with either the chairman, Rev. T. H. Lewis, D.D., 2844 Wisconsin Avenue. Washington, D. C., or with the secretary, Rev. T. M. Johnson, Mebane, N. C.

By order of the chairman.

T. M. Johnson, Secretary.

FIVE KINDS OF PENNIES.

Tin.

A boy who had a pocketful of coppers dropped one into a missionary box, laughing as he did so. He had no thought in his heart about Jesus or the heathen.

Was his penny not as light as tin?

Brass.

Another boy put in a penny and looked around to see if anybody was praising him.

His was the brass penny; not the gift of a lowly heart, but of a proud spirit.

Iron.

A third boy gave a penny, saying to himself. "I suppose I must, because all the others do."

That was an iron penny. It was the gift of a cold, selfish heart.

Silver.

As the fourth boy dropped his penny into the box he shed tears, and his heart said, "Poor heathen! I am sorry they are so poor, so ignorant, and so miserable."

This was a silver penny—the gift of a heart full of pity.

Gold.

But there was one scholar gave his, thinking, "For Thy sake, Lord Jesus! Oh, that the heathen may hear of Thee, the Savior of mankind."

That was a golden penny, because it was the gift of faith and love.—Unknown.

"HEAPING COALS."

"Mamma," said Willie, "Harry has stolen my marbles and the next time I see him, won't I give him a pounding?"

"Willie, in the Bible we read: 'If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.' "

"What is an enemy, mamma?"

"A little boy who steals your marbles."

"And what is heaping coals on his head?"

"That is being as kind as possible to him the very first chance you get."

"I believe I'll do it, mamma."

Not many days after Willie came running in to his mother and exclaimed: "Get me a penny out of my box! Harry's mother gave him two pennies to buy a kite, and he's lost one, and he's crying; and I want to heap coals."

His mother gave him the penny, and he ran to Harry with it.

Then Harry and Willie were friends again.

Don't you think heaping coals was much better than for Willie to pound Harry?—Selected.

BETTER DO IT NOW.

Time is passing, there is need of haste; this opportunity will soon be gone, you had better act right now before it is too late. What is is all about? Why, my superintendent friend, you have failed to send me your order for Children's Day Services, and you ought to do that one thing instanter.

Your Sunday school is entitled to a special Children's Day service, the General Conference expects yorr school to observe that day in the interest of foreign missions, and the board has gone to considerable expense to make it possible for every school to have a service, because all the supplies are sent free.

Come on now, brother, and send that order at once. We have had extra copies printed because we expect you, and others who have not ordered the suplies, to send in an order. Just drop a postal to Rev. Fred. C. Klein, 316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md., and we will do the rest.

Nagoya College, Japan.

Rev. Dr. Leigh Layman sent the following historic reference to the progress of our institution at Nagoya, Japan, which will be of interest to all our people, I am sure.

"The history of this school is divided into two periods. The first extends from 1887 to 1906. During this period five classes were graduated, with a total enrollment of 22. The reports of 1904 show a total attendance of 128. The faculty numbered 12. This period covers practically 20 years.

"In 1906 a change was made in the status of the school, and good results immediately appeared. The registration for 1906 was 124. In 1923 we start out with 1918 students enrolled.

"Seventeen classes have been graduated. The first class numbered eight, the last class, 1923, numbered 100. The total number of graduates for these seventeen years is 742. The members of the faculty numbered in 1906 11. The number in 1923 is 30. Thus is seen the fact that as the school grows in numbers the expense of the school is lessened.

The budget requested for 1906 was Yen 9,040. The budget requested for 1923 is Yen 4,000.00.

"On March 5, 1923, we graduated the 17th class of this second period. The class numbered 100. Of this number 37 were Christians. Twenty-six members of the class were able to enter higher schools. Three were able to enter without examinations. This year's number to enter higher schools is larger than usual. The examinations are very severe, and many hundreds fail to enter, because of the lack of accommodation in the higher schools.

Conforming to the idea of last year, the graduating exercises were very simple. The spirit of democracy prevailing is cutting out much of the formality which formerly was the rule.

"Principal Kimura gave a splendid address, the key note of which was Christian Ideals, the great need of the times.

"The representative of the class, as usual, was a Christian, and he, too sounded the same note. The representative of the student body, not to be left behind, gave a strong Christian speech.

"The one outstanding feature of all our graduating exercises is the definite acknowledgement that Christian principles and ideals are the great results this school gives to its students.

"We enter upon the new year with great hopes. Better buildings, a better faculty, a better student body, which numbers 1018, are the basis of these hopes.

"Nagoya, Japan, May 1, 1923.

BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS

"IN JOURNEYS OFT."

It may seen to the readers of this paper that your secretary is presuming even in adopting a quotation from one of the letters of St. Paul and using it as a title for this article. However, it seems to be very apropos at the present time.

Those who have read the contributions to this column in recent weeks will know that I have visited the far West and participated in the dedicatory services at the new Ravenna Park church in Seattle. I arrived in Seattle on Saturday morning, May 26, and remained until Monday morning, June 4. Sunday, the 27th, was given entirely to the work at Ravenna. I was asked to take care of the financial appeal for the day and presented the matter at both the morning and afternoon services. In the evening Dr. Alfred E. Fletcher, pastor of the First Church, presented the appeal.

The story of the day is to be written by Dr. Lewis who preached the dedicatory sermon in the morning, so I will not enter into further detail at this time.

At the services in the afternoon Rev. Dr. H. R. Chatterton, executive ecretary of the Council of Churches of the city of Seattle, delivered an address in which he made a statement to the effect that this new church was the most up-to-date and best equipped of the suburban churches in the city of Seattle. He also congratulated the Board of Home Missions of the Methodist Protestant Church upon its wisdom and foresight in assisting this community in securing a church so adequately equipped to meet the needs of the growing community at this time. He also said he expected to call the attention of other communities to what had been done in the Ravenna district. The church, itself, as noted in a former article, is the best property I have seen for the amount of its cost. Beside the auditorium there is a Sunday school assembly room, twenty-two class rooms, a large social hall with platform and stereopticon equipment, with kitchen equipment, mothers' room, rest rooms, pastor's study, church parlors, choir room and all the rest of the equipment required for a modern church plant. I am sure that every reader of this paper would be delighted with the equipment and would join with your secretary in expressing surprise that so much has been secured for a little less than $35,000. Every room in the entire building, however, is being called into immediate service. Had finances been easier it would have been wiser to have expended more money and increased the size of the building. However, the present equipment will probably meet the needs for from three to five years.

One of the finest things with reference to this entire enterprise is the loyal co-operation, including the splendid financial assistance given by the First Church and Seaview, our two other churches in this city.

The morning and afternoon of the second Sunday of my stay in Seattle were spent with the Seaview Church and in the evening it was my pleasure to preach to the congregation at First Church. Plans for building at Seaview are being considered and a definite program would be announced if the financial condition of the board would make it possible for us to give needed assistance at this time. Just as soon as matters can be arranged, work must be begun on a new church in the Seaview community.

Charles H. Beck.

BIG WORDS.

A writer in an English Methodist paper reports that a good local preacher in one of the village chapels prayed that the Lord would "annihilate the Queen and all the royal family." He was greatly distressed when he learned the meaning of his prayer, as he probably thought he was doing honor to the royal house by using the biggest word that he could recall in invoking blessings upon them.

A servant girl who wrote beautiful letters, when asked how she did it, said she only used such words as she could spell.

If people when they pray would only use such words as they can spell, and pronounce, and define correctly; and only ask for such things as they believe God will give them, it would make a wonderful improvement in many prayers.—Selected.

IF I WERE A BOY.

It is very easy for grown men to tell what they would do if they were boys again. Well, the experiences of life ought to teach them something; but boys would rather learn by experience than by instruction. At least, that was the way when the men of today were boys. Under the caption, "If I Were You, My Boy," somebody wrote the following in an exchange:

"I wouldn't be ashamed to do right anywhere. I would not do anything that I would not be willing for everybody to know.

"I wouldn't go into the company of boys who use bad language.

"I wouldn't conclude that I knew more than my father before I had been fifty miles away from home.

"I wouldn't get into the sulks and pout whenever I couldn't have my own way about everything.

"I wouldn't abuse little boys who had no big brothers for me to be afraid of.

"I would learn to be polite to everybody."

All this is good advice, and he who heeds it will find himself growing a better manhood.

After dinner sit awhile,
After supper walk a mile.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, JULY 1.

Lessons From the Psalms—The History Psalm.

Psalms 44: 1-8.

The Christian Endeavor topic for next Sunday, July 1, calls for a study of the History Psalm, the 44th. History is an interesting study, whether it be history of events of a nation or history of the progress of the human race. We have had a series of topics on the general subject of Lessons From the Psalms, and it will be a profitable study if Christian Endeavorers will study the 44th Psalm and draw from it some historical lessons that will increase their knowledge of Biblical truths.

The Psalm for the above topic has eight verses in it that furnish some interesting facts of history. The Psalmist David declares in the first verse that "we have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in the times of old." He discusses what God has done "in the times of old." We may well study the wonderful works that have been done by the Almighty in the times of old. The creation of the heavens and the earth and all that dwell therein was the work of God. The Psalmist says in another division of the Psalms, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The creation of man in His own image was perhaps the highest type of God's creation.

This 44th Psalm deals principally with the works of God among a nation of people, a heathen people, who were driven out of their country by the hand of God. The people in the time spoken of by the Psalmist were afflicted and cast out, according to the second verse of the Psalm. From the 5th to the 8th verses, inclusive, there are contained some truths of how David regarded the help of God in combating with the enemies; as he says in the fifth verse, "through thee will we push down our enemies: through thy name will we tread them under that rise up against us."

The lesson for us in these verses of the 44th Psalm is a lesson of the mighty power, the inexhaustible power of God in His dealings with His creatures. The history of the Bible, the history of creation, both of the heavens and the earth, and the creation of man, reveals some of the most sublime truths of the Bible that should make every one devoutly and sincerely grateful for the events that have transpired during the ages of the past.

Well might we wonder, yea revere, the sacred history given to us by the different authors of the various books of the Bible. The historic events in the life of Abraham, Moses, David, and other Old Testament characters, together with the interesting events of the lives of Christ and the New Testament authors, should thrill us with their lessons of God's great love for His people and His infinite power demonstrated in the creation of the world and the human race.

Sacred history reveals to the careful student the mighty works of God in the heavens and in the earth. His supreme power and majesty and glory are everywhere evident. The sun, the moon, the stars, the ocean, the mountains, all of these give evidence of His supreme power over the things of earth. The forest, with its giant oaks, standing erect as if pointing toward the heavens, declaring in silence the majestic power of the Creator of all things; the immense fields of grain, the shrubbery, vegetation, flowers in their matchless beauty and fragrance all tell of the wonderful works of God for man.

May we all do as the Psalmist David, as recorded in the 8th verse of that 44th Psalm: "In God we boast all the day long, and praise thy name forever." As we meditate and study the history of the mighty works of God and the events of His people through the ages of the past, may our hearts be lifted to God, our creator, preserver and ruler, in humble gratitude for his manifold mercies and blessings which have followed us all the days of our life.

BEAR YOUR OWN BURDENS.

We have heard of a fashionable lady who went shopping, bought a spool of thread at a big store, and ordered it sent home to her address. A few hours after a delivery wagon drove up to her door, and two men carefully lifted out the spool of thread and delivered it to the purchaser!

A recent writer tells another story, of a young man who years ago kept a little bookstore in a country village and used often to buy books at the bookstore of Mark H. Newman of New York. Mr. Newman noticed one thing peculiar about his customer, whenever he bought a bundle of books, if it was not too large he always carried them away with his own hands, instead of troubling any one to carry the package for him; and this disposition to do his own work with his own hands, whenever his own hands were equal to it, so pleased the great book-seller that he began to think of the young man as a partner in his own business, and so, in due time, he was taken into partnership, and together they formed the firm which has grown into the famous publishing house of Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Company, whose imprint has been seen upon tens of thousands of valuable books.

"There is a great deal in this matter of carrying your own packages or bearing your own burdens. They who are careful to do this whenever they can, never willing to trouble another unnecessarily, are the very ones who are most ready to help others whose burdens are too heavy for them, and whom others are most glad to help when they have burdens heavier than they can carry alone.

"I have known boys who would never let their mother carry a bucket of coal or of water when they were near, and who would make their own bed and tidy up their own chamber when sister was sick or the hired girl had left without warning, or when they had noticed that the faithful hired girl looked tired or ill. And I have known other boys who, with nothing whatever to do, stand at the top of the stairs and call mother or sister to fill their pitcher or bring their clean clothes, and the patient, kind, but unwise mother would submit to the selfish tyranny. I did not know Henry Ivison when a boy, but believing that 'the boy is father of the man,' I am sure that his good Scotch mother was saved many a weary step by her thoughtful boy. I think that Henry learned the fifth commandment and kept it—learned and kept it 'by heart.' I believe, too, that Mr. Newman in his old age found his business attended to by his young partner in a way that gave his mind rest when it was needing it.

"Boys, girls, carry your own packages while they are not too heavy. This will strengthen your arms to help others who need help, and make them love to help you when your arms are too weak."—Selected.

TIME AFTER TIME.

By Sarah V. DuBois.

Two boys stood close beside a number of workmen busily engaged in constructing a building. "That seems nice work," said one to the other, observingly as he watched a mechanic driving with well-aimed force nail after nail into place.

"Yes, I should like to be a carpenter, but I never could have the patience to hit the same nail so many times," said the other boy.

The workman paused, his hammer lifted midway, and smiled. "You would never do for a mechanic then," he said, "since it is only repeated effort that brings good result."

This is true along any line of work you may pursue. The art of accomplishing a task skillfully is not learned in a day, but often represents years of steadfast toil. This ought not to discourage us however, but rather to increase our desire to succeed. It is true that "no great thing was ever lightly won."

A boy who early in life sets about his work, whatever it may be, in earnest, is likely to accomplish wonderful results. "That son of yours is a born farmer," remarked one man approvingly to another, as he noted the energetic manner in which the lad performed his task. "John always does his level best at everything," was the reply.

That is really the secret of the whole matter—our level best, and stopping at nothing short of it. A man who had distinguished himself in war was being entertained in a home where a bright-eyed lad sat at his feet eagerly listening to the conversation. "Well, my boy," said the soldier, "of what are you thinking?" "Sir," was the answer, "I mean to be a great soldier like you." "Oh," he said, as he laid bare a hidden scar, are you willing to pay the cost?" Time after time are we to perform the duties assigned us. Our work may not be marked by human eye, and it may seem of minor importance even to us, but if in it is thrown the energy of heart, of will and of mind, some day it will count, and the one talent will have been multiplied as the great Giver intended.—Selected.

DON'T KILL THE BIRDS.

On the return of spring, with its soft, balmy winds, and bright, beautiful sunshine, when the blades of grass, tender and green, came forth, and form a carpet for our feet; when the tender buds begin to open and the trees are robed in glory, the blithe little birds return to cheer us with notes of praise.

Who can tell the amount of good they do us? The trees would be stripped of their beautiful clothing if it were not for them. It has been said that one pair of sparrows, while rearing their young, have in one week put to death thirty-three hundred and sixty caterpillars, besides other insects.

I once read that a farmer loaded his wagon for a journey, and for some reason it was left standing for awhile, as he did not perform the journey as soon as he intended. A pair of robins built their nest in the straw; and when the farmer did go on his journey, one of the birds would not leave the nest, only to procure food for the young ones, while on the way. The birds also returned home with the good farmer, having traveled a distance of nearly fifty miles. Being a kind-hearted man, when unloading the wagon he was careful not to disturb the nest.

A favorite with many people is the little bluebird, so perfect in its make-up and cheering in its note. In early spring these birds return from a warmer climate, and make the orchards ring with their precious melody, while building their nests and hatching their darlings; and, if undisturbed, they will occupy the same little home for years. A pair of them built their nest in a hollow tree, year after year, until a storm came and soaked the little home nest, and drowned their babies; since which time it has been quite impossible to coax them back, although the good old farmer repaired the tree as much as possible, in hopes they might be induced to return.

In the fall, a little before the birds leave for warmer quarters, we may see these, and others as well, collecting in flocks and chattering among themselves, talking the matter over before starting. Robins, bluebirds, orioles, swallows, mocking-birds, thrushes, and the little ground birds, seem to be wonderfully on the decrease; and were it not owing to the fact that boys and men are not as merciful as they should be, would there not be many more today? Some think the reason that they are decreasing so rapidly is because the English sparrows kill them; but there certainly would be more if men and boys did not shoot them. Song birds are hunted down and killed without mercy, for many reasons and some for the shameful adornment of the bonnet. Who can take one of these creatures that God has made for our comfort and pleasure, and look into its bright, beautiful eyes and not love it with a love tender and strong? Who can stroke its soft, downy breast, and not form an attachment for it? Not one of them falls to the ground without our heavenly Father's pity.—A. A. Harper, in Youth's Instructor.

THE PREACHER'S POWER.

Ruskin said, ‘‘For every hundred men who can hear but one can speak; for every hundred who can speak but one can think; for every hundred who can think only one can see.’’ Too many are like Wordsworth's ‘‘Peter Bell’’:

‘‘A primrose on the river's brim,
A yellow primrose was to him,
And nothing more.’’

Bushnell said that the first requirement of a minister was a great consciousness, a consciousness that sees great things to be done and moves toward the doing with shout and song. Too many essay to be leaders who are no better equipped than those they essay to lead.

The age demands an educated ministry. The intellectual demands upon the minister are tremendous. More is required than intellectual preparation. Those who would become God's spokesmen must grasp the spiritual aspect of things. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. This must begin with a right life. Otherwise the vision will be blurred. One may know theology but he can speak no healing message to the world until his spiritual vision has been cleared. He may be able to speak in intellectual terms, but not in spiritual syllables. A cleansed soul can see more than a trained intellect. People must see the man back of the message. Unless the preacher's life is right his words will carry no conviction. He may have an intellectual grasp of truth but he will have no gospel for the soul.

No one can be a great preacher who is not first a great soul. The man must be prepared before he prepares his sermon. A sermon out of the man and not out of the thing he tries to be on the occasion of its preparation and delivery. The message must be personalized in the preacher. Isaiah's picture of the Messiah, the Prophet, places the emphasis upon His character. He was to prophecy, but back of His message was to be His life.

Jesus always held before the people who He was as more important than what He did. Other religious teachers urged people to believe what they teach. Jesus commanded them to accept Him. Buddha taught that renunciation was the way to perfection. Jesus said, ‘‘I am the way.’’ Plato bade his disciples ‘‘follow the good.’’ Jesus said, ‘‘Follow Me.’’ Pilate voiced the question discussed in the schools of his age, ‘‘What is truth?’’ Jesus answered, ‘‘I am the truth.’’ His chief message to the world was His life. The Gospels are a history, not a system of theology. Being was the greatest word in Jesus' vocabulary. That was larger than His teachings and mightier than His miracles.

The supreme demand upon a minister is a right life. Moral beauty counts for more than intellectual strength. Character is a greater teacher than intellect. Xenophon said that the disciples of Socrates were more influenced by what he was than by what he taught. Emerson said to an inconsistent person, ‘‘What you are makes such a noise that I cannot hear what you say.’’ The world must see as well as hear what constitutes Christlikeness. Being is better than explaining. Goodness is the highest grade of power. Quality counts for more than quantity. Learning may convince, eloquence persuade, power compel, but the grip of a good life will hold when others are forgotten. He who would speak for God must live for God.

The greatest sermon is not the utterance of the preacher's lips, but the impress of his life.—United Presbyterian.

A WORD TO THINK ABOUT.

For years in the streets of London some Christian friends employed a blind Bible reader to go about the streets with a reading-desk before him, and standing in a back street or lane, feel over the words with his fingers, and read aloud while people gathered and listened. Questions were sometimes asked, remarks were made, the reader would bear his testimony and pass on to another place, sometimes selling portions of Scripture at a low price, so that during one year he not only read the Bible in more than 1,700 streets, courts and lanes, but also sold nearly 900 copies of portions of the Scripture.

‘‘Give me a word to think about,’’ said a woman as she came up to him one day and placed her hands on his book. He turned over the leaves till he came to the fifth chapter of Isaiah and read, ‘‘Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine inflame them!’’

‘‘You know me, then, and my failings,’’ said the woman with a faltering voice.

‘‘No,’’ said the reader, ‘‘you are a perfect stranger to me.’’

‘‘How is it then that you read that verse which speaks of my very sin? Well, it is very strange. I suppose it is God that sent that verse to me,’’ and she burst into tears.

Presently she inquired for the chapter and verse, shook the reader's hand, saying, ‘‘God bless you, sir,’’ and left.

No one can tell what fruits may come from such sowing of the Word of God. We know the seed is good and we are to sow it by all waters. We cannot tell ‘‘whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good;’’ but we may be sure that the Word of God, scattered far and wide, will find some good ground and will bring forth fruit to the glory of the Lord.—Selected.

PUT-OFF TOWN.

Did you ever go to Put-Off Town,
Where the houses are old and tumble-down,
And everything tarries and everything drags,
With dirty streets and people in rags?

On the street called Slow lives old man Wait,
And his two little boys named Linger and Late,
With unclean hands and tousled hair,
And a naughty sister named I Don't Care.

Did you ever go to Put-Off Town
To play with the little girls, Fret and Frown?
Or go to the home of old man Wait
And whistle for his boys to come to the gate?

To play ball all day on Tarry Street,
Leaving your errands for other feet?
To stop, or shirk, or linger, or frown,
Is the nearest way to this Put-Off Town.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

LAURA'S WHOOPING-COUGH PARTY.

By Sue Spencer.

"Oh Mother!" exclaimed Laura with quivering lips, "now how can I have my birthday party," and a big tear rolled right off Laura's nose and dropped on the book she had been reading. You see, the doctor had just told Laura that what mother thought was a cold was whooping-cough! And what made it worse was that Laura was six years old today, and she and mother had planned a most delightful party, but on account of Laura's cold the guests had not been summoned.

"Don't cry, dear," said Mother, soothingly, "perhaps I can think of a way, even yet."

"Oh, I have a fine idea," exclaimed Mother, and she walked straight out into the hall, to the telephone.

In fifteen minutes Mother came back into the room. "Yes, Laura, you may have the party, it's all settled," said Mother, smiling. "Now this afternoon father will take the limousine, and bring home 25 of the children, who have whooping-cough, and are convalescent."

"But Mother, what will we play?" asked Laura.

"That is a wonderful secret," answered Mother.

Laura clapped her hands in glee; "Is it a new game, Mother?"

"No," answered Mother; "now rest up so you can enjoy yourself this afternoon."

Laura lay back among the cushions and was soon fast asleep. At noon she waked, feeling much better.

That afternoon children began to arrive about three o'clock. In the first load were three boys and two girls. When Laura inquired their names she found that the brown, curly-haired girl was named Margaret. Her mother and father were dead and she lived with a cross old aunt in the basement of a tenement house.

The other little girl was named Annie. Her father was dead and she delivered clothes for her mother.

The three boys were from Graham Orphanage. They were brothers and had been sent to St. Paul's Hospital to be quarantined

By the time Laura had made friends with these guests, others arrived; and so the time "flew."

Sarah, Laura's sister, was playing on the piano, when who should Laura see standing between the portiers but—"Why, Uncle Archie," exclaimed Laura, "when did you get home?"

"This is Mr. Archie Bay, a sailor, just back from China and Japan," said Mother.

"Oo, 'ook at da booful big man," crooned little Julia.

Uncle Archie strode into the room, followed by six little Japanese children; four of these carried large boxes. Uncle Archie motioned to them where to place the boxes. Then each one bowed to the children. At a motion from Uncle Archie one of the boxes was opened and Uncle Archie drew out the queerest looking machines.

There was silence over the room. Then all was dark and the children saw before them a beautiful picture of Japan. Of course Uncle Archie knew a story about the picture which he gladly told. Then another picture flashed on the screen. And so the time "flew."

When finally the last picture was shown and the last story told, without one's noticing, little Japanese girls served ice cream in the shape of fans for the girls and umbrellas for the boys. Then there were cakes and candies in the shape of Japanese dolls. While they were eating, the six little Japanese boys sang songs in Japanese.

While Uncle Archie was showing the pictures, Mother had unpacked the other three boxes and placed the things on the library table.

When the refreshments were finished the packages were distributed from the library table. There was something for everyone from across the sea. There were ships, banners, fans, umbrellas, dolls, scarfs, sashes, beads, and all kinds of tea sets and curious things.

When finally the nurse, who had accompanied the children to Laura's, rose to go it was nearly six o'clock. When finally all the children had thanked Uncle Archie and Laura, and had gone, Laura lay back in her chair and smiled at Uncle Archie. "This is the happiest birthday I have ever had, in spite of the whooping-cough."—Selected.

SPOILING A BRASS MONKEY.

A man who kept a store had a brass monkey, which he set up with a cigar in its mouth. The cigar was lighted, and by machinery the monkey could draw the smoke from the cigar and puff it out again.

After it had run for quite a while, one day the works stopped. The monkey was taken apart to discover the cause, when lo! the works were found to be clogged and in such a filthy condition that they would not run until they were cleaned.

The tobacco smoke had been too much for a brass monkey! What then must its effect be on the inside works of a little boy? A good many boys who smoke cigars or cigarettes fare worse than the brass monkey. They stop, but they never start again—they cannot be cleaned up, they die. Boys, beware of tobacco—it is enough to spoil a brass monkey.—The Little Christian.

BE SLOW TO ACCUSE.

"Mother, I can't find my seventeen cents anywhere," said Arthur, coming into his mother's room with quite an anxious face. "I put it here in my pocket. It had been hanging up in the hall all day, and I do believe that new girl has taken it out. She saw me have it last night and put it away."

"Look in your pockets, Arthur. A little boy who is apt to forget things must not be too positive that he puts his money in his pocket-book. And never accuse anybody of stealing without a shadow of evidence. That is very sinful as well as unkind. What if Susan should lose her money and accuse you of stealing it? Remember the Golden Rule."

"But, mother, she looked guilty when I said I had lost it, and that I knew some one had taken it out of my pocket."

"But very likely she felt confused on hearing you make such a speech. She knew very well that there was no one else in the house you could suspect but herself. You might as well have said so in plain words. An innocent person is more apt to look guilty, when accused of crime, than one who is hardened in wrong doing, and who usually has a face ready made to suit the occasion. A gentleman once said that the most guilty-looking person he ever saw was a man arrested for stealing a horse which afterward proved to be his own."

"But what has become of my money, mother? It is gone, that is certain."

"I believe you lost a fine top once, that it was supposed a little neighbor had stolen," said his mother with a smile.

"But I can't have left this in the grapevine arbor this winter weather."

"But there are plenty of other losing-places about. Did you have on that jacket last evening?"

"No, mother, I believe I had on my gray one, but then I know I put it into my pocket-book."

"Don't say you know, dear, for it may be an untruth. Please bring me your gray jacket."

Arthur walked slowly up to his room, but he walked back more slowly still, and looked very foolish when he came into his mother's room again.

Mother comprehended it all at a glance and smiled as she said:

"I wonder who looks guilty this time!"

"O mother, I am sorry, but I did not mean to accuse Susan so wrongly. I remember now just as plainly as can be, wrapping up those three five-cent pieces and two pennies in that bit of paper, and putting it into my jacket pocket."

"It is a serious thing, Arthur, to make such charges as you did a moment ago against an innocent person. What if you had mentioned it among your schoolmates? It would not be long before it would be told all about—'Susan at Mr. Reynolds' steals. I wonder they keep her.' If she ever wished to get another place, it might be a very difficult matter. Though you contradicted the story afterwards, it would never undo the mischief. Many will repeat an injurious story who never will take the trouble to correct it. I will pray for you, dear boy, that you may learn to correct this sinful habit: and I hope you will pray with me. You will never improve a bad habit until you pray over it. Run now and tell Susan that you have found your money; and try to make amends for your injustice by being more than usually thoughtful and obliging."—Baltimore Methodist.

—Brother R. H. Brooks and family spent a few days in Washington last week, visiting a number of places of interest, such as the National Museum, Washington Monument, Lincoln Memorial, Congressional Library. The boys especially enjoyed the trip.

—Brother L. S. Neville, of Halifax, one of the young people who attended the Weaverville conference, remained over in Greensboro a few days, and then went to High Point to visit an uncle. Mr. Neville was a soldier in France, and is going to Waynesville to enter the government's school for ex-soldiers, preparatory to a business career.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

Littleton, Littleton Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. J. B. O'Brian, filled his regular appointment at the 11 o'clock hour. The sermon, as usual, was of the best and very helpful. The congregation was small but we hope it will continue to grow larger.

There was no service in the evening as all the churches in the town united in a union service in the Methodist Episcopal church. The Sunday evening union services and also the union prayer meetings will continue to be held until the first of July, at which time we are looking forward to the great union revival, which will be held in one of the tobacco warehouses. Dr. J. Ernest Thacker of Norfolk, assisted by Mr. T. B. Roddy of Tennessee, noted song leader, will conduct the services. Mrs. May Dixon Thacker will deliver two or more lectures to the women of the community. The services will be conducted Sunday evening, July 15.

Through the efforts of a few faithful members, we have in our church a nice Stieff piano. We are a little in debt but we continue to work so we hope that debt will soon be lifted.

Our Sunday school has increased in number, but we need many more, especially in the Bible class. Let each of us try to bring someone else and make our Sunday school worth while.

Mildred Thornton, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant Church, Cleveland Circuit.—Our pastor was with us the second Sunday of May. Mr. J. D. Morris gave a good sermon. We had a good congregation. He was with us also the second Sunday in June and preached us a fine sermon; we had a fine crowd

We are still running our Sunday school; we are getting along fine, having a big crowd almost all the time. The little card class is getting along fine. We had two boys, one nearly grown, who had never been at Sunday school in their lives. We were glad to get them to come.

You know we need preachers and Sunday school at our little church. Our little church had been thrown away but it has increased now and we have got it back on the circuit now. We are going to hold our church in spite of Satan's power. We are going to keep him back. We ask the readers of the paper to pray for our church. We want everybody to help us to pray for our church.

The second Sunday of August will be a Home-coming Day at our church and the Queen quartet will be there to sing. We want everybody to come and bring a basketful of dinner. Dinner will be on the grounds. Everybody is invited to come. Our preacher will be there and want to have a good time.

We want to keep on improving in our Sunday school and be faithful unto the end. I have gone every day for the last three months and hope I will get to go every Sunday for the next quarter.

Death entered the door of one of our brothers some time back; he died the 21st of April. J. B. Watkins was born May 2, 1836; age, 86 years, 11 months, 18 days. He had been a faithful member of our church until death. He was a faithful soldier of the Confederate army. His body was laid in the cemetery at Mt. Pleasant to wait till the morning of the resurrection day. He leaves a wife and two children and many friends. Before he died he shook hands with his friends and told them to meet him in heaven.

Mae Earwood, Reporter.

Lincolnton.—Since our last report the appearance of the church here has been somewhat changed. Six new Sunday school rooms are completed. It certainly does help in every way, for we were in great need of more room. The music, too, is much better since the piano has been purchased. We have just received a new member in Christian Endeavor society who is a music teacher, and has said he world do all he could to make it still better.

The pastor filled his appointment here last Sunday morning, June 17, and delivered a wonderful message on "Sanctification." It seems that there is quite an argument on this subject, so he made it so very plain that everyone could understand it. He did not get quite through with it last Sunday, but will finish it next Sunday and also take up "The Baptism of the Holy Ghost."

If nothing happens Brother Philips will meet with us at prayer service tomorrow night to talk over the play that is expected to be put on at this church very soon, entitled "The Prodigaal Son."

The young people's meeting was very interesting last Sunday, the subject being "Reforms." Several interesting talks were made by members of the society. The young people here have something before them now. It was agreed that they would pay two-thirds toward a piano, if the church would pay the rest. All the collections are splendid. Best wishes to all Herald readers and workers.

Reporter.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Charge.—Second Sunday in June was a good day with us. Sunday school at 9:45, preaching at 11 and Children's Day exercises in the afternoon. Pastor Bowman arrived in time to teach the adult class. He is as good out of the pulpit as he is in it—I mean he is as good a teacher as he is a preacher. Brother Bowman delivered an awakening sermon on the Power of Sin. We wish more people could have heard it.

After enjoying a good dinner we assembled for the children's exercises. The children did extra well under training of Miss Martha Persons and Mrs. E. S. Wilson. Miss Martha is an old hand in the work and is a splendid hand. Mrs. Wilson is a new hand but is interested. Much credit is due them for their faithful work. The writer feels like all superintendents, I suppose, that he has the best people to try to serve of anybody. Collection and addition by members amounted to $23,08, which is for foreign missions.

We are glad we have some real missionaries in our church. We do not understand why more people are not interested in the mission work at home and abroad. We are proud of our young people and children, for they are the hope of the church in the future. May God's spirit hasten the time when more people will see the need of going to Sunday school and preaching and help this great cause along.

We have recently painted our church inside, which makes it look much better, and which we are very proud of.

Yours for better service,

J. Lewis Cashatt.

Cid, Uwharrie Circuit.—The tent meeting here that has been in progress for three weeks closed last night. It has been one of the largest and most successful revivals that have ever been at Cid. While there was one about 15 years ago when more members were added to the church, this one has been greater in other ways, as this community has been aroused in a more spiritual way; it reached the real aged ones whose heads were blooming for the grave. There have been 41 saved and only a few in this number reclaimed. Six were baptized last Sunday week by immersion and two more are to be baptized next Sunday at ten o'clock, and ten have joined the church so far, and I believe there are others who will join later. The congregations have been great, and on last Sunday it was said it was believed that about 700 people were present: it surely was a multitude. Brother Riddle remarked yesterday that we had almost Pentecostal showers of blessing. The people just came from far and near to hear such Holy Ghost sermons. We return thanks to all that came to our rescue, and especially those that helped so much in the singing. Piney Grove choir was not "to beat"; with the latter on last night it was more than tongue could express. The Handy people were faithful too; I believe they still have an interest at Cid for true love never dies. Sister Riddle acted as organist and a Mr. Strickland of Thomasville and two daughters assisted some in the music and singing, and the Denton people were so faithful in helping to save the lost. Mr. Ed Kindley and family, who live about six miles away, missed but one session, and that was a real stormy looking night. So we extend our heartfelt thanks to all that came to our rescue, and may the good Lord bless them and give them a crown at the last day. Quite a number of the people would have loved to see the meeting go on, but we should be satisfied. Brother Riddle did all the preaching himself, while quite a number of ministers came and helped in other ways.

We are so sorry to note that Mrs. J. B. Trogdon, of Denton, has been real sick for three weeks, but is now convalescing, we are so glad. Hope for her a speedy recovery. We learned to love these dear people who once served us and can always feel the spirit of love in our hearts when they are present, and also in their absence.

Mrs. C. H. Carrville of Pomplon, Va., who has been visiting in North Carolina for the past eight weeks, has returned to her home. Mrs. Carrville is a sister of Mrs. N. W. Lanier.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Leonard, of near Rich Fork church, were pleasant visitors at N. W. Lanier's Sunday. He is the father of Mr. C. O. Leonard and used to come to this church. He is [illegible] work that his son is [illegible]. We all look for our children to do their best. May the Lord reward the faithful. As ever, a worker for the Lord,

P. S.—Our Sunday school is moving with good interest.

New Salem, Randleman Charge.—We held our Children's Day service and Old People's Day yesterday, June, 24. Children's Day service at 11 o'clock, and talk by our pastor, Brother Thompson. The Old People's service was at two o'clock, and we had the White Oak quartet from Greensboro to sing for us; it was fine. The collection was $15.50.

We were glad to have with us quite a number of our friends from Greensboro, High Point, Winston-Salem, Pleasant Garden, Randleman, Worthville, who gave us some interesting talks. We hope they will come back again.

Charles W. Hayes.

The Postal Card, W. F. Kennett, Editor.

Browers.

Yesterday, June 24, the annual Children's Day service was held in Browers church. Brother Mebane C. Henly is the efficient Sunday school superintendent. The exercise from start to finish was full of interest. Many of the participants were small tots and they went forward with smiling faces and evident joy. Brother John Trogdon is the leader of the singing and much of what is now called "pep" but formerly "unction" is injected. Anyway the music possesses a moving power that is very helpful. The offering amounted to $16.57.

The third Sunday in July Giles Chapel will hold Children's Day service at 11 A. M. There will be dinner on the ground and an afternoon service.

Altogether, we believe old Richland circuit is looking up and has grounds for encouragement. The Postal Card has been suspended for some time; but from now on will probably appear with at least some degree of regularity.

Asheboro, June 25.

Bethel, Alamance Circuit. — Bethel people are still progressing. We have a good Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society. Brother Holmes gave us a good sermon last Sunday on the life and work of Esther. We were pleased to have Prof. Hutchison and wife visit our Sunday school and church last Sunday. Mr. Carr Thompson of Bethel church is now at Rainey Hospital, Burlington. Hope he will soon recover.

Willard Carr Lindley, one of the twin boys of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Lindley, died June 19, 1923. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. W. Holmes and he was buried at Center. The bereaved have our sincere sympathy. The other twin has been sick, but is better now.

Mrs. J. D. Cooper was buried at Bethel June 16, 1923. She was a great sufferer and has gone to rest, we feel sure, for she was a good woman.

We were glad to see Mr. Amick Foust able to be at church Sunday.

Our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society met the first Sunday afternoon with Mrs. C. M. Braxton. We had an interesting and instructive meeting. We especially enjoyed the lesson from our study book given by Miss Mary Braxton and talks on our subject, "The Prayer That God Answers," by our members. We also enjoyed a social hour with the family.

Our Home Missionary Society will meet the first Sunday in July with Mrs. Lon. McPherson; subject, "Happiness."

Children's Day service will be held at Bethel the third Sunday in July. Two services; dinner on the grounds.

Mrs. J. A. Foust, who had the misfortune to get hurt in an automobile accident, is improving.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville.—In this very hot season with all of its attractions and detractions we still seem to occupy an important place in our good little town known all over the world as the Chairtown. Our Sunday school convened at 9:45 A. M. with 234 present, but we do regret that a large number of our people will leave before preaching service, which is detrimental to our church organization. Brother Troxler preached a very able sermon with a very forceful word picture of how God saved Moses to perform a great service for his people.

Our Christian Endeavor society met at seven P. M. with an interesting service, followed by preaching service at eight o'clock, a very impressive service, showing the most important thing for us all is to seek God first.

At our regular 11 o'clock service June 10 Brother C. B. Way was received into membership with us. We welcome Brother Way into our midst, hoping that we may be a help to him and he to us. Pray that God may add His blessings to our feeble efforts and make us more useful in his vineyard.

Weaverville Charge.—The third quarterly conference met with the church at Clarke's Chapel Saturday, 23. The attendance was small. The usual business was transacted. As the chrrches failed to elect a delegate the quarterly conference elected by ballot Fred P. Edwards to represent this charge in the next annual conference. Brother Edwards is a progressive young man. He will make a good delegate. Brother Lester Watts resigned as secretary of the conference. Mrs. Fred Edwards was elected to fill his place as secretary. Pastor's salary is behind $228.

The following amounts have been donated towards paying first payment on Ford car for pastor: Mr. Zion church, $21; Clarke's Chapel, $20; Weaverville, $3; W. A. Swain, $1; total, $45.

The Young People's Conference seemed to be a success. Weaverville and vicinity were pleased at the way our young people conducted themselves. The sermons, addresses, etc., were of a high order. We feel our cause has been strengthened by their coming.

Yesterday was a good day at Weaverville; splendid attention, good congregation. Rain in the afternoon and night caused the congregation to be small at Mt. Zion and Clarke's Chapel.

The Christian Endeavor society at Weaverville was reorganized yesterday by electing the following officers: President, Mrs. Fred Edwards; vice president, Mrs. W. G. Burgin; secretary, Mrs. W. G. Edwards; treasurer, Mrs. Mamie Garrison; Junior superintendent, Mrs. N. T. Holcombe.

There will be an unveiling of a monument at Clarke's Chapel Sunday, July 1, three P. M. Principal address by ex-Mayor Roberts of Asheville.

B. M. Williams.

Graham.—We had 142 present for Sunday school yesterday. After classes we had a very interesting report from our delegate to the conference at Weaverville, Miss Ethel Rich. We enjoyed hearing this report and feel sure that we will reap great benefits from the conference through our delegate. She will be leader at the meeting of the senior Christian Endeavor society Sunday and we urge every members to be present. Visitors are also cordially invited.

The children are training under the direction of the Junior superintendent, Miss Eunice Rich, for a splendid Children's Day exercise next Sunday.

We are expecting Prof. E. C. Hamilton of Greensboro here the first of July to organize a singing school. Much interest is being shown and several have already signified their intention to take training under this eminent master.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

Mecklenburg Charge.—On the first Sunday night in Stallings church a program was rendered by the children. Some old timers said that this was the best that they had ever seen and I am glad to say that it was among the best that I have ever seen.

Mrs. P. L. Garmon, Miss Lillian Noles and Miss Ethel Furr deserve more than passing praise for the excellent training of the children. Mrs. P. L. Garmon found her calling when she began to train children; this means a great deal for the Stallings church.

The Sunday school at Stallings church is twice as large as it was last year and I believe that there is more interest in the school.

Last Sunday there was a Children's Day at Beulah church and the children did excellently. One who had been a member of that church said that that was the best that they had ever had there.

The pastor is proud of the young instructors, who are only young girls in school and he feels that they in days to come will help to a very great extent bear the burdens of the church. The instructors are Miss Grace Phipher, Miss Evelyn Shell, Miss Ruby Lee Craig.

On account of the boll weevil scare we have not done very much on the college drive, but the scare is passing away and we are getting ready to move out.

SUGAR BOWLS AND BABIES.

In Dr. Cyrus Hamlin's remarkable book, My Life and Times, the venerable missionary says:

"An early remembered act was a criminal one. Indeed, most of my earliest remembrances are of things discreditable.

"My mother had two neighbors at tea. They came with their babies, and as it was summer time the babies were bolstered up in the open door looking out upon the lawn where I was amusing myself. I threw a stone, which went through an open window and smashed my mother's china sugar-bowl all to pieces. It belonged to the tea-set which her father gave her at her marriage. Mother simply told me to go round to the other side of the house and play. After the guests were gone she showed me the broken pieces and told me how sorry she was, because her dear father gave her that sugar-bowl. I defended myself. I said, 'I didn't mean to throw it in at the window; I threw it at those babies that were hollerin' in the door. I hated them babies.'

''It was a poor defense. Mother very rarely inflicted physical chastisement, but this was a most atrocious case, which demanded it and had it. I always respected babies after that.''

''ANY OLD WAY.''

Little Ollie was waiting for grandmother to mend a rent in his coat, and she seemed so slow and careful that he grew quite impatient about it, for he was eager to be off to play.

''Dear me, grandmother,'' he said, fidgeting about and glancing from time to time out of the window at the other boys sailing boats, ''what is the use of being so particular about an old coat? Just mend it any old way, to get done.''

''That is very poor policy.'' Grandmother shook her head, as she held her needle up to the light to thread it. ''One time when your grandfather was not much larger than you are now, he was set to build a pen for the stock, in his older brother's absence. He was quite a hand at carpenter work, for a boy of his years, and they thought he could be safely trusted to do the work, as the posts were already set.

''He was in a great hurry to go fishing that afternoon, so he said to himself, 'There's no use being particular. I'll just do it any old way to get done.' So he put on the last two or three panels of fence hastily, making one nail take the place of three or four, in each board. In this way, he got through much earlier, and went off whistling, to dig his bait.

''But the next morning before he got up—for he was very sleepy after fishing so late—his father brought home a valuable horse, and put him in the new pen. While the family were at breakfast, he broke through one of the weak panels of the fence, and ran away and fell into a neighbor's unfinished well, and broke a leg.

''So, you see, it doesn't pay to do things 'any old way,' to get done.''—Presbyterian.

FOLLOWING THE COPY.

A little girl went to a writing-school. When she saw her copy, with every line so perfect, ''I can never, never write like that,'' she said.

She looked steadfastly at its straight lines, which were so very straight, and the curved lines so slim and graceful. Then she took up her pen and timidly put in on the paper. Her hand trembled; she dew it back; she stopped, studied the copy, and began again. ''I can but try,'' said the little girl; ''I will do as well as I can.''

She wrote half a page. The letters were crooked. What more could we expect from a first effort? The next scholar stretched across her desk and said, ''What scraggy things you make!'' Tears filled the little girl's eyes. She dreaded to have the teacher see her book. ''He will be angry with me and scold,'' she said to herself. But when the teacher came and looked, he smiled.

''I see you are trying, my little girl,'' he said kindly, ''and that is enough for me.''

She took courage. Again and again she studied the beautiful copy. She wanted to know how every line went, how every letter was rounded and made. Then she took up her pen and began again to write. She wrote carefully, with the copy always before her.

But oh, how slow work it was! Her letters straddled here, they crowded there, and some of them looked ''every which way.''

The little girl trembled at the step of the teacher. ''I am afraid you will find fault with me,'' she said; ''my letters are not fit to be on the same page with the copy.''

''I do not find fault with you,'' said the teacher, ''because I do not look so much at what you do as at what you aim at and have the heart to do. By sincerely trying, you will make a little improvement every day; and a little improvement every day will enable you to reach excellence by and by.''

''Thank you!'' said the little girl; and, thus encouraged, she took up her pen with a greater spirit of application than before.

And so it is with the dear children who are trying to become like Jesus. God has given us his dear Son, ''for an example, that we should follow his steps.'' He ''did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth.'' How He loved people; how He forgave His enemies! how kind and tender He was! how ''meek and lowly in heart!'' how He ''went about doing good!'' He is ''altogether lovely,'' and ''full of grace and truth.''

And when you study his character, ''I can never, never reach that,'' you say. ''I can never be like Jesus.''

God does not expect you to become like his dear Son in a minute, or a day, or a year; but what pleases Him is, that you should love Him, and have a disposition to try.—Little Corporal.

MADE PERFECT.

Christian love is one of those forces which no power above or below can dissolve. And if we know that we shall meet the Lord hereafter, so we know that we shall meet again those whom we believe to be with Him now. And there also shall every true and right desire and longing of the heart be more than satisfied; and chiefly those who in this world God thought it best to deny. And all the powers which some envious fate or unpropitious destiny kept in abeyance here, shall find the development to which they are sure, sooner or later, to come. All that deserves to be perfected shall be perfect for the sake of Him who was made perfect through suffering.—Dr. Morgan Dix.

CHRIST'S IDEAL.

This is Christ's ideal: a radiating Gospel; a kingdom of overflowing, conquering love; a church that is elected to be a means of blessing to the human race. This ideal is the very nerve of Christian missions at home and abroad; the effort to preach the Gospel to every creature, not merely because the world needs to receive it, but because the church will be rejected and lost unless she gives it. It is not only a question for us whether any of our fellowmen can be saved without Christianity, the question is whether we can be saved if we are willing to kep our Christianity to ourselves.—Henry Van Dyke.

THINK OF THESE THINGS.

I entreat you to devote one solemn hour of thought to a crucified Savior. Think of the cross. Think how the Son of God became a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, that you might live forever. Think as you lie down upon your bed to rest, how your Savior was lifted up from the earth to die. Think amid your plans and anticipations of future gaiety, what the redemption of your soul has cost, and how the dying Savior would wish you to act. His wounds plead that you will live for better things.—Albert Barnes.

That day with Jesus! Who can guess
All that it meant of blessedness.
I sigh, ''Oh, that I had been there
To hear his words, his voice in prayer;
To see the shining of his face
And feel his touch of heavenly grace—
To wear in memory for aye
The halo-crown of that one day!''

''Oh, eyes so holden, not to see,''
The Master seems to say to me,
'Your heart is now my dwelling-place
Where you may look upon my face
And feel my Spirit's life and light,
Closer than touch, clearer than sight.
Lo, I abide with you alway,—
Not only one, but every day.''
—Sunday School Times.

THE WORTH OF REAL COURTESY.

One cannot be courteous without being thoughtful and considerate. Just now there is great need for genuine courtesy. More of it would mean more kindness, less greed. If every one and everybody were truly courteous, we would hear little of the harsh criticism that arrays one class against another. Lack of courtesy with its consequent lack of consideration for the good of all concerned, in matters great and small, breeds dissatisfaction and discontent.

Our part should be to do our work with a smile, to be helpful, to be kind, to be loyal. Grumbling, complaining, whining must be taboo with one who follows the path of courtesy. Things may not be altogether as we would like. But we gain little by being discourteous. Take a look around you, and you will find your opportunity to lend a helping hand. Perhaps you have been inconsiderate of a neighbor or an acquaintance. You were ''miffed'' at something they said, you have scarcely spoken to them for weeks or months. Change your attitude. Smile when next you meet. Be courteous. And note the change.—The Girls' Companion.

OUR GREAT NEED.

The sense of our own helplessness and need of Divine help is the first thing in religious experience. A man who does not feel the need of God's forgiveness will never repent of his sins. Resolving to do better, brings no man to salvation, but rather to self-righteousness. They that feel they are whole, will not send for a physician. And yet they may have a deadly disease.—Exchange.

IN MEMORIAM.

Rev. W. C. Lassiter.

William Cornelius Lassiter, the son of Joseph and Mary Lassiter, was born in Forsyth county, N. C., November 25, 1863.

He was converted in early life and joined the Moravian Church in Kernersville.

In Kernersville Academy and in Prof. A. I. Butner's school in Bethania he prepared himself to teach in the public schools.

His career as a teacher lasted for ten years. During this time he became much interested in Sunday school work. Two churches now stand where, as a young school teacher, he organized the first Sunday schools.

During all this time he was impressed with the call to the ministry, and finally having decided to heed the call, he began his preparation for the ministry under the tutorage of Rev. C. L. Rights of the Moravian Church. About this time it was his good fortune to have the friendship of Mr. J. Calvin Roberts, from whom he received much help and encouragement.

Being convinced that for him the Methodist Protestant Church presented a greater field for service, he transferred his membership to this church in 1891, was licensed to preach the same year at Flat Rock church on Flat Rock circuit, and was admitted to the conference class at the following session of conference.

He received his first appointment in 1893, being appointed to Ivy circuit, and was ordained in 1895.

He served the following charges: Ivy, 1894-'95; Stanly, '96-'97; Forsyth, '98-'99-'00-1901; Gibsonville, 1902; Why Not, 1903-'4-'5; Alamance, '06-'07-'08; Forsyth, '09-'10; Randolph, '11-'12-'13; Cleveland, '14-'15-'16-'17; Pinnacle and Mt. Zion, '18-'19-'20-'21; Richland, '22.

He had been in declining health for two years, but his heart was so fully in the work that he continued to work when he should have been resting and recuperating. His health grew worse and at the last session of conference he declined to take work on that account.

He was so much his old self, with his usual kindly humor, that I doubt that any of his brethren realized the seriousness of his condition.

The following building was done during his pastorates: Pleasant Gap church, Ivy circuit; Friendship church, Stanly circuit; Oak Grove church, Forsyth circuit; Love's Grove church, Stanly circuit (not [illegible]); Pleasant Hill, Forsyth circuit; parsonage, Gibsonville circuit; parsonage, Richland circuit (begun).

In the year 1890 he was united in marriage to Miss Carrie E. [illegible], who [illegible] his true helper in all his endeavors, shared his trials and triumphs, encouraged him when he was weary and disheartened. Hand in hand they walked for thirty-three years till at last they came to the river's brink, and he crossed on and left her on this side to walk awhile alone.

To them there were born four children, three boys and one girl. Two of the boys died in infancy; one boy and the daughter still live.

On the morning of the 11th of May I was sitting quietly reading when a boy came in and handed me a telegram. I was shocked and filled with grief when I found that it told me that on the previous day Rev. W. C. Lassiter had received his discharge from service here and asked me to attend his funeral the next day at Kernersville. On Saturday afternoon his funeral was held in the Kernersville M. P. church, conducted by this writer. There were present several of his ministerial brethren who had learned of his going. Then we laid the poor tired body to rest in the Moravian cemetery. The mound was covered with lovely flowers, and there we left him to await the archangel's trump.

His death was not unexpected to his loved ones about him, but was, nevertheless, a great shock and a sore bereavement to them.

He was a faithful friend, an industrious pastor, an earnest preacher, an indefatigable worker; but it was in his home that his virtues shone brightest—there he was affectionate, tender, patient, kind, self-sacrificing, at the same time firm, but cheerful and quaintly humorous.

He had a sincere concern for young men who felt the call to the ministry, and did all that he could to help and encourage them.

We shall miss him, for his place is vacant. His place in the ranks is empty. He has left us to carry on the cause of the church and the Master Whom he loved, to uphold the blood stained banner and see that it ever goes forward and never trails and is never dishonored.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last;

"In condescending love,
Thy ceaseless prayer he heard;
And bade thee suddenly remove
To thy complete reward."

REV. F. T. TAGG, D.D.

An Appreciation.

(Funeral Discourse.)

To eulogize Rev. F. T. Tagg, D.D., would be worse than a waste of words; it would be an offense against one who lived not for praise but for service. His long, varied, and brilliant service is an open book known and read of all men. Time permits only a glance at three chapters in the history of his triumphant career.

The First Chapter Presents the Preacher.

Original, scholarly, scriptural, gripping, he impressed deeply and indelibly. The first sermon I ever heard on the Immortality of the Soul was delivered by him at a camp meeting on the Eastern Shore of Maryland forty-three years ago, yet even to this day I remember words and phrases from his powerful arguments based on the analogy of nature, the suggestions of science, the constitution of man, the nature of God, and the revelation of His Word. Add to this single sermon the many [illegible] and vigorous messages that have fallen from his eloquent lips during the 53 years of his ministry, and we may truthfully claim that he has been God's agent in changing the ideal, [illegible] the thoughts and transforming the lives of a vast multitude of men. How could it be otherwise? For his "preaching was logic on fire." Knowing that the only religious emotion worth kindling is that resulting from a convinced mind his first aim was the proclamation and the proving of God's eternal truth. The purpose, plan and spirit of his pulpit utterances found a fitting—if not a Providential—climax in 1921, when he was chosen to preach the first Radio Sermon ever broadcast from Baltimore; nor is it strange that his unseen and countless audience assembled in the cities of the Atlantic Coast from Washington to New Haven heard this life-long lover of the truth discuss as his subject: "The Majesty of Truth," from what must have been his favorite text: "Prove all things."

The Second Chapter Describes Him as Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, Editor of the Methodist Protestant and President of the General Confrence.

For eight years he traveled from the center to the circumference of his beloved Zion, his clarion call awakening our sluggish souls to the need of speeding the gospel to the nations in the darkness of sin and superstition. So powerful was his personality and so winsome his appeal that some of our annual conferences, as an expression of their appreciation, extended to him the unique distinction of election to life-long Honorary Membership; and after thirty years in many homes from Maryland to Michigan, from Connecticut to Florida, and from Ohio to Kansas, his name is a household word.

Even more memorable is his editorial record. In 1892 he was elected editor of The Methodist Protestant, and for 24 years he filled this important and exacting office with credit to himself and honor to his constituency. His editorials were remarkable resumes of his weekly survey of the ecclesiastical world at home and abroad. He could "see clearly and report correctly;" and his conclusions in all discussions of doctrine, polity, morals and manners were safe, sound, scriptural, and declared with a facile and a fearless pen. His chair was never the throne of a factional fight nor a personal propaganda but in all controversy his motto was: "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity."

The highest honor in the gift of his church was conferred upon him in 1904, when he was called to the presidency of the General Conference. During the four years of his denominational leadership in this office he was not only brave, discreet and loyal in setting up his own denominational banners, but with heart and soul, pen and voice, dedicated himself to the task of bringing to pass the organic union of several kindred churches. He drank the bitter cup of failure, for he played the role of "reformer before the reformation;" but let us hope that his inspired teachings and courageous examples may speed our steps in exorcising the demon of denominationalism which too long has possessed the visible body of the Great Head of the Church. His impatience with the non-essentiaal barriers still separating the various branches of Methodism and other denominations—notably the Congregational and United Brethren—may be illustrated by the following statement which he made to Bishop Mill and the Annual Conference in the Otterbein church, Baltimore, "I dreamed that Bishop Mills and I were standing by the side of an open well quibbling over a proposed basis of union between the United Brethren and the Methodist Protestant churches. Finally I suggested that both of us throw our books of Constitution and Discipline into this well, then fish for them and agree to accept as our common creed the first book that rises to the surface.”

The Third Chapter in the Annals of This Ambassador of Christ Is Filled With Scenes Sacred to Home.

To cross this threshold this solemn hour would be a profanation of the tenderest ties and the holiest memories of the family circle. Suffice it to say, he passed through all the domestic experiences from the marriage altar to the baptismal font and the grave. He scaled the heights of joy, sank to the depths of sorrow, and learned well every lesson taught by that “trinity of earthly existence—meeting, loving, parting.” And at the end of life's journey looking through life's west window he caught a clear vision of his heavenly home and “sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust” he approached “his grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.”

There was a day when his fiercest fight in the realm of religious doubt was against Materialism. “If a man die shall he live again?” With this question of all ages he struggled long and hard, half in hope and half in fear; but finally faith triumphed and he could sing with Tennyson:

> “O yet we trust that somehow good
> Will be the final goal of ill;
> That nothing walks with aimless feet,
> That not one life shall be destroyed
> Nor cast as rubbish to the void,
> When God has made the pile complete.”

With Thackeray he could confidently ask: “If we still love those we lose can we forever lose those we lose?” And with the Apostle Paul he could stand four-square against all storms of skepticism and proclaim his faith: “Our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, whereunto I was appointed a preacher.”

This revelation is the comfort of those who lament his departure and we follow the faith of Oliver Wendell Holmes who thus declared his creed: “The brain is like a seventy-year clock. It is wound up at birth, the case closed, and the key given to the Angel of the Resurrection.” And let us not linger long in the shadows and doubt and sorrow in saying our final farewell; but let us even now open the ears of our faith and hear the voice of this Christian conqueror saying: “Say not ‘Good night!’ But in some brighter clime bid me ‘Good morning!’ ”

Dr. Tagg! Gentleman of the Old School of Gallantry! Scholar of the Old School of Classics! Champion of the Old School of Theology! Leader of the Methodist Protestant Church! “Servant of Jesus Christ!” My friend for four-and-forty years! I bid you “Good morning!”

Clinton.

Thera, the eight-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Clinton, died June 18, 1923. Funeral services by the writer at Clarke's Chapel, June 19.

Having so recently gone through a similar experience we know how to sympathize with Brother and Sister Clinton in this hour of bereavement. We can point them to Jesus, Who said, “Suffer the little children to come unto me.” May Jesus comfort all the bereaved ones.

B. M. Williams.

Braswell.

Joseph F. Braswell, son of Rev. and Mrs. D. A. Braswell, was born September 13, 1881, and died the 24th of May, 1923, making his age 41 years and six months.

When just a boy he professed faith in Christ, and first joined the church in Washington county; but as he moved from place to place he carried his church letter with him. About 13 years ago he moved from Concord to Charlotte and had been in the employ of the North Carolina Public Service Company since that time.

It was the privilege of the writer to be with him but very little, but he was a man I liked for the acquaintance I had with him, being quiet and unassuming.

Brother Joe suffered intensely while he was sick. Everything that could be done for him was done; but nothing checked the deadly disease to which he finally fell a victim.

He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, father and mother, two brothers and four sisters, and a host of friends and relatives.

The funeral was conducted at the home of his parents by the writer, assisted by Rev. Messrs. Short, of Charlotte, and Armstrong, of Concord, both of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and his body was laid to rest in the city cemetery.

May our Heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing ones.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

We, the members of Bethel Home and Foreign Missionary societies, wish to express our sincere sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Lindley, both members of our society, who are mourning the loss of Willard Carr, one of their twin boys, aged two months, 14 days.

Whereas, The members of our society are united by the bonds of Christian unity and love, they can not suffer alone. Their heartstrings interlace our own, and from the very depths of our hearts, dear parents and children, we sorrow with you. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and commend them to our Father's care, who alone can heal their broken hearts.

Resolved, That we bow humbly to His will, for He never makes a mistake, but doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we permit a little child to lead us. One so pure and innocent, who goes smiling to the Father's arms, just as they have always gone to mother. No fear whatever, not a sin against them, up very near the throne. “For their angels do always behold the face of our Father which is in heaven.” Jesus said, “Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.” Hannah was not permitted to raise Samuel. She could not train him for the place God wished him to fill in the temple. Dear parents, you could not train Willard here for the place God has for him to fill in His holy temple in Heaven. Rejoice that you were considered worthy by your Father to have now two sons at school on high, for Willard is now with Lee who has been there so long; both under the tutelage of God and the angels, being prepared for God's own holy work. “Our loved ones go from beside us. That is all we know about it at first. Some day we shall grow to see what the Good Gardener did with our fair blossoms when He took them away. Our blind eyes shall be opened and we shall see that they were never far from us. Who of us does not awake from our dreams at midnight with the touch of some vanished hand upon our faces and the sound of some remembered voice in our ears.” Often even in the day there comes to us a vision, a conscious presence of our loved ones with us, and it almost seems that we can hear them say, “Why, mamma, I am right here.” Dear sons, we can not see you. Our spiritual eyes have not yet been opened enough; but oh, we do feel your presence. At times we feel that we can almost take you in our arms. Yes, in spirit they often come to us. Just a little drawing back of the curtain and we get a spiritual vision of our loved ones over on the other side. Some day a hand will open the door for each of us and we shall step across the same threshold and see them living in Father's home; fully developed, bright and beautiful, filling with honor the place God had prepared for them. As they welcome us home, we shall be satisfied. Be faithful; 'twill not be long.

A GRANDMOTHER'S RULES.

Somebody's grandmother has given to her descendants these admirable rules of conduct:

“Always look at the person to whom you speak. When you are addressed, look straight at the person who speaks to you. Do not forget this.

“Speak your words plainly; do not mutter or mumble. If your words are worth saying, they are worth pronouncing distinctly and clearly.

“Do not say disagreeable things. If you have nothing pleasant to say, keep silent.

“Think three times before you speak once.

“Have you something to do that you find hard, and would prefer not to do? Do the hard thing first, and get over with it. If you have done wrong, go and confess it. If your lesson is hard, master it. If the garden is to be weeded, weed it first, and play afterwards. Do first the thing you don't like to do, and then, with a clear conscience, try the rest.”—Selected.

From An Appreciative Subscriber.

The church paper comes next after my Bible. May it live as long as time and do a great deal of good for our Father in heaven through men and women. I desire for the day to come that it can be sent free to all members that are not able to pay for it. May the richest blessings from our Father bless you, and yours, and our papers. Mrs. W. E. Martin.

Dodson.

On April 11, 1923, our community was made sad when the soul of Mr. William P. Dodson took its flight to heaven at the age of 63 years, nine months and 11 days. He was laid to rest in Chestnut Ridge cemetery, where he was a member. He first joined Hebron M. P. church and later moved his membership to the Ridge church.

Mr. Billy will be missed in the church, for he was a church worker, and in the community and everywhere, for those who had only a passing acquaintance with him have felt more than a tinge of sadness on hearing of his death. Those who had known him personally will look in vain for some one to outplace him in their affection and esteem.

He was a kind and loving father and husband. He leaves a wife and five children: Mr. Sam Dodson of Burlington, Messrs. George and Lonnie Dodson of Mebane, Mrs. J. B. Sykes of near the old home, and one son, Mr. Joe Dodson, who stayed at home, besides a lot of friends and relatives, to mourn for him.

The family wish to express their appreciation to the many friends who showed them so much kindness during the illness and death of their husband and father. He was sick for almost a year but bore his suffering like any Christian man would. May God bless the bereaved one, is my prayer. Myrtle Holmes.

June 21.

Departure of an Aged Saint.

Francis M. Hartgrove was born July 10, 1842, and departed this life June 12, 1923, being almost 81 years old at death. Mr. Hartgrove served for four years in the confederate army. He received a bullet during his service in the army that he carried until his death. Not only was Mr. Hartgrove faithful in service for his country, but for more than 50 years he followed the blood-stained banner of Christ, fighting His battles and living a quiet Christian life at all times. We are told by those who knew him best that they never saw him lose his temper. And all unite in saying he was a good man. He leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife, three sons, two grandchildren, a niece reared in the home and a host of friends. We believe Mrs. Hartgrove will miss him more than any one else. I don't think I have seen a husband and wife more closely attached to each other. But he was a good husband, a real father, and a desirable neighbor. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. M. Hamilton and pastor at Hickory Ridge church where he had been an active member for more than fifty years. We wish to give our prayers and sympathy to the bereaved family, and hope that each may so live that they can say with Paul, Mr. Hartgrove, and all faithful Christians, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." THINKETH NO EVIL.

The wise man puts the best possible construction upon all words and actions. He thinketh no evil. That is, he does not discover evil where none actually exists; he does not construct evil by his own thinking; he does not take exceptions to the unintentional blunders of his friends and enemies; he does not accept every general thrust as being intended for him; he does not carelessly impute bad motives to actions which might, possibly, be neutral.—Selected.

sure show intelligence and good judgment. While those who go from us elsewhere are unstable people anyway or have been overpersuaded by zealous proselyters.

These ways of working are not the characteristics of any particular denomination. They are human traits and are liable to appear anywhere at almost any time. Sectarian divisions furnish a fruitful field for their operations.

Because of denominational competition most communities suffer from a woful lack of adequate religious leadership. I have in mind a small village with five churches—two of them with resident pastors who are supposed to give their whole time to the work. Neither of the Sunday schools in these two larger churches has an adequate supply of well-trained officers and teachers, and the constituency of neither is large enough to warrant a training class. If they were combined a better organization could be effected and a training system put into operation. Christian Endeavor, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts are not very flourishing partly because the churches do not feel able to do much for them, and more or less of jealous feeling prevails. There are some fine musicians in each church but not enough to make a strong choir in either. The congregations are small and a majority of the people in the community make no appreciable response to the leadership of the churches.

For a good many years I have known a beautiful little city of some 10,000 inhabitants. It has good churches, as denominational churches go. Occasionally it has had for a while an outstanding minister. But on the whole there has been very little ministerial leadership—such as would apprehend the great educational, moral, social and religious interests of the community and lift the thought and life of the people to a higher level.

Just now in the central section of a city of 40,000 people nine churches are uniting in a series of Sunday evening services, held in their largest church auditorium. These meetings were preceded by a course of lectures by an eminent college professor on, ''The Bible from the Modern Viewpoint.'' The Sunday evening addresses are now given by able unsectarian scholarly men of several different denominations. They come from a large city one hundred and twenty-five miles away. At one meeting 1,600 persons were present —said to be more than twice the total usual attendance of the nine churches at their evening services.

Two questions are pertinent. Among those nine ministers are there not some who can lead the thought of that city on, ''The Bible from the Modern Viewpoint,'' and follow with a constructive program of modern Bible study and community work? Is there so much local jealousy among the denominations that the only way out was to send away for speakers?

Here is the situation. Small and competing denominational churches have called for small and competing ministers, who, through poverty and lack of opportunity for study and labor in a wide field, have been kept small. Denominational interests have been looked after, while the great problems of scholarship, the adequate shepherding and guiding of the young and the development of the moral and civic life of the community have been neglected. If one man or one church, because of ability and vision, has stood up for the main issues, jealousy has thrown obstacles in the way. The churches have no warrant for asking God to give them men of ability and training for all the pulpits they have set up. If his church will be reasonable and use trained lay men and women for many forms of religious work, and combine the pulpits, I believe that God will raise up and aid in training an able preacher, a real prophet, a man of vision and utterance, for each such pulpit. Fathers and mothers under those conditions will offer their choicest sons for the work of the ministry, and young men of promise will hear the call and make the necessary preparation for a worth-while career.

Even when competition has given place to co-operation we must go further and place the community before the denomination.

LOSING JESUS AS THE REVELATION OF GOD.

Recently one of the leading preachers, not only of New York, but of America, delivered a sermon in the city named, introducing it in these words:

''I talk with you this morning about the way multitudes of people all around us, however they may reverence the character of Jesus and esteem His teaching, are losing Jesus as the revelation of the living God.''

And the statement is true, not only of New York, but of men and women everywhere, but not in the sense intended by the preacher. The minister who delivered the sermon referred to, is himself a member of that school of liberal religonists who no longer consider it essential or even helpful to insist on some of the doctrines once considered vital to the Christian faith, and so has himself lost ''Jesus as the revelation of the living God.''

The time was within the memory of the present writer when no man could enter the ministry of any of the churches known as evangelical, without avowing belief in the virgin birth of our Lord, in His substitutionary death, in His bodily resurrection, and in the promise of His second appearing at the end of this world. Now all these doctrines are openly denied by many of the ministers of the very churches that less than a generation ago considered them vital.

A change so great amounts to the substitution of ''another gospel'' for the gospel of Christ. The cause of this change is the almost universal acceptance of the theory of evolution, which, leaving no place for the fall so circumstntially related in the third chapter of the book of Genesis, must of necessity discount the Bible plan of salvation, and in effect reduce Christ to the plane of a great-moralist, and His gospel to a system of moral philosophy designed, not indeed to call men back to an estate from which they had fallen, but to assist in their further progress along the road traveled by the race as a whole ever since, in the evolutionary process, the moral sense was sufficiently developed to admit of the construction of a moral system, not by revelation of the divine will, but by codification of the best thought of the human race!

In the sermon to which reference has been made it is said:

''Multitudes of people have grown impatient of the theological Christ of the churches' worship, and have been saying, 'Give us Jesus, the teacher of righteousness and brotherhood and peace, the proclaimer of principles on which alone the building of civilization can stand secure.' ''

From this point forward the ''theological Christ''—by which is meant the Christ mentally pictured and believed in by evangelical Christians of a half century or more ago—is unfavorably contrasted, in the sermon from which we quote, with what is called ''the real Christ,''—by which is meant the modern Christ, a creation of the ''Christian'' evolutionist. This Christ of the evolutionist is not a Savior, but a leader pointing the way to still higher attainments than have yet been reached by the human race through their own efforts, unaided by a divine revelation or the impartation of the transforming power of God.

But evolutionists are chasing an ''ignis fatuus, a will-o'-the-wisp, which can lead nowhere but to the bogs of infidelity, the mists and darkness of a Christless, hopeless life.

There is no help in evolution. There is no salvation, nor even an incentive to better living, in the doctrine of human descent from brute ancestors. The high watermark of moral precept is the ten commandments as illuminated by Christ's teaching and example. But no people have ever attained to it perfectly. The highest ideals of human brotherhood were taught by Jesus of Nazareth, but what nation has ever reached even an approximation to that divine philosophy?

Only by personal transformation can any one attain to the height of the divine law or perfectly reduce to practice the precepts of Christ. And only by and through the faith of the Son of God is any such personal change possible. Only by the new birth can we hope to enter upon a new life, a life on the high plane of Christian living essential to any real human betterment.

Such is the teaching of the Scriptures, especially of the New Testament, and yet we find the trend of thought today running in the direction of ''a better Christianity'' than that of the Gospels, the Acts, the Epistles, and the Revelation!

In nearly all the higher schools of learning, the fall of man is denied and ridiculed. We are told that, instead of having fallen, man has been continually rising in the scale of being, and that today he stands on an eminence far above anything known to Bible lands or Bible characters.. Not by conversion, but by growth, by education, culture, and development, is a better state of human existence possible, according to the new gospel of the liberalists and evolutionists.

But, brethren, our only safety lies in clinging fast to the Christ revealed in the Scriptures, not to the Christ of the evolutionist or the modernist.. There is but one gospel that can save, and with the apostle we say, ''Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'' Gal. 1:8.—Selected.

THE WORK AND THE WORKERS.

Our Slogan:—As Faithful in Service For Christ as For Self.

Our Aim:—1. A Family Altar in Every Methodist Protestant Home.
2. A Revival in Every Church, With a Worthy Increase in Members.
3. Every Member a Contributing Member.
4. The Budgets in Full on Every Charge.
5. The Full $300,000 Subscribed For the College by June 1, 1923.

Our Motto:—It Can Be Done.

All of the above and more can be done if all of workers are as faithful in service for Christ as for self.

Rev. Lawrence C. Little and I began our series of district meetings in the 13th district, embracing Albemarle and Stanly charges, on Saturday, February 24, at Friendship church. The day was cold but the attendance was good, and we had fine services throughout the entire day. On Sunday morning, February 25, I remained at Friendship and spoke to the Sunday school and preached at 11 A. M. Brother Little spoke to the Sunday school and preached in Albemarle. On Sunday afternoon both of us spoke in Albemarle, and I preached at night. Brother Little organized a Christian Endeavor society both at Friendship and in Albemarle.

The pastors on these two charges both semed encouraged by the results of the meetings. These men are faithful and earnest and are doing good service for the Master.

It is fine to go into a country community and see one of our pastors living in so good a parsonage as that occupied by Brother Ridge. Both the parsonage and the church are lighted by a Delco plant. Brother Ridge and his people have set out with a determination to pay the budgets in full this year.

Another church is being established closer to one church in Albemarle than the true spirit of Christian co-operation would warrant, but Brother Williams and his people are going forward with the work, and confidently expect to pay the budgets in full.

Concord.

On Monday morning I went to Concord to talk with Brother A. D. Shelton about making a new church plant out of their old one. This, as all pastors know, is a difficult problem. At Concord they have reached the point where they must enlarge or suffer, and it is going to take a great deal of prayer and patience and loyalty to Christ and His church for pastor and people there to work out just what they need. But it can be done, and I believe it will be done.

Rev. D. A. Braswell.

While in Concord I visited Brother Braswell and found him very sick. For ten days he had been in bed, and was uffering very much. He asked me to say to the brethren, "This has all come upon me in a very bad time, and I crave their prayers and their sympathy." Brother Braswell is looking forward to an operation in his right jaw just as soon as he is strong enough to go to the hospital. May the dear Lord bless and direct in all the affairs of his life.

Rev. T. J. Ogburn.

All of us regret to know that Brother Ogburn is no longer among us on earth. I regret that absence from the city prevented my attending his funeral. He was ripe for eternity and it seems fitting to us that he should be permitted to go home without a long siege of suffering. Our hearts go out in sympathy to his loved ones. May God bless and keep them.

Mrs. Lethia Jane Deans.

On Tuesday morning, February 27, I was called upon to go to Ai church and conduct the funeral services of Mrs. Lethia Jane Deans. She was the daughter of Rev. Forest McCoin and the widow of Rev. D. T. Deans, and was a member of Ai Methodist Protestant church from childhood. She lived to the ripe age of 82 and was in vigorous health until three or four days before she fell asleep. I feel sure a more extended account will be written by some one who knew her better than I.

Easter Sunday.

Easter is almost here. Let us plan for an Easter service in each church and Sunday school that will be in keeping with what the day means. Each Sunday school and church should plan for a good offering for home missions that day. It Can Be Done.

Order supplies from Dr. C. H. Beck, 613 West Diamond Street, N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa. Don't put it off.

Annual Conference Budget.

We are pleading with all pastors and church treasurers who have any money in hand to send it to Rev. S. W. Taylor, Burlington, N. C. Please do that at once.

District Rallies.

District Rallies are being planned for all the districts, to be held between now and the first of June. Rev. L. C. Little and I are both planning to attend these meetings to assist in every way we can. Mocksville and Union Grove, being separated a bit from other fields, have been made a district and the rally will be held March 24 and 25.

Dates for Rallies.

We trust these dates will be acceptable in each case, for we have done our best in planning them.

No. 11—March 3 and 4.
No. 1—March 10 and 11.
No. 2—March 17 and 18.
No. 14—March 24 and 25.
No. 3—April 7 and 8.
No. 4—April 14 and 15.
No. 7—April 21 and 22.
No. 12—April 28 and 29.
No. 6—May 5 and 6.
No. 10—May 12 and 13.
No. 8—May 19 and 20.
No. 5—May 26 and 27.
No. 9—June 2 and 3.

Young People's Summer Conference, Weaverville, N. C., June 12 to 22.

Pastors' Summer Conference, High Point, N. C., June 25 to 29.

You will note that Easter Sunday has been left out of our plan. That is done purposely that all pastors and workers may be at home that day in service for the King.

Yours in His service, A. G. Dixon.

Concord.—There is nothing of special interest to report from here now. Our. congregations are encouraging in both numbers and interest. The Sunday school is doing good work under the direction of its efficient superintendent, Brother B. F. Waddell. If we had more room we believe the attendance would increase at least fifty per cent in a short while. The people are still talking and studying the matter, and we have reasons to believe that they are not going to stop with talk. We have a good people here and we have faith in them to believe that they will remain true to the best interests of the kingdom. In conclusion, brethren, let me say that we may as well get our handkerchiefs ready, for there is going to be much weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth before very long. Isn't it sad to know that we will soon be no more as a church. I thought we were doing very well; but here comes the prophet from Reidsville and tells me that we will soon be a thing of the past. Brethren, let us brace ourselves, and meet the crash as bravely as possible.

A. D. Shelton.

P. S.—Let us hope that that brother's mantle will fall on some one and save the day for us. A. D. S.

Not to ourselves are we living;
Not to ourselves do we die;
Freely receiving as giving,
Soul after soul marches by—
Parts of one mighty procession
Stretching from Eden's first dawn
On through large curves of progression,
Till in the future it's gone,
Gone from earth's ken, past heat, past breath,
Into the life that is miscalled death.

COLLEGE PAGE

NEW PLEDGES, GIRLS' DORMITORY.

Dorothy Beville (paid)	$ 1.00
Miss Sabrina Wilson (paid)	10.00
E. T. Bulla	10.00
C. G. Southern and wife (paid)	5.00
T. D. Harris (paid $25)	100.00

Dorothy Beville is just two years old. Sister Wilson will be 80 her next birthday. She wrote that she would give $10 a year as long as she lives; this is her third gift. To show his faith by his work Dr. McCulloch anticipated his third payment last week. How about you, beloved?

OUR PLAN OF ORGANIZATION FOR THE COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

The following chairmen are appointed of the twelve districts:

1st, N. G. Bethea. 2d, J. E. Pritchard. 3rd, T. M. Johnson. 4th, B. T. Baynes. 5th, W. T. Hanner. 6th, R. N. Hauser. 7th, H. A. Garrett. 8th, G. L. Curry. 9th, J. D. Morris. 10th, L. W. Gerringer. And 12th, J. Lee Poole.

The Albemarle church and Stanly charge are put with Brother Hauser's district; so is Mocksville charge.

FIRST THING.

We want a list of some member of our church in every M. P. home in the conference where the Herald is not going in order that we may send the Herald to them free during the life-time of the campaign, March, April and May.

We want the pastor or some member who can do it for him, to furnish to the editor of the Herald the name, post office address, if in a town the street number, of some person in the Methodist Protestant families where the Herald is not now going. We want this information at once. Understand us, if the father and mother or either belongs to our church, send us their name, if neither, send us the name of some member of the family who does belong to our church to whom we can mail the Herald.

MONTH FOR CANVASS FIXED.

We have fixed upon the month of May as the month when the canvass for additional subscriptions shall be made. The month of April is the month when some person will visit your church and speak on the college enterprise. We want to use March getting ready for the canvass.

THE TIME LIMIT ON THE WILLS GIFT IS JANUARY 1, 1924.

In conference with a number of our ministers and laymen last week Brother Wills decided to fix this as the final date when his gift might be secured by the church. If our people shall raise an additional amount of $150,000 in subscriptions by that time the gift becomes ours. If we fail it does not. Remember this.

Brother Wills has made a gift of $5,000 which has already been paid in, and which is as much as any one yet has pledged; this gift is made without regard to what action we may take as to the $100,000. But it would be a shame for the Methodist Protestant College not to get it; it would show that we did not have in our membership life enough to use it if we should get it, if we now fail of this splendid gift from our Brother Wills.

THE DISTRICT CAMPAIGN WILL SOON CALL MEETINGS.

We are expecting the district chairman named above to call a meeting of the pastors and official members of the churches in their respective districts when we shall complete our plan of organizing. These meetings will doubtless be called at an early date. I hope to attend them all, and we are very anxious to have every pastor present, because the pastor is a key man in this canvass.

THE GREENSBORO MEETING.

Not satisfied with the results of the High Point meeting I called together the pastors and several laymen in the central part of the state last Thursday in Greensboro and we had a splendid meeting. It was a meeting full of enthusiasm and purpose. We outlined and adopted a plan for making our canvass, we had some speaking, but the spirit of hopefulness which characterized this meeting was the jewel of it all. There was not a pessimistic note struck, there was no wavering or hesitation on the part of any; there was a firm determination to go forward and to go forward along the surest and best way.

BROTHER HAUSER LEADS THE LAYMEN.

Brother R. N. Hauser, Winston-Salem, was present and there was started a movement which will no doubt mean a great deal to the College. It was decided to organize a Thousand Dollar Club among our men. The object of the club is to build and furnish the Boys' Dormitory. Brother Hauser had already pledged one thousand dollars to this object and he was asked to head the campaign among the men to find seventy-four others who would give at least one thousand to this dormitory. Any amount above the one thousand would be acceptable, of course, but the laymen present expressed a wish to challenge the men of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina with this appeal, believing that there are at least that number in the state who will rally to Brother Hauser's challenge. Remember, Brother Hauser makes the gift even though no one else responds, there are no strings to his gift; so we want all other offers to be made as gifts to the dormitory even though seventy-five are not found; we must build the dormitory if it has to be built by pennies instead of thousand dollar gifts.

To show something of the spirit of this meeting, they agred to allow the college enterprise to take precedence over every local enterprise that was not vital to the life of the church for this year. This shows how deep was the determination of the brethren present.

The following pastors were present (I write from memory): R. C. Stubbins, N. M. Harrison, T. E. Pierce, G. F. Millaway, J. A. Burgess, T. M. Johnson, S. W. Taylor, G. W. Holmes, E. G. Lowdermilk, J. D. Williams, R. A. Hunter, E. A. Bingham, Geo. R. Brown, J. H. Moton, Edward Suits, J. H. Bowman, H. F. Fogleman, the editor of the Herald, part time; Brother T. F. McCulloch also.

Among the laymen present: D. Grant Coble, W. T. Hanner, M. A. Coble, C. O. Pickard, T. O. Pender, J. H. Allen, R. N. Hauser, T. T. Stafford, E. S. Welborn, T. S. Coble, H. A. Garrett, Brother C. B. Way (preacher-layman), J. Norman Wills, B. T. Baynes, F. R. Stout, W. T. Bowman.

We selected out of this company a Central Committee to act with the Field Secretary: J. H. Allen, R. F. Williams, J. Norman Wills and President Dixon. This committee will handle all matters which require more than usual consideration relating to the campaign.

WE ARE GOING; WILL YOU GO TOO?

We are going to reach the goal set, "go over the top," or call it by any name that will sound as sweet to you. But be assured we are expecting to arrive. Now if you expect to have a share in this affair it is time to join. Later will be too late. Do not stand back and wait for the last day of the campaign and then say, "I told you we could do it." There is a lot of hard work to be done now and we want you with us at the beginning, so come along. Be a booster. Show a willing mind, give as the Lord blesses you and leave the results with Him.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.

Mrs. Henry C. Nicholson, member of Mebane church, has started a movement which I believe will bear rich fruit. She has organized a club of young people of her church to be known as Our College Club. The object of the club is to create sentiment for and to quicken interest in the college. The Club will meet once a month, will have a program for each meeting. Will review what has been done for the college since the last meeting as reported in the College Page in the Herald; will assign studies on college life and college courses, and will in various ways interest the members in the erction of our college buildings. No dues will be charged.

We want to commend this movement and bespeak for it a kindly reception throughout the churches of our state. Those of you who wish to know more of the inner workings of the Cllub should write to Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mebane; I am sure that she will take great pleasure in explaining the manner of organization, etc. She expressed a wish for some verses about our college which could be adapted to a familiar tune. I have sent her the following stanza and chorus which may be sung to "My Old Kentucky Home."

THE HIGH POINT M. P. COLLEGE.

We've built our college in High Point, Old North State;
'Tis pretty, substantial and fine.
Where flowers bloom and the happy summers wait,
And where love and truth together twine.
The time has come when her friends should rally strong,
To labor together like men;
And lift their voices in ever living song
And today the stalwart youth to win.

Chorus—
Be thou Alma Mater to thousands yet who roam,
And inspire the minds of thy daughters and thy sons
With the glory of the life to come.

Try these verses on your piano to the tune named above and see how well you like them. I may write some better ones when I have the time for it. Fraternally, R. M. Andrews.

THE LATEST FROM CHINA.

Rev. C. S. Heininger, the board's missionary at Kalgan, sends the following work report for the last quarter, October to December. Having previously announced the arrival of a daughter in their home just before Christmas, he states that they returned from Peking on January 9th.

''During this quarter Mr. Soderbom visited all the outstations, I believe, save the class held at Chichiachuang on Anchiapu circuit, where a man has been working for most of the year. I have visited Chaikoupu, Hsuanhuafu, and Wanchuanhsien. Both during October and November Mr. Soderbom was gone for a good number of days on these tours. He also visited a new place, Hsinghsien, in the corner of our field near the Shansi line, and started one of our older men, Chou Tzu Pang, in with a class of enquirers there. During the quarter I gave a few stereopticon lectures on ''The Life of Christ,'' which slides we own, and also borrowed slides on ''David Livingstone'' and Bunyan's ''Pilgrim's Progress.'' These, of course, stirred up some interest among the people, and brought out a good many who do not usually attend services. I am hoping soon to have a Chinese trained in this kind of work, and then expect to keep the lantern busy most of the time. We also plan to rent some health slides, and give lectures this spring in the interest of sanitation.

''During this season of the year we hold a number of classes for inquirers. We have not had so many this year, but some of them have been very successful. At a place called number four, south of Anchiapu, we have had a very good class. Around Chaikoupu several classes have been held. Then there were the classes at Hsininghsien and Su-t'ou-Chiang near there which are in a new part of the field. A very good class was held at a point near Shuichuan.

''Baptisms were as follows:—At Kalgan, October 29, four were baptized, and December 31 three more—all being received into the church. At Chaikoupu pastor Kao reports eight baptized and received into the church. At Hsiheying eight were baptized by Mr. Soderbom in October, and three by pastor Kao Yueh in December. At Shuichuan, 17 were baptized by Mr. Soderbom. Eight adults and two children were baptized at Hsunhuafu by Mr. Soderbom, and four adults and two children were baptized at Wanchuanhsien by myself in December. This makes a total of 55 adults baptized and received into the church, and four infants baptized.

''The work in the school has gone on as usual. There are a few items worthy of mention. On Confucius' birthday the boys held a special service at the street chapel ''Center,'' and attracted a good many people. Several spoke of the difference in our attitude to Confucius, a great man and Jesus the Divine Man. Then the three classes of the fifth Normal School at Hsuanhuafu also visited here in October, and this gave us a good chance to make a favorable impression on these young men for the Gospel.

''Christmas was widely celebrated this year, and in many places the chapels were far too small for the crowds. At Kalgan a special offering was taken up for the church here, and also an offering of $7.04 was given to the Chinese Home Missionary Society for their work in Yunnan under the auspices of the Chinese church. We face 1923 hopefully.''

SOMETHING ABOUT OUR WORK IN KANSAS CITY.

Kansas City, Kansas, has been an important field for the Methodist Protestant Church for a number of years and has been recognized as such. Our history began in 1885 under the leadership of Rev. S. A. Baker, D.D. The field was then ripe for a great work, and a great work was done. Had the work done at that time been fully conserved we should have had a much larger development in Kansas City. We should have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in Kansas City during those earlier years, and should have drawn upon the entire denomination for the best men for the particular fields under development. Good men have been seriously handicapped by lack of equipment. Churches were organized faster than suitable equipment and proper pastoral care could be provided. As a consequence there were some failures in the work in Kansas City. At the present time we have no field that offers greater promise under proper leadership and support. Your Board of Home Missions has adopted a well defined, clear-cut policy, and are rapidly taking our rightful place in that growing city.

Gordon Place Church.

This is the oldest of our Kansas City group. Rev. J. O. Ledbetter, D.D., of the Indiana Conference, is serving a successful pastorate in this field. The first location has become undesirable on account of the influx of a large Roman Catholic and Negro population. This change limits the field for the development of a white, Protestant church. A new location has been secured at Haskell street, fronting 150 feet on the beautiful Tenth Street boulevard, and plans are being considered for the erection of the first unit of a new church. There is no finer site for a church in that section of the city. The congregation is enthuhsiastic, the community is interested. The new building should be begun this spring, but the task is too great for them alone. We have no more loyal Methodist Protestant people than we have in this city, but there are not enough of them to meet the demands. The building needed at once will cost approximately $35,000. This should be the first unit of a building which when completed and furnished would represent an investment of from $75,000 to $100,000. Substantial assistance should be given by our board in the erection of the first unit at the earliest possible date.

The University Church.

This church is the successor to The People's Church, formerly located down-town. This church was too far away to serve the university, and with the growth of the city its former constituency moved to the suburbs, and the membership was sadly diminished. We delayed our removel too long to save a large proportion of our membership, but those who went with us in the transfer are among our best and most loyal people. About thirty members were saved to the denomination from the old down-town church. The old property was not valuable enough to enable the transfer to care for itself, and your board found it necessary to make some appropriation for building purposes. The results have justified the efforts and expense. Rev. S. C. Benninger, the pastor, began his work here in September, 1920, in a rented dwelling house. For seven Sundays no Sabbath school could be held because no one came. Now we have an enrollment of 250, with an attendance which reaches up to 200. The church membership is 134, and additions are being made every month. Our building is a source of pride to the community, and its fine gymnasium is serving the university and community in a very splendid manner. There are three Christian Endeavor societies, with all the other organizations necessary to carry on the work of a well organized church. Brother Benninger is a member of the Pittsburgh Conference, and has served the Board of Home Missions longer than any other man now being employed. No other commendation is necessary. The property valuation is $40,000.

The West Height Church.

This church is the newest of our present organizations in Kansas City, Kansas. This church was formerly located in the Chelsea community, but with the development of the city this site was undesirable for church purposes. A new site was secured in the finest residence development on the Kansas side. We have been working in the parsonage for about two years and have just completed the Sunday school section of the church building. This will represent a total value of $35,000, but the cost has been kept below that figure through the careful planning of the pastor, Rev. T. L. Garrison, D.D. Less than we have done would not have met the community need, and would not have commanded the situation.

We cannot establish these centers of denominational life in the growing cities of the country unless we meet the demands of the situation under which we work. What has been done presents a fine appeal to the community, and scores of people have commended us for the location selected and the plans being developed.. The wisdom of the plans is shown by the success which his coming to the work. Dr. Garrison sends these facts. The Sunday school has doubled its attendance in two years. The offerings for local and general purposes have doubled in three years. Forty new families have been received into the church during the present pastorate, and thirty-five of these families are represented in the active membership at the present time. Ninety-five percent of the families in which we have members own their own homes. The real field is just now beginning to open to our church. Comparisons are always odious, and we make none, but your secretary is sure that the future of this church is safe under proper leadership. Space will not permit us to discuss this work farther. Charles H. Beck.

THE MINNIS FUND.

Brother Wills's letter did a good deal to boost the amount received until it looks now like it won't be long until we reach the goal of $300. I am anxious to get it there. Brother Minnis needs the money, and I want him to have it. They used to say up where I came from, whenever they want to get something hard done, A long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull altogether. This has been a long pull—we've been at it since last September. I doubt whether we can call it a strong pull, since $300 divided among 25,000 folks is such a little.. And by the same token it hasn't been a pull altogether—so few have contributed out of all who might have had part in it. But one more pull, if you who read this do your part, will put us over. Come on, folks, let's make it $300 by the next report! We'll all be happy then.

The fund stands as follows:

Previously reported	$187.87
McCulloch Philathea Class, Grace Ch.	10.00
Asheville Church	10.00
Mrs. J. M. Cheek, Burlington	5.00
Mrs. T. F. McCulloch, Greensboro	5.00

Mrs. Lonnie McPherson	1.00
Mrs. Chas. H. Fields, Tabernacle	1.00
Mrs. Ida G. Brewer, Granville	1.00
I. O. Hauser, Chapel Hill	1.00

Just $74.13 left to raise. Come on, you friends of Brother Minnis, you who have been praying for him, add a dollar to your prayers. Send it, and some more, to

FIRST DISTRICT RALLY.

All members of the Methodist Protestant Church in the First District are urged to attend the rally which will be held at Whitakers church, Whitakers, N. C., Saturday and Sunday, March 10 and 11, commencing Saturday, 10:30 A. M., and closing with service beginning Sunday night at 7:30. There are many of our people who live near enough to attend from home each day and take lunch with them, which we hope they will do. But those coming from the fields farthest away will be cared for by the good people of the church at Whitakers. Write Pastor Surratt and let him get you a home. Let every one that reads this notice see that their church is well represented. President Dixon and our new Field Secretary Little will be present, together with the pastors, and that will make interesting services all the way through. Hon. T. T. Hicks will deliver an address in our Educational Rally on Sunday afternoon. This will be worth while. There will be many features of this meeting that will cause you to be glad that you went. Let the pastors as well as every official get busy and see that there is a good attendance from Greensville, Creswell, Littleton, Roanoke, Spring Church, Halifax and Whitakers. Not much time to talk it up, but we can do it if we will and let us show these men that though they are late getting to the field, or rather letting us know that they are coming to us, we will not be late in being there to hear what they have to say to us. This is an important meeting. Be sure and be on hand for the first and stay till the last. You will know about your church and will be better prepared for work as a result of your attendance.

Any information desired in regard to this meeting will be cheerfully given by the chair man, N. G. Bethea, Brinkleyville, N. C.

—The long-talked of railroad station and underpass for Greensboro seemed on the point of arriving, but Mr. C. C. Hudson enters complaint which will hold the matter up for court decision.

HELP IN OUR STEWARDSHIP CAMPAIGN.

Thos. Kane, the Layman of Chicago, has become interested in the stewardship campaign of the Methodist Protestant Church. For years he has been furnishing tithing literature at less than cost to churches that care to use it. This year he has made it possible, with the help of the Forward Movement department, to secure any of his publications listed at $1.00 a hundred at a 75 per cent discount, the pastor remitting to the Forward Movement secretary 25 per cent of the order.

In addition to this very liberal offer, Mr. Kane is sending a sample package of 30 of his most popular publications to all Methodist Protestant pastors. If the pastor cares to retain them, he is expected to send 30 cents to the Layman Company, 35 N. Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.; if he does not care for the publications, he is asked to paste on the return label and remail the package, without postage. Return postage is guaranteed by Mr. Kane.

There are great possibilities in the careful circulation of literature of this sort. Every church should have a supply continually on hand and use it persistently. It is of more value than preaching from the pulpit. Luther E. Lovejoy, who owes his position as general secretary of the Stewardship Division of the Committee on Conservation and Advance of the Methodist Episcopal Church to his success in winning tithers in every church of which he has been pastor since he entered the ministry, writes:

"During my experience as a pastor, except in the church in which I first introduced the subject, I do not think I ever preached on tithing more than once to the same congregation, but I did endeavor to keep my people well supplied with readable tithing literature, and to let them know by constant example and by frequent reference and illustration the very high value I set upon this practice."

A number of pastors write for such helps as this department has to offer in the stewardship period through which we are passing. We shall be glad to hear from many others.

Forward Movement Secretary.

NOTICE, FIRST DISTRICT.

Atttention! Creswell, Greensville, Halifax, Littleton, Roanoke and Spring Church charges.

The First District Rally will be held at Whitakers church March 10 and 11. We would like for all representatives expecting to attend the rally to send their names at once to me, so entertainment can be secured. We give you a welcome. Come on and get all you can out of the rally. H. Freo Surratt.

OFFERINGS TO SATAN.

We think with horror of the poor untutored heathen in his blindness bowing down to idols, and in the temple and other places making offerings to gods that cannot see or speak. But the offerings to other gods are not confined to heathen lands, I fear. Note the following from the spirit of prophecy:

"Without faith it is impossible to please God. We can have the savlation of God in our families, but we must believe for it, live for it, and have a continued, abiding faith and trust in God. We must subdue a hasty temper, and control our words; and in this we shall gain great victories. Unless we control our words and temper, we are slaves to Satan. We are in subjection to him. He leads us captive. All jangling, and unpleasant, impatient, fretful words are an offering presented his Satanic majesty. And it is a costly offering, more costly than any sacrifice we can make for God; for it destroys the peace and happiness of whole families, destroys health, and is eventually the cause of forfeiting an eternal life of happiness.

"The restraint which God's word imposes upon us is for our own interest. It incerases the happiness of our families, and of all around us. It refines our taste, sanctifies our judgment, and brings peace of mind, and in the end, everlasting life. Under this holy restraint we shall increase in grace and humility, and it will become easy to speak right. The natural, passionate temper will be held in subjection. An indwelling Savior will strengthen us every hour. Ministering angels will linger in our dwellings, and with joy carry heavenward the tidings of our advance in the divine life, and the recording angel will make a cheerful, happy record."—"Testimonies," Vol. I, p. 310.

"An offering presented to his Satanic majesty." That is what "unpleasant, impatient, fretful words" are. Are you making any such offerings to Satan as that in your home, yet talking of your hope of heaven, the joy of the Savior's return, and of translation from earth to Paradise?

If our words and temper are not controlled, we "are slaves to Satan." Satan's slaves will not be made immortal and translated to heaven.. Unless we gain the victory over these things, our hope is vain.

But, thank God, there is hope through Christ. "Even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow His steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth: who, when He was reviled, reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not; but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously." 1 Peter 2:21-23.

The same Christ who delivered the woman in the synagogue who was "bowed together" (Luke 13:11-13); who healed the woman of an issue of blood when she by faith touched the hem of His garment (Luke 8:43-48); who healed the lunatic of Gadara (Mark 5:1-15), —He can deliver from a bad temper, from unkind and hurtful words. Turn and read these scriptures, then claim the victory, and thus make no more offerings to Satan.—Selected.

—Mrs. A. J. Deans, whose husband was a Methodist Protestant minister, died on Monday at the home of J. F. Stewart, of Guilford College. The funeral was held at Ai M. P. church on Tuesday morning.

—Rev. R. S. Troxler's son Edwin, aged seven, died at a High Point hospital on Monday morning. The funeral was held in Thomasville M. P. church Tuesday afternoon. This event, though not unexpected, of course brings great grief to Brother Troxler and family. May divine grace sustain and comfort them.

Lessons From the Psalms. The Refuge Psalm. Psalm 91.

(Consecration Meeting.)

Daily Readings.

Monday. Romans 12: 1-13.
Tuesday. 1 Peter 2: 1-13.
Wednesday. 1 Cor. 6: 9-20.
Thursday. 1 Cor. 10:31-33.
Friday. Phil. 1: 12-21.
Saturday Phil. 2: 1-9.

This Psalm has no title. There is no adequate evidence to ascertain either the author or the date of the Psalm. It seems to have been written at a time when war and pestilence were raging.. The fundamental idea of the Psalm is a manifestation of the security, at all times, of the individual who trusts in God and who has the Most High for his defense. This is one of the most beautiful Psalms in the entire Psalter and thousands have found in it a source of strength and faith in the hour of trial and danger.

1. Dwelling in the Secret Place. What does this mean? It means a life of prayer, earnest, sincere prayer. It means ‘‘closet’’ praying. It means ‘‘dwelling’’ in the secret place, not merely visiting it. So many of us are prone to go to God in prayer when we are in trouble or great need. We are called upon to ‘‘dwell’’ in the secret place of the Most High, that is, ‘‘Pray without ceasing.’’ Christ said, ‘‘If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you.’’

2. The Nearness of Divine Presence. Ofttimes we forget that God is so near us. Yea, we can even lose the consciousness of Divine Presence. People who live among the hills and mountains oftimes fail to see the beauty and grandeur of the hills. We read of Jacob's journey from Beer-Sheba to Haran and of the wonderful dream which he had—the heavens were opened and Jacob saw God and His angels and all the glory of heaven. The following day Jacob exclaimed, ‘‘Surely God is in this place and I knew it not.’’ Oh, God is so near and so often we fail to recognize this fact.. ‘‘He will cover thee with His pinions and under His wings shalt thou take refuge.’’

3. The Fundamental Note Is Security. ‘‘He is my refuge and my fortress.’’ We are always safe in God, whatever betide, life or death. To assume this attitude, it takes faith, ‘‘faith that will not shrink, though pressed by every foe.’’ How shall we have this faith? By ‘‘looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith.’’ Our eyes must be constantly fixed upon Jesus. On one occasion Christ's Disciples were making a voyage across the Sea of Galilee and a terrible tempest arose.. The disciples were greatly alarmed and thought perhaps their lives would be destroyed. But in their need Jesus came to them. At first they knew Him not, nor did all of them know Him when He said, ‘‘Be of good cheer, it is I.’’ For Peter said, ‘‘Lord, if it be thee, bid me come to thee on the water.’’ Jesus bade him and Peter starts, at first his eyes are fixed firmly upon Jesus, but he takes them away and immediately Peter begins to sink. With our eyes fixed upon Jesus we will have a strong faith, a faith that will assure us that God is protecting us and that all things work together for good to them that love Him.

4. The Human Side of the Psalm. The keynote of the Psalm from the human standpoint is self-surrender.. We are to yield our whole self to God. He alone is to be our God. We are to put all selfishness and self-will out of our lives. The essence of our prayers and desires must be ‘‘Thy will be done’’ in my life. We must strive to ‘‘do always those things that please Him.’’ Our real happiness and joy in life are conditioned by our surrender to Christ. Would you know and experience unspeakable joy? Then yield your whole self to God and pray continually, ‘‘Draw me nearer, nearer, nearer, blessed Lord, to Thy precious bleeding side.’’

Stewardship of Self. Matt. 25: 14-30. 1 Peter 4: 10.

‘‘As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same, one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.’’

The Apostle Paul came to know man's duty to God more thoroughly than any other man. He set the example for all mankind in the art of serving. He went about preaching the gospel to all people and offering his mature advice to even nations. Such a stewardship was the result of individual effort with the assistance of God.

We are brought into this world predestined to attain or fail to attain the goal for which the soul innately craves. The time granted to us is limited but the privilege is given us within this span of years to equip ourselves for the life eternal. It is not through the service of others that we live right nor is it the fault of others that we live wrong. God in creating man has given him freedom of thought and action but instead of using this freedom for the glorification of God's kingdom man has used it as a means to an end, to satisfy his immediate desires.

We are stewards always for God and it is our duty to aggrandize His kingdom. Robert E. Lee said, ‘‘The most sublime word in the English language is duty.’’ One's duty to God is to serve Him and follow out his laws and teachings. God judges us by the services we render here on earth. Have we been good stewards and have we lived up to our capabilities? Have we used our talents and multiplied them or have we hidden them in the earth? ‘‘For unto every one that hath shall be given but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.’’

There is a stream which arises in the mountains of Palestine and winds its way along the side of the mountain, pure and clear. It finds its way to the Sea of Galilee, which gives out twice as much water as is emptied into it. This sea is surrounded by beautiful wild flowers and brightened by the songs of the birds, and passes on into the river Jordan. The river empties then into the Dead Sea, the surroundings of which are barren, no life there, no beauty and the songs of the birds are never audible, every sign of life is gone. None of this water after entering the Dead Sea has ever been discovered to pass out of it.

A parable for life may be drawn from this. Will we receive and give out twofold, or will we receive and give out nothing? ‘‘As every man hath received, so minister one to another as good stewards.’’

REGISTER NOW FOR WEAVERVILLE!

Last week our president gave us a splendid account of the Young People's Conference we are to have in Weaverville, June 12 to 22. I am sure that all of you are wishing you could go. I am sure that many of you have already made up your minds that you are going! We are going to have a wonderful time there for those ten days. We shall sing, play, study, make friends, pray, consecrate our lives to deeper service while we are there. We are beginning this week an advance registration campaign. We want every Methodist Protestant young person in North Carolina to register whether he can attend or not. 126 Tate St., Greensboro.

A Rally for Young People was held jointly by the Albemarle station and the Stanly circuit of the Methodist Protestant church people on last Saturday and Sunday, the services being held at Friendship church at Plyler on Saturday and West Albemarle church on Sunday.. Rev. T. A. Williams, pastor of the Albemarle church and Rev. A. Ridge, pastor of Stanly circuit, were chairmen of the exercises in their respective churches. Dr. A. G. Dixon, president of the North Carolina Conference, was present throughout the entire two days and made a number of splendid addresses on the various subjects discussed and closed the rally on Sunday evening at the West Albemarle church with a very able discourse on Christian education and Christian giving. Rev. L. C. Little, of Greensboro, general secretary of young people's work in the North Carolina Conference, was also present at all sessions of the rally and spoke on a number of subjects pertaining to young people's Christian activities. On Saturday afternoon at Friendship W. L. Mann, of Albemarle, addressed the meeting on the subject, "The Business of the Church in the Community."

At the West Albemarle church on Sunday afternoon a Christian Endeavor society with 21 members was organized by Mr. Little. All sessions of the meeting were well attended and much interest was taken in the exercises by the Methodist Protestant people of this community. One Present.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Was pleased to read in last week's Herald Brother Harrison's announcement of the young people's coming to Weaverville.

His description of Weaver College and grounds is fittingly expressed, not exaggerated in the least. He could have told you much more about this beautiful mountain section of our great State. It must be seen to be appreciated. It was the writer's privilege a short time ago, in company with Brother Helms (another mountain preacher) to stand on one of these mountain peaks, and view such important peaks as Mt. Mitchell, Ball Mountain, Pisgah, Black Brothers and a number of other important mountains, besides numerous valleys and ravines. Such experiences as this deepens one's reverence for God. Am certain the young people of our conference will be delighted with the scenery.

The M. E. Church, South, has in this section its Lake Junaluska; the Presbyterians Montreat; the Baptists, Ridge Crest; the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. Blue Ridge, as summer meeting places for religious gatherings. Am glad for once our young people will have the opportunity to visit the mountains at so small cost.

Not only the scenery; but you will be glad to form the acquaintance of our people of western North Carolina. Here you will find people just as kind, just as true, just as loyal to their church as can be found anywhere on the globe. They will be encouraged by your presence and inspired by your godly walk and conversation to press forward to greater accomplishments. We hope you will be benefited by seeing small bands of Christians, laboring on against great odds, striving for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. Your presence will be helpful to us; may we be helpful to you. As we know each other better, and understand each other's problems more fully we should be able to help each other more easily.

May we have a conference which will mean much toward the upbuilding of our church in North Carolina, and the advancement of God's Kingdom. B. M. Williams.

Bess Chapel.—After a long siege of snowy, icy, rainy weather, impassable roads, pneumonia and influenza, we are still alive. We have undergone a series of poundings, some of them severe and lasting, yet we survive and all are able to get out and smile. Friends, God bless you, we thank you. We shall not take the space nor the time to mention the names of the pounders nor of articles for fear that we might omit some. We certainly appreciate the gifts, and especially the spirit that prompted it. May we in our humble way be of service to each one, and may God's richest blessings rest on each and every one of you all.

Yesterday we had a splendid congregation at the morning service. The regular quarterly communion service was held yesterday, using for the first time the new individual communion service, which is a gift from the Christian Endeavor society to the church. I think that the Christian Endeavor here at Chapel deserve credit for their fine work. They bought new lights for the church early in the fall; now they have given the new communion set. We are glad to see the older people of the church giving the young people of the Christian Endeavor society their support and encouraging them in every way. There is a fine field here and lots of fine young people that can be trained and developed for a wonderful work for the Master in future years. It has never been my privilege and pleausre to meet and mingle with a nicer, brighter, and a finer bunch of young people.

Three of our stewards felt that they could not serve another year and resigned, so yesterday we elected three of our fine young men to fill the vacancies, as follows: P. J. Bess, R. S. Childers, and Earl Baxter. May God help each one of the officers, members and pastor to do their duty, faithfully and fearlessly. Brethren, pray for us that we may have a good year this year.

The prospects for a good year are bright and there is a great work to do and our prayer is that this may be one of the good years for the church here. In spite of the bad weather, terrible roads and so much sickness in the community, we have not missed a single service at the church, though sometimes there were a very few present. The Christian Endeavor society, however, did not fare so well; they meet every Sunday night and some nights it was just too bad for them to come. Last night, however, we had something like 150 present (how is that for Christian Endeavor in a rural community?), and several times we have had over 200.

We are sorry to report the death of Brother Francis Boyles, one of our oldest members, this morning early. Funeral will be held this afternoon at three o'clock at Bess Chapel. An obituary will apepar later. Brother Boyles had been an invalid for several years and some days ago suffered a third strike of paralysis, since that time being unconscious. We have a regular reporter for the church here, but she has not reported for some time: doubtless she is busy, and I shall not take up more time or space for fear the reporter will think that I am taking her job from her. With all good wishes to the Herald and all its readers,

E. G. Cowan, Pastor.

Henderson.—In my letter last week I failed to mention the Thank-offering service by the Foreign Missionary Society held on the previous Sunday evening. Miss Mary Young had charge of the service and made it interesting. A short pageant was rendered and there were some helpful readings. The offering amounted to about $85.

The Foreign Missionary Society voted last week to accept Brother E. C. Kittrell's proposition, that is, that he would furnish $600 if the church would furnish $600 annually so the church can support a missionary of its own. The General Executive Board will be asked to give us a missionary.

Our canvass for $7,500 for new Sunday school building is on this week. It is too early in the week to even forecast the actual results; however, we are hoping and praying that it may be a success.

Mrs. R. R. Satterwhite, who has been critically ill for a week, seems a little better. Brother Satterwhite also rested better last night. These splendid people certainly do have the sympathy of the entire community.

There will be held in the Henderson church an Institute for the three charges, Granville, Vance and Henderson, beginning Saturday afternoon, March 17, and ending Sunday afternoon, March 18. Rev. A. G. Dixon, D.D., Rev. Lawrence C. Little and possibly one other will hold the institute. Plan now to attend. J. E. Pritchard.

Charlotte Tidings.

The first quarterly conference of the Charlotte church convened on February 21. Few if any in the history of the church have been better attended. Business was transacted in a very creditable manner. Miss Hattie Ashburn was elected secretary. The heads of the different departments of the church were made the Advisory Committee. It was found that the finances of the church were somewhat behind but the stewards were requested to put on a campaign to raise the deficit within ten days. After the business session was over we repaired to the basement where a delicious supper had been prepared by the Lalies' Aid. After the supper a George Washington Birthday program was rendered. The church orchestra furnished music for the occasion. The room was beautifully decorated with red, white and blue. A silver offering was taken for the Ladies' Aid.

Our newest members are Mrs. B. W. Little and Miss Beatrice Faulkner. Mrs. Little comes to us from our church in Asheboro, while Miss Faulkner comes from Calvary Methodist Episcopal church, South, of this city. These ladies are well known workers among us and we are sure they will make the very best of members.

Our Baraca class has just closed a very interesting red and blue contest for membership and attendance. The class has very much improved in both attendance and interest since the contest has been on.

Last Sunday was missionary Sunday for our Sunday school, and it made a very interesting service.. Each fourth Sunday this service is observed. Each class is allowed to take its own offering each Sunday and report the amount collected during the month on the fourth Sunday. But if the class does not so choose it may make just the one offering on the mission Sunday. The classes very much appreciate reporting their offerings. Interest in missions is growing in our Sunday school and church.

Mrs. A. F. Love, who has recently undergone an operation at the Mercy General Hospital, is now at her home and improving very nicely. We are expecting that she will soon be at her place again in the church work. Mrs. Love is our very efficient Cradle Roll superintendent and is one of our very best workers.

CHILD'S EVENING PRAYER.

Thanks for a soft and quiet bed,
 Be to my Savior given;
He had not where to lay his head,
 Though Lord of earth and heaven.

Around my couch may angels bright,
 Their holy watch-care keep,
While He who dwells unseen in light
 Gives his beloved sleep.

Be merciful, O Lord, I pray,
 And all my sins forgive;
And grant that in each coming day
 I to thy praise may live.

Fold me, O Lord, in peace to rest,
 Through darkness watch o'er me.
And when I wake serene and blest,
 May I be still with Thee.
 —The Little Christian.

JACK'S MISTAKE.

Jack was a venturesome little chap. One day he heard at school that Tom Webb's boat had struck on the rocks under the bridge and was breaking to pieces.

Jack wanted to see it, so on his way home he turned off to the railway bridge which crossed the little river just where it was full of rocks. It was a rough and dangerous place. Creping along, the little boy bent over until his head grew dizzy, and if he hadn't jumped up quickly he would have fallen. And something else might have happened, too, if he had stayed there two minutes longer; for he had no sooner got off the bridge than a railway train came rushing along that would have crushed him to death in a moment. But Jack thought he had done a very smart thing. He ran home, and at the dinner table boasted that he had been down on the railway bridge and seen Tom Webb's boat among the rocks, and had just time to get off when the express came along.

Father and mother looked at each other, but not a word was said. Jack thought they would praise him, but they did not.

After dinner father took the little boy into his study. He looked so very sober Jack began to feel that something dreadful was coming. Father sat down in his chair, drew the boy up to his side, and put his arm around him. ‘‘Jack,’’ said he, ‘‘you thought you were very brave today, didnt' you? But going into danger when there is no need of it is no mark of courage. It is rash and wicked.’’ Then papa stopped and Jack began to cry; but he never forgot the words of advice that followed:

‘‘My dear boy, never try how far you can go in a dangerous place; always keep on the safe side.’’—Living Church.

OPEN YOUR HAND.

‘‘A little child was one day playing with a very valuable vase, when he put his hand in it and could not withdraw it. His father, too, tried his best to get it out, but all in vain. They were talking of breaking the vase, when the father said: ‘Now, my son, make one more try; open your hand and hold your fingers out straight, as you see me doing, and then pull.’ To their astonishment the little fellow said: ‘Oh, no, sir, I couldn't put my fingers like that, if I did I would drop my penny.’ ’’

His hand was held fast because he was holding fast his penny. Many an older child is in trouble and cannot get free without letting go of something that he desires to hold on to; and, like the boy with the penny, the thing he holds so carefully has but trifling worth compared with that which he is likely to sacrifice for it.—Selected.

‘‘A SHADOW FROM THE HEAT.’’

I wonder whether boys and girls know how many times the word ‘‘shadow’’ is mentioned in the Bible. Nearly fifty times! Mostly it carries with it the idea of shelter, protection, safety—always blessing. God is a ‘‘shadow from the heat.’’ We have known during the terrible heat of the summer what a blessing a shadow can be.

Travelers who have crossed the Arabian deserts tell us how they longed for a shadow from the burning rays of the sun, and longed in vain. Days and days, sometimes weeks, pass before they can shelter themselves under some friendly cluster of stunted palm-trees, which at great distances apart dot the desert, and then the protection is only very slight.

But to think of God as a shadow from the heat, always near at hand—God always a refuge—a hiding-place. What a beautiful thing it is! God, ‘‘the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.’’ Isa. 32:2.

A strange sight it was nearly two thousand years ago in Jerusalem, when the people brought their sick dear ones out of their houses and laid them on a sort of mat-bed in the open street. They believed that the shadow of Peter the Apostle, if it fell upon their suffering friends, would at least bless them. The marvelous thing was that those upon whom the shadow fell, were there and then healed. What a wonderful sight it must have been; those who were a moment before full of pain and weakness—unable to move a limb, some of them—rose up strong and well! The shadow had made them whole.

Two lads were once in earnest conversation about shadows, when one said to the other, ‘‘If people's tempers would cast shadows, what would they be?’’ His companion answered quickly, ‘‘John's shadow would be a fist doubled up, for he is always quarreling. Andrews would be that of a dove, for he is always amiable and pleasant. Jane's shadow would be like the letter X, for she is cross as two sticks; and my own shadow, what would that be?’’ And he was silent. He could not speak positively for himself. It made him think.

The truth is, boys and girls must live every day in the shadow of the kind Christ, then their shadow, the shadow of their character, of their influence, of their conduct, will always be for good. Keep close to Him always, that as you go about your small duties you may ever be—morning, noon and night—in the shadow of Jesus Christ. How beautiful even the lives of girls and boys can be when they spend their days in the shadow of Christ's great love!

For, girls and boys, Jesus is always a shadow from the heat, a hiding-place, a refuge.—Selected.

HELPING ONE ANOTHER.

The basket of blocks was on the ground, and three rather cross little faces looked down at it.

‘‘It's too heavy for me,’’ said Jimmy.

‘‘Well, you're big as I am, 'cause we're twins,’’ said Nellie.

‘‘I won't carry it,’’ said the little cousin with a pout.

Mamma looked from her open window, and saw the trouble.

‘‘One day I saw a picture of three little birds,’’ she said. ‘‘They wanted a long stick carried somewhere, but it was too large for any one of them to carry. What do you think they did?’’

‘‘We don't know,’’ said the twins.

‘‘They all took hold of it together,’’ said mamma, ‘‘and then they could fly with it.’’

The children laughed and looked at each other; then they all took hold of the basket together, and found it was very easy to carry.

‘‘The way to do all hard things in this world,’’ said mamma, ‘‘is for every one to help a little. No one can do them all, but every one can help.’’—Christian Leader.

THE BLOOD OF CHRIST CLEANSES FROM ALL SIN.

A gentleman, teacher in one of our Sabbth schools, had long been trying to make clear to his class what the ‘‘blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin’’ meant. Having a cottage at Cape May he invited four of his boys to visit him. The shore, as all will remerber who have visited that watering-place, is very smooth. Walking along the beach with the boys one day, he told one of them to get him a stick. Having got the stick, he told him to write ‘‘S,’’ and said, ‘‘You see that letter—what is it?’’

‘‘Why,’’ they said, ‘‘it is ‘S’.’’

‘‘Now write ‘I,’ now write ‘N’—now what does that spell, boys?’’

‘‘Why, sin.’’

At this moment a great wave came in and washed the beach smooth and clean, so that no trace of the letters remained.

‘‘Now, boys,’’ said the teacher, ‘‘that is just the way with the ‘blood of Christ.’ He comes with His love and power, and washes your sin just as you have seen those waves wash the letters away. Do you not want to be washed?’’—Selected.

HENRY ASKING A BLESSING.

Henry had never heard his father pray. A Christian friend, while visiting the house, was invited to conduct family prayers, and also to ask a blessing at the table. Henry wished his father would do so every day.

One evening, only Henry and his little brother and his aged grandmother sat at the table, the rest of the family taking tea with a neighbor.

‘‘Grandma,’’ said Henry, ‘‘may I ask a blessing?’’

‘‘Yes,’’ she replied, her eyes filling with tears.

‘‘O God, bless our bread and milk! Make us good children. Bless pa, ma, grandma. Amen,’’ said Henry. He thought no more about it; but dear grandma told his father when he came home. The father's heart was touched by the example, and he resolved to follow it and have a prayerless house no longer.—Selected.

FROM PASTORS AND PEOPLE

New Hope, Pageland Circuit.—The health of our community is improving. Large crowd at church last Sunday, but for some reason our preacher did not get here.

We are making preparations to give a missionary program for the benefit of the church work soon. In our program we will represent the needs of China, Japan, Africa and India. We hope by doing this to awaken some of our people on missions. "God loves a cheerful giver." "Give, and it shall be given unto you: good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that you mete withal it shall be measured to you again." "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." Mal. 3:8.

We are commanded to go into all the world and preach the gospel. Some will say, I can't go. Well, perhaps you can't, but do you know if we can't go we can give to send some one. We sing, "Rescue the Perishing." Are we putting forth one effort to do so? Alas, I fear not.

"Is it nothing to you, O ye Christians?
O answer me this today!
The heathen are looking for you,
You can give, go or pray;
You can save your souls from blood-guiltiness,
For in lands you have never trod,
The heathen are dying every day,
And dying without God.

"Is it nothing to you, O ye Christians?
Dare you say you have naught to do?
All over the world they wait for the light;
And is it nothing to you?"

Julia St. Clair, Reporter.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Circuit.—Our pastor, Brother Riddle, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 preached for us a soul-stirring sermon, to a very attentive congregation. We have not been having very large congregations, the weather being so cold and disagreeable, but hope more will come out and hear Brother Riddle, for we are sure they will not be disappointed by coming. I believe there would be more at church and Sunday school if we would serve God more at home.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely, with Mr. Bennie Nance as superintendent.

The quarterly meeting will be at Piney Grove on Saturday before the first Sunday in March. Hope there will be a good attendance.

Fathers, mothers and young people, all wake up and come to church and Sunday school, and take an active part in the work of God.

As I am a new reporter I will not write much this time. Asking all the readers of the Herald to pray for us.

Leta Morgan, Reporter.

Pageland.—Our pastor as usual delivered to us a good sermon Sunday, but on account of the inclement weather and so much influenza we did not have so many present. Our communion service was observed at the 11 o'clock hour.

We are planning to have our revival meeting in July, and are looking forward with much interest to it. By God's help we hope to make it a success.

We are interested in our Sunday school here, and just as soon as the "flu" dies out and all our young people can be back with us we are going to organize a Christian Endeavor society. We know that our Lord knows best and sends afflictions upon us for some good reason, but He, the greatest physician, is merciful and has power to and will restore us to health if it is His will.

Leo Sowell, Reporter.

Graham.—We had with us Sunday evening, February 18, Dr. A. G. Dixon, president of the annual conference. Dr. Dixon gave an interesting lecture at the meeting of the senior Christian Endeavor society. He pointed out that Christian Endeavorers often depend too much upon their readings. He gave an illustration that alone would have convinced us that something more than readings are needed. However, he brought before us many important and helpful suggestions, and we feel sure that a better, more enthusiastic C hristian Endeavor society will be the result. We enjoyed having Dr. Dixon with us and only regret that he could not stay longer.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were given a delightful valentine shower. A number of the members met at the church and went together to the parsonage. Everyone carried some gift as a token of appreciation for the splendid work and service of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer. Quite an enjoyable evening was spent by all present. Bertha Barbee, Reporter.

Mecklenburg Charge.—Much .enthusiasm was manifested the second Sunday at Beulah church when they began to make preparations to remodel the church. I feel that this is the forerunner of a remodeled church and a $90 bell.

The good friends continue their liberal gifts. R. B. Query and Company gave me five gallons of gas, Mrs. G. C. Moore, two pounds of nice butter, Brother G. C. Moore, a lot of nice sweet potatoes. I wish to express my appreciation to the members of Antioch church for giving me so much good oak wood on the church lot, especially M. C. Garmon and A. B. Garmon, and J. M. Phifer, and they said: "Cut all you want." Many thanks to Brothers Moore and Matthews for their assistance in helping cut and haul the wood. Brother Wilson (a Baptist brother) sent me two loads of wood and did not charge me one cent for this. I am more than grateful.

Yesterday was a bad day for us all, yet a good number of people met us at Zoar church.

It is our intention to cover the church and paint it inside and out this year and buy new carpet.

After the service yesterday we came by Brother W. C. Hartis' home and Mrs. W. C. Hartis gave us a pound of nice butter.

The greatest desire of a good pastor is the co-operation of his people and the people looking after the financial needs of the pastor.

W. L. Carson, Pastor.

February 19.

High Point.—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held its annual Thank-offering Service on Sunday evening, February 18. A pretty pageant was given by six young ladies, and a flag drill by the members of primary department of the Sabbath school. There was a good attendance, and the offering amounted to $50.

The Ladies' Aid society celebrated Washington's Birthday by giving a supper for the benefit of the new church. The tables were placed in the Sunday school auditorium, which was attractively decorated with national colors, red, white and blue. A delicious supper of chicken, rice and vegetables was served at 50 cents per plate, and in addition oysters, chicken salad, ice-cream, and cake were sold as extras. There was music by home talent, and a delightful evening was spent. The ladies enjoyed a splendid patronage from the congregation as well as many from other denominations in town, and the sum of $125 was netted for the treasury.

Many friends in High Point were saddened at the news of the passing of Rev. T. J. Ogburn on last Saturday. Dr. Brown spoke very feelingly from the pulpit of his grief and personal loss in the departure of one who had been his close friend for a long period of years. Rev. Mr. Ogburn was well known and loved by many older members of the congregation, having been a member of the North Carolina Conference for about half a century and having held many high positions of trust and confidence in the state and general conferences. Warm and cordial sympathy is extended to his daughter, Mrs. W. C. Jones, who is a greatly esteemed resident of High Point, being a member of the school board and prominent in the social and civic life of our city.

Capt. A. M. Rankin writes from Arlington Hotel, Hot Springs, Ark., that he is enjoying a delightful stay, and feels that the trip will be beneficial to his health. His genial presence is sadly missed at all services of the church, and we wish for him an early return to his accustomed place in our midst.

Death exacted heavy toll last Friday in High Point; on Sunday afternoon were held funeral services for two of her best-known and most beloved citizens(Mr. Newell W. Beeson, a deacon of the Baptist church for 50 years, and as he was universally known, "the best man in High Point;" and Rufus P. King, a prominent minister of the Friends church for more than 50 years. The influence for good wielded by these godly men in this community is well-nigh boundless.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. S. Meredith, in Wilmington.

We are sorry to note that Miss Ruth Moffitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, is suffering from an attack of diphtheria.

The members of the congregation sympathize most deeply with Mr. S. C. Vuncannon in the loss of his brother, Mr. W. A. Vuncannon, who was killed last week at his post of duty on the Southern Railway, in the western part of the city.

Grace Church.—With the approach of spring our church is showing an increase in Sunday school enrollment. The Christian Endeavor is steadily growing in membership and never stops for anything, but is doing a great work in Greensboro.

Dr. T. H. Lewis is to give a series of sermons at Grace church. beginning the eighteenth of March and our revival meeting begins the eighth of April with Rev. S. W. Taylor as the evangelist.

We are planning to carry our college quota over with a rush and then turn our attention to the new church.

Rev. W. C. Kennett is still a very active "boy" and is conducting a Friday evening cottage prayer meeting every week. This prayer meeting is held in his community and is probably one of the largest and best in Greensboro.

Some of the laymen have lately said that if the preachers would just "get out of the way" they would soon raise all the college pledges asked for at present time. Hats off! We know they can do it and "have waited oh so long" for just such strong and energetic laymen to assert themselves. Our church has been called the layman's church, but the matter of raising money has been left too much in the hands of the ministers who are not supposed to be expert—having not much acquaintance with "this world's goods."

Now that the movement is on we expect to show to the world the wide-awake lay men and women in the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina. And we hope the day is near when we shall have churches and schools of which no one need be ashamed.

Yes, we preachers will get out of the way, but at the same time will throw out a challenge to the laymen who have made the suggestion: that when the finish comes we will be found "galloping in the gang" with as many victories to our credit as the biggest business men. Come on now and take up the challenge, it won't hurt you—even if you are beaten.

R. C. Stubbins.

Lebanon Church.—The second quarterly conference will be held for this charge on Saturday before the fourth Sunday at two P. M. in this church. Will all the officials please keep this inmind and be present.

Our pastor preached a most excellent sermon yesterday on the subject, "The Unrecognized Christ." Many of our members are being kept away from the services on account of sickness, but there are some who are not hindered but who could attend and do not. It is a pity. Those who miss these good services are missing much. Doubtless many, or all, of us miss much of the good things as we pass along life's way. But if a man allow his soul to starve in sight of the gospel feast, and lose his very life, it is indeed sad. Some folks just will take the false in preference to the true; cultivate a taste for the worldly until they have no desire for the spiritual.

At yesterday's service we were glad to receive two new members, namely, Mr. Hobart Murphy by baptism and Mr. Robert Bert McLean by letter.

The Junior Philathea class has recently purchased a library table for their class room. Next they hope to buy some good books and start a reading course. We have no library in our church. Mrs. J. W. Thacker.

February 26.

Burlington.—We will be brief this time. Sunday school attendance last Sunday, 294 Sermon by the pastor at 11 A. M., on theme, "Claim of the Lord on Our Possessions." Text, Luke 19: 33. Talk by the pastor to the children preceded the sermon. Junior Christian Endeavor meeting held at two o'clock P. M. Senior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor meetings held at 6:30 P. M. No evening church service on account of the Alamance County Sunday School Convention which was in session at the First Christian church.

All regular services next Sunday.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville.—Our church is alive to the issues of the day. Our needs are many, and when we are made to feel them, they will be met because our Heavenly Father is always on the giving side.

Our Sunday school met at 9:45 with 158 present. We feel keenly the absence of our pastor at all the services. He is absent on account of the serious illness of his little son Edwin. We hope his condition will be improved at an early date. Pray for us and Brother Troxler in his sore affliction.

We are all glad to note the progress being made on our College building near High Point, as we drive up the Greensboro-High Point road. We trust that this institution may be a blessing to many of our people and the surrounding country. May God's blessing accompany us in all progressive efforts put forth in his name. Yours for better work in the Master's vineyard. Reporter.

To the Sunday School, Union Chapel.

It was with regrets I was sick and could not be there the third and fourth Sundays. However, I hope to be there next Sunday. We trust when the weather gets settled all will come. Our attendance has not been as good as we desired it should be. Let us remember one-third of the conference year has gone and it is just one month until Easter. We want to have a good Easter program and a big collection. V. V. Hester, Superintendent.

February 26.

West Forsyth Circuit.—Last third Sunday we had Rev. G. L. Reynolds to preach for us at Pleasant Hill and also at Tabernacle. Brother Reynolds has many good friends on this charge. He preached for our people at Harmony Grove last Sunday. We join the people in thanks to Brother Reynolds for his valuable service. We have secured Rev. Ed. Suits to begin a meeting at Harmony Grove on March 12 and will close about the 20th.

We hope to have each church on this charge represented at each service. I am taking this step to make this announcement in the Herald because I can not visit each church by the 12th. The public is invited.

The second quarterly conference for this charge will meet at Pleasant Hill on Saturday before the first Sunday in April at two o'clock.

Come on, brethren, let's pay up all of our Annual and General Conference Budgets by that time. You can do it and why wait? The Lord will bless you if you do. Try it and see one time. A. M. Hamilton, Pastor.

Mt. Pleasant, Mt. Pleasant Circuit.—Just a short report this week to let you know all Mt. Pleasant are not winter sleepers, if the reporter has been for the last while. All regular church services have been held with very good attendance considering the unfavorable weather and sickness. There have been several cases of influenza, but we are very thankful to say no deaths in the community..

Mrs. T. G. Smith was leader of Christian Endeavor last Sunday. The topic was, What Are Some Temptations to Lie, and How Can We Overcome Them? This was a good and interesting meeting. We were indeed glad to see so many of the young people answer so promptly to their topics and hope to see more of them take a part. Miss Grace Coley will be leader next Sunday.

Second quarterly conference will be held next Saturday afternoon. Communion services Sunday.

One hundred and fifty-two present at Sunday school last Sunday; several visitors. Among them we noticed Mr. F. F. Spoon and Mr. Floyd Clapp of Burlington, Mrs. I. L. Trogdon and son Worth of Alamance church community. Come again. Visitors always welcome at Mt. Pleasant.

The hearts of many of our members were made sad February when news came to them of the death of Mrs. Emma Hudson Bowman, one of their old friends, neighbors and relatives. Mrs. Bowman was living with one of her children at Gibsonville, N. C. Her remains were brought to Mt. Pleasant and laid to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers.

Mus ring off before I make my short report a long one. Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Brother Lowdermilk was with us yesterday and preached a splendid sermon, his subject being "Opportunity." He showed to us how we are letting our opportunities to do good go by. We as Christians are too careless, we do not try to see the opportunities that the Lord gives us, we are afraid we will have to do something that we don't want to do, or give something that we don't want to give. May the Lord help each of us to watch for our opportunities and accept them gladly.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely this winter. We have had very good attendance this bad cold weather and we hope to do better as spring opens up. Think we will have Easter services.

Yesterday just before preaching Brother Lowdermilk opened the doors of the church and received Mr. Sutliff into our church by letter. We are glad to welcome him and feel sure he will be a help to us, and we hope to be a help to him. Mrs. G. W. Apple,

Reporter.

Pensacola Church, Democrat Circuit.—There has been a good bit of rain up in our section, and the Sunday school has not been so large, but it is better now.

The special meeting has closed and we were very sorry.

There has been a good bit of sickness about for the last month. One of our most prominent church members, the steward who has been very sick with the "flu," appeared at church Sunday. We were very much pleased.

The orphanage collection was taken up

Sunday, which has been sent to Mr. Garrett at High Point. Gladys Boling, Reporter.

Draper and Kernersville Charge.—We held our second quarterly conference at Ai church Friday, February 23. I find the work on Kernersville charge in very good shape. We are planning to build a new church at Piney Grove this year. I filled my appointments the third Sunday at all three of the churches, with good attendance considering so much sickness in the community. We are sorry to report one of the members of Piney Grove is in a Greensboro hospital very ill.

Draper Work.

Our work at Draper is moving along very nicely at present. Our Sunday school is doing well. We lacked only one last Sunday of having as many as we have enrolled and I think that is good, considering the sickness around..

We will hold our second quarterly conference the second Saturday in March.

The good ladies of the Ladies' Aid presented the church with a nice communion set, which was very much needed and appreciated.

Our president, Dr. Dixon, was with us the night of February 11 and delivered a most inspiring sermon, which was greatly enjoyed by all, and seemed to be well pleased with our work at Draper. We have set the first Sunday in June to begin our revival meeting here. Asking all to pray for us in our work,

D. A. Morgan, Pastor.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—A good day for New Hope today. Mr. Hulin preached an excellent sermon from text, ''If God be for us, who can be against us?'' We are trusting that much good will be accomplished in the line of church work this year.

The outlook so far is encouraging. We have a real live Sunday school. Of our girls and boys we are proud. We have a number of real interesting children in the primary class. Each member has a work today. The harvest is great. May we not bury our talent, though seemingly it be small.

Our day school, being taught by Miss Lenna Presnell, is doing well. Mrs. Rocity Spencer has been somewhat indisposed, but is convalescent at this writing. A. L. A.

Spring Church Charge.—Our reporters are busy; two are school girls, one a housekeeper, and we all know how busy these classes of people get at times. One of ou reporters will graduate at the Weldon High School this year; we are hoping that she will be valedictorian. Last year she won the medal for the best all-around student.

We want all parties concerned to know that the Sunday schools on Spring Church charge have NOT GONE DOWN. And I am sure that those schools that have gone down, did not do so because of the lack of loyalty, but because of the good roads(?) they have to travel. There is quite a difference between the country and the city: the city people have no excuse at all for not going to church, they have their paved streets and cement sidewalks; out here in the country we have the pavement that nature gave us, in the extremely cold weather it is as hard as that in the city, but in warm, wet, wintry weather it is soft, and clinging. So after all the city pastor has nothing to brag of, but something to be thankful for.

We are having good attendance at all services, and in some instances it is better than last year. The roads in this part of the county are better by far than last year. We too have something to be thankful for. Some of the farmers down here have been ploughing for two weeks.

I find that there is one thing needful in all the places I have visited; that is the need of a revival. I do not believe that there is any good done by arguing, or writing and telling all we know about the errors of the Bible, for there are enough doubters in this country already.. The mission of the preacher is to tell of the love of God, and point the way to the higher life: and seriously, brethren, I do not think we will ever accomplish our mission using the tactics some people are using. The man who wants to find salvation does not care if the translation is poor, or that a few verses read the same; the thing the hungry soul is after is to be fed, and it is the preacher's business to show them the way to the place where to get that food. In reading the Herald last week I was very much impressed with the article from the pen of Brother J. S. Williams. In his appeal for team work he asked that at twelve o'clock each day we pray for certain things and among them were these words: ''That a revival spread through our own church, and all churches: that our church be an army of soul-winners, and a school of training for Christian service.'' This should be the prayer of every true servant of God, and as ministers of His we should keep this thought uppermost in our hearts, and in the public mind. Brethren of the church, we need a revival that will make us all better. The way to get that revival is to pray for it. And make the burden of our prayer, ''Lord, send us a revival, and let it begin in me.'' If we go to the Lord for it and pray like this and mean it, and put forth every effort to help get the prayer answered, there will be an outpouring in our church the like of which has never been known. Let us stop tracing after Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, Darwin, Wells, and all other men of like mind and character, and enquire of the Lord what He would have me do, and then do it. Brethren, pray that we –and I mean the entire church—may have that revival. And I believe enough of His promises to believe that it will come.

I am glad I am a Methodist Protestant, and regardless of what others may say, I am going to remain one, and work for my church, and God grant that all Methodist Protestants will see that we have a mission in the world and that we perform that mission.

And, in closing, if you haven't done all you can do for OUR COLLEGE get busy and do it. And if you have done all you can, then go to work and DO MORE.

Yours, in the Master's name,

J. L. Trollinger.

Pleasant Hill, February 27.

Albemarle.—Dr. A. G. Dixon and the field secretary of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society, Mr. Lawrence Little, were with us Sunday, February 25. Mr. Little made an excellent talk on young people's work in the forenoon and in the afternoon organized a Christian Endeavor society in our church, enrolling 21 members, also elected officers for a short while.

Dr. Dixon then took charge of the service and made a very interesting talk, laying emphasis on our duty in training the young people of our community in the right way.

Again at 7:30 P. M. Dr. Dixon brought us some interesting facts about our church and the great work we are doing in various sections of the country. He also showed us our duty as pointed out in different parts of the Bible in regard to tithing, making it so plain that we are sure there are many who will see it in a different light from heretofore.

We as the church are very glad to have had the opportunity of hearing such able speakers as Dr. Dixon and Mr. Little. We hope we can carry out his instructions on Christian Endeavor Methods, as the time has come when our church needs such a society as this to hold the interest of the young people in the church and its work. Reporter.

Friendship, Stanly Circuit.—How charming and beautiful is this world. Every merry song sung by the beautiful birds in spring gladdens his or her heart. Why not be happy, for the sun in the bright sky shines upon us, the flowers on the mountain and the grass in the valley grow and bloom to gladden our sight.

Last Saturday as the sun was shining gloriously from the bright sky, a cool breeze was coming from the north. Dr. A. G. Dixon talked about ''Stewardship and the Kingdom'' and a number of other things that created and sustained the interest of the audience. Mr. Mann discussed ''The Business of the Church in the Community,'' which was real interesting to all. Mr. L. C. Little discussed ''The Sunday Schools.'' At noon dinner was served. In the afternoon these three excellent speakers still had something new to tell us. Saturday night Dr. Dixon and Mr. Little delivered other excellent speeches. Mr. Little organized a Christian Endeavor society. We are going to put forth all the energy we have to make a good society. We had Dr. Dixon with us until Sunday, and he delivered us a good sermon Sunday morning. We are expecting to be fortunate enough to hear these speakers again soon. Reporter.

Gibsonville.—Gibsonville is still working for the Master. We have had ''flu'' and other sickness, but our Sunday school is going along nicely. Last Sunday was a very good day. We had 147 present and our collection was $15.-23: that was fine. Our Sunday school is doing a good work and is gaining some ground. We have a fine class of young men; any Sunday school ought to be proud of such a class as this—36 on roll and 28 present last Sunday morning. To my mind we have the best school is town. Good attendance, seem to be interested. We have much to be thankful for. Our mid-week prayer service is good.. We had 27 present last Wednesday night. I hope to see a larger attendance next Wednesday night.

May the Lord bless our pastor in his work.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

DIED.

Resolutions.

A tribute of love from the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist Protestant church, Thomasville, N. C.

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom and love to remove from among us our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Lee Tysinger, to the heavenly home above, prepared for His followers, be it

Resolved, That we submit in sorrow to His divine will, knowing we shall meet again in that "beautiful isle of somewhere." But we realize that her husband and four sons will miss her most, and to them we extend our deepest sympathy. May the Heavenly Father comfort them as He alone can do.

"Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won—
Now comes rest."

Resolved, That these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our society and a copy sent to the loved ones.

Mrs. W. J. Morton,
Mrs. J. W. Boyles.

Troxler.

(In loving remembrance of little Dorothy Troxler, who died January 22, 1923.)

Dearest Dorothy, you have left us,
Left the home you loved so well;
But some day we hope to meet you
And together we shall dwell.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
While the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,
In her soft and silent grave.

How we miss your gentle footstep,
How we miss your dear sweet face,
We miss you round the family table
We miss you, dear Dorothy, at every place.

Friends may think we soon forget thee,
And our wounded hearts be healed;
But they little know the sorrow
That's within our hearts concealed.

Farewell, alas, our dear gentle Dorothy,
Thy form lies cold and still,
Thy death has caused a vacant place
This world can never fill.

Mrs. J. E. H.

Walker.

The seemingly merciless hand of death has visited our ranks, and left our hearts sad, by claiming for its victim my dear grandfather, Mr. J. A. Walker. He was born June 4, 1850, departed this life January 17, 1923. He was married twice, his first marriage being to Mrs. Harriet Blackwelder, in 1871. She lived but a verty short time, so in 1876 he again married, this marriage being to Miss Rachel A. Shelby. To this union were born four children. Three are now living: namely, Messrs. Jackson and Lonnie C. Walker of Fort Mill, S. C., and Mrs. W. C. Hartis of Steele Creek, and Mrs. Lester Martin (his other daughter) preceded him to the better world about six years ago.

Grandfather united with the Zoar M. P. church when it was first organized, perhaps 50 years ago, under the pastorate of Rev. T. J. Ogburn. He has always been his pastor's friend. He was always willing to do his part in helping his pastor. He has been a faithful worker in the church most of his life. He very faithfully and uncomplainingly filled the office of steward. If he could do no other way, he would walk for miles to collect money for his pastor. His home was always the preacher's home. Nothing could please him better than for the preacher to come to see him.. He was not only a friend to his pastor, but it may be well said of him that "he lived in a house by the side of the road and was a friend to men."

On July 2, about three years ago, he fell off of a load of hay and broke his hip, and he really had not seen a well day since. His suffering, however, was borne with patience and fortitude. For two or three days before death he got past talking. But before he got past talking, he begged to be taken "home." The last words he spoke were when the M. E. preacher came in and went to the bed and spoke to him, and he said, "All is well."

Besides his children, he is also survived by his widow, one brother, Mr. Charlie Walker of Fort Mill, and one sister, Mrs. Leatha Wagstaff of Gaston county, and 18 grand-children, two great grandchildren, and a host of friends, to mourn his loss.

Funeral services were conducted at the home of his son, Lonnie, of Fort Mill, on Thursday morning, January 18, by Rev. A. H. Keaton, Rev. J. W. H. Dyches and Rev. R. L. Viser. Interment was at Zoar Methodist Protestant church. Dear readers, pray for the bereaved ones.

Called home from service to reward,
Called home from toil to rest,
Thy soul from earthly scenes hath gone
To dwell among the blest.

Called home, with every trial o'er,
With every cross laid down,
Thou hast obtained with wondrous joy
A bright, unfading crown.

O, deathless land, where thou hast gone,
O home so pure and fair,
Again we will meet to part no more
When we shall enter there.

His Granddaughter, Bertha Hartis.

In Memory of Mary Ida Brittain.

In vain we listen for her voice,
We hear no more her call;
With angels now she doth rejoice,
For she hath left us all.

We miss her kind and willing hand,
We miss her pleasant smile;
And those she left are sadened now,
They think of her the while.

Mary Ida we can see no more,
She dwells beyond the skies;
But we shall see her face to face,
When we from death shall rise.

She gladdened us while here below,
She made life's pathway bright;
We would not call her back again
From realms of blissful light.

And though we sadly miss her now,
We know in heaven above
She's free from sickness, pain and woe,
For all that life is love.

And we will strive to live, that we
May some day meet her there;
Beyond the darksome earthly night,
In heaven so bright and fair.

We think of those so sadly left,
The father, true and kind,
The mother dear, so much bereft,
There will she solace find.

May thoughts of her sweet spirit now
Bring comfort to these hearts;
And may they meet her in that land
Where loved ones never part.

In robes of white she dwells above,
Amid the heavenly throng;
And when at last the Master calls,
We hope to join her song.

There we will see the Blessed One,
Who died to save us all;
And Who with His own precious blood
Redeemed us from the fall.

Isley.

Henry Martin Isley, son of Philip and Mary Sharpe Isley, died February 23, 1923, aged 58 years and nine months.

About 16 years ago he was married to Miss Nannie Russell, and is survived by his wife and five children.

He was converted to the Christian faith at Hilltop a great many years ago. A little later he joined Mt. Hermon and has remained a faithful and consistent member until death. Besides his wife and five children he is survived by two brothers and three sisters. Funeral conducted by Rev. J. A. Burgess on February 24 at three o'clock at Mt. Hermon.

Amick.

On January 28, 1923, death visited the home of Brother W. A. Amick and carried away to her home above his wife, Sister Lula E. Smith Amick. Sister Amick had suffered a stroke of paralysis in the early part of the fall, 1922, but had recovered from this affliction and her friends were hopeful for her. But in the middle of January she contracted "flu" and pneumonia, and in spite of all that loving friends and physicians could do she passed into the Great Beyond.

In early life she professed faith in Christ, and united with Mt. Pleasant church, where she remained a faithful member until she and her family moved to White Oak. She then moved her membership to the St. Paul M. P. church and remained a member until death called her to the church triumphant. She leaves behind to mourn their sad loss her husband, two daughters, one son, three sisters, five brothers and four grandchildren.. Sister Amick was born January 17, 1875. The funeral was conducted at Mt. Pleasant church, by Rev. B. G. Whitley, assisted by Rev. G. F. Millaway, pastor of the church. The remains were laid to rest in the church's burying ground.

The pageant, "Light and Thanks," is to be given at Mt. Carmel the first Sunday night in March, instead of the fourth Sunday night in February, as last week's report announced. Apologies are due Brother Bates for not getting the correction in.

TWO VIEWS OF THE BIBLE.

Brother Thompson in his article, ''A Little Rejoinder,'' states these views and argues for the traditional view of plenary inspiration.

It is more satisfying to some people to think of the Bible as a purely divine production, containing all necessary truth and nothing but the truth. But the question is not what we would like in the shape of a divine revelation, but what we actually have. God does not always fully meet our desires. We might wish for fish without bones so that we could eat without fear and without interruption. We might wish for fruits without seeds or skins or rinds, so that we would have nothing to do but enjoy their lusciousness. But we have to take what nature offers us, and if we have the right spirit about it, we may find it good enough for us and be grateful for it.

We are of the opinion that those who entertain the view Brother Thompson opposes, prize the Bible more highly and get more of spiritual benefit out of it than those who accept the traditional view. This, howeper, being merely our opinion, may be erroneous. We do not offer this as an argument in favor of the modern view.

We wish to examine briefly the arguments by which Brother Thompson and others uphold the traditional view.

1. Paul's statement to Timothy in 2 Tim. 3:16. The statement as quoted by Brother Thompson from the old version is quite a startling one. It says that all scripture—all writing—is given by inspiration of God. When Paul wrote to Timothy, the Bible as we know it had not been made up. The Jews had the Old Testament and the Christians had some of the books of the New Testament scattered about among different congregationos. But there is no limitation of the apostle's meaning to the sacred books of the Jews or the Christians. ''All scripture'' would include the apocryphal books of the Old Testament. It would include the pseudo-gospels of the early Christian centuries. It would include the writinigs in recent times of Tom Paine and Bob Ingersoll. Such a startling statement from the pen of Paul should cause men to stop and think.. Surely Paul wouldn't say a thing like that! Let us take a second look at what Paul wrote and see if we have not misunderstood him. Men did take a second look, and they found that what Paul really wrote was this: ''Every scripture inspired of God is profitable for teaching, for reproofs, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness'' (American Revision).

In John 10:35, surely Jesus did not refer to all scripture, but to some particular true scripture. Peter's reference to the prophets' speaking under the impulsion of the Holy Spirit cannot properly be extended to all the men who wrote any part of the Bible. Peter does not say that men wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

Paul's statement in 1 Cor. 2:13 seems to refer to his own experience.. It cannot without an unwarranted stretch of thought be made to apply to all the men who wrote the Bible.

Jesus statement in John 16:13 refers to the Holy Spirit's guidance of His disciples (and we presume future believers) in their understanding of truth, and not to the divine inspiration of writers of portions of the Bible.

Brother Thompson admits that part of Paul's writings in the New Testament were not inspired. If that be true, may it not also be true that part of the writings commonly attributed to Moses and others were not inspired?

You and I are not far apart after all, Brother Thompson. We both believe the really vital parts of the Bible came as a result of divine inspiration, God's influence upon the minds of men, and of that great Divine Intervention, Immanuel, the life and teaching of Jesus Christ. This last is so great a light that all lesser lights pale into insignificance before it. The law (of the Old Testament) was a schoolmaster to lead men to Christ, the real Teacher. As long as we agree to learn of Him, it will be well with us both, even though we may not have the same conception of the teachers that came before Him.

TWO SIGNIFICANT GIFTS.

Recently when we were facing an overdraft at the bank a good layman of our church came forward with a gift of $5,000 to tide us over it. And in the strength of this gift and the payment in full of the pledge of Mr. R. H. Brooks, which was $5,000, we have kept bills paid to date. We thank these brethren, that is, we thank them for the Church, because we know that every interested member of our denomination in the state appreciates what they have done.

And now, Brother R. N. Hauser, a young business man, member of First Church, Winston-Salem, starts the campaign for funds for the Boys' Dormitory with one thousand dollars to be paid when needed. This is fine. While Brother Hauser made a substantial pledge for the enterprise more than a year ago, his interest has grown as the Lord has blessed him and he shows us the way by which the college can be built. Which is, for those of our laymen who have means to build it.

Are there not seventy-five Methodist Protestants in North Carolina who will meet the callenge of our good brother and thereby insure the erection of the dormitory this year? We must not fail and we will not if you will do what you can and do it now.

THE LIFE WE LIVE AS MEMBERS.

We can magnify the churches of Christ by the life we live as members. A church in any community is largely what its members think it to be, and altogether what its members make it. It has its character in the character of its members, its doctrine in the teachings of its members, its efficiency in the efficiency of its members. As they are, so is their church in the eyes of the community.

We have never emphasized as we ought to the momentous importance of church life. And this importance holds whether we think of the life of the individudal member, or the aggregate membership. Every member has it in his power to mar or exalt his church, and this may be the crucial point in his life as a follower of his Lord. This motto seems to comprehend the true idea: ''Christ and His Church.'' One may, of course, be churchly and not Christly; but if one be devoted to Christ as his Savior and Lord, his devotion will show itself in his relation and bearing to Christ's church.—Selected.

NOTES.

Dr. F. R. Harris, of Henderson, has been elected whole-time health officer for Vance county by the county board of health.

—Capt. A. M. Rankin has gone to Hot Springs, Ark., to spend ten days. He is having a fine time, taking advantage of the hot boths.

—We are glad to hear that Rev. W. C. Lassiter is somewhat improved in health.

—During the late war a Seventh Day Adventist preacher came to the Herald office to ask us to print a book showing from the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation that the world was just on the point of ending. We declined to print his book on the ground that we did not wish to aid in the propagation of error. Recently that same man was in our office. We asked him: ''Are you still absorbed with the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation?'' His reply was rather warm: ''No, I've given up that —— foolishness.''

ERRORS IN THE BIBLE.

Frequently we see something in the Herald and in other current literature about errors in the Bible. We also hear of these in public addresses and have them suggested in private conversation. As to the nature of these errors these writers and speakers are strangely silent. One is led to wonder just what they have in mind. From my earliest ministry I have understood that the Bible contains numerous errors, consisting of erroneous human conceptions of the universe and of nature, errors of translation and errors of the copyists and some interpolations which are not necessarily errors. That these errors are in the Bible is no ground for alarm. It is not at all strange that they are there. It would be astonishing beyond measure if they were not there. I cannot conceive how God could have given to the world a system of moral and religious truth without the use of these very errors. The revelation had to be given to some person or persons, a record had to be made, this could not be without the use of conceptions of the universe and of nature prevailing at that time, and as one copy would not do many had to be made, and as there was no common language many translations were necessary. Hence that the Bible should contain numerous errors, such as the above, was inevitable. Are these the errors our writers and speakers have in mind when they tell us the Bible contains errors? If they are why the noise? What is the motive behind all this talk about errors in the Bible? Is it to appear overmuch smart? Or do they want the Bible rewritten so that henceforth its spiritual content may be conveyed to men in correct conceptions of the universe and of nature? or is it to strengthen the faith of some weak soul? or what? Will they kindly tell us?

These errors have never bothered me. I have never regarded the Bible as a text book on astronomy or geology or biology though it probably contains the only correct account of the origin of life. The Bible is a book on religion and morals and in this field it is the only inerrant authority. The whole content of the Bible is spiritual.. The binding, the paper, the ink, the words, the phrases, the clauses, the sentences, the errors of astronomy and geology, of the translators and the copyists, the interpolations, these constitute the medium through which the spiritual content reaches us. The amazing fact is not that the Bible contains errors, such as we have mentioned, but that God has been able through such a medium to convey to us a perfectly sound and complete system of religion and morals. We cannot be too careful in speaking of errors in the Bible. It is of the highest importance that it be made plain that these errors subtract not one iota from the Bible's inerrancy as a text book on religion and morals. There are errors in the book, but not one in its content.

I do not want any one to suspect me of worshiping the Bible. For the book I have no special reverence and none whatever for its errors, but for its content I have the greatest reverence, and if I should go one step further and say that I worship its content what wrong would there be? for, after all, what is the content of the Bible but God And I know of no way to worship God except through my devotion to and adoration of spiritual truth. This I understand to be the very essence of the divine Being and I cannot separate God from His essence.

In studying the persistent activities of these error paraders one is led to suspect their motive is not laudable but sinister: that the whole thing is an insidious effort to prepare the popular mind for a general discrediting of the Bible as an inerrant authority on religion and morals. If there is one such error in the Bible I have neither seen it nor heard of it. The teaching of either religious or moral error is a very serious matter, and if these persons have discovered such errors in the Bible they would do the church an invaluable service if they would point them out plainly. This we are bold enough to say they ought to do or else shut their mouths.

J. A. Burgess.

BROTHER BURGESS'S CHALLENGE.

Brother Burgess insists that those who say the Bible contains errors should point some of them out or keep silent. Perhaps he is right and perhaps he is wrong about this. It is a common saying that it is unfair to make a general charge against a man's character without producing specifications to support the charge. Yet, on the other hand, there are cases in which it would seem most unkind to go into details in proof of a general charge.

Suppose we should say in the Herald, "We human beings all have our faults," and the next week Brother Burgess should respond with the demand that we either retract the statement or specify his faults. In that case we do not see how we could do either. While we might feel confident that a thorough investigation of Brother Burgess's life and character would discover some slight faults, at least, we have never made such an investigation and are not prepared to specify his faults. In fact, we don't want to find any faults in him and would prefer not to be called to make a search for any.

So it is with the Bible. We don't want to find any errors in it.. It is to us the most precious of books. We value it more than any or all books of science of material things. It does not teach how to make electric lights or steam engines or automobiles; but we would prefer to read by a rush light, prefer to travel from place to place on foot, prefer to haul our own freight in a wheelbarrow than to do without the Bible.
